KNOCKED DOWN BY A HORSE BUT UNINJURED.

Mr. Carroll Has a Fortunate Escape While Bicycling.

Dr. H. K. Carroll's lucky star was in the ascendant last Thursday evening. About dusk he was riding on his safety homeward. He is an expert bicyclist, and was merrily whirling along a smashed, bicycle in hand and a basket of grapes. As he turned the corner of North avenue into Pesse street, a horse, carrying drygoods ran into him and he was knocked down.

Here is where the curious part comes in. Dr. Carroll is a large, portly man, but, fortunately, he escaped injury, and the basket of grapes and his safety bicycle escaped the slightest damage.

A less fortunate man might at least have had his goods somewhat bicycle broken and been himself bruised.

THE SMALLEST CALF KNOWN.

It is Three Days Old, About the Size of Cat, and Weighs Seven Pounds.

A cow belonging to Henry Bodenheimer of 251 Somerset street, North Plainfield, has a three-days-old calf which is said to be the smallest ever seen in this State. It weighs but seven pounds and is only as big as an ordinary cat. It is, however, apparently lively and strong and a number of lively persons have been to see the "cute little thing."

RAILROAD COLLISION.

CATTLE AND COAL TRAINS BADLY WRECKED.

An Early Morning Accident Near Somerville—Cattle Killed and Coal, Cars and Wreckage Block the Tracks.

SOMERVILLE, N. J., Oct. 1. (Special.)—A Lehigh Valley fast freight ran into the rear of a coal train on the Central Railroad between Plainfield and Somerville this morning about 7:30. The coal train was standing on the East bound track just around a curve. The flag signal was up but the engineer of the freight was unable to make his air brakes work in time to avoid the accident. The freight dashed into the coal cars with terrific force.

The freight engine was buried under six freight cars which were piled up nearly as high as the telegraph pole. The cars took fire and the local department had to be called out to extinguish the flames. The cars were loaded with cattle and five of the steers were killed. The engineer and fireman both jumped and neither was hurt except for a few scratches.

Wrecking trains were immediately summoned but at twelve o'clock only one track was clear. Many passenger trains are waiting for clear tracks.

A TERRIBLE ACCIDENT.

An Engineer Killed and Traffic Stopped.

LAMBERTON, N. J., Oct. 1. (Special.)—The worst coal and freight wreck in the history of the Easton & Amboy Division of the Lehigh Valley Railroad occurred early this morning. A coal train was ordered to switch on the main track until the second section of a fast freight passed, going in the same direction.

The engineer of the coal train pulled off the siding after the first section of the fast freight passed and was run into by the second section.

This threw some of the wrecked cars on to the eastbound track, where they were dashed into by engine No. 389 with an eastbound coal train, causing a triple wreck.

Engineer Werkheiser of the second section of the fast freight was instantly killed, and Fireman William Dietrich severely injured. All traffic will be blocked to-day.

THE HIGH COURT OF INDEPENDENT FORESTERS.

The New Jersey High Court of Foresters held three sessions in this city yesterday. The evening session was largely attended, the late afternoon trains bringing many delegates from various parts of the State. It was voted to institute a commandery of Royal Foresters, a uniformed rank something in the order of Knights Templar.

The Committee on the State of Order congratulated the members on the fact that during the past year the number of courts in New Jersey has doubled, and the membership of members has been in proportion to the growth of the High Court.

County Supreme Chief Ranger Oronyateka conferred the High Court degree on a large number of newly elected delegates in the evening. The installation ceremonies being performed by Dr. S. C. E. Oronyateka.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. P. Ford of Bloomsbury is spending the present week as the guest of relatives in Plainfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Milton Barnes of Dover removed to this city, where they formerly resided, a few days ago.

Mr. Peter J. Johnson of South Plainfield has been confined to his home for the past week with chills and fever.

Miss Ella Sharp of Somerville, and Miss Lillie Garretson of this city are visiting relatives in Clinton and vicinity.

Mr. Griswolde Barrie of this city has been appointed on the reportorial staff of the Brooklyn Standard-Union, and began his duties to-day.

The Rev. W. A. Quayle, D. D., is spending a day or two with his old friend, the Rev. Dr. Charles R. Mitchell. He is President of Baker University, of Kansas, one of the largest colleges in the West. He is the youngest college president in the country, and an unusually eloquent preacher. He preaches in the Methodist church to-morrow morning.

Rev. P. S. Brigden of New Brunswick will entertain audiences in the Park Church this evening with musical selections and readings of Patti and other celebrities. He has been for years the favorite leader of the Rutgers College Glee Club and of the First Dutch Reform church of New Brunswick. He has composed many pieces of music, among which are "Evelyn," "Meadow Brook" and "Elsperanza."

Mr. Ezra Loomis, brother of the late Mr. Edwin Loomis, says that deceased was 61 years old born May 4, 1831, that he was attended by Dr. Fritts, in consultation with Dr. Anderton of New York, and later with Dr. Read of Brooklyn. Referring to the failure of Foster, Knight, Ainsworth & Co., Mr. Loomis says deceased did not withdraw from the firm, but stood by the rest of them to the last, and that the panic which overtook them, struck him also, and that when Mr. Knight lost he lost.

POLITICAL PICKLES.

ANOTHER REPUBLICAN BANNER RAISING.

A Big Time Anticipated in the Borough To-night.

There was much hustle and preparation at the U. S. Grant Republican Club room last evening. Electric lights were put inside and outside the hall, and the colored electric lights which hang across the street to illuminate the banner which is to be raised at eight o'clock this evening were tested.

Two more kegs have been added to the candescent electric lights, and they brilliantly illuminate the neighborhood, and attract much attention.

Hon. James Megie of Illinois will deliver an address in connection with the banner raising this evening in Sengerbund Hall. There will also be fireworks and music in profusion.

Republican Wheelmen, Attention!

The uniforms of the Wheelmen's Division of the Republican Association were received by the Committee on Clubs this morning. Every member of the division is requested to meet at the rink to-night at half-past seven to try on the new suits and while uniformed will ride in state to the banner raising in North Plainfield.

DEMOCRATIC PRIMARIES.

Four Delegates to the Congressional Convention Elected Last Evening.

The Democrats of North Plainfield held a primary in the basement of the school house last evening to elect delegates to the Third Congressional District Democratic convention to be held in New Brunswick on next Wednesday. David J. Carney was elected chairman; Andrew Kenney, secretary, L. R. Van Winkle, assistant secretary; E. C. Morse and John Vesterfin, tellers; and M. Larkin, judge of election.

S. G. Shann, John Bodine, Levi Kline and John A. Thickstun were elected delegates and empowered to select their own alternates. They will go to the convention uninstructed, but it is probable they will give their support to a Somerset county candidate.

The total number of votes cast last evening was 206.

WILL GORE NO MORE.

Mr. Wolfe's Bull Killed in its Stall Yesterday.

The bull which so badly gored Alexander Wolfe at South Plainfield, as reported in THE NEWS a few days ago, was killed yesterday in its stall by Butcher Sharkey. The animal was so vicious that no one could approach it, and even while in the stall he killed with difficulty. Mr. Wolfe is still suffering from his wounds, which are very painful.

Johnson's Fast Riding due to a Peculiar Machine.

It is said that the wheel ridden by Johnson, the Western rider, has an eight-inch gear, and they account for the wonderful bursts of speed accredited to him. The rear is so arranged that the greatest leverage comes when the power is applied with most force on the down stroke, and consequently makes a wheel of unusually high gear.

Eastern manufacturers are now experimenting with the contrivance. An expert says he has seen men ride considerably faster for a quarter of a mile on an ungainly-geared wheel than they could on an ordinary safety. He thinks there must have been some agency which operated more favorably upon Johnson when he made a mile in 1.56 2-5 at Independence than on Zimmerman when he made the same mile in 1.57 4-5 at Springfield, because Zimmerman defeats with comparative ease men who defeat Johnson.

Elizabeth's Big Electric Plant.

Elizabeth will soon have completed what is claimed to be the largest and best equipped electric lighting station in New Jersey, and one of the largest outside of New York city.

The new plant is being erected by the Suburban Electric Light Company on Murray street, near the Lackawanna Railroad tracks.

The plant consists of a one-story and basement building, 200 feet long by 87 feet wide, and a boiler room 80 feet by 56 feet, with the roof 34 feet from the floor.

The great chimney rises from one corner of the boiler room 125 feet into the sky. It is 15 feet in diameter at the base and tapers to 12 feet in diameter at the top. The flue is 8 inches in diameter, affording a draught for 3,000 horse power boilers.

A Valuable Meteorological Work.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture has just published its Experiment Station Bulletin No. 10. It contains suggestions and instructions for agricultural colleges and experiment stations prepared by Mark W. Harrington, Chief of the Weather Bureau. It is a valuable compendium of numerous officers of the experiment stations at work for the good of mankind in the planning and execution of much needed investigations regarding the relations of our climate to agriculture.

The central office of the experimental station at New Brunswick has issued its Bulletin No. 79, containing a meteorological summary for the State of New Jersey during the month of August.

EDITORIAL NOTES

People so seldom have their way in life that it seems a pity they cannot have it when they want to be cremated after they are dead.

The greatest material blessing that could descend on our country just now would probably be the discovery of some fabulously rich gold mines. We have no national war to work off surplus restlessness. Gold mines would do it.

It is agreeable to know that President Harrison has accepted the invitation of Brazil and the Argentine Republic to act as arbitrator in settling the boundary line between them. Twenty-five years ago these two fine South American republics would have gone to fighting about it, and have worried through a long and devastating war, which at the end would have settled nothing. It is an evidence of that happy progress which is shoving all the world onward that now they call on their disinterested mutual friend—the United States—to see that justice is done to both. Arbitration is the thing.

One result of the present cholera alarm will be to provide every city of considerable size in the Union with grounds and buildings for a pest hospital. Where these are the gift of generous citizens they will be doubly appreciated. Chicago has been thus favored, so far as the grounds for her pest hospitals are concerned. General Joseph Torrence presents to Chicago, which accepts the gift, twenty acres of ground, a site for cholera, but likewise for diphtheria, smallpox and scarlet fever hospitals. This is the way to stamp out contagion in cities—to have separate hospitals for the various infectious ailments and remove thither in all cases the patient stricken with the pestilence, whether he be rich or poor.

Personalities in Politics.

Professor William Simpson has written an interesting paper on the use of mud as a building material. With admirable skill and learning he traces mud in architecture from the days of the Assyrians down to the present time. "Wattle and dab" is a process with which for ages other nations than ours have been very familiar.

As for us Americans, however, it may be said that we are much more familiar with mud as a political material. It was a fashion as long ago as the time of Washington to "wattle and dab" the opposing candidate till his friends did not know him any more. Argument with the masses has too often meant the same thing as wholesale personal abuse of the candidate.

This autumn perhaps we may venture to expect that the personalities will be less indulged in than in previous years. For one thing, so far as the leading candidates are concerned, all the mud that could be thrown has been exhausted in former years, and there have been fortunately no fresh puddles uncovered. The example of our British brethren in the summer campaign is enough to make Americans shun with determination the argument of personal abuse. The strongest thing to be said against the mud argument, however, is that it is going out of fashion in this country. The writer or the speaker who indulges in it is away behind the times.

The President's Wife.

Mrs. Harrison's friends say in private that it is the awful strain of her life at Washington that has caused her deplorable illness. When she entered the White House she resolved to meet every requirement of her position and meet it fully and kindly. There are 65,000,000 people in this country, and wherever there was a woman's society of any kind it seemed to feel it had a claim for recognition on the first lady of the land. Letters have poured in on her making all kinds of demands for charity, for her presence at meetings, for her name and her advice, for a letter to be read publicly and even for details of her domestic life. She has tried to send kindly answers to them all.

If a missionary society meets in convention at the capital; if any kind of an organization holds its reunion there, the members' wives feel they are slighted unless they are personally received in a gang by the mistress of the executive mansion. Private citizens—men and women—with no claim at all, insist on seeing a president's wife and go away offended and feeling defrauded of their rights as American citizens unless they are admitted to a long and confidential chat. The offices of the president's clerks and secretaries feel in the same boat as the family residence gives the presidential family no privacy at all from vulgar sightseers or anybody else—not even so much as is enjoyed by the dwellers in the humblest hovel.

But worst of all perhaps are the awful receptions, in which sometimes the president's wife must stand in one spot and bow to a procession for four hours at a stretch. Queen Victoria abhorred her court receptions long ago, and has now given up her drawing rooms because of the fatigue of receiving visitors once a year. Washington social requirements are infinitely harder. Mrs. Harrison has met them all bravely, and the consequences are her present illness.

THE POLITICAL CAMERA

It Shows Further Democratic Complications in New York.

THE STATE COMMITTEE INCENSED.

No Nomination for the Court of Appeals Made on Account of the Attitude of the Antisnappers—Cleveland Asked to Interfere—Sherman on Protection.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—The political situation in New York state was still further complicated last night by the failure of the Democratic state committee to nominate a candidate for chief justice of the court of appeals. The committee met at the Hoffman House at 8 o'clock, Chairman Edward Murphy presiding. As stated in the call, the committee was called to order for the purpose of nominating a chief Justice, and the fact that this was not done was a surprise to the uninitiated.

It had been tacitly understood that the nomination was to fall to Judge Rufus W. Peckham, but it is probable that the action of the County Democracy on Thursday night, when it declared for independent local nominations, so incensed the state committee that it altered its determination, or at least postponed the nomination until assured that the third ticket idea had been abandoned.

It was also stated that the failure to nominate was due to the opposition of Hugh McLaughlin, who has a candidate in the person of William C. DeWitt, of Brooklyn.

It is openly asserted that, should the antisnappers persist in nominating a third ticket, the state committee will retaliate by nominating Mr. De Witt, Judge Earle or possibly Judge Isaac Maynard, and that the postponement of a nomination was for the purpose of giving the antisnappers time to consider the situation.

The Antisnappers.

No third ticket has yet been nominated by the antisnappers. As evidenced by the meeting held by them last night, however, the probabilities of an anti-Democratic county ticket are stronger than ever. Although no action was taken further than the adoption of the report of the committee appointed by the Chairman Mr. Harriott and Messrs. Dickinson, Quincy and Smalley, of the Democratic national committee, there was much speech making in favor of a third ticket. The report of the conference committee, after detailing the history of its appointment, was as follows:

"The chairman of your committee stated the purpose of your committee's visit in the language of the resolution of its appointment. In reply to the request contained in such statement, the chairman of the subcommittee informed this committee that, in the opinion of the subcommittee, the most useful means to be adopted by the organization represented by your committee were the systematic organization of campaign clubs or associations in every district of the city, the thorough canvassing of the vote in each district, the holding of public meetings and parades and the dissemination of a correct understanding among all classes of voters of the questions at issue.

Action Postponed.

"The chairman of your committee asked the chairman of the subcommittee whether the national committee desired at this time to add any further detailed suggestion to the general suggestions above specified, to which the chairman of the subcommittee made no reply, being interrupted by Mr. Dickinson, of the subcommittee, who said that the subcommittee would be very glad to hear any suggestions on that subject that your committee, to which the the chairman of your committee replied that the committee had nothing further in the way of suggestion to make upon the subjects included within the limit of your resolution and the committee's instructions."

After hearing and adopting the forgoing report, the committee was continued for the purpose of further conferences with other organizations, and the meeting adjourned until next Friday night, when the antisnappers will hear a further report from the committee. Among those present was ex-Mayor Grace.

Cleveland's Influence Asked.

Several important conferences were held with Mr. Cleveland at the Victoria hotel. The national campaign committee, including Messrs. Harrity, Dickinson, Gorman, Sheehan, Brice, Whitney, Smalley and Quigg; the only absentees being Senator Ransom of North Carolina, Congressman Cable of Illinois and E. C. Wall of Wisconsin, had the first consultation, which lasted over two hours.

Immediately after their departure a delegation of the New York state committee arrived, and matters pertaining to the state campaign were discussed. The chief topic of discussion was the proposed third ticket of the County Democracy. It was urgently recommended that Mr. Cleveland influence the abrogation of such a measure.

Delegations from Iowa and Kansas called on Mr. Cleveland.

Croker's Important Statement.

Mr. Richard Croker hastened over to the Victoria hotel immediately upon the adjournment of the state committee and proceeded to Mr. Cleveland's room, where he remained about half an hour. As he descended the stairs to depart he encountered Don M. Dickinson, whom he followed back to Mr. Cleveland's room. When he again emerged he was questioned regarding the nature of his hurried visit.

He replied that he had an important statement to give out, but wished first to secure Mr. Cleveland's permission to make it. He then returned to the reference to any action taken by the state committee Mr. Croker refused to state.

After leaving the hotel Mr. Croker met Messrs. Murphy and Sheehan, and it was reported that Senator Hill was also at the conference.

A committee of six, representing the State League of Democratic Clubs, were admitted to Mr. Cleveland's apartments. The delegation was headed by P. T. Wall, of Richland fame, and Commissioner F. W. Lee, of Brooklyn.

At Republican Headquarters.

General Russell A. Alger called on Chairman Carter, and later the chairman announced that Michigan's ex-governor would take an active part in the campaign. Senator Sherman will speak in Philadelphia on the evening of Oct. 8 and in New York Oct. 10.

J. H. Manley, of the national Republican executive committee, left for a trip to Maine and New Hampshire. He will return on Monday. Among the visitors were Secretary of the Treasury Charles Foster, Chauncey M. Depew; Amasa Cobb, of Lincoln, Neb.; ex-Congressman Rodney Mallard, of Fitchburg, Mass.; F. D. Wilson, B. C. Doyle, of Little Rock.

Word comes from Shelbyville, Ind., that A. E. Ingalls, president of the Zig Zag railroad, has written a letter declaring that his company will fight the Democratic state ticket.

SHERMAN ON PROTECTION.

He Attributes to It All Our Prosperity Since 1861.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 1.—Senator Sherman talked to 5,000 people at North Fairfield in Mr. Harter's district. He told them that to protection was due all the prosperity which had come to the country since 1861. The charge that protection favored the few, he said, was false. He continued:

There is not a protected industry where any discrimination is made in favor of the employer as against the laborer. There may be a difference of opinion between them as to the just rate of wages, but here the laborer is as free to choose his mode of employment as the employer. The disputes between them, no doubt, often lead to evil results, and it is the hope and aim of good men of all parties to find some way of adjusting the fair division in the results of production between labor and capital, and to secure to the laborer fair wages and prompt pay for honest services; but as yet no rules have been adopted except to leave the matter entirely to the free will of both the laborer and the manufacturer and to protect each in the enjoyment of his undoubted rights.

Senator Sherman charged the Democrats with following Calhoun and the Confederacy in their tariff declarations, and said that Senator Hill's heedless protection attitude was unavailable on the Democratic platform. He spoke of the Democratic idea as "the free trade notions of commercial cities and of professional dudes whose only idea of life is to English, pale ale and Welsh rare bit." He referred to Commissioner Peck's report, and then said that protection has only increased our exports by $75,000,000 and our exports by $182,000,000.

He discussed at length the silver and currency questions, opposing free silver, saying that the Democrats wish to substitute for the national bank notes "the ragtag and bobtail red dog and wildcat money of the olden times."

The Congressional Battle.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—The Republican subcommittee on congressional elections have been holding private sessions here for two days for the purpose of figuring out what can be done to overcome the Democratic majority in the house. The purpose is to break into the Democratic representation from the south, electing Alliance men if not Republicans, wherever it is possible, so as to prevent the Democrats from organizing the next house.

Hill to Speak in Virginia.

RICHMOND, Oct. 1.—Chairman Patterson, of the local Democratic committee, has received a letter from Senator Hill stating that he will be able to make but one speech in Virginia during the present campaign, owing to other campaign engagements. That speech will be made at Lynchburg on Oct. 26.

Grip Led Him to Suicide.

ALTOONA, Pa., Oct. 1.—Warren H. Moore, a wealthy contractor and G. A. R. man, committed suicide. Grip had made him despondent.

FASHIONS

THE DOMAIN OF FASHION.

MORE NOVELTIES FOR AUTUMN TO PLEASE THE FAIR SEX.

What Changes Fashion Brings—Some New Toilettes for Autumn—Ideas About Dress-making—Colors and Styles That Will be Most Popular.

The new fall toilets bid fair to be the prettiest and most elegant of any that have ever been seen, both in color and make. The prevailing colors for early autumn will partake of the colors of the nature, and be russet, faded reds and purples, with warm browns and soft yellows. The new fall woolens are seen in these colors and a mixture and also changeable effects. There is a pretty serge, with the warp of pale blue, like the autumn sky, and a rich yellow, like the poplar leaves, for woof and the tones blend and mingle, so that in one light it is blue, in another yellow, and all together a delightful green. Trimmed at the foot are four narrow silk plaited ruffles around the bottom and a draped corsage of silk bearing the same shades, and with wrinkled sleeves, bordered by three of the tiniest ruffles, it was most beautiful.

A Season of Sashes.

Sashes of every description, in soft, rich tones and laces, closely plaits, are twisted about the waist with a revelation of bodice beneath. They are tied in bows and knotted at one side directly in front. Many of the very delicate sashes are secured like Swiss girdles and, passing under the arms, are tied high up in the centre of the back; where a huge spread bow gives the finishing touch to this original design.

Two of World's most dashing costumes in some odd, gold-threaded Oriental fabric is furnished with a pignant sash drapery in warm red, olive and golden shades, which starts at the arm-holes, crosses on the bust, is curiously wound around the figure and is finally brought forward from the hips, where it is effectively looped in the simplest modes, the fringed edge falling almost to the foot of the skirt.

Another Parisian fancy plants a huge bow upon the bust, the ends of which, after winding twice about the waist, cross behind and take a forward and downward course to the foot of the skirt in front, where they finish in another big bow.

HIGH TREASON ALLEGED

A Carnegie Bombshell for the Homestead Strikers.

WARRANTS FOR ALL THE OFFICERS.

Part of the Advisory Board Under Arrest and Detectives After the Remainder—It Is Rumored That a Number of Workmen Will Also Be Taken Into Custody.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 1.—The greatest sensation in the Homestead mill trouble since the riot of July 6 was sprung by the Carnegie company officials. A veritable bomb was thrown into the camp of the strikers when Chief Justice Paxton, of the state supreme court, issued warrants for the arrest of all the members of the strikers' advisory committee, charging them with treason against the commonwealth. This is the first case of the kind ever known here. The matter was kept quiet, the intention being to arrest all the men in their beds, so as to prevent any from getting away.

Two men charged with treason are: David Shannon, John McLuckie, David Lynch, Thomas J. Crawford, Hugh O'Donnell, Harry Bayne, Elmer E. Rall, Isaac Myers, Henry Bayers, T. F. Brown, George Champion, Hugh Ortlichler, Miller Burns, John Coyle, Jack Chilcott, Dennis M. Cash, William McCanegly, Michael Cummings, William Combs, John Dierken, Patrick Fagan, W. H. Gatches, Matthew Harris, Reed Kennedy, John Miller, S. B. Searight, John Murray, H. C. Thompson, Martin Murrey, Hugh Ross, William T. Roberts, George Rylands and George W. Serves.

The Information.

The information recites that on or about July 1 the defendants, wickedly weighing the duty of their allegiance to the laws of the commonwealth, but wickedly designing and intending to excite insurrection, rebellion and war against said commonwealth, did, at the borough of Homestead, unlawfully, maliciously, falsely and traitorously compose and intend to raise and levy war, insurrection and rebellion against the commonwealth of Pennsylvania with a great multitude of persons, numbering hundreds, armed and arrayed in a warlike manner, with guns and pistols, clubs, swords, knives, clubs and other warlike weapons and did array and dispose themselves against said commonwealth, and that in manifestation of said war and authority were defied, resisted and subverted by the defendants and their armed allies, contrary to the duty, allegiance and fidelity of said defendants.

The first five men to be arrested were Acting Chairman Crawford, Edward Beard, George Rylands, John Dierken and Bayne. It is said that Lieut. Farrell, the chief of the Carnegie detectives, has over 150 more warrants, and they will be served as fast as the men can be located. The men were locked up in the guard tent at Munhall and were later taken to Pittsburg, where they will have a hearing. In no one were the warrants a surprise to the men, who are indignant over the proceedings.

May Arrest the Women.

There are rumors of wholesale arrests of the women of the borough who have taken an active part in the struggle, but they cannot be verified as yet.

Chairman H. C. Frick, of the Carnegie company, paid another visit to Homestead, and the strikers are guessing very hard the object of Frick's repeated trips to the plant. A change of management it is thought will result. Frick has visited the mill half a dozen times, and, it is said, ignored General Manager Potter. At a conference with the directors several days ago it is asserted that Mr. Frick stated Mr. Potter severely for what he considered was incompetency on the part of Potter in not being able to make a better showing with the large force of men at Homestead.

Mr. Potter did not retaliate, but asked for a further trial of ten days to see what he could do. This, it is claimed, was granted, as the limit of grace expires this week and no marked improvement has taken place the visit of Mr. Frick is looked upon as very significant.

It is rumored that Mr. Potter went to some of the skilled men and told them that in the event of Mr. Frick saying anything to them to tell him the poor work was due to the inexperience of the men. This being the case, it is asserted that an early closing down of the entire mill is an assured fact.

Four more companies of the Sixteenth regiment departed from Homestead. This leaves only about 150 guardsmen. It is feared an outbreak may occur again.

Hamburg Vastly Improved.

HAMBURG, Oct. 1.—The number of fresh cases of cholera has been sixty-three, or sixty-seven fewer than yesterday; the number of deaths twenty-seven, or seven fewer than yesterday; the number of burials 81, or eight fewer than yesterday.

Chinese Actors Barred Out.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Acting Secretary Spaulding has declined to permit 200 Chinese actors to enter this country for the purpose of presenting Chinese plays in a theater to be erected near the entrance of the World's fair in Chicago.

SPAIN'S NEW MINISTER.

He Is Officially Received by President Harrison.

A BATCH OF CONSULS APPOINTED.

Baker Succeeds the Dishonest Ryder and Drake the Disgraced Johnson—The Latter Evidently Believed in Having Two Strings to His Political Bow.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—The new Spanish minister to the United States, Senor Enrique Dupuy de Lome, was formally presented to the president by the secretary of state. Secretary Foster speaks the language of Spain with fluency, and he accordingly interpreted to the president and the minister the exchanges of cordialities. Upon being presented to the president, Senor de Lome spoke as follows:

Mr. PRESIDENT—It would at any time have been a great honor for me to present myself at this capital, but it is much more of an honor in these days when the two hemispheres are celebrating the anniversary of their history. My country and this republic, Mr. President, have always been united in firm friendship, and the ties of affection and of commercial relations, based upon the harmony of all interests and respect to the rights of two nations.

I shall be diligent, therefore, in fulfilling the orders of her majesty, the queen regent, and of her government, and to this I know I shall have the hearty co-operation of our excellency's government, but my efforts would be useless without the benefit and delightful friendship of your excellency, which I shall endeavor to merit, and which I beg you will accord to me.

Her majesty, the queen regent, directs that I convey to you her most fervent wishes to heaven for your personal happiness and that of the noble people among which you occupy the highest magistracy, to which I humbly add my own, praying God to give you consolation in your sad affliction.

President Harrison's Response.

In reply the president said:

MR. MINISTER—I have much pleasure in welcoming you as the envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of his majesty, Don Alfonso XIII. The ties which have long joined the ancient kingdom of Spain and the oldest of the republics of the New World are made closer and more friendly today, when the people of the two countries are celebrating the great work wrought by the genius of Columbus and the tireless endeavor of Spain.

That these bonds of amity are growing stronger with each passing year, under the benignity and potent influences of traditional concord and developing commercial intercourse, is indeed a pleasing augury for the future, and to such beneficent ends my best efforts will ever be put forth to second the good desires of your excellency and your own resolves.

I earnestly reciprocate her majesty's kind words of well-wishing, and I pray you to convey in turn the sincere wishes I express in the name of the American people for long life to her own, for her majesty's welfare and the happiness of her son, thus called in tender infancy to the throne made illustrious by the achievements and renown of Ferdinand and Isabel.

To yourself, Mr. Minister, I offer the most cordial greeting, and thank you for your feeling tribute of sympathy with me in the hour of personal trial.

New Consuls Appointed.

After receiving the minister President Harrison attended a short meeting of the cabinet, and afterward appointed Orlando M. Baker, of Iowa, consul at Copenhagen, to succeed Consul Ryder, who is now awaiting trial on the charge of the peculation of a large sum of money, and who has confessed his guilt. Mr. Baker is a college professor at Indianola, Ia., and is well fitted as a linguist for his position.

The president also filled another position in the consular service made vacant by the removal of another consul whose notoriety is second only to that attained by Ryder. This second case is that of Edmont Johnson, consul at Kiel, Germany. Johnson was removed this month for alleged irregular pecuniary and his official position and for falsification of his military record.

When the Cleveland administration came into power Johnson was a consular agent, having held position since 1870. Shortly after Mr. Cleveland's inauguration Secretary Bayard received papers urging the promotion of Consular Agent Johnson for rendering valuable services to the Republican party in the campaign of the previous year, and this was followed by other papers from prominent Democrats asking that Johnson be promoted for rendering services to the Cleveland cause.

Sailed with Both Sides.

From the records of these two batches of recommendations arose the charge that Johnson had fortified himself in the event of the election of either Cleveland or Blaine, and had sent both batches in the belief that he was sending only that containing the good words of Democratic friends.

The man appointed to succeed Johnson is John H. Drake, of South Dakota. Mr. Drake is the editor of The Dakota Pioneer, published at Aberdeen. He went west as a commercial traveler from Syracuse, N. Y. Mr. Drake is forty-eight years of age and is an old friend of Senator Hiscock.

Other appointments made were those of Ransom F. McCrillas, of Massachusetts, consul at Denia; John C. Sunberg, of California, editor of The Pacific Medical Journal, consul at Bagdad; A. H. Lewris, of Illinois, editor of the Eight Daily News, commercial agent at Freidburg; John P. Elfrich, of Ohio, commercial agent at St. Pierre, and Kasper Smith, of the District of Columbia, commercial agent at Turin.

CORBETT AND DALY—PART.

The Champion Seems to Have Pounded His Sparring Partner Too Hard.

BUFFALO, Oct. 1.—The Corbett show at Music hall last night was a blooming success barring a disturbance which has just come to the surface. After Corbett and Daly had sparred three one minute rounds and retired to their dressing room a party of local sports rushed to the place to congratulate the champion on his fine appearance and great success on the road.

Corbett replied, "Thank you, gentlemen, but my exhibition would have been more pleasing but for the fact that my sparring partner, Mr. Daly, is in the sulks." Daly, who was close by, scowled and said, "Well, Jim, sulks or no sulks, we quit tonight."

Corbett made light of what he called an idle threat and the party dispersed. Daly is here still, while Corbett has left.

When seen by a United Press reporter Mr. Daly said: "Corbett can whip any man in the world, but he is the most unreasonable fellow I ever had business with and is forgetting his friends. When on the road with him previous to his victory over Sullivan I was asked to meet all comers at all places, including one night stands. I filled the bill, but not until after I had broken several of my ribs and met with several other mishaps that would have stopped any ordinary individual. I had asked Corbett on several occasions to treat me with some degree of consideration while doing our turn, but he continued to punch away, and any objection offered by me was met with anything but a promise to do better."

Red Day of Terror in Paris—How the Mob of Sept. 3, 1792, Slew Every Ecclesiastic Within the Walls of the Carmelite Convent.

Among the historic buildings that were the scene of one of the most horrible acts of the red reign of terror in France and which still remains intact is the Carmelite convent. This place is now known as the "Chapel of the Martyrs," and the sight of it reproduces to the imagination the frightful scene of the massacre of Sept. 3, 1792.

Everywhere about this somber building the shadow of death is felt. Still scratched on the convent walls may be read the words in which the caged priests, doomed to the fury of the bloodthirsty mob, bade a last farewell to the world to life.

After the mob, hoarse with shouting their insane cries for vengeance against everything that represented law and order, had slain every priest to be found in the churches or streets of Paris, one of their number, his arms dripping with the gore of his victims, called out:

"There are no more left in sight; let us go to the convent of the Carmelites!"

Infuriated with blood, they rushed through the streets shouting:

"Vive la nation! Mort aux refractaires!"

The shouts of the mob smote the ears of the old bishop of Arles, who at once called the priests about him and had them in, chanting a vesper hymn.

The mob broke down the iron gates as if they were laths, and meeting Bandel Abbe Salins he was instantly shot. With a fortitude and self denial that speaks well for their devotion to their superior, the priests tried to divert the fury of the mob, who were in search of the bishop, to themselves. One of them was asked if he was not the bishop of Arles, but as he bowed assent he was made to supply the bishop officer who asked the question took it for granted that he was, and plunged his red sword into his breast.

At length the doomed bishop was found and the leader of the crowd called out to him:

"Are you not Dulan of Arles?"

"I am," was the reply.

"Ah, villain! It is you who have caused so be aland the blood of so many patriots in the city of Arles," said the man.

"I have never done harm to any man," replied the bishop calmly.

"Well, I am going to harm you," retorted the assassin, and he aimed with his saber a blow at the venerable prelate's head. The first stroke fell short. The old man did not move, but stood with hands clasped and upraised face, as if in prayer. A second blow was more effective, for it stretched him lifeless on the earth.

The bishop had scarcely fallen before a dozen ruffians leaped on the body One seized the golden crucifix and tore it from his neck, and others took the watch and chain and left them up with shouts like trophies of their sanguinary triumph.

While this dreadful scene was being enacted in the main hall the remaining clergymen rushed into the oratory. Addressing them in a calm voice, the Abbe Depres said:

"The end has come, my brothers; let us die here at the foot of the cross!"

At these words all knelt down and began to utter the prayers for the dying. In this position they were found by their murderers. In a few minutes all were slaughtered and the white pavement of the chapel was covered inches deep with blood. All this occurred in less than fifteen minutes.

During this slaughter a revolutionary French officer came on the scene and tried to stay the hands of the assassins.

"No, no!" shouted the leader of the crowd. "There are others hidding in the church and in the garden! Let us make salats of them while our swords are still hot!"

With their long pikes they prodded behind the bushes, stabbed through the beds with their swords, and shot three men to death whom they found hiding behind the altar.

In their wild hunt the mob reached the choir loft, and here a shout of savage exultation announced that the bloody searchers had made a discovery.

The bishop of Saintes was in the loft, not for the purpose of saving his life, but in the hope of hiding from the fiends the lives of some twenty youths who had been preparing for the priesthood.

A man named Violette seated himself on the organ stool and shouted out:

"Listen, all! I am a magistrate, and I command that all these wretched culprits, who pretend to believe in God, be brought before me for sentence!"

The mob fell in with the humor of this hideous burlesque on justice, and a dozen red hands were laid on every wretched prisoner.

"Pierre Louis de la Rochefoucauld!" shouted the mock magistrate, and at once the bishop of Saintes was dragged before him.

"Do not tarry with me," said the bishop. "I only ask that you let me follow my brothers, but save these children," pointing to the youths.

"No, no!" shouted the mock judge. "If I spare them they will grow up to be priests or bishops and to believe in God. The day of liberty and reason has come. Let them die together!"

With a wild shout the bishop and the boys were led down to the chapel and made to stand before the blood spattered altar. At a word of command from Violette, who watched from the gallery, the mob fell upon their defenseless victims with their swords, and no living ecclesiastic could be found within the sanguinary walls of the Carmelite convent that night.

So terminated one of the most frightful of all the red days of terror. Such is an illustration of a mob in power, and of the doings of those who, no matter what their grievance, are sure in their excess to mistake a cruel and murderous license for true liberty.

A Tail of a Dog.

The following story is vouched for by a gallant old officer now on the retired list, but who before and after the war for secession had spent many years among the Indians in the far west.

About the time when chloroform was coming into use the general, then a captain of cavalry, was stationed at Brent's Fort, on the Arkansas river, not far from the site of the present city of Pueblo.

There was a quantity of the drug then in the fort medicine chest, and in order to increase his influence over the superstitious Indians the captain told them that he could kill a man and then restore him to life again.

Out of their shaking their heads in doubt he proposed to try the experiment on one of them. Of course they scowled a refusal, and the Cheyenne chief, pointing to a wolfish dog which he owned, said:

"Try on dog."

"All right," said the captain.

The dog was secured, and the captain took it into a dark room and administered chloroform. The dog was apparently dead, and in this condition it was brought out and exhibited to the astonished Indians.

In order to convince them that the dog was really dead the captain cut off a short piece of its tail and then applied nitrate of silver to the wound to stop the bleeding.

Having beyond question killed the dog, the next thing was to bring it to life. The captain bore it back to the room and kept it there until it had recovered from the influence of the chloroform, perhaps aiding its revival by dashing cold water on its face.

He then came back with the dog into the compartment in which the Indians were seated and placed it on the floor, when with a wild yelp it flew between his legs and darted out the door.

The Indians sprang to their feet, with a grunt of astonishment and followed in pursuit, every one of them too much alarmed to come back.

This was not the end of the affair. One of the Indians in leaving carried with him the severed piece of tail. Three years afterward the captain was crossing the plains with a small escort when he suddenly came in sight of a party of Indians traveling in the opposite direction.

Each company ran to a little eminence and scanned the other in order to find out if they were friends or foes.

The matter continued in doubt till one of the Indians raised his right arm, and in the sign language indicated that he was a good friend.

The captain advanced with his escort, and as he drew near he noticed that the Indian still waved something in his right hand, and it was a talisman.

On mingling with them the Indians proved to be the Cheyennes who had visited Brent's Fort at the time of the chloroform experiment, and the talisman which the chief thought so potent proved to be the dried tail of the dog.

EBB AND FLOW OF THE TIDE.

Some of the Popular Fancies and Superstitions Associated with Tides.

The ebb and flow of the tide have not escaped the influence of superstition. Some asserted that they were caused by the efforts of the earth to breathe, and others by the sun, "which moves and whirls the winds about, so that they fall with violence on the Atlantic, which thus swells and produces the tides." The Chinese attribute them to the action of supernatural beings, and Russian folklore informs us that the tides are controlled by the Water King's daughter.

One of the most popular fancies still current in some parts is that death is delayed until the ebb of the tide—a superstition to which Mrs. Quickly refers in "Henry V" (act II, scene 3), where, speaking of Falstaff's death, she says, "A' babbled of green fields, and went away, an it had been any Christom child; 'a parted even just between 12 and 1, even at the turning o' the tide." Thus Mr. Peggotty pathetically explained to David Copperfield by poor Barkis' bedside that "people must die along the coast except when the tide's pretty nigh out. They can't be born unless it's pretty nigh in—not properly born till it's nigh enough to come in with the boats a-going out with the next tide." This belief is common along the east coast of England from Northumberland to Kent. It has been suggested that it may be some slight foundation for this notion in the change of temperature which undoubtedly takes place on the change of tide, and which may act on the flickering spark of life, extinguishing it as the ebbing sea recedes." We may compare the following passage in "2 Henry IV" (act iv., scene 4), where Clarence, speaking of the approaching death of the king, says:

The river hath thrice flow'd, no ebb between:
And the old folk, time's doting chronicles,
Say it did so a little time before
That our great grandsire, Edward, sick'd and died.

Why Lost People Walk in Circles.

The fact that people lost on a desert or in a forest invariably walk in a circle has been explained as due to a slight inequality in the length of the legs. A writer who maintains this theory in Pearson's Weekly states that careful measurements of a series of skeletons have shown that only 10 per cent. had the lower limbs equal in length; 35 per cent. had the right limb longer than the left, while in the other 55 per cent. the left leg was the longer. The result of one limb being longer than the other will naturally be that a person will unconsciously take a longer step with the longer limb, and consequently will tread to the right or to the left, according as the left or right leg is the longer, unless the tendency to deviation is corrected by the eye.

The left leg being more frequently the longer, as evident by measurement of the skeleton, the inclination should take place more frequently to the right than to the left, and this conclusion is quite borne out by observations made on a number of persons when walking blindfolded. Further, on measurement of the arms it is found that in 72 per cent. the right arm is longer than the left, while in 28 per cent. the left arm is the longer, showing that a considerable majority of persons are right handed and left legged. The inequality in the length of the limbs is not confined to any particular sex or race, but seems to be universal in all respects.

The Republic's Emblem.

Miss Edna Dean Proctor in a poem in The Century selects the Indian maize as being native, characteristic, sui generis and altogether appropriate for the republic's emblem. Following is the closing stanza:

The rose may bloom for England,
The lily for France unfold;
Ireland may honor the shamrock,
Scotland her thistle bold;
But the shield of the great Republic
The glory of the West,
Shall bear on its azure the tasseled corn,
Of all our wealth the best,
The arbutus and the goldenrod
The heart of the North may cheer,
And the mountain laurel for Maryland
Its floral clusters rear;
And jessamine and magnolia
The trees of the South adorn
But the wide Republic's emblem
Is the bounteous, golden corn!

Memorial Trees.

General George Washington, besides being famous as a warrior and founder of a great nation, was also eminently fond of rural life, and numbers of trees on the estate at Mount Vernon are pointed out as having been planted by his own hand. The last tree that he is known to have planted is a magnolia grandiflori, which is now of considerable height and an object of attraction for every visitor. There is no more pleasing memorial of a visit of a friend than a fine tree planted by his hand. Meehan tells in his illustrated monthly that while he may be some slight foundation for this notion in the change of temperature, which undoubtedly takes place on the change of tide, and which may act on the flickering spark of life, extinguishing it as she ebbing sea recedes." We may compare the following passage in "2 Henry IV" (act iv., scene 4), where Clarence, speaking of the approaching death of the king, says:

The river hath thrice flow'd, no ebb between:
And the old folk, time's doting chronicles,
Say it did so a little time before
That our great grandsire, Edward, sick'd and died.

Her Thoughts.

It was the twilight hour. They sat
Down where the waves were breaking.
With love his heart went pitapat,
With love his voice was shaking.

They were alone. Out in the west
The sunlight sort was sinking.
"Come, dear," he cried, with heavier chest,
"Tell me what you're thinking."

"Why, I was thinking, George," she said,
Her eyes so full of meaning,
"How much," and here she bowed her head,
"Your flannel suit needs cleaning."

A BIG BANNER RAISING.

THE MOST PRETTILY ARRANGED BANNER IN THE STATE.

North Plainfield Republicans Make the Raising a Grand Success.—Speeches, Fireworks, and Hurrah Generally.

There is nothing slow about the North Plainfield Republicans. When they set out to do anything they do it in a way that does them credit.

Saturday evening was only another of many instances.

The U. S. Grant Club raised a banner in front of Spencer's Hall, and, as it appeared Saturday night and is to appear hereafter during the campaign embowered in the foliage of overhanging maples, and illuminated by electric lights in varied-colored globes, we have no hesitation in pronouncing it the handsomest banner in the State.

There was a large and enthusiastic crowd present at eight o'clock when the banner was swung into position. Gutzman's full band played some lively airs, and a fine display of fireworks accompanied the event.

Judge Ulrich, in a few remarks congratulating the club on its beautiful banner, proposed three cheers, which were given with a will, for the candidates for electors.

Hon. Edward Y. Buckley was then introduced and addressed the meeting in a forcible manner. He said:

"Mr. President and Fellow Citizens: I am glad to be here to-night to congratulate you upon the fine appearance of your banner, and upon the enthusiasm which it has evoked. I am glad to be here to congratulate you upon the fact that you have a banner at all. I am glad to be here to congratulate you upon the fact that you have a banner which is not a disgrace to the town in which you live. I am glad to be here to congratulate you upon the fact that you have a banner which is not a disgrace to the State in which you live. I am glad to be here to congratulate you upon the fact that you have a banner which is not a disgrace to the country in which you live. I am glad to be here to congratulate you upon the fact that you have a banner which is not a disgrace to the cause which you represent. "In 1884, the Democratic party seeing this, pretended to favor protection in order to regain power, and adopted this resolution:

"Resolved, That we are in favor of the Protective Tariff of 1883, and are opposed to its repeal.'

"By this deception they elected as president, James K. Polk, who in his message referred to the great prosperity of the country. Yes in 1846 the party repealed the tariff law and adopted the Walker Free Trade bill.

"As a result the revenue of the country was reduced from $66,000,000 to $51,000,000.

"In 1860 a political cyclone swept the country and William Henry Harrison was elected.

In this manner the speaker traced the course of the country under the different systems, showing that it flourished and prosperous under a Protective Tariff and always the reverse under Democratic free trade.

JUDGE HOFFMAN ACCEPTS.

The Third Congressional District, consisting of the counties of Monmouth, Middlesex and Somerset, since redistricting by the Democratic Legislature last Winter, contains 30,000 voters, and it was calculated that the Democrats would have by the gerrymander a safe 3,000 majority.

At a Democratic convention held at New Brunswick last Wednesday by the delegates sent to represent the 15,000 Republicans and 18,000 Democrats in the district, the strength of character and general qualifications would give them at least a fighting chance of wiping out the opposing majority, and, as already announced, they, uniting in the opinion that Judge William L. Hoffman was the man, nominated him, and appointed a committee which selected Editor T. W. Morrison, of Plainfield, as its chairman to formally present the nomination. Others of the committee from this section were ex-Mayor E. Whitehead, of Rahway, where he has been a prominent resident for twenty years, and Mr. C. R. Stout of New Brunswick, whose golden eloquence from Maine to Oregon, a gentleman rips in years and scholarship, and of means enough to enable him to go wherever he be called to speak is the hope of the many who always gladly hear him.

The committee could have presented their nomination at the convention, but so happened that Judge Hoffman arrived on the train just after his nomination was made, a matter to make a speech for another whom he supposed would be selected, and was taken completely by surprise, but he kept the secret well and was himself. He made, however, a ringing speech which showed that the committee had made no mistake in their choice, but, as he preferred it so, the meeting of the nomination was not delivered to be formally tendered to him at his home. Saturday was the time agreed upon. To enable him to be present to alight there, the train, as a special courtesy, was stopped before the judge's residence, which is a quarter of a mile from the railroad. The committee arrived at 1:20 p. m., saving the journey to Englishtown, where the county station is located, three miles away.

They were met by the judge on a high knoll in front of his beautiful residence, and, after a general handshaking, were taken indoors and introduced to Mrs. Hoffman, the judge's wife, his daughter, his daughter, Miss Bunting and Miss Pindler, his nieces, and were then shown the many interesting relics and curiosities of historic interest being pointed out, among them the old Tennent church at Englishtown, still standing as in revolutionary days, when it was riddled with the bullets of the contending forces.

Meanwhile the judge's neighbors and friends from far and near—for he is well known and highly respected by all who know him—were arriving in stages in honor of the occasion. These visitors were mostly local notables, and included prominent representatives of the agricultural and medical fraternity, editors, and those in official positions, representatives of the mechanic arts and, last but not least, of agriculture, for the Monmouth county farmer is a man of sturdy parts where ever he is found, as is also his rich lands of Monmouth is to see him at his best. Here he is on the lawn before us, his head, a veritable "monarch of all he surveys," is crowned with a profusion of locks hair is white, and for many a year "the wind blew through his whiskers." His eye is bright, his step elastic, his countenance beams with honest friendship, as with open hand extended to each he bids him welcome. A shout of laughter at the judge's bon mot accepted in his stuff and hearty way, exclaims:

"Now are ye, Judge, how are ye! I'm right glad to see ye, and I've no doubt of that, for the Monmouth county farmer is built that way.

But to the point proceed.

All were shown into the spacious reception room. The ladies were present, and all gathered in one corner to welcome the company, and, as everybody agreed they formed a very pretty group, the Judge was requested to go among them, as a sort of a "throw among the roses."

As he did so Mr. Morrison stepped in front of the group of friends facing the judge, and, with a few words, introduced to him in the form of a letter, formally tendered the nomination.

In a distinct and clear speech accepted it, and promised to have his letter of acceptance ready within a few days.

After the many other prominent gentlemen present, who were called upon, including the chairman of the meeting by request, Mr. Stout, a most eloquent lawyer, the ladies invited the company into the house, and this and the merry chatting occupied the hours intervening until train time, the time for departure of which was announced by a shout of mine." It was a feast from the outset, for as its very first convention, in 1883, it passed a resolution instructing Congress still and to explain the platform to their constituents, so they saw fit the object being to deceive the people as to the real motives of the party. They deceived them, and Congress repealed the law of 1883, and adopted a tariff for revenue only. It was only when the Democratic party was organized that the original Protective policy was abandoned."

The speaker then showed how fearfully the country suffered during the years which followed of Free Trade and the State's banking system, another Democratic heresy. Hon. Roswell G. Horr, who lived through this period, says, "I am a Republican because I have a good memory." Continuing the speaker said:

"In 1861 a Protective Tariff law was enacted and confidence restored. Industries throughout the country, which had been shut down, were started up, mills were built and the country again became prosperous.

"In 1884, the Democratic party seeing this, pretended to favor protection in order to regain power, and adopted this resolution:

"Resolved, That we are in favor of the Protective Tariff of 1883, and are opposed to its repeal.'

"By this deception they elected as president, James K. Polk, who in his message referred to the great prosperity of the country. Yes in 1846 the party repealed the tariff law and adopted the Walker Free Trade bill.

[From Sunday's Herald.]

Judge Hoffman is one of the most intelligent and able of the many able and learned lawyers in the State, and for several years was the leading Democrat in Monmouth county, now Plainfield, the position which Judge Lippincott holds now. He formerly resided in Freehold, some ten years ago removed to Monmouth, Monmouth county, where he has by unswerving adherence to the principles of the Democratic party, been honored. Hon. Roswell G. Horr, who lived through this period, says, "I am a Republican because I have a good memory." Continuing the speaker said:

THE BENEFIT GAME.

PATERSONS DEFEATED BY THE CRESCENTS SATURDAY.

The Wind Caused Many Errors to be Made, and Made the Game Interesting.—Jones, Sneeden and R. J. Murphy Receive Bouquets.

The Crescent ball team played their benefit game Saturday, and as usual were victorious. They had for their opponents the Patersons, a team composed of such players as Morehead, Murray and Moran, who played formerly with the C. Y. M. I. A. team of Elizabeth. Tierney, of last year's Crescents, played first base for the visitors.

A large crowd attended the game to help swell the gate receipts, which were afterward divided among the players.

A Crescent admirer, Mr. W. H. Pangborn, presented Jones with a bouquet, when he stepped to the plate in the first inning, amid applause from the spectators. Sneeden was next to the bat, and he received, from the same donor, also a pretty bouquet. Although Pitcher R. J. Murphy was hot in the game, he was the next lucky one, and received a similar gift.

"Gentle Willie" did not get any floral gifts, but he played ball all the time. Three of the Crescents' runs were scored by him, after securing a three-bagger, a double and two singles.

The Patersons put up a good game, and made it interesting from start to finish.

There was quite a contrast between Saturday's game and previous ones. Heretofore if an error was made the player making it would be scowled at by his fellow players, but Saturday when a player made an error they would all all laugh and have a good time generally. The one making the most errors created the most fun.

ONE HUNDRED YEARS OLD.

The Samptown Baptist Church Will Celebrate its 100th Anniversary Wednesday.

The Samptown Baptist church, which for nine years was a land mark of Samptown, and stood by the old Samptown burying ground near the railroad, but was afterward removed to South Plainfield, will celebrate its one hundredth anniversary with appropriate services on Wednesday, Oct. 5th.

The morning exercises will commence at ten o'clock after which dinner will be served by the ladies.

In the afternoon, the pastor, Rev. Mr. Thompson will give a brief synopsis of the church history, and several others will follow. One will be thrown in his whiskers." fifty years. In the evening there will be preaching by prominent ministers.

Invitations have been sent to the various churches of this city to attend the ceremonies. A large attendance is expected from Plainfield, Dunellen, Bound Brook, Metuchen, Rahway and other towns about the State.

The First Church of Christ Dedicated.

The new chapel of the First Church of Christ on Grove street, between Front street and Craig place, was formally opened and dedicated to the worship of God. Addresses were made at the morning service by Messrs. W. D. Stewart and H. C. Herod, officers of the First Church of Christ, of Brooklyn.

The afternoon song service in the Sunday School room was largely attended.

The congregation at the evening service was so large that many had to get seats on the platform. Addresses were compelled to stand throughout the service. The pulpit was very prettily decorated. At the close of the ball loudly were bright and cheerful.

The services began by the congregation singing the hymn "How Firm a Foundation."

Rev. T. B. Gearer then preached a doctrinal sermon on "Christian Faith," after which he baptized six adults and one little girl in the pool beneath the platform.

The church has now upwards of 120 members, and is in a commendable book. The Sunday-school is prospering under Superintendent F. W. Hand and has upwards of 120 scholars.

Theatrical Notes.

One of the many novelties of Lou Leubrie's extravaganza, to be given at Music Hall this evening, is a life-like representation of the green-goods game showing how this illegitimate trick is played upon country cousins who want to get into the counterfeiting business.

Ticket speculators have been blocked by the order of the manager of Music Hall, that no more than six seats will be sold any one person, for James J. Corbett's appearance at Music Hall, to-morrow evening. It is proposed that everybody shall have a chance of seeing the champion, without paying some one else a premium for the privilege.

EDITORIAL NOTES

When a woman has a drunken husband and six children to support at the washtub it is time to proclaim herself dictator and assume the reins of government.

Mr. Hall Caine finds that the Germans have no opinion at all of the earlier English novelists, and that they cannot understand how people can rave over Fielding and Smollett. Perhaps if some English speaking individuals were not afraid to they might say the same thing.

Brave old Edward Beecher, now in his ninetieth year, may live to be the last one of this illustrious family. He resides in Brooklin, and up to the time when he lost a leg by accident two years ago he was still engaged in active pastoral work. His mind is as clear as ever, and he takes a young man's interest in the questions of the day. Edward Beecher may be said to have preached Mme. Blavatsky in promulgating the doctrine of reincarnation. He worked out for himself the doctrine that in order to deserve eternal punishment the sinner must have lived and sinned before and been permitted to return to this earth on probation. If he neglected his opportunities for repentance and purification in this probationary world, soon he was cast off into everlasting punishment.

Ossified People.

An unfortunate known to the medical profession and to frequenters of dime museums as the "Ossified Man" died lately at Lewiston, N. Y. He was fifty years old, and his body had been gradually turning to bone for many years past. First, the strange hardening affected his joints, then spread slowly through his limbs, finally attacking his body. When at last the deadly deposit of bone material reached the valves of the heart, it was all over with poor Jonathan Bass, and he died.

The papers made a wonder of him and spoke of him after his funeral as if he were the only ossified man and a freak of nature that would not soon be repeated. But they were wrong. There are ossified people all about us—men and women—constantly. They do not show themselves in museums, for the ossification has not manifested itself outwardly, but they are true examples of how the soft parts of human nature grow stiffer and harden till they are like bone. The difference between them and Jonathan Bass is that in their case the ossification begins at the heart instead of ending there. It does not kill them apparently, though it does really, for these old fossils are merely walking and talking automata. For all the good they do anybody they might as well have been dead and buried long ago.

The splendid, high hearted, glorious enthusiasm and brotherly love that thrill the human race and move it on to progress touch them no more than if they were made of iron, for they are ossified men and women. See?

The New Brotherhood of France.

The world is not all bad and never was. It is better now than it was two centuries ago, and it is going to be better still. Out of the luxury, the scepticism, the materialism and the despair of the last generation in the most cultivated circles of France and elsewhere a new movement has arisen. A new ideal has been born, and it is an ideal of moral progress. In France, the last place where it might have been expected, there has grown up among the most thoughtful and intelligent of the Paris students a desire to realize a robust, positive and manly morality, as different from priestly asceticism as from mere materialistic luxury and sensuality. The same wave of moral awakening is to be observed among the young people of our own country. Its meaning is read in the White Cross society for moral purity among men, in the Society of Christian Endeavor and also that of the King's Daughters. In a different way, too, this is the meaning of the work of the Salvation Army and the college settlements.

In France and the United States the moral awakening among young people is most marked, and in these two republics perhaps it was most needed. In this country Felix Adler's society for Ethical Culture began the movement. In France it was time something should produce a moral awakening or the republic would have died of corruption from absinthe drinking and sensuality among her men.

Several valiant and brainy young men of the best social circles are in the lead of this awakening in France, which shall bring men back to the knowledge that without moral ideals the world is lost. They take the teachings of Tolstoi in great measure for their guide. One of the leaders is Paul Desjardins. From being one of the most popular and fashionable literary men in Paris he suddenly turned about, through heaven knows what influence, and became the apostle of the new ethical teaching, based on what he calls "hope and solidarity," the brotherhood of spirits believing in the lofty destiny and infinite perfectibility of the race, and working together toward that lofty destiny. Mankind reaches its best through self mastery and striving, and all who work with this aim belong to the new brotherhood.

RECIPROCITY ATTACKED

Germany Secretly Working Against the United States.

BRIBERY AND COERCION EMPLOYED

The State Department Cognizant of the Overtures Made to the Pan-American Republics to Abrogate the Existing Treaties with This Country.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—That there is a conspiracy among the great European nations to force the Pan-American republics to abrogate their reciprocity treaties with this country seems to be a settled fact. All the means known to the diplomats of the Old World, from coercion to bribery, are being used without stint, and all the benefits which have resulted from reciprocal treaties to the manufacturers and producers of the United States are liable to be lost unless the most decisive steps are taken by this government.

That such steps will be taken may be regarded as certain, for Secretary of State John W. Foster, when approached by the representative of the president of one of these republics with the request that the United States outbid a bribe offered by Germany, replied:

"This country is neither to be blackmailed nor bribed. If your country breaks the treaty it must be prepared to bear all the consequences of that act, for in my mind the word 'reciprocate' is coupled with 'retaliation.'"

The moving cause for this action on the part of the European nations is that the trade which for years they have monopolized with the Pan-American countries has, since the reciprocal treaties with the United States went into effect, been fading away.

The republic which at present is considering offers of bribes is San Domingo. Although small she has heretofore done a large trade with European countries, particularly Germany.

Two months ago a formal protest was made to the Dominican government by the representatives of Germany, Italy and France against the further continuance of reciprocity with this country, and it was accompanied by a demand that the treaty be abrogated at once. The Dominican government stood firm, however, and the consul in New York, Francisco Leonte Vasquez, was instructed to visit Washington and consult with Secretary of State John W. Foster. He did so, and while nothing definite was decided upon he was assured that the United States would see that San Domingo was protected in her rights. With this assurance the consul returned to this city.

Germany the Moving Power.

As soon as it was found that bullying did not succeed another tack was taken. Germany was chosen as the moving power of the conspiracy, because her relations with the little republic are peculiar.

In 1885 a treaty was signed between the two, in which Germany was named as the "most favored of nations." Her goods were permitted to enter Dominican ports at extremely low imposts, and her citizens were to receive special favors and exemptions.

On the other hand, many Dominican products were given precedence in Germany, and under this treaty a large and valuable trade grew up between the two nations. Dominican tobacco especially found favor in Germany and soon crowded out the Sumatra product, and at present almost the entire product of Puerto Plata is used in Germany.

The loss of this market for its staple product would be a serious blow to the San Domingan people, and it was on this line that the conspirators went to work.

A special envoy was sent from Germany to San Domingo, and about two weeks ago he had an interview with President Ulises Heureaux, in which the harm which could be done his country should Germany close her ports to Dominican products was fully set forth. The German envoy then offered a personal subsidy of $50,000 a year to the president "to recompense him for any unpopularity he might incur" if the reciprocity treaty with the United States was abrogated.

President Heureaux at once dispatched an emissary to this country to see if he could not obtain $75,000 from the United States. The person chosen for this work was a merchant, who is a correspondent of the exporting and shipping firm of Eggers & Heinlein, of 3 South William street, this city. On his arrival he saw Mr. Eggers and explained his mission. He requested Mr. Eggers to accompanying him to Washington, to interview Secretary Foster. Mr. Eggers refused, and the San Domingan then visited other friends and requested their aid with a like result. About ten days ago he went to Washington alone and saw the secretary.

Only the Entering Wedge.

The answer he received from Mr. Foster is that quoted above. The San Domingan said friends have told he would go to Germany in hopes of getting that government to raise its offer. He sailed for Europe last Thursday.

When questioned about the transaction Mr. Heinlein, of the firm of Eggers & Heinlein, said: "I know little or nothing about it. I was away at the time, and my partner, Mr. Eggers, had charge of the business. However, I have known for a long time that the European nations would try to break up our reciprocity relations with the Pan-American countries.

"I have been to Germany this summer, and I know this country has been trying to force San Domingo to abrogate the treaty, and I expect she will be successful. You see the entire tobacco crop is used in Germany, and as the ties, social and business between the two countries are very close. For that reason she, of all other nations, is the one now to move in this matter, and if she can force San Domingo to abrogate the treaty, then an immediate attack will be made on all the other republics having reciprocal relations with this country to force them to follow her example.

"If the Dominican treaty is broken I fully expect to see all the others broken as well, and that within a very short time. The fact of the matter is that England, Germany, France and Italy all have large and valuable interests in South and Central America, and they cannot afford to have their trade with those points destroyed because of reciprocity with the United States. All of those countries have experience in handling such matters, and it is quite certain that nothing will be left undone to gain the end desired. Germany's step is but the entering wedge."

When questioned as to the name of the merchant who acted as the messenger in the attempt to blackmail the United States government he refused to give the slightest information.

San Domingo Asks Our Aid.

Consul Francisco Leonte Vasquez, of 81 Broadway, who represents the Dominican republic in this city, when seen by a reporter seemed very much surprised that the matter had become known. He said, "This affair is still in the hands of the state department at Washington and it was agreed that it should be kept secret for the present.

"The outlook for a practical monopoly of the Dominican trade was excellent until the present troubles began. When Germany, Italy and France made demand upon our government for the abrogation of the reciprocity treaty our government stood firm. Then they demanded to be placed on the same footing in all respects as the United States, which would have been a practical annulment of the treaty. It was then I was sent to Washington to see what could be done. Of course our small republic would be almost helpless with these three nations attacking us at once, and we wanted to be certain of the aid of the United States in case of trouble. I had a talk with Secretary Foster over the matter, but while he was most encouraging he wished the matter to remain in abeyance for a time.

An Envoy to Crespo.

"No course of action was decided upon, and the certainty that Germany would not be allowed to coerce Hayti or force matters to a crisis has troubled me greatly. That Germany will try to produce this result unless we get some assurance from our government to the contrary I have for a long time known.

"Another feature of this attempt of the European nations to cause the abrogation of all reciprocity treaties with Pan-American republics is that the present Venezuelan government is being aided with money and supplies by England, Germany and France. An offer was made and accepted shortly after Crespo's rebellion had begun, and the terms have been ratified by both parties since. The agreement was that the present government should refuse to ratify the reciprocity treaty with the United States and should refuse all overtures to that end while opening its ports freely to European trade.

"An envoy was sent to Crespo, and he agreed that on obtaining power his government would promptly ratify the treaty thrown aside by the present officials.

"On his pledge to this effect money was sent him and the South Portland and one other vessel, the name of which the members of the 'junta' refuse to give, were sent down laden with arms.

FASHIONS

Veils Worn With Comfort.

It is not every one who likes the present fashion of wearing the veil under the hat. It is apt to press the hair down upon the forehead so very tightly that the effect is anything but pretty. For those who wish to avoid this, and yet cannot afford to go without a veil even if they wear a big mesh, because their hair so soon gets blown about, is recommended a veil put on the cross. Of course, it can only be worn when the hat is off, and it is quite rather to waste; but that is far preferable to wearing a veil which continually slips over the brim of your hat, and leaves a big mesh unbecoming ventilation hole somewhere about your forehead and eyes.

Elaborate Stockings.

Never have stockings been more elaborate than this season. They are likely to be smart while trailing dresses which require holding up are the fashion for street wear. Pretty stockings for evening wear in black have delicate colors introduced under the lace fronts—blue, pink or yellow. Tartan patterns seem very popular just now.

For a Young Miss.

A pretty dress for a miss of twelve to fifteen years is made of bias and white seashmere. The blouse waist of blue satin shows a square gusset, bordered by broad white braid, and stretching from the throat to the waist line. The full sleeves of the wide upper part of the elector is gathered into deep tight-fitting cuffs with embroidery over white. Full of white goods embroidered. The plain white skirt has a broad blue border.

Autumn Serges in Cheapster Tints.

French camel's hair and English storm serge will enjoy great popularity during the fall and winter, and will appear in swallow blue with silver tints, in rich dark Russian blue, in the browns, in garden, dead leaf, mahogany, and Cleopatra tints, and in the deep old rose of the Jacqueminot petals.

The Marie Stuart bonnet is coming in again.

The Cholera in Hamburg.

HAMBURG, Oct. 3.—There have been eighty-eight fresh cases of cholera here, thirty-one deaths and 159 burials. In the hospitals 923 persons are under treatment. In Altona there have been nine fresh cases and five deaths.

"ANTIMAPPERS" WILL NOMINATE.

They Decide to Put an Independent Local Ticket in the Field—Cleveland Refutes a Campaign Slander—Gresham Declares for the Democratic Candidates.

ATLANTA, Oct. 3.—Mr. Cleveland contradicts the latest campaign slander in a vigorous letter as follows:

GRAY GABLES,
BUZZARD'S BAY, Mass., Sept. 27.
Clark Howell, Jr., Constitution, Atlanta:
MY DEAR SIR—I have been fairly bombarded for the last two or three weeks by the reports of falsehood which are being circulated by the Republican committee in Indiana, designed to prejudice me in the minds of the Southern people. The latest report comes to me from the Atlanta Journal, and purports to quote Colonel T. Watson as saying in a public speech that Mrs. Cleveland refused to attend the reception tendered to Mrs. Harrison last winter because she feared she would there meet Miss Dorsh.

This is an unduly grave form of fabrication. A member of the others have to do, however, with alleged insults to my wife or request to me to recognize Mr. Dorsh, etc. Now, further public sources of falsehood from the stupidest distortion is in regard to my treatment of Frederick Douglass, while he was president and I was receiving calls at the White House. There are some others which I do not recall.

All these charges are answered by notice published in the Democracy, and their purpose is not necessary to deny them, except in so very few instances. I have thought that when they came to my notice I would treat them as they deserved, but perhaps hear from you or some one who has seen, understands well the current of southern sentiment, that the persistency of this misrepresentation is irritating and exceedingly mischievous.

Not one single statement which I have seen of the kind is true, and my truth is what I accept this, that when Frederick Douglass was in public office in the city of Washington I as president extended to him the same courtesies so far as public receptions which were extended to the other officials of the same grade. This of course was his due as a matter of official decency and etiquette, and I should have extended them to any other citizen.

If in your judgment you think it well to make the denial above referred to you are at liberty to do so in any way you think best. Very truly yours, GROVER CLEVELAND.

THE OPPOSITION TO TAMMANY.

The Antimappers Will Put Up a Local Ticket in New York City.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—The committee appointed by the antimapper organization for the purpose of advising with the Democratic national committee on the subject of independent local nominations held a meeting in their headquarters in Fourteenth street last night. Most of the members were present, and it was unanimously decided to go ahead with their original intention of supporting an independent ticket.

After the meeting the chairman, Andrew D. Parker, said: "The committee appointed a subcommittee, consisting of myself, Isaac H. Klein and J. J. Quinlan, for the purpose of conferring with other Democratic organizations on the lines indicated by the resolutions previously passed by the organization.

"Much has been said about the opposition which the idea of a third ticket has met from the national committee. I wish to say that I and the members of the committee will back up what I say, that not one word of objection or protest was raised in the conference held by this committee with the national committee, save from one member.

"Ex-Mayor Grace last Friday night gave us positive assurance that the nomination of a third ticket was the only proper and wise step to take.

"Among the organizations with whom we will confer will be the County Democracy and the German-American Cleveland and Stevenson union. We are well aware that the latter organization, by reason of their constitution, cannot act as a body, but we do not propose to treat with them as a body.

"We believe, however, that they are favorably disposed toward us, and will be our active allies. As for any reported opposition in their ranks to the third party idea, I have heard of none. On the contrary the head of the organization, Mr. Oswald Ottendorfer, has stated distinctly that he was not prepared to state his position as yet, and men of no less importance in the organization than Mr. Henry Villard and Mr. Jackson S. Schultz have declared themselves unequivocally in favor of the independent ticket.

Sickles' Position.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Republican leaders in this city are not advised that General D. E. Sickles, of New York, will make any speeches in support of General Harrison's re-election, as a current report asserts. It is said that the general has revised the report of his remarks at the G. A. R. reunion in this city week before last, which was made from a long hand sketch taken by a newspaper man who was present, and that shortly after the speech will be circulated by the Republican national committee. The speech is understood to be an amplification of the general's remark at the Chicago convention, interjected into Bourke Cockran's glamorous midnight speech, "No Union soldier can vote for Grover Cleveland."

Gresham for Cleveland.

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—Judge Walter Q. Gresham has caused a sensation by declaring his intention of voting for Grover Cleveland for president. Judge Gresham says that he was led to his decision because he felt that at this time the policy of the Democratic party was the correct one. He also added that it distinctly understood that he did not favor free trade, but that he believed in tariff reform.

McNeil for Congress.

Goddard is Talking Loud.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—The following dispatch was received from Billy Madden: "I claim answer to Peter Maher's challenge to Goddard: 'Goddard won't notice Maher's challenge.' Will claim championship unless Corbett makes match within ten days."

PARIS, Oct. 3.—The Irish fund administered by Messrs. Dillon amounts to £32,000. It is invested in Chicago and Northwestern, Burlington and Quincy, Erie, Illinois Central and New York Central securities. The bank pays no interest on the deposits.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Oct. 3.—John Kennedy, of this city, was murdered in Ashwan street by his brother-in-law, Maurice Kennedy, who lives with him. Both had been drinking.

ROYALTY IN A SCANDAL.

Secrets of the German Imperial Family to Be Aired in Court.

THE BONES OF THE HOHENZOLLERNS

They Will Be Removed, Eighty-eight Coffins of Them, from the Old Cathedral in Berlin, Which Is to Be Pulled Down, to Mon-Bijou Palace and Garrison Church.

BERLIN, Oct. 3.—A suit which involves no less a person than her majesty the Empress Augusta Victoria and her near relatives of Sleswig-Glucksbourg will be called in the common law courts in a few days.

The late Emperor William, after taking possession of Sleswig-Holstein in 1866, tried his utmost to befriend the deposed dynasty. In this spirit he sanctioned the marriage of his grandson, the present Kaiser William, with the poverty stricken Princess of Augustenbourg, reviled by Bismarck's agents at one time as the "Countess Pretender" of Sleswig, and that of Prince Frederick Leopold of Prussia to her sister. He did more. He disinterred the castles and crown estates of the Holstein family among its various homeless members and thus put them on their feet again.

They are all comfortably well fixed at the present time. Among the castles Emperor William gave away was the Glucksbourg Schloss, which he turned over to Duke Charles of Sleswig, husband of Duchess Wilhelmine, the daughter of the late Prince VI of Denmark. Both the duke and duchess are dead, and the present incumbent of the title and heir of the estates has, up to a few weeks ago, considered himself the undisputed proprietor of Schloss Glucksbourg. Then the specter of a secret scandal was conjured before the startled vision of a lady belonging to the highest nobility in the country, who showed him deeds and other legal instruments to prove that her daughter is the child of the late Duke Charles, who also claims left her all his personal property and selected Schloss Glucksbourg for her residence.

Appealed to the Kaiser.

Duke Frederick Ferdinand, who, like the rest of the family, always considered his late uncle Charles a model of propriety, refuses to believe the lady's statements, and says the documents are not sufficient legal evidence. The lady, therefore, appealed to the kaiser, who, however, refused to interfere in family affairs. All hopes of an amicable arrangement being abandoned, the case will now be tried in the open courts, and a good deal of dirty linen will be washed on that occasion.

The scandal connected with the late Duke Charles recalls the fact that German princes have shown an increased tendency to mix with the "lower order" of mankind during the last thirty or forty years.

There are now twelve living samples of morganatic marriages among mighty potentates. These are Prince Charles of Baden, married to an actress, now styled Countess Rhena; Duke Ludwig Bavaria, husband of Frau von Wallersee, so-called; Prince William Hesse, married to a lady who appears to have neither name nor title in polite society; Duke George Alexander Holstein-Isenburg, married to Countess Garlow; Duke E. of Oldenburg, married to Frau Friesenhof; Duke Constantine of Oldenburg, married to Frau Zernikau; Prince Edward Saxe-Weimar, married to Miss Lennox, lately recognized as princess by order of Queen Victoria; the reigning Duke George of Meiningen to Baroness Heldburg, the actress, etc.

A Gigantic Royal Funeral.

Next week will witness the most gigantic royal funeral procession—most gigantic in respect to the number of royal corpses—that has ever been seen anywhere in the world. On that occasion the eighty-eight coffins containing the remains of old time Hohenzollerns will be removed from the vaults under the old cathedral, soon to be pulled down, to Mon-Bijou palace and the Garrison church respectively. Some of the coffins are very interesting examples of mediæval sculpture; others are chiefly remarkable for their size. The late Crown Prince Frederick William, afterward Emperor Frederick, had the coffin of Frederick I examined some thirty years ago and stripped of all historic valuables. He gathered in a number of curiously shaped coronets, breast pins and breast plates, swords and spurs.

SULLIVAN AFTER CORBETT.

The Ex-Champion Intimates Something Was Wrong and Wants to Fight Again.

BOSTON, Oct. 3.—John L. Sullivan has startled his friends in this city by announcing his intention of challenging Corbett to fight again. He was seen by a reporter in the dressing room before the play began last night and had this to say:

"I am saving money now with a resolute determination to challenge Corbett to fight again and give me a chance to win back the money that was robbed from me in New Orleans."

"By robbed do you mean that you were drugged?"

"There was something wrong. I am not making any direct charges just now, but that I was not right I know. After the first round I could see half a dozen Corbetts, and as good a man as Corbett is I don't believe he nor any one else living can stand up and fight me twenty-one rounds without being hit.

"There was a scheme afoot to break what seemed to the pool room men a dead sure combination—McAuliffe, Dixon and Sullivan, and I was the one selected to be thrown down."

Mitklewicz Refused.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Lawyer Charles E. Burke, who arrived here with a warrant for the arrest of Count Mitklewicz, returned to New York without the count. Mr. Burke said he would return to Washington in a day or two.

The sessions will continue throughout the month of October. In point of numbers the convention will be the largest ever held by the Protestant Episcopal church.

Dignity of Rank.

Old World snickling for rank and precedence is well satirized by an incident which recently occurred in Paris.

There was a fracas on the street, and two young men appeared to be about to fly at each other's throat, when one of them paused, folded his arms, looked contemptuous, and said:

"But I cannot fight with him!"

"Why, now?"

"It's beneath my dignity."

"What do you mean?"

"He is only a coachman and I am a valet de chambre!"—Youth's Companion.

JOSEPH ERNEST RENAN DEAD.

PARIS, Oct. 3.—Joseph Ernest Renan, the great French sage and writer is dead.

Joseph Ernest Renan, philosopher and historian, was born at Tregnier Cotes-du-Nord on Feb. 27, 1823. His parents wished him to enter the priesthood, and at an early age he was sent to Paris to obtain his preparation. At the close of his classical studies he was placed in the seminary of St. Sulpice to complete his theological course. While there he developed too much independence of thought to qualify for the priesthood, and therefore he quitted the seminary to follow the bent of his own mind.

In 1847 he won the Volney prize for a work upon the Semitic languages. In 1851 he was attached to the department of manuscript in the National library, and five years later was elected a member of the Academie des Inscriptions in the place of M. Augustin Thierry.

In 1860 he went on a mission to Syria, and three years later he published his "Life of Jesus." This work excited the vehement antagonism of the French clergy, which brought about his dismissal from the professorship of Hebrew, to which he had been appointed in 1862.

Of his great "History of Israel Before the Birth of Christ" but two volumes were published. His intention was to complete the work in four volumes. Early this year he said to a visitor in Paris: "I have finished the bulk of my history, but I hesitated long over beginning this last portion of the work. Life is so short. But at least I set to work on 'Atonement and the Messiahs.' This junction of the old Hebrew religion with the religion of Jesus was very interesting. I shall complete it in two volumes, but not under two years."

HOUSEKEEPER'S DOMAIN.

MATTERS THAT THE HOUSEWIFE MAY READ AND PROFIT BY.

Information From the Experience of Others That Will be of Value—Some Excellent Recipes—Hints and Suggestions on a Variety of Topics.

The proper placing of a side table makes every difference in the serving of a meal. A small table at each end of the room is most desirable. This gives a proper place to put down a vegetable or other dish, without walking the length of the room, when the waitress needs to take a plate to the server for a second helping. This table may hold whatever extras may be needed by the hostess for the dishes which she serves, as the table near the head holds extra carvers, etc., which he may need. These tables must be used with discretion, and no unsightly dish, which should be at once carried to the pantry, must be allowed to remain on them. Their object is simply to lessen the steps between courses and to help a waitress to pass expeditiously. Hot meats have grown cold.—Good Housekeeping.

SOME USEFUL HINTS.

Wagon grease will take off warts and pimpling moles.

A persistent washing and rinsing in milk will remove an ink stain.

Leather may be kept from molding by performing it with tar of birch.

Wood ashes, very finely sifted, are good for scouring knives and tinware.

Opening canned fruit an hour or two before using, that it may regain the excellent odor, improves the flavor.

Spirits ammonia is used to remove stains on colored fabrics, if the color is dulled, a little weak oxalic acid will restore it.

Skimmed milk makes bald-wood floors, stained ones and oil cloths look shiny. A woolen cloth should be used to wipe up the floor with.

Newspapers wet thoroughly and smeared up with excellent results were put with, making it look bright, and with far less trouble than it is to wipe it with a damp cloth.

Ink or paint may be removed by first applying oil of some kind, or lard; then, after scraping off the loosened substance, apply a mixture of turpentine and benzine, and at the last use benzine alone.

Onions as Medicine.

The sweet Italian, or the Bermuda onions, are the ones to be eaten as a salad, the flavor being much more delicate than the common varieties. But onions are really sweeteners of the breath after the bad effects have passed away, as they correct stomach disorders and carry off the accumulated poisons of the system. They provide a blood purifier that will freely act, and do perfect work in constipation troubles. As a vermifuge the onion cannot be surpassed, and those who will eat one raw will relieve a violent ache in the head. One small onion eaten every night before retiring is a well known doctor's prescription for numerous afflictions of the head, and is highly recommended for sleeplessness; it acts on the nerves in a soothing way, without the injurious effects of the drugs so often applied. The heart of an onion, heated and placed in the ear, will often relieve the agony of earache, while the syrup procured from sprinkling a sliced onion with sugar and baking in the oven, will work wonders in a "croupy" child.

A Useful Invention.

A cradle has been invented—we should imagine by some bucolic benedict—which lulls the baby to sleep and churns the cream at the same time. The accompanying illustration fully explains the working of this peculiar device, which, if it does nothing else, should earn the gratitude of farmers' wives.

Food That Beautifies.

The green salad in any shape, from the long curling lettuce leaf to the crisp little watercress, is a constant beautifier, and more than this, regularly eaten, it quiets your nerves and gives you a pleasant sleep. But if you flood it with vinegar and powder it with sugar you have simply made yourself a dish that will have no effect upon you whatever, unless it should be by the force of the vinegar to break the enamel of your teeth.

The right way for you to eat this most beautifying of dishes is to have upon it a good French dressing, that is, one formed of pepper, salt, a small portion of vinegar and a large portion of good, sweet olive oil; if you do not care for this, then eat your salad as did the hermits of old, dipping a leaf in some salt and having with it a piece of bread and butter. All fresh vegetables, especially asparagus, tend to improve the skin.

A Nice Breakfast Dish.

The following is a very nice breakfast dish: Wash a half kidney and let it stand fifteen minutes in cold water. Put it over the fire in cold salt water and let it boil until it is tender. Then cut off all the fat, and after slicing it thin put in a saucepan with enough hot water to cover the slices; add salt, pepper, a bay leaf and a tablespoon of butter blended with a tablespoon of flour. Stew until the gravy is of a good consistency. Have ready a hot plate lined with thin hot buttered toast, put the kidneys and gravy on this and serve at once.

Hair-Pin Receiver.

To make a pretty hair-pin receiver take a small round box, and cover smoothly with satin ribbon the width of the box. Out of silk thread the same color as the ribbon crochet a round cover to fit over the opening or top of the box. Sew firmly with threads of the silk (after having filled the box with loose curled hair) and tack a satin bow made of narrower satin ribbon of the same shade over where the wide ribbon joins.

THE TEA TABLE.

A Pretty Way to Arrange the Table for a High Tea.

A pretty arranged tea table is often times a welcome change from the somewhat formal and always conventional late dinner. Many people in summer have what is called "English" versions of "high tea;" this is really a substantial meal, with hot meat and vegetables, but not a joint. Steaks, chops, croquettes, poultry, game, are all suitable for a high tea. Each one of these may be selected with a couple of vegetables, hot buttered toast, or biscuits, served with tea, coffee or chocolate, followed by a simple dessert. The somewhat hybrid meal, although quite as substantial and satisfying to hungry appetites, involves less work than a regular dinner, and, as a young housekeeper sapiently remarked: "What makes a good tea makes a poor dinner." Moreover, it is a very elastic feast, and young people need not hesitate to ask their friends informally to tea, whereas an extra one at dinner always "counts." A pretty way in which to arrange a table for such a meal is to leave it bare and have three cloths, one for the center, one for the tea-tray, and another before the hostess—these may be of any color that may be. These tea cloths give great opportunity for a display of pretty needlework. Russian cross-stitch is much used in theit decoration, and some of the combinations of red and blue are extremely beautiful. White wash silk that does not turn yellow is eminently adapted for embroidering on tea cloths; and, after all, there is nothing so pretty as white drapery for the table.

Hand-Made Lace.

Here is a new design, crown edge, which is shown and described in Good Housekeeping as follows:

Nine chain, turn, five chain, three treble, one double quipure fastened in end loop of foundation, turn, one treble quipure, three trebis, two chain, one treble; this edge is repeated. For the scallop make six chain, turn, five loops five times under the six chain, turn, fill each five chain with a small scallop of one single crochet, one treble, one double treble, one treble, one single crochet, then make one row of double quipure, turn, one row of single quipure, turn, one row of five chain, fastening the first under the loop, and the second under the loop of the preceding row, turn, make a second row of five chain, turn, fill each five chain with one single crochet, one treble, two double treble, one treble, one single crochet. This completes the figure. This edge is light enough to trim thin dresses if made in No. 30 thread, and if wished wider, increase the number of guipure stitches on the straight edge. It is easy to work, and has a firm edge on the scallop, which insures wearing well.

Sick-Room Disinfectants.

One of the simplest disinfectants of a sick-room is ground coffee burnt on a shovel, so as to fill the atmosphere of the room with its pungent aromatic odor. If two red-hot coals are placed on a fire-shovel, and a tablespoonful of ground coffee is sprinkled over them at a time, using three teaspoonfuls in all, it will fill the room with its aroma, and is said to have the highest effect of all known agents in the spread of various epidemic diseases. The odor is very agreeable and soothing to a sick person, where other disinfectants are disagreeable. Physicians who doubt the power of coffee as a disinfectant, frequently recommend it as a deodorizer, and it is certainly a deodorizer of the most agreeable. Most of the disinfectants sold in the shops have no special power as such, but are simply deodorizers, the two other chief disinfectants being, it is true, however, to obtain from a physician in cases of dangerous epidemics something that will certainly destroy the germs of the disease as well as deodorize the room.

Heating Flatirons.

It scarcely needs be said that the flatirons should not be put to heat while the stove is being used for cooking, more especially for frying; the iron is quite certain to smoke, and give the odor of the food to the clothes. When the irons are sufficiently heated, begin work promptly and systematically; but before using them to the articles to be smoothed, be sure that they are tested on a piece of cloth kept for the purpose, or on some article of little value, in order to be sure that there is no risk of scorching or smearing. If any roughness is apparent in the iron, it may be rubbed upon the coarse part of the latter, or sprinkled with table salt. This is a very good manner of treatment where the iron seems to be wanting in polish.—Good Housekeeping.

Checker-Board Work.

Woven or checker-board work for cushions and other purposes is quite popular and not at all difficult to make. For harder usage the wider kind of mohair skirt braid is most serviceable, but satin ribbon is of course more effective to use. Select two colors or two shades of the same color and cut the ribbon into strips of the required length; pin each strip to a cutting-board or table and then cross pieces of the other shade in and out with regularity. The intersections should afterwards be secured at the back by an invisible stitch or two. A broader satin ribbon or a piece of plush, matching one of the shades used in the weaving, may be sewed on for a border, and for extra assurance lace or fringe can be added to the lower edge.

The New Bedspread.

A fascinating piece of work for women fond of embroidery, and one which repays in effect the vast amount of labor expended upon it, is the new bedspread of fine white linen with sprays of wild roses wrought upon it. Daisies with pierced holes at the centre, filled in with lace stitches of gold, are also used. The designs are done in wash silk.

Another Fly Banisher.

It is not generally known that placing certain herbs in a room will banish flies from it. Sweet clover, for instance, which is not difficult to obtain, as it is found along the roadsides, and almost every country roadside, will put flies to rout. The sweet, pungent odor it exhales is quite unobjectionable, but is still abhorred by flies.

THE MAP COLUMBUS USED.

It Was Purely Theoretical and Placed India Where America Lies.

Maps based on ascertained facts are a modern idea. Prior to the age of the discovery in which Columbus is the most illustrious figure, known facts were not thought absolutely needful to the drawing of maps. Maps were plenty; facts for them were used as far as they would go; after the facts were exhausted, geographical theories answered as well.

Thus Ptolemy, in the map which served Europe for a dozen centuries, sketched the lands about the Mediterranean with at least a recognizable degree of correctness. But when he reached the limits of the explored regions he did not hesitate to finish his map; he simply put beyond the known frontiers what he thought ought to be there. He believed that beyond the visited portions of the earth were only vast deserts or impenetrable swamps. He had no idea of open oceans beyond the known lands. Ptolemy, however, understood and represented the sphericity of the earth. What is still more curious, he estimated the earth's circumference astonishingly near the truth. He made it only 5,300 miles too little.

But after Ptolemy, about 550 A. D., a geographer of the church arose whose name was Cosmas. He scorned the blasphemous idea that the earth was round. He laid out the whole universe in about the shape of a "Saratoga trunk," to follow the figure of Professor John Fiske.

But discoverers had been pushing eastward across Asia. Some monks sent out as missionaries, in about 1250 A. D., learned from Chinese whom they fell in with that on the eastern shore of China was a vast ocean.

The ideas of Ptolemy about the sphericity of the earth were beginning to be held again. It was therefore not a great leap to think that perhaps the ocean on the east of China and the ocean on the west of Spain were the same ocean. Roger Bacon thought so, saying he fancied the distance from Spain to Asia was not so very great. Columbus thought so too. He never dreamed a continent lay between. He argued that he had only to sail westward and he would soon come to the eastern coast of China or Japan, or, as he called them, Chafan and Zipangu.

Columbus was aided by the map work of Toscanelli. This distinguished cosmographer, who drew his map about 1470, calculated the circumference of the earth prodigiously near the truth—he made it only 124 miles too great. This accuracy for that day is simply amazing. Toscanelli, however, was all in dreamland about Asia; he elongated Asia till it covered the whole Pacific ocean. Then he pictured open ocean, beginning at about the longitude of California and extending east to Europe.

Columbus pored over this map that carried it with him on his voyage as the nearest thing to a chart which was obtainable. Nevertheless Columbus had a theory of his own about the width of the Atlantic ocean and about the circumference of the earth. Columbus believed that Toscanelli's figure of the earth's circumference was all too large, so instead of about the true circumference Columbus went back and accepted Ptolemy's estimate, and thus made it 9,300 miles too little. He calculated that to reach the wonderful islands of Zipangu, or Japan, he would have to sail only about 2,300 miles from the Canaries. In other words, he put Japan a little nearer Europe than the West Indies. Columbus squeezed the earth up till he made its circumference just too small for America. Yet the continent that his theory made impossible was to be his immortal glory.

It was very lucky, however, that Columbus thus jumped America in his reckoning, and that Toscanelli had stretched Asia across to California. For had Columbus known that the real distance from the Canaries to Japan was 12,000 miles he of course would never have dreamed of undertaking that voyage. America would have waited for her discoverer till she revealed her presence by some accident.

Here are two exceedingly interesting facts: Columbus sailed westward with a scientific purpose, in a scientific spirit, simply in order to demonstrate the sphericity of the earth as a practical means of reaching China, and in process of that demonstration he ran against an unlooked for continent. Mark Twain mirthfully declares that Columbus could not help discovering America; he only had to sail on till he bumped. Yet, though the finding of America was purely an accident, the whole voyage was more of a scientific undertaking than if Columbus had fancied a new continent was to be found. Had he gone to seek a continent he would have gone only on such a knight errant quest as had been common enough during the Ignorant Middle Ages. He would have taken no more bravery and been no more significant than a thousand chivalrous and foolhardy quests after nothing by the knights of Christendom.

His voyage was significant because it was undertaken in the interest of science—the new science of Europe. Columbus was the first man who had cared or dared venture out through what had been called the Sea of Darkness to demonstrate a properly arrived at scientific theory. This constitutes the real glory of Columbus over Leif Ericson, who may have visited America, but who was too much a barbarian to appreciate its significance.

The other interesting fact is, that unless Columbus had made the ludicrous error in his science he would never have made his extraordinary venture.

Sandford the three commissioners to take charge of the opening of Madison avenue, which, upon motion, was carried. The Committees on Finance, Streets, Printing and Aims, reported their bills correct and they were referred to the Auditing Committee. The new method of doing business makes it impossible to give a list of these bills for public information as ought to be done.

Regarding the street bills, Mr. Fisk moved that rules 30 and 32 be suspended so that one member of the committee could act on the bills and pass them. It was so ordered. Mr. Fisk then reported the street bills correct.

Mr. Fisk offered a resolution authorizing the city to borrow $4,500 for general purposes. So ordered.

A resolution authorizing the city to borrow $2,300 for Fire Department use, was adopted.

Mr. Erickson objected to indorsing bill for hydrant on Norwood avenue and moved that it be referred to the committee to investigate and report at the next meeting of Council. So ordered.

Mr. Erickson moved that Committee on Fire, Water and Lamps be authorized to have plans of new engine house on East Second street prepared.

No action was taken on this motion until later, when a resolution was adopted giving the Fire and Building Committee the necessary power. Meanwhile other business proceeded. A resolution that Council adjourn and return $300, temporary loan, to the Poor Fund was adopted.

A resolution authorizing the city tres a urer to renew note of $3,000 for ninety days was adopted.

A resolution was adopted to have a note of $2,800, due Nov. 7, renewed for ninety days.

A resolution was adopted authorizing the Mayor and City Treasurer to renew the note of $3,000, for fire department purposes, due Nov. 7, for ninety days.

The following resolution, authorizing the Fire and Building Committee to purchase a truck for $3,300 for use of the fire department, was adopted:

Mr. Erickson's motion, authorizing the printing of bill posters by Ward Council, for a contract for public distribution, was carried.

Mr. Frazee asked why West Fourth street had not been macadamized as required by ordinance passed a year ago. Mr. Fisk said the property owners had not paid their share, that the committee had not time to go about and collect the money and that the work would be done in regular order as soon as the money was paid.

Mr. Erickson offered a resolution authorizing the committee to have the fire apparatus and buildings properly insured. So ordered.

Upon motion of Mr. See, the ordinance relating to the East Front street railroad crossing of the Street Railroad Company was read for the third time and adopted.

C. D. Robinson was permitted to withdraw his building license.

The Auditing Committee reported all bills correct and they were ordered paid.

Mr. Marsh moved that pasteboard files, for proper classification of bills, be purchased for the use of the Council. Carried.

Council adjourned at 9.50 o'clock.

A REPUBLICAN MEETING

THE COLORED PEOPLE AT THE CRESCENT RINK.

Addresses by Hon. B. K. Bruce, ex-Register of the U. S. Treasury, Hon. John Ulrich, Mr. C. W. Robinson and others.

The colored residents of this vicinity held a big mass meeting in the Crescent Rink last evening.

The affair was preceded by a torchlight parade, led by Gastmann's full brass band. After marching through various streets the paraders met the speaker of the evening, Hon. B. K. Bruce, and escorted him to the Rink, in front of which there was a display of red fire.

The meeting was called to order by Rev. Mr. Alexander, and Mr. Jesse Lawson was made chairman. The Glee Club then sang a selection, and the chairman made a few preliminary remarks, introducing as the speaker of the evening, Mr. Bruce, as the Senator from Mississippi who had succeeded Jefferson Davis, the President of the Confederacy, and as the man whose signature gave the greenback its value, as without that signature it would be worthless, while he was the Register of the U. S. Treasury.

Mr. Bruce is a large, pleasant-faced mulatto, whose voice in its ordinary tones seemed inadequate for so large a hall, and that it was impossible to hear much of what he said.

As he warmed up with his subject, however, he was more distinctly heard.

He dwelt upon the importance of the ensuing election, which will not only determine the policy of the Government for the next four years, but it may be for the next twenty years.

The Democratic party at its Chicago Convention, made in its platform not one declaration that would show progress, and this is in accord with the party's record. Unfortunately for itself the Democratic party has a record, and the Republican party has a record.

It can be safely asserted that you can take the past thirty years of the history of the Democratic party and find that it has been always on the wrong side.

It was on the wrong side in the Rebellion.

It was on the wrong side on the Financial questions, on the Pensions, and on the Tariff.

We have before us in this campaign the question of Protection of Home Industries, and the Democratic party, as usual, is on the wrong side.

But, at last, and for the first time in its history, the Democratic party has come out boldly for Free Trade.

The Democratic party claims that a tariff should only be imposed for the support of the Government.

The Republican party wants also to protect American industries, and, of course, American labor.

The Democrats say our tariff is a tax, which we are compelled to pay on the necessaries of life. Of course the tax is only imaginary, but they try to make it appear an awful reality.

Let us look at it for a moment: We buy something produced abroad—no matter what—and would pay 40 per cent. If it came no tariff. But even free trade must exact a tax, so 25 cents is added to support the Government, and we put on another 25 cents to build up our industries. That adds 50 cents to the value of the goods. Our men employed, at fair wages, and the goods sold at a living profit, the workmen have been able to spend their money about, being far better able to pay 50.50 for the article than he ever could be able to pay 40 cents under free trade.

But, as a matter of fact, as the factory gets under way, and business increases, the goods are actually sold at prices not dear as much.

The speaker gave numerous illustrations of this point, showing how prices had come down until they were now lower than before the war. For instance, on which the tariff is 12 cents, sells for 10 cents per 100 lbs. at the mines.

EDITORIAL NOTES

When both sides find fault with you you may console yourself that you have done just about the right thing.

If Behanzin of Dahomey carried out his usual rule, his kingdom is now stripped of the best fighters it ever had—the famous amazon regiment. When the amazons have been defeated and driven back, Behanzin's custom has been to cut off the heads of all the survivors of the fight. This besotted black savage believed his warriors could whip the French army, and he had to find out his mistake with the loss of 1,500 of his soldiers. The defeat of his Dahomeyans at Dogba is one more step to the occupancy of the dark continent by the white man.

It sounds odd to read that while some of the ablest and most valuable men and women about New York are doing all they can to aid the quarantined steerage passengers from the cholera ships one marine hospital surgeon was so fine hatted that he asked to be relieved from duty in a quarantined camp when he found it was to be composed of steerage passengers instead of cabin passengers. Dear, dear! A special requisition ought to be made out calling for some cabin passengers to get cholera, just so that this royal nibs of a marine hospital doctor might have his little feelings saved.

York's Trousers.

In Europe there is always a danger from typhus fever that we escape in this country. We have tariff debates, but no typhus fever to speak of, thank heaven. In Europe, however, if one wishes to make a scare he has only to hint that the fever exists in a locality where it might endanger some of the nobility or royal family. Such a scare was created recently when Miss Hicks announced in a speech made before the trades congress that the Duke of York's trousers had been made in a house next door to a house where were fever patients. Of course the trouser to Prince George indignantly began denying all it, but the lady stood her ground, and added to her former statement the one that she herself had made the Prince of Wales' own trousers in her little tenement room where she ate, slept and lived.

It was the wicked sweating system that Miss Hicks was exposing when she made public her facts. At an enormous price the royal tailor obtained the right to tronser the royalties. Then to make a royal profit he gave the work out to poor women in their tenement rooms. Perhaps even some of our American iron and oil nobility get their garments made at tenements where cholera exists or has been. Who knows? At any rate this tenement trouser question may well become an international one.

The New Army Rifle.

Six years ago Professor Hebler, a German expert, announced to the military world that a small bore rifle, 80-caliber, which he had invented and which carried a bullet weighing 225 grains, charged with thirty-three grains of powder would outshoot any war small arm in the world. The Germans did not believe him till they tried his gun. The German army rifle was of 45-caliber, and large bore guns were in use in the armies of the world. The consequence of Professor Heibler's discovery was that all the countries had to reconstruct both their ideas and their army rifles. The United States has been almost the last to take the matter up and make a move to change the large bore for a small one.

General S. V. Benet, who retired for age from the post of chief of ordnance of the United States army last year, has been experimenting for the adoption of an improved service arm for a long time. The war department board of magazine arms has completed a series of tests and made its report. For the requirements of the army a magazine rifle was necessary. At the same time it must be such an arm that it could be used as well for a simple breechloader. A gun is a thing which is known to play havoc with the human system, but it is not generally supposed that a gun itself has a system. It has, however, and its system is that part of it which remains after you take away its stock and barrel. An appropriate "system" of combined magazine and single firing was what the board of arms began looking for in an army rifle.

Nearly forty-three trials with as many different guns, no more than two or three from America, nearly all foreign, even Japan sending us a polite kind of army rifle for trial. After tests as severe as any ever recorded the board finally made its decision public. It was not the gun of either Germany, France or any of the nations with huge standing armies that the choice fell on, but the rifle in use by the military force of little Denmark—the arm known as the Krag-Jorgensen rifle. The report says:

After a careful examination the board are unanimously of opinion that the arm in which the cartridges are to be carried and then held in reserve while single fire is delivered—magazine fire being, however, available at any moment—are more suitable for our service than those of the merely repeating type. Further, the fact that an arm showing itself to be an efficient single loader and a rapid magazine arm, with a cut off plainly indicating to the officers which class of fire is being delivered, and a system adaptable to either a bayonet or a dangerous shell, is the weapon most suitable for our military service. Such a system, they report, was found in the Krag-Jorgensen gun No. 3, as improved, and they recommend their adoption.

DANN ENDS HIS CAREER

The Notorious Bank Wrecker Takes Morphine in Prison.

HE STOLE HALF A MILLION DOLLARS

Religion Was the Cloak He Used Successfully for Twenty Years to Cover Up His Enormity—Confession on the Day He Was to Be Tried for His Crimes.

BUFFALO, Oct. 4.—Edward S. Dann, the notorious bank wrecker, has ended his infamous career with his own hand, adding self murder to his other crimes. He died yesterday evening at the close of the day he was to have been tried for robbing the National Savings bank. The cause of death is given by his family physician as "rupture of an artery in the brain." It is known, however, that he took opium on Saturday, and the intent of suicide is very clear.

When his case was called for trial his counsel handed the court a doctor's certificate that he was unable to appear and was likely to die. This was the first intimation that any one outside of the Dann family had of his condition, and it created great excitement in the court room. Mr. Hoyt, in reply to questions, said he knew nothing of his client's condition or what the trouble was, but to the judge he hinted at apoplexy, without, however, making any definite statement.

Used Religion as a Cloak.

Edward S. Dann stood high in church and social circles. When the bank examiners found that there was a shortage in the accounts of the bank and recommended the arrest of the trusted secretary and treasurer the trustees could not believe the examiners were right in their conclusions. They had trusted him implicitly for over twenty years—ever since the bank was started.

He had been looked upon as a model of faithfulness, industry and integrity. He was always first to arrive at the bank and last to leave; he was the custodian of church funds, and widows and timid women came to his bank because they had so often seen his silvered head bowed in prayer at the altar. He never took a vacation, and always balanced the books himself. Such an attentive officer the trustees thought could do no wrong.

The examiners found that perhaps Dann had reason for working personally over the books and wearing the cloak of sanctity. But the trustees scoffed at the idea. However, private detectives were called in and Dann was put under arrest. He was cool when confronted with accusations, and said he could explain all if time and access to the books were given him. The examiners said they could figure the books without him.

The news of Dann's arrest caused great excitement when it was made known in June. He was not looked up like a common criminal at first, but was allowed to go to and from his home under surveillance of a detective. Then it was that Dann made his first and unsuccessful attempt to take his own life. He swallowed twenty morphine pills. His stomach rebelled, threw off the poison and he lived on in disgrace.

The examiners found in column after column of figures additions running back for a long period of years, and continuing up to the very day he was apprehended, when he stole a package of $50,000 deposited by ex-Justice Charles Daniels, of the supreme court. The shortage at first was stated at $100,000, then at $200,000; then it was said to more than reach the bank's surplus.

He Stole Half a Million.

Finally it was learned that the aggregate steal was half a million. Before the figures had reached that point Dann had been put in jail on warrants sworn out by indignant stockholders, headed by Alderman Jack White.

Here Justice Daniels asked him to make full restitution, but Dann procrastinated until public indignation was at fever heat. Finally he made over some of his property; his wife and family physician gave bail for his appearance in court when wanted and Dann was taken back to his family.

He was indicted with his supposed tools or accomplices, Teller McCredie and Bookkeeper Armstrong, by the September grand jury. Their trial was set down for this month. There were sixteen indictments against Dann.

Edward S. Dann was born in the village of Little Falls, this state, in 1834. He removed in 1854 to Buffalo with his father, Jesse C. Dann, who was a banker here for many years.

After learning the art of banking from his father, Dann was connected with banks in St. Louis, Cincinnati and Sandusky; after leaving the latter city he went back to the general office of the Lake Shore at Toledo.

In 1861 he returned to Buffalo, married Jennie Webster, daughter of the late George C. Webster, and was his junior partner in the oil refining business for some years. Dann became secretary and treasurer of the National Savings bank at its inception and continued so for a quarter of a century. He leaves a wife and two sons, Jesse and Walter.

THE NEW YORK PRESBYTERY.

Dr. Ellis Elected Moderator—Dr. Briggs' Trial to Commence Nov. 9.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—The New York presbytery held its first session since the recent general assembly at Portland, Or., and the Rev. Dr. Ellis was for the third time re-elected moderator without opposition. After routine business was completed the order of the general assembly for a new trial of Rev. Dr. Charles F. Briggs by the New York presbytery was read. At the close of the reading of the order Rev. G. W. F. Birch, chairman of the prosecuting committee, said that his committee was ready to proceed with the trial.

Rev. Charles L. Thompson moved that the presbytery make order now to take up the case of Rev. Dr. Briggs on Nov. 9 and sit each evening day from 7½ till 5 in the afternoon, Saturdays and Sundays excepted, until the case is ended. The question on this motion was put and the date for the beginning of the trial was set for Nov. 9. There was considerable discussion as to whether or not the trial would be a public one. Dr. Briggs insisted on a public trial. It was finally decided to admit the public with the proviso that the presbytery might clear the galleries when deemed advisable.

After the settlement of the Briggs matter the election of delegates to the synod was announced. The Briggs and conservative factions are equally represented among the delegates. The presbytery, after the announcement of the delegates, adjourned until Nov. 9.

FASHIONS

NEW THINGS IN JEWELRY.

Necklaces for V Shaped Bodices—Ribbon Brooches, Etc.

A new necklace has been introduced to wear with gowns that are made with a V shaped bodice. This is composed of gems, each of the outer intersections having a small bead pendant. The affair is three connered, the point falling into the open neck of the bodice. Numbered with emeralds are some aquamarine and topaz necklaces.

NOVELTIES IN ENAMELED BROOCHES.

laces, with a light tassel-like fringe falling from a thin gold chain. If one may believe all one hears, the old fashioned gold watch chains that men wore around the neck, are making their reappearance in Paris. Bead necklaces are a sort of standard article and are much prized when the strand is made up of beads contributed by friends and bearing on their surface the initials of the donors.

Among the many attractive fancies expressed in form of brooches are the two depicted in the first cut. The necktie bow brooch includes by means of enamel over silver a corded pink ribbon, edged with blue dotted satin and fashioned in the form of a bow. The remaining brooch represents, in silver, a trefoil now of radiating loops in ribbon. This rosette brooch is enameled so skillfully that the motive ribbon of the trefoil is faced with satin of the same kind that Nestor Lennon, an actor, sold probably explains the curious fancy he had carried. Lennon was also summoned and told the coroner that there was a suicide club in this city. Moorehead, he said, was a member and he also belonged to it. He said that was the reason Moorehead shot himself, and added that the dead man was compelled to do it.

Part of Actor's Life.

In speaking of the workings of the club Lennon said: "Each member on joining is compelled to fix the date at which they are to take their own life. Moorehead's hour had arrived. On a special rule of the club he was offered a ten year parole, but he refused to accept it, being determined to keep his agreement.

Mr. Lennon refused to tell more of the suicide club or the circumstances under which Mr. Moorehead had joined. The coroner will thoroughly investigate the case.

Moorehead was of a hopeful disposition, and those who knew him had no reason for his self destruction. They are inclined to believe in his membership in a suicide club.

No Motive Known.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 4.—John H. Sloane, lawyer for J. B. Moorehead, said when informed of the suicide: "I have only had business relations with him for three or four months and know very little of his affairs. He was in the Keeley institute for the second time, and I believe the effects of his being a member of a suicide club. His mother has been dead for some time, and though his father is living he was under the guardianship of the Girard Trust company. The guardianship ended on Sept. 4, when young Moorehead became twenty-one years old. I know of no reason for the suicide."

ANOTHER SUICIDE CLUB

A Young and Wealthy Man Ends His Life by Its Edict.

HE WAS OFFERED TEN YEARS' GRACE.

But the Despair Was Hopeless, and a Bullet Did the Work Where His Hope Seems Gone—A Letter to the Coroner Explaining the Cause of Death.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—Upon the very threshold of his early manhood, the possessor of a large fortune, with hosts of friends, J. Barlow Moorehead, twenty-one years old, sent a bullet into his heart in his room at 36 West Thirty-fifth street, where he was found last night. He was found lying dead upon his bed. A revolver was by his side, and on his breast, as if he had cast one hand, fond look at it before he fired the fatal shot, lay the picture of the young man's mother, who died some years ago.

The suicide was deliberately planned and carried out. There is reason to believe that no actual motive beyond some weird and fanciful sense of obligation which he imagined himself under to an organization of which he appears to have been a member, to kill himself within a prescribed time.

This organization, if it exists, is probably a veritable suicide club. There may have been one other motive—the fear of being mastered by the habit of intemperance.

Young Moorehead comes of excellent family. His father, Charles S. Moorehead, is a wealthy resident of Brighton, N. Y. He was a nephew, too, of Mr. G. C. Thomas, of the banking firm of Drexel, Morgan & Co., of Philadelphia.

From his grandfather, a retired western mine owner, who died several years since, the young man is said to have inherited a fortune estimated at $1,000,000. He received a liberal education and has traveled extensively, both in this country and abroad. He was a graduated physician, but somehow, no doubt owing to his extensive bank account, he did not practice medicine. That is, into the management of theatrical enterprises.

A Suicide Club.

In London for two years he had managed several theatrical shows with more or less success. He returned to this country last year. He appeared to have been a strong man of intemperate habits, for the early part of the present year found him an inmate of the Keeley institute at Philadelphia. After a two months' course of treatment he was discharged cured. Moorehead had commenced to drink a little again, and last week he said to a friend, "If this cursed habit of rum and I is the better of me again I'll blow my brains out."

Several letters were on the table in the suicide's room. One was addressed and addressed to the coroner of New York city: G. C. Thomas, care of Drexel, Morgan & Co., Philadelphia; Charles H. Moorehead, Bridgeton, N. J., and Coley No. 961, city. The latter was probably addressed to the salesman who drove him on his last ride. The letter to the coroner, which was dated Oct. 3, 1:30 a. m., read as follows:

I have committed suicide as per club. Please give verdict to such effect and oblige yours truly, J. BARLOW MOOREHEAD.

P. S.—My proper name is J. B. Moorehead, Jr., of Philadelphia. G. C. Thomas, of Drexel & Co., is my uncle. Please notify him.

The coroner began probing into the matter, and learned that Nestor Lennon, an actor, could probably explain the curious fancy he had carried. Lennon was also summoned and told the coroner that there was a suicide club in this city. Moorehead, he said, was a member and he also belonged to it. He said that was the reason Moorehead shot himself, and added that the dead man was compelled to do it.

Part of Actor's Life.

Mr. Lennon refused to tell more of the suicide club or the circumstances under which Mr. Moorehead had joined. The coroner will thoroughly investigate the case.

THE DEMOCRATIC CLUBS

New York's League Re-elects J. B. Thacher President.

THE ELECTIONS IN CONNECTICUT.

Reports from All Over the State Show Some Surprising Results—David Martin Unconcerned Over the Attacks Made on Him by the New York Democrats.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—The convention of the State League of Democratic Clubs at Chickering hall had a much smaller attendance than was anticipated, but the body made up in enthusiasm what it lacked in numbers. Hon. William Sulzer, of New York, was made permanent chairman. He delivered a short address, in which he assailed the "manufacturers' perverted statistics." The remainder of his speech was devoted to an attack on the elections bill. An incidental reference to Senator Hill and his advice to "organize! organize!" elicited loud applause. The committee on platform then reported:

The Platform.

The platform indorses the principles of the Democratic party and commends the tariff plank in the national platform in a few words, saying: "We deem it unnecessary to add anything further regarding the paramount issue, since no exposition of it can be so masterful as the admirable letter of acceptance of Grover Cleveland and the great Brooklyn speech of David B. Hill."

Considerable space is devoted to the federal elections bill, which is denounced in unmeasured terms. The people of New York are warned that not the south but every state in the Union is involved in the issue, and an explanation is given of how an army of federal officials working under the provisions of the measure could thwart the will of the people in elections, and adds:

Such methods and such results, combined with the plan whereby absolutely partisan federal canvassers in each congressional district would return to congress the candidates of their choice and not the choice of the people, would result immediately in the establishment of an oligarchy in this country and ultimately in bloody revolution.

David Martin Denounced.

The action of the national Republican committee in bringing David Martin from Philadelphia to this city is vigorously denounced and Martin described as a disreputable rascal, a ruffian at the polls, a manipulator of ballot boxes and a dispenser of corruption funds, and says:

It is a matter of common fame in Philadelphia that David Martin is such a person as he was described to President Harrison when his patron, Matthew S. Quay, was urging that he be appointed to an important federal office. But he was appointed, and now President Harrison's partisans have undertaken to use in the city of New York Martin's especial faculties, which, judging from the past, can only be exercised in the corruption of voters, and it possible to nullify the honest wishes of our citizens. All this is in line with the force bill, the intrigues of John I. Davenport and the works of "Blocks of Five" Dudley and "Secret Influence" Hackett.

The platform then denounces the extravagant administration of Benjamin Harrison, indorses the administrations of Grover Cleveland, David B. Hill and Roswell P. Flower, charges the loss of the World's fair to New York to Republican tricks, and concludes thus:

We heartily indorse the candidates nominated and the principles announced by the Democratic national convention at Chicago, and we pledge the earnest support of this league to Grover Cleveland and Adlai Stevenson.

Wild Enthusiasm for Hill.

The platform submitted having been adopted unanimously, Charles E. Brown, president of the Young Men's Afro-American league, spoke briefly. The chairman then introduced Senator John J. Linson, of Ulster county, who made a long speech, in which he said:

The great wise sense of the party demanded that that name should lead the ticket which has become the synonym of tariff reform, and they named the author of the message of December, 1887. There is no schism today in the ranks of the Democracy in New York. The commanding officer of the artillery can be heard all along the line, and at the head of the Old Guard of a thousand battles waves the banner of the great leader of Democracy of the Empire state—David Bennett Hill.

The name of Senator Hill was again received with wild enthusiasm. At the end of she speech the committee on credentials reported. The report was unanimously adopted.

Congressman Amos J. Cummings then made a brief speech, which was loudly applauded, in which he praised the young men for espousing the cause of the Democratic party and denounced the federal elections bill as vicious alike to the negro and the white man, saying:

The Democratic party desires to make no race issue. They know that the negro, if left to himself will work out his own solution, as the white man in Massachusetts has worked it out. No force bill will ever inure to the benefit of the negro. It will lead to his destruction and the overthrow of the mighty republic if brought forward.

If anything will excite the patriotism of the young men of America, it is the doctrine of state rule pure and simple—no federal interference in elections.

The Officers Elected.

The convention then proceeded to the election of officers for the ensuing year. Barlow S. Weeks placed the name of John Boyd Thacher, of Albany, in nomination as president, and his election was made by acclamation. John H. V. Arnold was elected by acclamation as first vice president. For second vice president, Bernard J. Degnan, of Kings county, was elected, as were Edmund, William E. Gross and Hon. Bernard Levy were elected third, fourth and fifth vice presidents of the league, respectively. The other officers elected were: Secretary, Edmund C. Stanton; assistant secretary, Frank J. Johnson, of Brooklyn; treasurer, Hon. Perry Belmont.

Eleven delegates to attend the National League of Democratic Clubs were next elected as follows: Hon. Charles Tracy, of Albany; Joseph F. Moss, of New York; Hon. Thomas J. Kinnard, of Kings; Thomas E. Booth, of Yonkers; Cartow S. Weeks, of New York; Hon. Sherman T. Pell, of Westchester; Edward J. Atkinson, of New York; Justice Jacob New, of Kings; Hon. Edward Boyd Thacher, of Albany; Hon. Bernard Levy, of New York, and Hon. James P. Cowen.

Hon. Charles Tracy moved a vote of thanks to the presiding officer, which was carried with enthusiastic cheers, and the convention then adjourned.

CONNECTICUT ELECTIONS.

Returns from Cities and Towns All Over the State.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 4.—The town elections in this vicinity resulted in little or no change in political complexion. Seymour went Republican and Wallingford is Democratic by a safe majority. In Guilford the Democrats elected first selectman on a local issue, but the balance of the Republican ticket is elected by about 40 majority. East Haven elected a Republican majority of the board of selectmen. Orange goes solidly Democratic.

A Republican Gain.

NORWICH, Oct. 4.—The local elections in eastern Connecticut show a few changes from last year. Preston and Montville, usually Democratic, are carried by the Republicans. The town of Windham, including the borough of Willimantic, elects a Republican town government. Last year it was Democratic.

A Republican Gain.

BRIDGEPORT, Oct. 4.—The town election resulted favorably to the Republicans by the usual majority. Stratford, Birmingham and Naugatuck went Republican, being usually Democratic, while Stamford, Trumbull and Fairfield gave the usual Democratic majorities.

Danbury Democratic.

DANBURY, Oct. 4.—The Democrats carried the town election by 200 majority, the largest in the history of the town. They were victorious in every one of the four wards. Three of the wards never were Democratic before and the town has previously gone Republican.

Both Sides Make Gains.

ROCKVILLE, Oct. 4.—In the town election here and in Vernon the Democrats made a gain of 250, reducing the Republican majority to 50. The Democrats elected their ticket in Ellington by an increased majority. The Republicans made small gains in Tolland.

In New Milford.

NEW MILFORD, Oct. 4.—New Milford threw the largest vote ever polled at a town election and the Democratic majority was greatly decreased. Washington went Democratic as usual. Roxbury cast a light vote, making a small Democratic gain.

Hartford Democratic.

HARTFORD, Oct. 4.—The town election was an exceedingly quiet one. The Democrats elected all their men by majorities averaging about 900, the Republicans taking only such places as are reserved for minority representatives.

Republican Gain in Waterbury.

WATERBURY, Oct. 4.—The town and city election here was vigorously contested, due to internal dissensions among the Democracy. The result indicates a large gain for the Republicans on the town and city tickets.

Derby Goes Republican.

BIRMINGHAM, Oct. 4.—The towns of Derby, Ansonia, Seymour and Huntington went Republican. Derby has been strongly Democratic until now, when the election was carried by the Republicans by 100 majority.

No Ticket in Meriden.

MERIDEN, Oct. 4.—The Democrats carried the town election by an average plurality of 450. Only a light vote was polled, the Republicans making no fight.

The Democrats Won.

NEW BRITAIN, Oct. 4.—The Democrats won the town election, but with reduced majorities.

Martin Unconcerned.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 4.—David Martin came to the city for a short time and left for New York. He laughed when asked whether he had noticed the attacks upon him by some of the New York Democratic papers. "One of the papers says it will drive you out of New York," remarked a reporter. "Well, they haven't done it yet, and they won't do it either," was Mr. Martin's reply.

Democrats are colonizing men in New York, Connecticut and New Jersey to vote next month." "That's nonsense. Nobody would attempt that. I am helping the national committee to prevent Democratic fraud. That's what they don't like."

"What are the prospects for Republican success?" "First rate. Everything is very encouraging."

Foulke Declares for Cleveland.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Oct. 4.—Hon. William Dudley Foulke, during all of his life a prominent Republican and well known to the country as one of the foremost advocates of civil service reform, addressed a large audience here, urging the election of Cleveland and Stevenson. His argument was based almost exclusively on the tariff issue.

Governor Buchanan Attacked.

BLOUNTVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 4.—While Governor Buchanan was speaking here for the People's party a band of toughs threw a lot of rotten eggs, tomatoes, etc., at the governor. The meeting broke up in disorder. The toughs would have assaulted the governor had it not been for the interference of officers.

Dissatisfied Nebraska Democrats.

OMAHA, Oct. 4.—Governor Boyd has left for New York. He represents the element of Nebraska Democracy who are dissatisfied with the action of the democratic campaign funds. It is asserted that if they cannot persuade the national committee to change the present plans the state ticket will be withdrawn.

TOPEKA, Oct. 4.—Ex-Senator Ingalls came to Topeka today and offered his services to the Republican central committee. He has decided to spend his entire time until election day in the state.

The Culprit Confessed.

It was in a country school. A small, bright boy had just been enrolled, and this was his first day. The fellow-scholar had a habit of whistling when he was not thinking about it. The teacher pointed out a desk for him and gave him a lesson to be studying. He took his seat, tucked his knees up against the desk, with his feet swinging down underneath and became absorbed in his lesson. After awhile he forgot about his lesson and began whistling merrily. The teacher looked up from his writing and asked:

"Sorry what's whistling?"

The small boy looked up quickly and then said innocently:

"That's me. Didn't you know I could whistle?"—Detroit Free Press.

A Denial from Sullivan.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—John L. Sullivan arrived in this city and was asked by a United Press reporter if it was true that he had expressed a desire for another match with Corbett. He emphatically denied that he had any such intention. He was generally sick of the ring, he said. Speaking of the report that he had been drugged during his recent fight, he said that he was never in better condition in his life than when he stepped into the ring with Corbett.

ON WATLINGS ISLAND

DISCOVERY OF THE SPOT WHERE COLUMBUS LANDED.

Walter Wellman Tells How He Explored the Bahamas and Settled the Controversy Concerning the First Land Sighted by Columbus—A Fascinating and Instructive Narrative.

[Copyright, 1892.]

In May, 1891, the editor of the Chicago Herald wired me at Washington: "Can you find the spot where Columbus discovered America and mark it with a memorial?" My reply was: "Will try." If it had been a request to find the north pole or capture a mermaid I suppose the answer would have been the same. The newspaper correspondent is not surprised at anything.

WALTER WELLMAN.

The plan of The Herald was easy to understand. For centuries the identity of the island which Columbus first landed upon had remained unknown. The quadricentennial of the discovery of the New World was about to be celebrated in Chicago with a great exposition, and The Herald thought it proper that the spot at which occurred the most tremendous event in history should be sought out and appropriately marked.

This was a queer task, but a fascinating one. I went at it in characteristic American fashion—that is, jumped at it. I ransacked the Congressional library and other libraries. I cabled to London for a book which was not to be found in America. I procured from the hydrographic office charts of the Bahamas made by our government and the British admiralty.

Night and day study of the mystery of the discovery quickly showed these facts. In all history there is nothing that throws light upon the landfall save the journal kept by Columbus himself. Five islands had been put forward as the real San Salvador, and hundreds of books and pamphlets written in support of these theories. The correct theory must be based upon two conditions: The island itself must have certain features described by Columbus—lagoons, reefs, harbor hard by, its headland through which the sea had cut its way, etc.—and it must lie at certain distances and in certain directions from five other islands visited and described by Columbus. As to the latter condition. Inspection of the charts showed Watlings to be the only one that would fit the geometrical lines of Columbus' first voyage through the Bahamas. If it contained the physical features which Columbus had found in the San Salvador, then the mystery was solved. Oddly enough, the learned historians, geographers and cartographers who had supported the claims of the rival islands had not taken the trouble to visit the region of which they discoursed. Had they done so their controversy might have come to an end long ago.

Early in June our expedition sailed from New York. We went by Ward line steamer Santiago to Nassau, the capital of the Bahamas, having on board in addition to Charles Lederer, the famous artist of the Chicago Herald, a stonemason, a marble globe, a memorial tablet, thirty barrels of cement, a mess servant, a photographic outfit and sundry boxes, barrels, demijohns and bottles containing the necessaries of life.

At Nassau we had a narrow escape. The governor of the Bahamas was to leave for Bermuda within an hour or so after our arrival, and without his authority we could do nothing. An hour of hustling, the assistance of the American consul and a letter which I had brought from Sir Julius Pauncefote, British minister at Washington, and Governor Shea gave us a letter commanding all the local officials of the Bahamas to place themselves at our command. Lucky for us that we caught Windly Governor Shea. The lieutenant governor, who came into power the minute the governor sailed, was against us. "Impertinent, presumptuous Yankees!" he exclaimed; "to think they can come down here and in a few weeks set the one of the great mysteries of history!" If the lieutenant governor had had his way we should have been sent back to New York quicker.

Watlings was 200 miles away. We had decided that if a visit to Watlings produced the physical evidence necessary to establish its claims beyond doubt, well and good. If not, we were to study the other islands in the order of their theoretical probability. How to get to Watlings was the question. In the harbor were sloops, yachts and schooners galore. One smelled of her last cargo, Jamaica rum; another of oranges, a third of fish, a fourth of poultry. The owners of all were mere calks. And it was the season of the year when calm reigned for days at a time. The only steam vessel in port was the steamship tender, a crude craft with a bottom as flat as a street car, keelless and not lovely. Besides she cost a pretty penny. But we bothered the expense and took her, hove into her our cement and supplies, employed some more masons with their tools, bought half a ton of needless ice, hired "Sandy," the most famous pilot of the Bahamas; borrowed an American flag of the consul, and with the stars and stripes flying at masthead steamed away.

A day and a night of alternating calm and storm, through rocky passages and over dangerous shoals, and we were at Cat island, which Washington Irving identifies as the one old geographers solemnly confirmed as the San Salvador of Columbus. For half a day we steamed along the coast of Cat island, and I examined it very carefully. It bears no resemblance whatever to the island which Columbus described in his journal. For fifty years it has been a San Salvador under false pretenses.

In the afternoon we reached Watlings. Palm trees and hazy vistas, thatched huts and outlying reefs over which the surf broke lazily marked its shores. A boat at once put off to us. It contained all the officials of the island—the local magistrate, the port officer, the postmaster, the sheriff, the colonel of the militia and many more—all in the person of Captain Maxwell Nairn, the only white resident of the island, a veritable Pooh Bah, monarch of a coral isle. His salary is $200 a year, and he has been there thirty years.

Captain Nairn became our guide, counselor, friend and foeman. With him we explored the island. A coral rock it is, a dozen miles long and half as broad, containing large lagoons of brackish water, covered with tropical vegetation, nearly surrounded by reefs. Eight hundred negroes live here, tilling altogether probably a score of acres of land, subsisting principally on fish and other sea food. They are an honest, pious, temperate people. Their chief failing is a predisposition toward piracy and woe to the cargo of the ship that is wrecked upon their shores. This piratical tendency they came naturally by, for this coral island was once the rendezvous of infamous Blue Beard, and some of these poor people are no doubt his direct descendants.

But I could see little in this island save Christopher Columbus. At every turn the great discoverer was suggested. The salt lagoon appeared to echo back his name; the sands of the shore seemed to bear the impress of his feet; the surf breaking over the reefs chanted the "Te Deum" in imitation of Columbus himself. The spirit of Columbus dominates everything in Watlings, overshadows everything, leaves nothing else to be thought of or written about.

And no wonder. Here was everything that Columbus described in his journal—the "large lagoon in the middle of the island," the luxuriant verdure, the "reefs running all round that island," the hills near the shore, the "piece of water" in the island, yet which is not an island, but could easily be made one," as an admirable sight for a fort; the harbor lying hard by, in which "all the ships of Christendom could lie." All these and many more of the things which Columbus had described we found, and at first knew instinctively, and later proved to a mathematical certainty, that this was the birthplace of the New World.

A little bay, two miles from the "piece of land like an island," I chose after much exploration as the very spot at which the landing was made. That this island was the San Salvador of Columbus I know; that this pretty bay, with its overhanging headland and shining beach, was the more particular scene of the discovery I believe. In the nature of things it cannot be proved, though there is much in its favor. Near it is a high hill which Columbus probably first saw in the moonlight of that fateful morning. It is the first bit of coast to the south, free enough from reefs to permit safe landing. It is at a point whence Columbus would have rowed "north northeasterly to see the other side of the island," as he says he did the second morning after his arrival, on this occasion discovering the "pieces of land like an island" and the wonderful harbor "in which the water is still as in a well."

On the promontory which lifted its head above the little bay we erected a memorial. It was constructed of coral limestone found hard by. Thirty native workmen were employed cutting roads with their machetes, bringing forward materials, mixing mortar and carrying cement up the hillside. Skillful boatmen brought supplies from the steamer through the dangerous coral reef. The American flag floated from a staff as we worked, and the monument grew day by day. The sun beat with tropical fierceness; our drinking water was dipped out of the hollows of the rocks, warm and brackish. But no one fell ill, and finally the work was finished. It had been well done. Plenty of cement bound the stones firmly together. The result was beautiful. In the coral limestone are all the tints of the rainbow, all the marine forms. Land and sea together had built a memorial to Columbus, not the most expensive in the world nor the least artistic. We dedicated it with prayer and addresses. Magistrate Nairn watches over it week by week. A recent letter from him informs me that the natives under his leadership will celebrate Discovery Day at the base of the simple memorial which bears this inscription in marble:

HERALD MEMORIAL TO COLUMBUS.

GOOD HEALTH

A CHOLERA CURE.

A Simple Treatment Which Is Reported to Have Proved Very Successful.

Cholera is said to be caused by germs which enter the body with the food and drink and multiply rapidly in the intestines. The diarrhea, vomiting and pains characteristic of this disease are thought to be nature's own vigorous attempts to eject the poisonous matter from the system; consequently whatever best aids nature reduces the intense strain on the nervous and physical force of the sufferer, and conduces to favorable results.

Many people are interested in what is known as the Dr. Hall treatment, heretofore used for cholera morbus, dysentery, etc., which consists in the injection of hot or warm water in sufficiently large quantity to act upon the intestines and cause them to contract with a force that expels their contents, thus ridding one of the corrupt matter that is producing disease. In line with this is the very simple but apparently effectual treatment for cholera, to the reported success of which at Hamburg the Chicago Tribune directs attention as follows: "It is nothing more than copious enemas of warm salt water (injections into the bowels). It is claimed by some that the results of this treatment is truly marvelous, the death rate having been reduced fully 50 per cent. In a few days by this method of fighting the disease. In some cases a cure has been effected by it though the application was delayed till the patients were in such a state of collapse that it was impossible to discern the beating of the pulse, and this stage is usually regarded as beyond hope of recovery. It is claimed to cure almost every case when tried."

ETIQUETTE

FOR OCTOBER WEDDINGS.

Points That May Be Useful During the Fashionable Matrimonial Season.

Those who marry in church publicly are likely to invite a larger number of persons to witness the ceremony than are bidden to the after festivities, but if preferred it is not bad form to invite only a beloved few to the religious part of a church marriage. When the ceremony is to be thus private Good Form prescribes that written notes or verbal requests make known to those near and dear a desire for their presence. In course engraved invitations are de rigueur for receptions that follow a marriage ceremony, also for large church weddings.

Those who are honored by special request to witness a private ceremony receive also an engraved invitation to the festivities that follow.

Invitations to weddings should be issued two and perhaps three weeks previous to the date of the marriage.

The ring is procured by the man, also a bridal bouquet, but the wedding cards and their distribution, also the entertainment, are entirely in the care and at the expense of the bride's family. They provide also all carriages except the one in which the groom and best man drive to church, the same being used by the married pair after leaving the church, and again when they go from the bride's house. These matters must be arranged many days in advance of the marriage.

Of course a bride has her bridesmaids or maids in her mind, if she intends to have them; almost as soon as she thinks of her wedding; also her maid of honor, if she is in equally good form to ask one or two, but a single maid of honor is most common. A sister, large or small, is as often elected for this pleasant service as a girl outside of the family. This maid of honor should be notified of the bride's preference as soon as the date of the marriage is settled. Bridesmaids are also early requested to confer this tribute of affection.

If a bride is rich and her maids are less so, it is good taste to present them with gowns, hats, gloves and shoes for the wedding; but this is not obligatory, nor is it even a general custom. It is only a matter of personal preference and generosity.

Recently several brides whose social positions in New York and Boston entitle them to the right of creating fashions have worn no gloves at their marriage, but have assumed them for their receptions. There is a convenience in this plan that warrants its establishment as a permanent one, as follows: "It is nothing more or less than removing a glove and replacing it at the altar, and the ugliness of having the ring finger loosely covered by a bit of ripped kid, ought to have earlier brought brides ungloved into church. Costumes cut low at tops and short upon the arms are not approved for brides. In France high necked, long sleeved bridal gowns are de rigueur, and indeed for all women who enter a church.

Improving the Complexion.

Choose a good soap and water as soft as you can get it, and bathe once a day, using cold or warm water, as you find it agrees with you best. The question of soaps and baths is too long to enter into, but Cassell's Magazine illustrates the management of a delicate part like the face as follows:

First make a free lather on clean hands, not on any flannel, glove or towel; rub it well into the face and wash it off with tepid water, of which there should be a large quantity in the basin, for if there is much free alkali in the soap used this will thus be thoroughly diluted, and so will not injure the face. Finally wash the face in clean cold water. This braces up the muscles of the skin and acts as a tonic. If a person's face cannot stand the cold water to begin with it may be gradually made colder. In case of a very delicate skin, is the soap be not at fault, the best way is to use a teaspoonful of salvolatile or a few drops of spirits of ammonia in a quart of distilled water.

The presents were numerous, costly and handsome and included silverware, Haviland China, French cut glass, and a large diamond star from the groom.

CORRESPONDENCE.

How the Farmer Can't Be Fooled by Henry George's Ideas.

To THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS.—Your talented correspondent, "Somers," is very amusing. Some years ago I studied the works of Henry George very carefully and for some time before I discovered that they contained so much of those elements of humor, exaggeration and theoretic fancy, which united, would sell well among the ignorant poor, so he told them that they were some of the ever before. In the world's history. Of course any but the most ignorant know that is exactly opposite to truth. Then he brought forward his single remedy for all the ills of poverty and the body pol-Po.

Now, when a man claims to have discovered a panacea we take him for a quack or a joker. Nearly all intelligent people know that every phase of disease requires its own appropriate remedy. So I hunted anxiously for the germ or the joke, but it was mostly wasted time. The only laugh was when Henry stumped New York's every man to buy property in his own family probably, the office could have no influence on the question—and drew crowds of applauding farmers who afterwards went off and voted for one of the other candidates. It has seemed since, that Georgian humor was exhausted, though he is such an able gentleman at getting his name in the papers that his head must still yield quite an income.

But "Somers" is much more amusing because he does not take such painful care to appear consistent. For instance, in Letter No 1, he justifies Mr. Prick, then he justifies his workmen. He says that every man, "scab" or not, has a right to earn his living, and that strikers are a most "disastrous relief," and then lectures strikers for not interfering more with others, even with innocent passengers and the mail laws of the United States.

The principal joke of No. 2 is in supposing any Henry George man anxious to cultivate a "weedy lot" himself. If any over-ris, the undertaker can point to another close to Plainfield, that the owner has vainly endeavored to let for years taking, and the present taxes, which are, of course, but a trifle t what the government tax would be under the George system. The other idea that the government could follow up increased rent of a building by increased taxes on the land is something, I think, George never thought of in that way. However extortionate the owner of the restaurant might grow, his lot could only be taxed as much as those on either side.

The diagram of No. 3 are highly comic. As if the lay of the land, susceptibility of cultivation, and other reasons, did not influence the value of farms almost entirely! And the idea that the Railroad Company would erect a depot under the George system, which allows no ownership of land, when they refuse it, under the present one, though they have land they must want to sell, is evil conceived.

But the climax is reached in No. 4. Poor Mr. Sullivan is held up to derision, and his "somewhat thick bucolic skull" is anathemised because he cannot see the difference between a tax on land and a tax on the value of land, though "Somers" could tell him that it is just the same as the difference between sweet and tweedledee. And because he cannot see how it is going to benefit him to have the taxes put on the building and land, so, less the five, nor how the already tax-burdened city will pay the additional taxes for the country, and the enormous expenses of the nation, without raising rents as at present, the large army of tenants who would be depended on to pay.

After all the American farmer has some very level heads, and I think I can trust to himself the rhyme of his childhood:

"Will you walk into my parlor says the spider to the fly."

Then he winks his eye at Henry George and votes for the other man.

Investigating the Netherwood Fire.

The Jersey Central Railroad company has set its detectives at work endeavoring to find out what set fire to the palatial designs on its property at Netherwood. The fire destroyed the large and three-story brick station at Netherwood was destroyed by fire. It was supposed to have been caused by an overheated furnace. The company's workmen are now building a new station. At midnight Watchman Bennett's office was set on fire and destroyed, together with tools and a quantity of valuable lumber. The loss will be about $1,000. It is now believed that the first fire was also of incendiary origin, and strong efforts have been made to discover and punish the perpetrators.

The Plainfield Bicycle Club and the Crescent League Wheelmen will take part in the Eastern parade of the Union County Roadsters at Rahway, to-morrow evening.

THE CHAMPION PUGILIST.

Corbett in his new Play "Gentleman Jack," at Music Hall Last Evening.

Mr. James J. Corbett proved a good drawing card at Music Hall last evening. Almost every seat in the house was occupied.

Corbett was the star in his new play, "Gentleman Jack."

The play has a decided plot and was well acted.

The scene of his training quarters at Loch Arbour and the ring at the Olympic Club were the best.

JAMES J. CORBETT.

Then he seemed entirely at home. The good impression made on the audience was evident by the applause. Many persons remarked that Corbett seemed the gentleman he has always had the name of being. There was nothing of the "pug-ugly" about him.

His agility and skill, shown even in such a boxing bout as that of last evening were amazing. There was considerable force in the blows exchanged also. His new sparring partner, John Donaldson, had to be coaxed to come up to the ring centre, and no wonder.

In appearance Corbett surprised those who had never seen him before. He is tall and has very broad shoulders but there were no bulging muscles.

After seeing his ability to dodge blows and get in and give them the defeat of the ponderous Sullivan is not to be wondered at.

An enthusiastic crowd waited at the depot and cheered him when he and his fellow actors departed.

Was La Rue Murdered?

The body of Edward La Rue of Trenton was found floating in the canal at Bound Brook yesterday. It is thought he has been murdered and robbed. He was a well to do resident of Trenton.

There are wounds on the head of the body which the coroner's jury has seen alive in Trenton on Tuesday a week ago. What caused him to go to Bound Brook is not known to anyone.

County Physician Reed, who held an autopsy this morning, found a deep gash over the left temple. Both his shoulders have been inflicted with a blunt instrument.

Coroner Brady has sent detectives to Trenton to trace the movements of the man from the time he was last seen in that city. Detective Leahy of the Trenton force is also at work on the case.

How and when he received the injuries, and if he was murdered, robbery is thought to be the only motive for the crime.

The Union County Court for the October term was opened yesterday at Elizabeth. The calendar is quite a long one. The criminal list embraces eight persons held for murder, two for forgery, four for highway robbery, two for atrocious assault and two for arson and grand larceny.

Judge Van Syckel in his charge to the jury said:

In 1891 over 6,000 murders were committed in the United States, including the statistics that only in one case out of fifty has capital punishment followed. Of this record of disregard of human life is not checked or suppressed more than one-half, it is believed to be at the hands of others in the year to come.

In my judgment among the things which tend to increase the homicides in this country are these:

First, under sympathy that is so easily aroused for criminals; second, the refusal or reversal of juries to be governed by the law and evidence and the rendering of verdicts influenced by prejudices and considerations which have no place in the jury box; third, delays.

The laws designed for the suppression of murder are carried out seldom enough. The penalties that are imposed for murder have made the crime the lowest, and that the least certain crime. The monthly sympathy for murderers is enough to make the law-abiding citizen of their loved ones by the assassin.

The brief incarceration in prison of murderers have little effect as a terror to evil doers or in the preventing of others from the commission of the offence.

In conclusion he said the failures in the homicide cases could not be charged against the Grand Juries.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Try it.

Did it ever occur to you how difficult it is to tell the exact truth? It would be a shocking thing to be a liar of course, but is there anybody who always tells the truth, even if he knows it? You do, do you? Then you are possessed of a high order of intellect, for there is no better test of brain power than ability to see and narrate facts as they are.

Of course you; we know you tell the truth. But did you never, on your honor, come to and say you had caught a hundred fish in thirty minutes, just as fast as you could pull them in, when the exact facts were you had been out half a day and got just six fish—not very big ones either? Come, now. Maybe you are a woman, and everybody knows that a lady speaks the truth. Oh, yes! But when Miss Elizabeth Jendeson is twenty-eight and one-half years old, with no prospects, don't you customarily tell people she is thirty-five, even when you know better? When finally Miss Jendeson gets a husband, and she is twenty-nine and he is twenty-four, don't you ever make merry over the fact that he has married his grandmother, and don't you habitually give strangers the impression that he is fifteen and she is forty? On your sacred honor again, mind you? Well, if you do not, then you have a great brain, and you shall get my hand.

Try for one day to tell the truth precisely as you know and see it under your eyes. When you have seven letters to write, don't say you have a dozen. Say seven. Don't say it's the awfullest wind you ever encountered. You have lived through just such a hundred times. Don't tell your friend you have the worst headache you ever had. You have suffered just as severe ones many a time and will again. If you wait sixteen minutes for your wife, don't swear you have been there two hours. Say sixteen minutes exactly. Don't say a thing happened forty years ago when it was thirty-four. Say thirty-four. Don't dispatch to a newspaper that the most frightful railway accident has occurred and a whole train load of passengers were killed when in point of fact the extent of the fatality was that one poll parrot in a cage got her neck dislocated.

Notice all day long how many times you actually and knowingly tell an untruth just so as to make out a good story. At night sum them all up, and it will make your hair stand on end to discover what a liar you are. It is the life effort of strictly conscientious persons to narrate facts as they are, without regard to their own likes and dislikes or their desire to make out a good story, and then they are conscious of steady failure. Still the constant effort to speak the exact truth reacts nobly on the intellect, making it sharper and clearer and giving it truer perceptions. The person who acts with perfect sincerity in all things and who strives to adhere to the strict truth can perceive more easily than anybody else when a person is trying to humbug him.

As to the person who habitually exaggerates all his big figures, every doubled and twisted superlative weakens by so much his hearers' belief in his honesty and truthfulness. Then when a really great occasion arises he can make no impression at all, but like the traditional citizen whose apples rolled down hill he can only shut up and remain silent.

In Vienna something novel is to be tried in the way of entertainment. The theatre of the "working classes" are to be studied carefully, and then a theater will be started designed especially to meet their wants and degree of intelligence. One does not know what the Vienna "working classes" will do with this theater that is graded down to their taste, but it is to be hoped that they will not tear it down. It is a reflection on the intelligence of the average citizen that he cannot understand and enjoy as good a style of entertainment as the dudes and fashionable women. In America some of our most distinguished interpreters, even of Shakespeare, began life as mechanics. John McCullough was a carpenter before he became an actor. It must be remembered, too, that even in Europe some of the working classes are no slouches in the way of Shakespearean acting. Sweet Adelaide Neilson was a barmaid.

In the Third congressional district of Pennsylvania, in Philadelphia, a political spectacle will be witnessed in this campaign which is paralleled nowhere else in the Union probably. Mr. William McAleer is the candidate for congress of both the Democratic and Republican parties. The monkey and parrot have embraced and made friends.

Hon. W. T. Harris, United States commissioner of education, gave an address lately on the "Relation of Higher Education to Modern Industry." It is to be hoped he was able to explain how it is that the more higher education people get the less they are worth in modern industry.

On looking at the portrait of Captain A. G. Weissert, LL. D., of Wisconsin, the new commander in chief of the G. A. R., one is impressed with the fact that there are still young as well as good looking men in the ranks of the veterans.

POLITICS WAXING WARM

Cleveland Addresses the League of Democratic Clubs.

REID AND M'KINLEY VISIT BOSTON

They Address Monster Meetings at Faneuil Hall and Music Hall—Hiscock and Boutelle Speak in New York—Judge Cooley and Wayne McVeagh for Cleveland.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—The second quadrennial convention of the National Association of Democratic Clubs met in the Academy of Music. The business of the convention was transacted with great expedition and amid a whirlwind of enthusiasm. At the front and center of the stage was the desk of the presiding officer. There sat General Patrick Collins, of Massachusetts, chairman of the convention. Behind Chairman Collins was a semicircle of chairs, on which sat the visiting leaders and invited guests.

Seats in the boxes had been reserved for Grover Cleveland, Adlai E. Stevenson, Governor Flower, Chairmen Harrity and Dickinson, William C. Whitney, ex-Lieutenant Governor Sheehan, president of the association; Lieutenant Governor Sheehan, Chairman Edward Murphy, Mayor Grant, Richard Croker, Hugh McLaughlin and Mayor Boody, of Brooklyn.

Ex-President Cleveland entered escorted by Chauncey Black, president of the league, and William D. H. Washington, chairman of the local committee. The whole audience rose en masse to receive him, and a pandemonium of cheers and waving hats was raised to which both bands contributed. Mr. Cleveland stood for some minutes until the enthusiasm subsided, and as he took the chair "Three cheers for the typical American, Grover Cleveland," were called for and given with a will.

At Mr. Cleveland took his seat amid wild cheering excitement President Chauncey F. Black stepped to the front of the stage and opened the convention with a speech outlining the principles of the Democratic ticket. He said the Democratic party demanded greater freedom of trade and denounced the protective tariff. He then introduced Mr. Cleveland to the convention. The ex-president said in substance:

Mr. Cleveland's Speech.

As a citizen of this proud municipality I am glad to assure you that our hospitality is always open and generous.

Your meeting is the council of war which precedes a decisive battle, and your deliberations should be the preparation for stern conflict. All your weapons and all your equipments are soon to be tested. You have organized and labored, and you have watched and planned to insure your readiness for the final engagement now near at hand.

Your declaration of purposes, as declared by your association, are: The preservation of the constitution of the United States, the autonomy of the states, the right of suffrage and the honesty of elections, opposition to the imposition of taxes beyond the necessities of the government, economically administered, and the promotion of economy in all branches of the public service.

These principles are dear to the patriotic hearts and the loftiest aspirations of American citizenship. Though at all times they should neglect to the strictest performance of party duty, their motive force, as incentives to political activity and watchfulness, should be irresistible when these principles are threatened or in danger. Patriotism against the accomplishment of selfish purposes, when state boundaries are hardly a line to be considered in such a contest, and the claim to sincerity can hardly excuse themselves for lack of effort at a time when the preservation of the government, economically administered, here but little relation to the taxation of the people, and when the maintenance of the public service has become a contagious pleasure.

In this view your assembling together is most important, for so far as it promotes this harmony and unity by conference and a consideration of methods, and in so far as it inspires that zeal and enthusiasm which will make more effective your work at home.

These temporary officers were chosen: General Collins, chairman, and Hon. Martin A. McGinnis, of Montana, vice chairman. A resolution conveying the sympathy of the convention to President Harrison on account of Mrs. Harrison's illness and expressing hope of her speedy recovery was unanimously adopted. Letters of regret from Allan S. Springer and Governor Flower were read.

After recess Chairman Collins introduced Mayor Boody, of Brooklyn, who welcomed the delegates in the name of Kings county.

The Platform.

The committee on credentials reported that fifty-four were on the rolls. The temporary officers were then made the permanent officers of the convention. A telegram from Mayor Grant was read, stated New York's delegation in large part his official engagements prevented his presence.

The resolutions adopted warn the American people of the danger which menaces their common liberties in the manifest purpose of the managers of the monopoly party to debauch the ballot, by fraud or violence, another lease of the presidency and another majority in congress, and ultimately to take permanent possession of the federal government through the provisions of an unconstitutional and partisan force bill designed by corrupt and unscrupulous conspirators, and indorsed by Benjamin Harrison and a Republican convention of office holders and monopolists.

They also denounced as un-American, and unconstitutional the pillage of the people for the benefit of the few by unjust tax laws; the squandering of the people's money in profligate expenditures, in subsidies and in jobs, and demand a return to lower and more equal taxation, more frugal expenditures and purer government, which can be accomplished only by the election of Cleveland and Stevenson.

Mr. McGinnis, in eulogizing the administration of Mr. Cleveland, raised a great laugh by referring to his civil service policy, and saying that he had not turned as many of the rascals out as he (Mr. McGinnis) thought he ought to have done. A delegate shouted, "He'll do it next time," and Mr. McGinnis retorted: "Oh, he has learned something as well as the rest of us. All those fat pockets which he left revolting in the bough, while poor, lean Democratic pigs stood outside, kicked and ran his Republican devil into the deep sea to send him for second election, and I don't think he'll play that game again." This was greeted with laughter and applause, and the chairman was moved when he added, "And I don't care who says so the contrary, he was just to the soldiers of the United States."

Block Re-elected President.

Some resolutions passed by colored Democratic clubs commending the force bill were read and cheered.

Mr. Chauncey F. Black and Lawrence Gardiner were elected president and secretary for the ensuing year, and the other officers of the preceding year, including Roswell P. Flower, was appointed treasurer.

An effort to adjourn was decisively voted down, amid cries of "Cockran" and some rather disorderly efforts to have some formal action taken on the resolutions sent up by the colored Democratic clubs.

A delegate from North Carolina offered a resolution of thanks to David B. Hill for his magnificent defense and exposition of Democratic principles in his Brooklyn speech, and of profound appreciation of the services he is rendering to his party and to the nation and to the Democratic party. This was carried with some dissenting voices.

Then the convention permitted a motion to adjourn to be declared carried, and the delegates passed out to the tune of "Four Years More for Grover" vigorously played by the band.

REID AND M'KINLEY IN BOSTON.

Music Hall and Faneuil Hall Crowded to the Doors with Republicans.

BOSTON, Oct. 5.—Music hall and Faneuil hall were both filled to overflowing last night when the Republicans ratified their state and national nominations with rousing speeches by Hon. Whitelaw Reid, Governor William McKinley, Governor Russell, Gov. Rollo and Hon. Roger Wolcott, the two latter being the nominees for governor and lieutenant governor. Governor Russell presided, and was flanked by a large number of leading men of the party seated upon the platform. After the usual introductory speech, Hon. Whitelaw Reid was presented as the first speaker of the evening. He was given a rousing reception, and began his address soon, which was quick to note the sharp points of his address and bestowed frequent applause.

Mr. Reid, after thanking his hearers for the reception tendered him, which he did not presume to think personal, but simply accorded him as the representative of the distinguished party whose principles he briefly recorded, attacked the Democratic policy on the tariff and financial questions, and said that when Mr. Cleveland's letter of acceptance the Democrats were demoralized and almost on the run. It is obviously truthful, he said, to say that Mr. Cleveland now stood upon the platform of his party as if he were afraid that if he should venture to step on it it would break through. The three distinctively vital points in the platform are silver, currency, reciprocity and the tariff. On two of these his letter is absolutely silent, while he writes an elaborate letter on the third.

He then discussed the tariff question at length, and after reviewing the efforts of the Republican party toward the restoration of the merchant marine, Mr. Reid concluded as follows:

There is one party in this campaign, Mr. Chairman, that does not find it needful to slander the country that does not need calamities and does not read its own defeat in the general prosperity. There is one party that has nothing to conceal and that is what it means. It has nominees who are not afraid of their principles. It has a record of success in getting one part of the country to vote for its platform and another part to vote only for its candidates. It has promises for an active, effective tariff, and wants no mistake about that. It stands for honest money, and no mistake about that. It stands for equal rights under the law, for reciprocity, for revived shipping, for American wages and for American labor. It stands for the free ballot and the fair count of the American people on the character, the ability and the safe and brilliantly successful record of Benjamin Harrison.

At the conclusion of Mr. Reid's speech Governor McKinley was introduced and, after the usual ovation, began to speak. He devoted the first part of his address to a discussion of the old state bank system, and then passed to a discussion of the tariff question, which was followed by Governor Russell, Lieutenant Governor Rolfe and Hon. Roger Walcott, who had just addressed the meeting in Faneuil hall, to which place Messrs. Reid and Mosley were taken after their Music hall speeches.

At Faneuil hall there was another large crowd in attendance, and the same enthusiastic reception, while the galleries contained many ladies. Postmaster Thomas N. Hart presided here, and in a short speech introduced Governor Rolfe as the first speaker. He eulogized President Harrison's administration and said:

"So long as Benjamin Harrison is president we shall have a sound national banking currency, which commands respect at home and abroad, and the people need not fear under his administration a return to that old state system which was such a disgrace to our nation."

Hon. Roger Wolcott then spoke and was followed by Mr. Reid, who was greeted with deafening cheers. His speech was the same as delivered at Music hall. Governor McKinley came in for more applause when he appeared, and was the last speaker. He spoke almost wholly on the tariff, and after he concluded the meeting broke up with cheers for Reid and McKinley.

REPUBLICAN RALLY IN GOTHAM.

Senator Hiscock and Congressman Boutelle Address a Big Mass Meeting.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Cooper union was crowded last night with a Republican audience, the occasion being the Republican mass meeting and the announced speaks of Senator Hiscock and Congressman Boutelle. The stage was filled with representative Republicans. John Sabin Smith, chairman of the campaign committee of the Republican club, introduced Senator Hiscock as the speaker on the "Republican platform and its appeal for loyal support."

The speaker took up several questions which he said the Democratic leaders and orators who were endeavoring to hold back the people to keep them from progressing too fast. He considered the last two years a splendid vindication of "that masterpiece of American legislation, the McKinley bill." He referred to the Republican victory in Maine, and then spoke of the stupendous folly of the interest of merchant marine. On this subject he talked for fully twenty minutes, and closed by calling on every man to do his duty at the polls next election.

At the conclusion of Senator Hiscock's speech, Chairman Smith, in a neat speech, introduced Congressman Boutelle as the man from the state which produced statesmen like James G. Blaine. The mention of Blaine's name created the wildest enthusiasm and pandemonium. Boutelle, after telling a little story of Wendell Phillips, said:

What do you suppose Christopher Columbus would think of the Democratic party? If the Democratic party had had their way for the last forty years there would be no Columbus or child but for it would be claimed that Columbus ever discovered America. It is an annoying fact that we have been a Democratic party in the United States. They can point to no great act or achievement on their part that has helped humanity.

The congressman went on to say that all the successes the Democracy had ever had were the result of false pretense and misrepresentation. It had "bloated the people with its war cries, and the Democracy has always been "long" on war cries.

The democratic invention of a patent medicine, the Democratic chest protector. Once the cry was "bleeding Kansas," and it was applied out of that. Then it took up "black and tan," and the Democratic blood became so poisoned that it was necessary to apply the "Mills bill" to purify it. Then it took up "Force bill" and "billion dollar congress." Those cries are dead now. The Democratic conference adjourned at the Fifth Avenue hotel the other night, and it is reported that the "billion dollar congress" resolved to be a model congress. It was also resolved to be a model congress. The chief of the force bill brood Mr. Reed figured up the expenditures of the last congress. It is said that Speaker Reed's heroes will endorse a solid reference to it from a Democratic speaker.

Democrats to Indorse Andrews.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—The indications are that there will only be one candidate for the office of judge of the court of appeals and that Associate Judge Charles F. Andrews (Rep.) will be the man. Chairman Brookfield sent out a call for the Republican county committee to meet in this city Oct. 11 to nominate a candidate for chief judge. It is practically settled that Andrews will be the nominee. It is said Chairman Murphy will call the Democratic committee together on Oct. 13 or 14 and that the committee will indorse the nomination of Andrews. This arrangement, it is understood, will practically suppress any regular nomination by the Democrats, because it will save the state a large sum in election expenses and will leave the management of both parties free to pay attention to the more important work of the campaign.

Cleveland to Meet Harrison.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Mr. Cleveland will return to Gray Gables tonight. He will be back in the city next week and will bring his family with him. On his return to this city Mr. Cleveland will personally direct the campaign, and he will have daily conferences with Chairman Harrity, Dickinson and others. He will review the Columbian celebration parade, and may stand side by side with Harrison. They will also dine together at the banquet at Lemac Lyceum on the evening of Oct. 12. Both President Harrison and Mr. Cleveland have accepted invitations to attend the dedication of the World's fair buildings on Oct. 21. That will probably be the only time that Mr. Cleveland and Mr. Harrison will be together for some years to come.

Delaware Republicans.

GEORGETOWN, Oct. 5.—The Sussex county Republican convention was largely attended. Ex-Minister to Belgium Henry Emory Smith, of Philadelphia, was introduced as the orator of the day. He said in substance that Delaware should now take its place in the Republican column. He had for some years been steadily advancing in this direction. Four years ago you elected a Republican United States senator and two years ago a Democratic governor was chosen, but by only a little over 800 majority. With the advantages you now have that margin ought to be wiped out." The speaker followed with national issues and was followed by Senator Higgins, who made a spirited speech.

Florida Democratic.

JACKSONVILLE, Oct. 5.—The returns indicate the election of the entire Democratic ticket by a majority of 19,000. The People's party polled a very small vote only. The entire Democratic ticket is elected as follows: Governor, Henry L. Mitchell; secretary of state, John B. Jones; justice of the supreme court, R. Fenwick Taylor; attorney general, W. B. Lamar; comptroller, W. D. Bloxham; treasurer, C. B. Collins; superintendent of public instruction, W. N. Sheats; commissioner of agriculture, L. B. Wombwell.

Judge Cooley's Position.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Oct. 5.—Judge Thomas M. Cooley asserts positively that he will not write a letter declining to allow his name as the Democratic candidate, his health being in too precarious a condition to stand the excitement of an active campaign. He will however stump Michigan for Cleveland, but simply says he is out of politics.

Democratic Ballots Thrown Out.

THOMASTON, Conn., Oct. 5.—Although the Democrats carried this town for the first time in many years, the entire vote of that party was thrown out by the moderators on the ground that the ballots were irregular. The decision of the moderator will be contested.

To Confer with the Antimasonry.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—The executive committee of the County Democracy has appointed a committee of one from each assembly district to confer with the anti-snappers' association in reference to the placing of a third ticket in the field.

Wayne McVeagh for Cleveland.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 5.—Hon. Wayne McVeagh, who was attorney general in President Garfield's cabinet, has announced in a letter that he will vote for Cleveland and Stevenson.

LANSING, Mich., Oct. 5.—The Democratic state convention nominated for chief justice Judge William Newton. Judge Newton is also the candidate of the People's party.

TENNYSON'S LIFE EBBS.

England's Famous Poet Lying in the Shadow of Death.

NO HOPE THAT HE WILL RECOVER.

While It Is Possible That He May Linger for a Few Days It Is the Belief of His Physician That the End Is Now Only a Question of a Few Hours.

LONDON, Oct. 5.—Lord Tennyson, England's great poet, is in the shadow of death. Dr. Dabbs, who is in constant attendance upon Lord Tennyson at Aldworth, near Haslemere, said today that his patient's condition was very grave. The last bulletin issued, said: "Lord Tennyson's condition is extremely critical. He is much weaker, and takes nourishment with difficulty."

Very little hope is expressed for the survival of the distinguished patient for more than a few hours though, of course, he is liable to rally a little.

His Illness Began Friday.

Tennyson's illness began on Friday. He has suffered from the gout for several years, but the disease has not become acute until recently. The rapid development of stiffness early in the week brought him to his bed on Friday. He was strongly opposed to yielding to the malady, as the special train which for years has conveyed him from Haslemere to the shore opposite his winter home on the Isle of Wight had already been ordered. He begged hard to be allowed to go, but Sir Andrew Clark and Dr. Dabbs told him that the journey could be made only at the peril of his life. In deference to this warning, as well as to the wishes of his lovable wife, Tennyson at once instantly consented to remain at Haslemere.

Visitors go constantly throughout the day to Haslemere to read the bulletins as to Tennyson's condition. These bulletins are very meager, owing to Tennyson's request on Saturday, when inquiries began to multiply, that as little publicity as possible be given to the progress of the disease. Hallam Tennyson delivers the bulletins to the reporters, but refuses to add to the scant information which they contain. The people of Aldworth know almost nothing of Tennyson's condition or in fact about the Tennyson's in any way. Aldworth is three miles from the village and one mile from the nearest house. Not only the poet, but his wife and son are complete strangers to the people thereabout.

The End Near.

The solitude of the place, however, has been banished since yesterday noon. Hundreds of telegrams of inquiry and of sympathy are being received from friends and admirers of the poet. Queen Victoria, Gladstone, the Earl of Rosebery, Emperor William and dozen of other persons of worldwide reputation are sending messages and receiving news as to his condition. The queen receives reports three times daily. The messages are so numerous, however, that most of the inquirers get answered only through the newspapers, as there is nobody at Aldworth to return individual replies.

The only persons at the beside of the patient are the physicians, who pass practically the whole day and night in the house. Lady Tennyson, who is a chronic invalid; Hallam Tennyson and his family.

It seems highly improbable that Lord Tennyson will at most last more than two or three days, although his physicians refuse to speak as to the result of his illness. His physical health has been far from satisfactory for some time, and he is thought to have hardly the vitality to rally from such severe illness.

Italy and the Fair.

ROME, Oct. 5.—The Italian government has refused to pay for the coal of the warship which is to carry the relics for the transportation of exhibits for the Chicago fair. The manufacturers who wish to exhibit at the fair are unwilling to pay the bill, and consequently the plan may be abandoned. In that case many persons who have intended to show goods at the fair will send nothing.

Minister Egan's Mission.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Minister Patrick Egan has arrived here from Chili, bringing with him $75,000 for the victims of the Baltimore trouble, a cordial message to President Harrison which is also complimentary to the bearer, and the draft of a new treaty about back claims on Chili by United States citizens, which will be submitted for ratification to the Washington authorities.

The Vatican Displeased.

ROME, Oct. 5.—The election of Father Martin as Jesuit general has displeased the vatican. The pope wished and expected that a Frenchman would be elected to the office. The consequence of the election will be probably that the plan to elevate a Jesuit to the cardinalate will be abandoned.

NEW YORK'S REAPPORTIONMENT.

The Three Test Cases Argued Before the Court of Appeals.

ALBANY, Oct. 5.—The three apportionment cases involving the question of the constitutionality of the new apportionment law came up in the court of appeals.

Mr. Sutherland opened for the contestants, making a general argument to cover the three cases. He held that by the act under consideration representation was unequal. He held that Monroe county was justly entitled to four assemblymen, whereas the act of 1889 gave but three. Albany county, with a population of 100,136, has four assemblymen. Monroe's population is 161,229. Said Mr. Sutherland:

If the apportionment of 1892 can be tolerated by the courts nothing stands in the way of some future apportionment, in response to any sudden wave or popular sentiment, which would reduce the county of New York to fifteen members, give ten to the county of Monroe and five to the county of Erie, and if the Twenty-second district does not have twenty-seven times more than twice the number of people in the Twelfth, then there is no reason why an agricultural county may not have three senators to every one given to New York for the same number of people.

The next point urged was that the special session at which the apportionment bill passed was not the "next session after the return of the enumeration" contemplated by the constitution.

The legislature which adjourned sine die April 21 was the same legislature when it assembled April 26, and its doings on both occasions were part of the history of the 115th session. The last point made was that the apportionment of 1892 was void because not based on a census taken as the constitution provides.

Attorney General Rosendale in his reply held that the constitutional provision for a census every ten years was directory, not mandatory.

Inasmuch as the legislature of 1885 and its successors had neglected to obey the constitutional mandate of the time after the passage of an enumeration law, it became the duty of the legislature of 1892 to conform to the constitutional requirement and pass the law.

As to the "next session" point M. Rosenfeld said the constitution was also merely directory and said:

An act apportioning members of assembly by the legislature is not within the power of the judiciary to review. Having, as the power does, in legislative discretion, it cannot be reviewed by the courts, except in cases of fraud and gross injustice. The courts cannot institute an inquiry into facts to set aside law as unconstitutional. The court ought not to do. Although not unanimous in the result required by the most cogent reasons, or indeed unless compelled by unanswerable grounds, will a court declare a statute to be unconstitutional.

It is believed that the court will be ready with an opinion by next Tuesday.

Spotted and Shot Materials.

As it has been nearly all stripes this summer, so this autumn it will probably be spots. At any rate some of the newest fabrics for evening wear have spot patterns.

Velvet, shot as well as shaded, will, it is predicted, be very fashionable. A wonderful gown of apricot velvet shading to gold, made for a society woman recently, had a Watteau train, which was a combination of bands of velvet and satin. The materials were alike in color and harmonized beautifully. Among the simpler dresses was one of white chiffon, with black velvet spots, made over an accordion silk. It had silk sleeves and a sash of canary-de-sail. For a young lady there was a very handsome outdoor dress of dull pinkish colored cloth, with a brigand jacket—all velvet in front—trimmed with real Russian sable, and large sleeves finished with velvet cuffs edged also with sable. The skirt was bordered with velvet to a depth of about eight inches and adorned with two rows of fur.

Fashion's Echoes.

New tailor gowns are made with felled seams stitched down on the outside.

Skirts of newest imported street dresses remain the same as heretofore, tightly fitted in front and on the sides, with fullness massed at the back.

Dressy black stockings for evening wear have delicate designs introduced under the lace fronts—blue, pink or yellow. Tartan patterns are liked.

It is said that veils will be worn longer and smaller than ever will be fashionable.

Yellow is a favorite color which looks well on bonnets when subdued by a frame work of black jet.

Velvets having light silk spots on a dark ground are among autumn materials. Striped velvets have very narrow lines of various colors woven close together.

Something of a fancy for magenta color is noted in French millinery.

Accordion plaiting promises to be revived.

Satin is fashionable for evening dress. A new black gown of this material, with a train of fair length, has the new shaped bodice, which is cut low to show the shoulders.

Not Room Enough to Swing a Cat.

The origin of the saying (in reference to a small place), "There is not room enough to swing a cat," is attributed by Mr. C. G. Leland to a current superstition of Transylvania, in which country, if a cat runs away, when recovered she must be swung three times around to attach her to the dwelling.

Imposing on a Stranger.

Uncle Zeb, who had just come in from Cyclewreck and brought his appetite along, stared hard at the waiter.

"Do you call this a lounge-castle house?" he asked.

"It's about as good as any in the city, I think, sir," replied the waiter stiffly.

"Then I'd like to know," said Uncle Zeb, bringing his fist down on the table with an emphasis that made the dishes rattle, "why in thunder you can't furnish a few mattresses to set on this plat"—Chicago Tribune.

Science Progress.

A MINIATURE SUNDIAL.

Instructions for Making One in an Interesting and Scientific Way.

Sun dials have been in use as measurers of time from the earliest ages; many curious forms have been harvested, adapted to various situations, and which require very complicated mathematical calculations to accurately determine the lines on which the shadow should fall at fixed hours of the day. Popular Science News states that readers who wish to construct a miniature dial for themselves will find the following directions from La Nature quite sufficient for their purpose. A pair of dividers and a protractor, such as is found in every case of drawing instruments, are the only tools required.

FIG. 1—A CARDBOARD SUNDIAL.

Take a piece of cardboard (as shown in A, Fig. 1) and cut it by cutting two with a sharp pointed knife, so that it will bend as on a hinge. At a draw on the card an arc of a circle and divide it into degrees. Cut it out from the card and bend it up as shown in the engraving, so that it will pass tightly through a slit (b) in the upper part of the card. Starting from B as a center, draw an arc of a circle and divide it into equal parts of 15 degs. each by straight lines drawn from the center to the circumference. Each of these will represent the distance traversed by the shadow of C in one hour, and should be numbered according to the hours, the central line upon which C rests representing the meridian, or noon-day. After all the figures are drawn the card is bent backward till it is at an angle corresponding to the latitude of the place where it is to be set up, as shown on the arc a b. At Boston this equals 42 degs. 21 min. Two pins at the corners of the card serve to hold it in place and retain it at the proper angle. The card C, which casts the shadow, and D, which holds it firm, are then glued in their proper places, and the dial is complete.

In order that the dial may indicate time correctly the card C must be in the plane of the meridian. The easiest way to adjust this is to wait till the hour of noon, and then place the dial so that the upper edge of the card C is exactly under the sun, and therefore casts no shadow. If this method is used, due allowance must be consulted, and an allowance made for the difference between astronomical time and mean time, as shown in the column marked "sun slow" or "sun fast."

But a much more interesting and scientific way is to lay out a true meridian line as follows: Into the board upon which you purpose to place the dial drive a small pin as perpendicularly as possible. This point is represented at C in Fig. 2. Mark on the board from the lower to both sides the day the point where the shadow of the pin's head falls. Connect these points by a curved line and then, having removed the pin, draw a circle around the point C.

FIG. 2—LAYING OUT A TRUE MERIDIAN.

Then draw two radii from C to the points of intersection A B, bisect the angle A C B, and the line S C N thus obtained will be the true meridian. It is then only necessary to place the edge of the card dial against this line to give it the correct position.

Some Effects of Absence of Light.

Effects of the absence of light upon animal life were strikingly revealed not long ago on the reopening of an old mine near Bangor, Cal. In a dry slope connecting two shafts one of the explorers was astonished and startled to find a number of flies that were perfectly white, except the eyes, which were red, and directly afterward he killed a pure white rattlesnake. The animals had lived in the dry passages, where they had been supplied with air, but not with light. It is supposed that the flies were offsprings of some that had been imprisoned by the partial filling of the mine with water about thirty years ago, and that the snake, when quite young, had been washed down in a rain. A few of the flies were exposed to light in a glass case, and resumed the colors of ordinary house house flies within a week, says The Industrial World, which relates the foregoing.

Scientific Researches.

The investigations of English and German experts are such as to lead them to limit the life of iron bridges to seventy-five years, and in many instances a shorter period of use makes them unsafe.

A new serpent mound, the largest now known, has been discovered by Professor Putnam near Fort Ancient, O. It is 1,900 feet long and about ten thick, and is considered one of the most remarkable of prehistoric works.

Glue that has been made a long time and kept in store is said to possess greater tenacity than newly made glue does.

Waco, Tex., is reported to have the largest artesian well in the United States. It is 1,850 feet deep, with a diameter of ten inches, and throws 1,500,000 gallons a day of perfectly pure but hot water.

Some recent investigators claim that the sweetness and fragrance of the very best butter is due to a certain beneficent species of bacteria.

Chlorine gas decomposed from sea water by means of electrical machines is employed for disinfecting the hold, storerooms, etc., of vessels of the Italian navy.

On the Way.

The day when a boy puts on his first pair of diminutive trousers is indeed a time of importance.

Two children, one in a boy's sailor suit, the other in a little girl's short dress frock, were accosted by an interested passerby one day as they played together on the sidewalk.

"Good morning, children," said the lady, addressing them with a smile as she stopped a moment to watch their game of "hop scotch."

"Are you brother and sister, playing so nicely together, or," she saw a somewhat distressed and aggrieved expression on the face of the child in the frock, "are you both boys?"

"We aren't relations," replied the other child, "and I'm a boy now, and Tommy's going to be one next week, when he gets his new suit."—Youth's Companion.

Needed Repairs.

The old practice of badgering witnesses has almost disappeared from many courts, but in a western Kansas town it is still kept up—sometimes, however, to the damage of the cross examiner.

Lawyer S. is well known for his successful habits. He cuts his hair about four times a year, and the rest of the time looks decidedly ragged about the ears. He was making a witness describe a fight which figured in his last case.

"How long had this barn been built?"

"Oh, I don't know. About a year, mebby. About nine months p'raps."

"But just how long? Tell the jury how long it had been built."

"Well, I don't know exactly. Quite awhile."

"Now, Mr. B., you pass for an intelligent farmer, and yet you can't tell how old this barn is, and you have lived on the next farm for ten years. Can you tell how old your own house is? Come now, tell us how old your own house is, if you think you know."

Quick as lightning the old farmer replied:

"Ye want to know how old my house is do ye? Well, it's just about as old as you be and needs shinglin about as bad!"

In the roar that followed, the witness stepped down, and when he broke the ice with his hammer he didn't call him back.—Youth's Companion.

No Use Wishing.

"You see," he explained to the ingenuous young thing as he showed her the wishbone, "you take hold here, and I'll take hold here. Then we must both make a wish and pull, and when it breaks the one who has the biggest part of it will have his or her wish sometime."

"But I don't know what to wish for," she protested.

"Oh, you can think of something," he said.

"No I can't," she replied. "I can't think of anything I want very much."

"But we mustn't spoil the fun that way," he exclaimed. "I'll wish for you."

"Will you, really?" she asked.

"Why, I suppose so," he replied.

"Well, then, there's no use fooling with the old wishbone," she interrupted with a glad smile. "You can have me."—Detroit Free Press.

The Symptoms.

Mabel—He is such a delightful fellow, but the trouble is we don't know whether he is married or single.

Her Cousin Tom—Is he very attentive—willing to come or go—anxious to obey your lightest wish?

Mabel—Yes, he is.

Her Cousin Tom—Courageous in telling you how lovely you are, and what an influence such a woman would have over a man's life? Ready in fact to prostrate himself at your feet?

Mabel—That just expresses it.

Her Cousin—Then he's married.—Life.

Some Difference.

Briggs—Now that you are a member of the firm I suppose you are flying high?

Griggs—On the contrary, there is difficulty in the way.

Briggs—Indeed! What is that?

Griggs—It isn't so easy to borrow money as it used to be.—New York Herald.

THE OTHER HOUSEHOLD.

WINDOW CLEANING.

Excellent Modern Ways to Secure Brilliant Shining Glass.

One popular way is to choose a clear, dry, but not sunny day (windows cleaned in bright sunlight are very apt to dry streaky); have plenty of clean cloths and of pure cold water; the window is then rapidly washed down and dried with a soft old cloth, first inside and then outside, and finally rubbed with a leather. Indeed some persons use a leather even for washing the glass. Of course a wet day is not good for this cleaning, and a frosty one is naturally more objectionable still.

Now judge of the following plan: To begin with have the windows thoroughly dusted every day when the rest of the room is done—window sills, ledges, sashes and all; the gas burned in the room gives all carbon, silica smuts, so of course in winter does the dusting, and this together with the dust all lodges in the window. Naturally this is specially the case in winter, as then the window cleaning is postponed for convenience. It is needless to mention that if the windows are thoroughly dusted regularly they will not require to be washed in cleaned nearly so frequently. When the cleaning is inevitable have ready a muslin bag full of whiting and two wash leathers. Dust the glass thickly with the whiting; then rub it off thoroughly with a damp—not wet—leather, and finally polish it well with a clean, dry one. This is a method pursued by workmen when cleaning the windows of a new house, and given a polish unknown to the glass washed in the ordinary way. Another excellent method for giving brilliancy to glass is to damp a rag with spirits of wine, rub the glass well with this, and then polish as before with a clean, dry leather.

Newspaper is also said to be an excellent "rubber" for glass on account of the printer's ink. Paper is certainly capital for cleaning decanters, carafes, etc., so very likely the case is the same with windows.

A Barrel Clothes Hamper.

A very satisfactory receptacle for soiled clothes can be made by covering a barrel with what used to be called furniture calico, but is now sold under the name of cretonne. A writer in The Country Gentleman recommends the barrels that sugar comes in for this purpose, and explains how to transform one into the neat and handy hamper shown in the cut. Carefully break off all nails that project both on the inside and outside. Line the inside of the barrel with smooth brown paper, or remnants of wall paper can be used, using flour paste to fasten the paper in. Measure four pieces of paint the depth of the barrel, allowing four inches extra for a lid and for the top. Join the pieces and run a strong thread around the lower edge to draw it on; fold over two inches at the top and gather like the bottom. Draw this over over the barrel and cover the full-sized piece to fit in place with small tacks. Place a 3-inch band of silesia around the top and bottom to hide the tacks.

Cover the lid of the barrel inside and out with the print. Make a knob in the center of this lid by putting a screw through the hole in a medium sized spool and screwing it firmly in place. Cover the spool with silesia like the bands on the hamper. Each week when the soiled clothes are removed the hamper should be given a few hours' exposure to the sun and air.

Cookery Terms.

An English culinary authority gives the following explanations of a number of terms found on elaborate menus: Relevé is no dish in particular as far as the style of preparation is concerned, but appears to be used "removes" and comes after the soup, replacing another—a doubling—so to speak, of the same course before going to the next. It is therefore not unusual to find in a large dinner a relevé de potage, relevé de rot, de gibier, etc. Entrée is a made dish served after the fish or in its stead where it is not obtainable and preceding the roast or sweets. After the latter comes the entremonts—i. e., sweets or puddings.

The term hors d'œuvre is the most difficult to particularize. When cold it comprises all side dishes which are really accessories to the meal. As such they can be and are eaten indifferently either before or after the soup; they are always placed on the table when it is being laid, and are often left there until the entrees have been served. They consist of radishes, olives, caviar, bouturgue, all manner of salt and smoked fish, sardines, anchovies and a variety of dainties. Hot hors d'œuvre are almost unlimited; they are very acceptable at large dinners and are generally served immediately after the soup and before the fish; they are often fried or baked, and are then usually such things as can be dished on a serviette, such as pattie, rissoles, croquettes, vol au vent, etc.; obviously, however, the series can be very much extended.

Stuffed Onions.

The center of the onion is simply scooped out carefully; the portion which has been removed must be chopped fine, mixed with breadcrumbs and such finely cut vegetables as happen to be at hand; also some rice slightly boiled; bind the mixture with the beaten yolk of an egg; stuff the onions, stick them in a baking dish with some butter and bake slowly, well covered, for two hours or till tender.

Preserving Fruit Juice.

It is not generally known, says California Fruit Grower, that fruit juice may be boiled to a jelly without sugar. Mash the fruit and strain; boil down very carefully in porcelain or granite ware. While it is a thin cook rapidly, but as it thickens let it simmer slower and slower, and finally finish in a stoneware jar in a cool oven.

NUPTIALS.

Squires—Howard.

Miss Grace Howard of East Ninth street was married to Mr. G. Harry Squires of Broadway in Grace Episcopal church on East Seventh street, at seven o'clock last evening. The rector, the Rev. E. M. Rodman, officiated. The pulpit and chancel of the church were richly decorated with pink roses and palms. About twelve hundred invited guests were present, filling the church to its utmost capacity.

The full vested choir entered the chancel from the choir room on the right, then came the four bridesmaids, followed by the ushers, who proceeded down the center aisle of the church and met the bridal party, the choir meanwhile singing a wedding hymn. Then, to the strains of the Lohengrin wedding march, the bride advanced leaning on the arm of her father, preceded by the ushers, the bridesmaids and the maid of honor. At the chancel steps the groom and best man awaited them.

The ceremony was after the English form, the couple remaining at the chancel steps until the "I wills" were spoken, when the choir chanted the "Gloria Patri," they advanced to the altar rail where the ceremony was concluded.

The bride wore a gown of white faille francaise, trimmed with duchesse lace, with tulle veil and orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of white roses.

The maid of honor, Miss Maude Agnes Bowers, and the bridesmaids, Miss Marion Dumont, Miss Carrie Botts, Miss Mabel Jewell of Brooklyn and Miss Gertrude Lockwood of Riverside, were mousseline de soie over pink silk. Mr. E. Louis Walz, Jr., was best man. The ushers were Frederick W. Walz, Albert Tilney, Joseph M. Sandford, Jr., John P. Munn, George Beebe and Alfred Stroell.

After the ceremony a reception was held in the Casino of the Union Country Country Club on West Seventh street, which had been turned into a veritable tropical garden by small army of decorators from New York. The stage was hidden with rare palms and profusely strewn with American beauty roses. The alcoves, walls and inclosed balconies were decorated with wild smilax, asparagus vines, and La France roses.

On the stage behind are presentation of a Virginia creeper stone wall and rustic gate, a New York orchestra rendered sweet music. About eight hundred guests were present and a more select society gathering, representing the beauty and wealth of many cities, has never been seen in this city. More than 300 of those present were from out-of-town.

Refreshments were served in a tent, just outside the Casino.

After the reception, which was held from half-past seven until ten o'clock, the grounds were the light fantastic over the spacious floor, which had been previously waxed to perfection.

The music was gay and enchanting. The handsome ladies, fitting about in their rich, bright colored gowns, accompanied by gallant gentlemen, and the surrounding profusion of most artistically arranged floral decorations, all brilliantly illuminated with electric lights, made one of the most beautiful scenes imaginable.

Mr. Lavalette Emerson Howard, the bride's father, is a member of the Howard family of New York merchants, after whom Howard street, New York, is named. He is very popular among the commuters of this city, and after him, the Howard club car is named.

The groom is a son of Mr. Henry C. Squires, President of the Adirondack Game Preserve of New York, and a large and successful dealer in sporting goods in New York city.

The newly-married couple will spend their honeymoon in a log cabin of the Parkhouse Fishing Club, which is situated in the wilds of the Catskill mountains. They will spend the Winter at the Grenoble Flats in New York and return to this city next Spring to permanently reside.

Plainfield's Crack Shots.

In the fifteen events, in each of which there were three money prizes, Smith won four first prizes, four second prizes, and four third prizes. Apear won six second prizes and five third prizes.

The shooting of the second day of the tournament began at ten o'clock this morning, at Redmond's range. The tournament will close to-morrow with live-bird matches for big money.

—Mr. I. M. French has new announcement elsewhere for his carriage repository, to direct particular attention to his Winter carriages.

100 YEARS OLD.

THE SAMPTOWN BAPTIST CHURCH CELEBRATES ITS CENTENNIAL.

Organized in 1782—An Offshoot of the Scotch Plains Church, and the Parent of the Plainfield First Baptist Church.

The centennial celebration of the Samptown Baptist church, announced in THE NEWS some days ago, ended last evening.

There were services yesterday morning, afternoon and evening, and many present from various parts of the State.

The pastor, Rev. Mr. Thom peck's sermon, and Rev. Messrs. Cubbery of New Market and Masters of Piscataway made remarks, and a former pastor, Rev. Mr. Armstrong, preached.

Ex-City Clerk Oliver B. Leonard of this city, who is a sort of local a historian, read a very interesting paper, giving the facts of fifty years of the church's history.

From this it appears that Joseph Manning, Sarah Manning, Joseph Drake, Benj. Blackford, Mary Blackford, Samuel and Jedediah Drake, Epenetus Drake, Rachel F. and Robert F. Randolph, Christmus Lopadius, Christmus Lopadius, Jr., Peter Wells, David Ayres, John and Margaret Luke, George and Anna Laing, Morris Frazee, and Eunice Shaw, members of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, finding the distance too great to attend there, in 1782, organized themselves into a new society, which was the beginning of the church at Samptown.

The church was officially recognized December 2d, 1782, and Ebenezer Randolph was ordained as Ruling Elder and Joseph Manning and Christian Lopadius as Deacons of the church. The first trustees were elected in January, 1786, as follows: Thompson Bielis, Samuel Randolph, Samuel Drake, Joseph Manning, Benjamin Blackford, Ephraim F. Randolph, Daniel Laing. No permanent pastor was secured until May 8, 1793, when Jacob F. Randolph was called. This pastoral relation lasted until 1816. The first church was a building on the old road from Quibbletown (New Market) to Totowa (South Plainfield), and was 30 feet by 18, and 18 high, sheathed inside with planed pine boards and outside with cedar shingles. In 1813, the building was enlarged by an addition 18x38 on the north side.

On October 7, 1818, Pastor Randolph resigned and asked for letters for himself and thirty-five others to form the present First Baptist church of Plainfield, which was publicly constituted the following November. The second pastor was Lebbeus Lathrop who was paid $200 a year. In 1833 a new church costing about $700 was built. This building was burned down in 1879. Pastor Lathrop resigned in 1840.

The following is a synopsis of the history of the church from 1842 to 1892 as read at the evening service by the pastor, Rev. T. Thompeck:

Elder E. M. Baker was called May 28, 1841, and commenced his duthless past on October 1st of that year, and closed in 1842 a meeting of several days was held in which 100 were added to the church, followed and thirty persons were received as candidates. On July 28, of the following eighteen months 100 were added, a total membership of one hundred and fifty. The meeting house was repaired at cost of $400.

On Oct. 25, 1845, Elder Barker resigned because "of the state of things in the church and society." Since he came 132 new members had been baptized.

On Nov. 1 Rev. Mr. Hires was called at $600 and remained but a little more than 1850. On February 22, 1852, the New Market members decided to build a house of worship at New Market and forty-seve members withdrew. On March 27, 1852, the pastor was instructed to preach twice a week at New Brooklyn. Mr. Hires resigned April 1, 1855, having baptized 200 and received 300.

In 1856 Rev Wm. Maul was called from the Cedarville, N. J., church. During his ministry new members were constantly organized. He resigned Feb. 2, 1858. He preached until 1878 and died March 16, 1880, aged 72. During his pastorate an effort was made to move the meeting house to New Brooklyn.

Rev. Mr. Hires of Bethlehem, N. J., became pastor in August, 1858. He resigned Dec. 26, 1867, having added forty-four by baptism. He died at Plainfield, Nov. 2, 1868. The next pastor, Rev. Mr. Gun, took charge May 11, 1868, and left April 26, 1869, after eleven months' service, one new member being added.

Brother S. L. Cox became pastor in May, 1869, and resigned until Dec. 27, 1871, baptizing ten new members in that time.

The next pastor was Wm. H. Burlew. He baptized twenty-seven members and resigned in April, 1875.

The year 1876 was very discouraging. On April 18, 1876, a committee was appointed, consisting of Messrs. Thaddeus Drake, D. Manning, S. Merrell, S. Dayton, S. Dayton, Mrs. Eph. Bolce, and Mrs. J. Blackford, to visit the church members and see whether the church was to be kept alive or let die. It was continued, however, and Rev. Mr. Armstrong was appointed pastor on July 23, 1876. Things then began to improve. The meeting house was moved down April 1, 1876, and the corner stone of the new meeting house was laid May 1, 1876. It was dedicated September 11, 1876, before a large congregation. Addresses were made by Dr. Armstrong, Rev. Mr. Scott of Bound Brook, Rev. Mr. Ingersoll, Rev. Dr. Yerkes of Plainfield and Dr. H. F. Smith of New Brunswick. The new meeting house was dedicated June 24, 1880. Rev. W. W. Evarts, D. D., of Jersey City preached and Pastor Armstrong offered a prayer. After a very successful pastorate of nearly thirteen years, Rev. Mr. Armstrong, on May 8, 1889, resigned. Since then the pastors have been:

Rev. Ernest Thompson of Lakewood, N. J., became pastor May 24, 1891, and still remains. He is the ninth pastor during the fifty years, and during that period 300 have been added and to other churches less fortunate.

The following resolution adopted Sept. 11, 1882, shows the generosity of the members:

Resolved, That we request our pastor to present, at the close of the day of the celebration of the various benevolent societies to whose fund of the church has been indebted for assistance, and that we request the collection be made by the trustees, and that the reader necessary for the rest of agents.

POLITICAL PICKLES.

Judge Hoffman's Letter of Acceptance Received.

The following correspondence speaks for itself:

Hon. William T. Hoffman, Englishtown, Monmouth County, N. J.:

DEAR SIR:—The Third Congressional District Republican Convention, at Masonic Hall, New Brunswick, on Saturday, September 24, 1892, nominated you for Representative in Congress. I have the honor to inform you of the fact and request your acceptance.

In giving you this notice I will be able to say that you have the nomination was not only unanimous, but enthusiastic, every county showing the highest esteem in which you are held by your fellow citizens, which assured me by your election, which assures me by your election.

Trusting that you will accept the honorable trust, and hoping to receive your decision at your early convenience, I am, with great respect, yours truly,

W. J.

Judge Hoffman was greatly pleased with the letter, and desired that it receive the widest possible publicity. His reply was received yesterday, as follows:

ENGLISHTOWN, Oct. 5, 1892.

To Messrs. T. W. Morrison, C. B. Stout, W. H. Whiting and J. B. Van Pelt, Committee on Notification.

GENTLEMEN:—Your letter, notifying me that the Republican Convention of the Third Congressional District, at its session on September 24, has tendered me the nomination for the office of member of Congress, is received.

The issues of the present campaign, I believe it to be my duty to accept the nomination, and do hereby accept it.

Every consideration presented upon the tariff question by the present convention is with which I have always favored, and have always advocated the "American system" of Protection.

The Democratic party, with its inevitable prosperity which has followed legislation, having for its object the destruction of the labor of the manufactories, the business and commercial interests of the country, have been confronted with every attempt, to make free trade a part of our governmental policy, are arguments so powerful as to be incompetent.

I am fully in accord with the declaration of the Republican party, as declared in convention at Minneapolis, and I also fully endorse the Lodge bill of the present session.

It will be my aim, during the present campaign, to call the attention of all good citizens to the duty of casting the ballot for the protection of our industries, and bringing its government back to the principles of the fathers of the republic, and in the event of my election, it will be my constant aim to discharge the duties of the office, to aid in carrying out the Republican principles which have enjoyed so many years of national prosperity.

Very truly yours,

WM. T. HOFFMAN.

New Street Railway.

[From the Elizabeth Journal of yesterday.]

This morning the articles of incorporation of the Elizabeth and Plainfield Street Railway Company were filed in the office of the Secretary of State. The road will at first be constructed as far as Westfield and ultimately will be extended to Plainfield.

The line of road, as now indicated in the articles, will be as follows: Starting on Morris avenue it runs to Orchard street to Westfield avenue, to Grove street, to West Grand street, to Jersey avenue and to city line. Thence southerly along Third avenue to Linden township into Elizabeth street in Rahway. Through Elizabeth street the road will extend to Locust street, and through Locust street to Fire avenue, and thence along First avenue through Linden and Cranford to Plainfield. The latter through what is known as South avenue. The road continues to Westfield, the line being through Scotch Plains to Rose place to Central avenue to a point opposite the railroad station in Westfield.

The capital of the company is $100,000, in stock of 1,000 shares. The incorporators are as follows: Joseph Whitaker, president of the Suburban Electric Light Company; William B. Peddle, superintendent of the Elizabeth city water works; J. H. Vail of Westfield, chief engineer of the Elizabeth Electric Company; Charles W. Whitaker, of Westfield; Dwight F. Burritt, of Cranford; Hiram Hoffman, of Cranford; Benjamin G. H. R. James Garwood, of the Garwood Land Improvement Company, and Hon. Foster M. Voorhees.

The road as above mentioned is seven miles in length, and in accordance with the law the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union county have deposited in the state treasury as a guarantee of good faith.

The applications will be immediately made to the various municipalities who have the granting of the franchise. The necessary consent, it is said, has already been promised and it is the intention of the company to have the road in full requirements have been complied with, to push the construction of the road.

If the necessary consent can not be obtained the road will be immediately operated with electricity. Should the consent be granted, it will be constructed in a first class manner, and the equipment will be modern and the very best.

The officers of the company believe that it will do much for building up the section of the country through which the line will run, and they are also very sanguine, with large interests involved, and with the aid of the Board of Freeholders, that the road will be a success and a paying enterprise. Its advantages must be apparent to the general public, and the promoters of the scheme will have the encouragement and aid their enterprise deserves.

—An entertainment will be given in St. Mary's Hall on West Fourth street this evening by the Sunbeams of the African Union Methodist church.

—The Armory of the Veteran Zouaves at Elizabeth, which was ordered by the city authorities to be sold at auction, was moved, with remains on its old site. The city seized the building and a constable sent to bolds the fort. The commander handed the keys over without any fuss. It is rumored that the Zouaves will be granted a new lease.

Edward L. Roe's Death Accidental.

Coroner J. P. Brady of Raritan, N. J., and a jury held an inquest at South Bound Brook this morning to decide how Edward L. Roe of Trenton, whose body was found in the canal at Bound Brook on Tuesday morning, died. The body was found by Peter Mulligan, keeper of the lock. There was a cut about three inches long and one-quarter of an inch deep on Mr. Roe's head, above his right ear.

Coroner Brady said yesterday that at autopsy had been held, but would not tell its results. He intimated that the fall on Mr. Roe's head was made by a propeller blade of one of the numerous tugs which pass through the canal.

Coroner Brady said that Mr. Roe, who was 62 years old, was supposed to be slightly demented. Mr. Roe disappeared from Trenton on Tuesday of last week, and his uncle put an advertisement in the papers offering a reward of $50 for information about him. The dead man had $105 when he was last seen in Trenton. When picked out of the canal he had silver watch and six cents in his pockets.

Changes in the Republican Electoral Ticket.

When the New Jersey Republicans selected their Presidential electors they placed upon the ticket the names of Donald McKay of Bergen county and Frederick Frelinghuysen of Essex. These gentlemen recently notified the State Committee that they were ineligible. Mr. McKay is president of a bank and Mr. Frelinghuysen is receiver for another financial institution. The State Committee has selected J. Hall Brewing of Tenafly, brother of Mr. McKay, and Mr. Frelinghuysen's successor has not yet been chosen.

—State Treasurer Gray holds $1,744 in interest on old war bonds, which belongs to some unknown persons who have failed to collect it. The coupons on the bonds are a relic of the days of the war due in 1865, and the bonds themselves were paid in 1868. The interest will not be paid until the coupons are presented, and as they very likely have been lost or stolen, the State will probably have to wait a long time.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Native and Foreign.

Hon. Carroll Wright continues in The Popular Science Monthly his instructive lessons drawn from the last census. This month the chapter is devoted to the vast increase in the proportion of our foreign born citizens since 1850. In 1775 one-fifth of the population of the American colonies "had for their mother tongue some other language than English." French, Swedes, Dutch and Germans, in the order named, made up the one-fifth. In 1890 of our 65,000,000 one-third instead of one-fifth were born or had parents born in other lands than ours. This sufficiently tells the story of foreign immigration.

Of actual foreign born residents of this country the per cent. in 1850 was 9.68. Of foreign born residents in 1890 the per cent. is 14.77. Twenty-two millions of the inhabitants of the United States are either foreigners or the children of foreign parents. Since the fierce barbarian Huns and Goths poured out of the heart of Asia and overspread and conquered Europe there has been no such migration of nations as this. In the Fifth century the Vandals and other wild tribes swooped down upon Rome, and at one fell stroke destroyed the civilization of ages. If our young American civilization can stand without staggering this invasion of tribes from other lands, then it is stronger than that of old Rome.

It may be argued that the tribes now invading our shores are civilized, while the destroyers of Rome were barbarians, but an inspection of the people who flock to this country in the steerage by both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts will show they are not civilized to hurt, especially in the matter of cleanliness. The emigrants from Germany, Scandinavia and Great Britain were welcome, but the class has not changed in the last generation that the situation is wholly different. Now the time seems to have come when we should insist that Russia and Italy shall make their children take a bath and learn to read and write before we undertake the task of making men and women of them.

Another interesting fact about our foreign population is that so far Germany and Ireland have furnished 31 per cent. of our total immigration, and Germany a million more than Ireland, though the figures of nationalities will undoubtedly be different next time, taking in the income from eastern Europe.

Garbage Crematories.

Chicago has made a movement in the direction of operating city crematories for the burning of all the garbage that is customarily dumped into wagons and carted off to fester and produce disease. The satisfactory disposition of garbage and sewage is the most difficult sanitary problem that modern civilization has to deal with, and the outcome of the experiment at Chicago will be watched with deep interest.

Undoubtedly cremation is the best disposition that can be made of all cast off organic matter. It perhaps should really be turned into fertilizing material, and might be if there was any way of treating it chemically, so that it would not be offensive and dangerous. But until that chemicalization method, which will deal with the matter successfully, has been found, certainly the best thing for public health is to erect crematories in which both garbage and sewage may be consumed. Then we shall know for certain that whatever possible god is lost the certain harm they do will be avoided. They are converted into harmless ash and ashes, and cannot poison either earth, air or water.

Meantime, there is a private crematory in every house, and that is the kitchen range or stove. There garbage, grocery papers and trash of all kinds can be consumed effectually, making a clean sweep, destroying their power to draw either roaches, flies or disease germs or to rot and generate offensive germs of their own. But the question of effective public garbage and sewage crematories is one that should claim the efforts of sanitary engineers generally.

Pathetic enough is the latest utterance of blind old Louis Kossuth: "I am resolved never to set foot in Hungary so long as the country recognizes the emperor of Austria as its king. It is terrible for me to think that, with all the blows of my purposeless and joyless life, I should have to bear the burden of living beyond my ninetieth birthday." Yet it is not so bad if the old patriot could see the real power his native country yields. It is true he did not succeed in making Hungary an independent republic, yet today she is the controlling power of the Austrian empire. A German is nominally emperor, yet the national spirit aroused by Louis Kossuth in 1848 has propelled the Hungarians on till the Magyar blood threatens to drive out the Teutonic element. When Kossuth began the fight, which he now proclaims with so much bitterness to have been fruitless, Austria spoke only of the empire of Austria. Now they call it Austro-Hungary. If in a different and peaceful way the Hungarians conquer Austria, will not the same end be accomplished?

It is better to be an uncrowned hero than a discrowned one.

LORD TENNYSON IS DEAD

The Poet Laureate Sinks Into His Sleep of Eternity.

HE WAS CONSCIOUS TILL THE LAST.

It Was Four Years Ago That the Illness Which Terminated Fatally Really Commenced—His Life Not Worth Living Without His Pipe—The Poet's Career.

LONDON, Oct. 6.—Lord Tennyson, the poet laureate of England, died this morning at twenty minutes to 2 o'clock.

Four years ago he had an attack of illness from which he never fully recovered. It was so bad that he was induced to give up smoking, an abstention which did not last long. He found that in such circumstances life was not worth living, and went back to his long clay pipe.

The post was conscious almost till the last moment and knew that the end was approaching. When his spirit fled he was surrounded by the inmates of his household.

Lord Tennyson's Career.

"There is a place called Somerby in Lincolnshire, where an old white rectory stands on the slope of a hill, and the winding lanes are shadowed by tall ash and elm trees, and where two brooks meet at the bottom of the glebe field. * * * There amid that quiet blowing where it listeth once in the early beginning of this century came sweeping through the garden of this old Lincolnshire rectory, and as the wind blew, a sturdy child of five years old, with shining locks, stood opening his arms upon the blast and letting himself be blown along, and as he traveled on he made his first line of poetry, and said, 'I hear a voice that's speaking in the wind,' and he tossed his arms, and the gust whirled on, sweeping into the great abyss of wind."

In such poetic fashion does Anne T. Ritchie, in an article written half a dozen years ago in Harper's, refer to the childhood of the poet laureate, Alfred Tennyson, the germ of fancy flashing from within him at this tender age. It was at this Somerby, where his father officiated as a clergyman of the Church of England, that Tennyson was born in 1809. Here in the quiet of a country place—and there was then nothing but the lumbering English coach to connect it with the outer world—the child grew up.

His First Poem.

It was quite natural that the dainty bits of English scenery should have been indelibly impressed upon Tennyson's mind, and that impulsive fancy, so characteristic of the poetic art he should have painted them in so many charming word pictures.

Tennyson's first written poem was, it is said, on the flowers in the garden, and the first money he ever received for a poem was for an elegy on his grandmother. The price for his production was ten shillings, given him by his grandfather. Thomson was then a favorite poet and the boy modeled his first verses upon "The Seasons," but Byron was the great rising luminary, and the youngster, who had not yet gone so far as to write in a style of his own, left off copying Thomson and began to copy Byron. When he died Tennyson was yet only fifteen years old, and it is not apparent that the younger bard ever admired any other poet so much as to imitate him; besides he was growing into his own individuality.

At twenty he gained a prize at Cambridge for a poem called "Timbuctoo." With some trifling exceptions he published nothing until he came of age, in 1830, when he got out a volume of "Poems, Chiefly Lyrical." They did not cause his countrymen to regard him as a great poet. Tennyson was thirty three years old and had written considerable before he came to be regarded a poet of marked ability. In 1842 he published a volume of poems, many of which had been published before, but several were added, and among these he since famous "Locksley Hall." This, taken with such pieces as "Mort d'Arthur," the "May Queen" and "The Two Voices," stamped Tennyson as a great poet, and from that time forward his fame steadily increased.

A Working Poet.

Tennyson has been what might be called a working poet. If there is one field in which inspiration would seem to be especially requisite, it is poetry; but Tennyson never relied upon "fits of frenzy." He was accustomed to go over and over his verses—changing, shaping, polishing—till he got them as near perfection as work could make them. It is said that he has gone over some of his poems fifty times before giving them to the world. One never finds in his productions the rough workmanship of Byron, and seldom is there the evidence of inspiration by which Byron or Shelley threw off in a flash some of their choicest gems. Tennyson has always declared that nothing is of value that is not carefully done. But while he accomplished much by taking pains, his poems show rather polished excellence than spontaneous fervor.

During Tennyson's early days he professed to be a democrat. This tendency indicated especially in "Lady Clara Vere de Vere" and in "Locksley Hall." But while the masses of the English people were growing democratic Tennyson was drifting toward aristocratic views. Either he was not sincere in the first place or he was unable to withstand a nobleman's coronet when it was offered him. He accepted the honor, took his seat in the house of lords, but assumed only the habiliments of a place in the peerage without exercising its privileges.

His Chief Pieces.

Lord Tennyson lived during the days when he was doing his best work in the Isle of Wight, at Farringford. There is a beautiful country around Farringford, just the country for the habitation of a poet, and it was there that he produced "Maud." Of Farringford the writer previously quoted says: "The house itself seemed like a charmed palace, with green walls without and speaking walls within. There hang Dante with his solemn nose and wreath finely gleaned from the memory, friends' faces lined the ways; books filled the shelves and a glow of crimson was every where; the great oriel drawing room was full of green light and golden leaves, of the sound of birds and the distant sea."

A dozen years ago Tennyson made his home at Aldworth, not far from London where thenceforth he spent most of his time with his wife, his children and his grandchildren. He lived a comfortable happy life, passing quietly into old age—an old age mellowed by a bottle of port each day for dinner and the aroma of tobacco from his pipe, of both of which he has been said to be remarkably fond.

Since 1879 Tennyson devoted himself principally to dramatic works. They are plays rather to be read than acted. "Queen Mary" and "The Cup" were brought out by Henry Irving, but did not achieve any distinctive success. Macready failed to make Browning's plays popular, and Irving cannot be blamed for making a similar failure with Tennyson's.

Tennyson has chiefly been known among the mass of his readers for his "Idyls of the Queen," "Elaine," "Locksley Hall," "The Princess" and several of his brief pieces. Perhaps "Break, Break, Break," a poem of only sixteen lines, is more closely connected with the name of Tennyson and in more minds than any of his poems.

THE EPISCOPAL CONVENTION.

Dr. Tatlock Secretary and Bishop Neely Chairman of the House of Bishops.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 6.—Right Rev. Henry Benjamin Whipple, bishop of Minnesota, took the place of Bishop Williams in conducting the consecration service of the Episcopal convention in session here.

The sermon was preached by the Right Rev. Richard Hooker Weller, who hitherto regretted the spirit of disunion that reared up barriers between the different denominations of Christ's church. Near the close of his sermon Bishop Weller seemed to falter, and shortly thereafter became ill and left the church.

The house of bishops organized by the re election of the Rev. Dr. William Tatlock, rector of St. John's church, Stamford, Conn., as secretary. Bishop Neely, of Maine, was elected chairman. The Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix, of Trinity church, New York, was chosen president by the deputies. The Rev. Dr. Hutchins was re-elected secretary.

WITH ROLLING RIM AND FEATHER.

The Small Felt Hat That Comes in to Replace the Pretty Sailor Hat.

The faithful little felt hat which will not forsake its wearer, no matter how rudely or fiercely old Boreas blows, is shown now in such a variety of forms and may be adapted to so many different faces that it promises to be to the fall costume what the ubiquitous sailor is to the summer dress. In the pointed Alpine shape with closely rolled brim and erect eagle's quill for decoration, it may be safely adopted for women with round faces, while the face with the pure oval contour or the classic Madonna outline may attempt the low flat crowns, severely trimmed with wings or a single quill. The latter is created especially for the woman with the broad low forehead and eyes set well apart has upstanding loops of ribbon arranged with exactness directly on the front instead of at the side of the hat.—N. Gloves for Autumn.

The fashion of one-button gloves is already passe and hardly obtained one season. The reason is obvious. How could any woman buy a second pair, with which to make her hand look short and dumpy no matter what elegance of shape it really possessed. The monosyllable glove with three buttons at the wrist is the one which lends the most beauty to the hand and the turn of the wrist. Their peculiarity is not at all on the wane. Primrose color is the fall fashion for evening gloves and the quiet shades of brown for the street.

EXIT THE DALTON GANG

The Notorious Outlaws Killed in a Desperate Battle.

FIVE CITIZENS ALSO SHOT DEAD.

The Desperadoes Tried to Rob Two Banks in a Kansas Town in Broad Daylight and the Bold Attempt Proved to Be Their Last Act of Lawlessness.

COFFEYVILLE, Kan., Oct. 6.—The Dalton gang of outlaws, the most notorious in the west, was wiped off the face of the earth here, but in the battle which resulted in their extermination three good citizens were killed and two fatally wounded. The desperadoes, who had grown bolder, thinking they were out of the reach of the officers of the county were powerless against them, had attempted to rail the banks of this city, their old home, when they met the fate they so well merited. Had they confined their efforts to train robbery they might now be living, but emulation of the James boys proved their ruin. This was their first attempt at bank robbery and their last piece of outlawry.

The six outlaws came into town together on horseback about 9.30 o'clock, and taking their horses in an alley walked rapidly across the square, and four of them entered Condon's bank and two the First National.

At Condon's bank the desperadoes were told by Cashier Ball that the lock would not be open until 10 o'clock, so Bob and Winchesters at the heads of Cashier Ball and Teller Carpenter, they said they would wait, taking meanwhile the money in the drawer.

Bob and Emmet Dalton were the two who took in the First National. Here were Cashier Ayres, his son Bert and Teller W. H. Shepard. They were forced to give up all the money in the safe, which was hastily shoved into bags. The Daltons then forced the three out of the front door and followed right after them.

The Desperadoes Killed.

The alarm had in the meantime been given, and as the outlaws appeared George Cubine, a merchant, and Express Agent Cox shot one of them, badly wounding him. The outlaws then returned the fire, killing Cubine. The robber in Condon's bank, Richard Hoodell, also hitherto regretted the spirit of disunion that reared up barriers between the different denominations of Christ's church. Near the close of his sermon Bishop Weller seemed to falter, and shortly thereafter became ill and left the church.

The house of bishops organized by the re election of the Rev. Dr. William Tatlock, rector of St. John's church, Stamford, Conn., as secretary. Bishop Neely, of Maine, was elected chairman. The Rev. SECURING FOR VICTORY.

Both Political Parties Claiming the Electoral College.

GEORGIA IS SOLIDLY DEMOCRATIC.

Governor Northen's Ticket Elected by a Majority of About Eighty Thousand and the Hopes of the People's Party in the South Buried Out of Sight.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—There will be 444 votes in the next electoral college, and 223, therefore, will be necessary to a choice. At present figure on the result. Both sides say their figures are based on careful estimates and claim that they are correct.

At Republican headquarters your correspondent was shown the following table by one of Chairman Carter's assistants, who said that, according to reports received from all over the Union, the estimate was a conservative one:

State.	Harrison.	Cleveland.	Weaver.
Alabama	11	9	..
Arkansas	..	..	..
California	9	..	..
Colorado	4	..	..
Connecticut	6	..	..
Delaware	..	3	..

Washington	4	..	..
West Virginia	6	..	..
Wisconsin	12	..	..
Wyoming	3	..	..
Total	332	219	27

The Republican managers say they are hopeful of carrying all the states placed in the Harrison column in this table, but say they can elect their candidates even if they lose New York, Indiana, New Jersey and Connecticut. Those four states have a total of sixty-seven electoral votes, which taken from the Harrison column and added to the Cleveland column would leave the former 255, or twelve more than enough to elect. The Republican managers do not concede Kansas and Nebraska to the third party, but say they will carry both states.

The Democratic Figures.

At the Democratic headquarters the claims of the Republicans are denounced as absurd. The Democratic managers estimate that the Democratic national ticket will get not less than 345 electoral votes. This is counting on fifteen votes from Indiana. If that state goes Republican the Democrats will still have 330 votes—seven more than required.

State.	Cleveland.	Harrison.	Weaver.
Alabama	11	9	..
Arkansas	8	..	..
California	..	9	..

According to this estimate the Democratic ticket can be elected without the fifteen votes of Indiana. To give the vote of that state to Harrison would only give him a total of 187, while Cleveland would still have 230, or seven more than enough to elect.

To take the thirty-six votes of New York from Cleveland column and give them to Harrison would leave the former 209 votes and give the latter 308. This would throw the election into the house of representatives.

Reid and McKinley's Tour.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Oct. 6.—Whitelaw Reid and Governor McKinley arrived from Boston and were met by the citizens' committee, who escorted them to the Massasoit House, where a reception was held. The Republican uniformed organizations escorted them to city hall, which was crowded to its capacity, and the utmost enthusiasm was shown. Ex-Governor Robinson introduced Mr. Reid, who spoke briefly, and then Governor McKinley devoted his time entirely to the discussion of currency and free trade. His speech was warmly received and he was interrupted by frequent applause.

Quay to Aid Carter.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 6.—Senator M. S. Quay left this city for New York. He will be there for a few weeks, and it is pretty well understood that the senator will aid Chairman Carter at the New York headquarters in the conduct of the Republican campaign. When the senator was asked if he expected to do any active work for the Republican national committee he said: "Well, I can't say as to that. I would rather not be interviewed."

GEORGIA SOLIDLY DEMOCRATIC.

The People's Party Buried Under a Majority of Nearly 80,000.

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 6.—Georgia has voted the Democratic ticket by about 80,000 majority. When the reports from the agricultural counties began to come in they showed a steady stream of big majorities for the Democrats. The counties known to be hotbeds of third partyism came up with surprising change of front. The People's party leaders were completely demoralized. Rockdale, the home county of Candidate Peck, gave 900 majority for Northen.

Following is the ticket elected: Governor, W. J. Northen; secretary of state, Philip Cook; comptroller general, William A. Wright; treasurer, R. D. Hardeman; attorney general, Joseph M. Terrell; commissioner of agriculture, Robert T. Nesbis.

Regard on Grosham and MacVeagh.

WILMINGTON, Del., Oct. 6.—In an interview ex-Secretary of State Thomas F. Bayard said: "The declarations of men like Judge Walter Gresham and Wayne MacVeagh furnish a clear diagnosis of the political situation. These two instances exhibit the moral revolt that is going on in the bosoms of patriotic citizens all over the country. What they say will find an echo in the breasts of thousands, and what they do will be followed by abundant imitation among their countrymen.

Stevenson in Illinois.

ELGIN, Oct. 6.—General Adlai E. Stevenson began his campaign in Illinois by addressing an audience of 3,000 people in the Elgin rink. He was given an enthusiastic reception. He made a brief reference to the action of Judge Gresham and Wayne MacVeagh, and advised his Republican listeners to follow in their footsteps.

Bontelle in Brooklyn.

BROOKLYN, Oct. 6.—The first Republican demonstration of note in the present campaign occurred at the rink on Clermont avenue. The immense auditorium was fairly well filled and great enthusiasm prevailed. The chief speaker was Congressman Charles A. Boutelle, of Maine.

The Florida Election.

JACKSONVILLE, Oct. 6.—Mitchell (Dem.) is elected governor by fully 27,000 majority. Only one county (Baker) gave a majority against him. The legislature will be solidly Democratic in both branches.

Irwin for Congress.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Oct. 6.—Dudley M. Irwin was nominated for congress by the Democratic convention for the Twenty-second district.

NEW YORK'S FINANCES.

The Empire State Is Now Practically Free from Debt.

ALBANY, Oct. 6.—Comptroller Campbell has sent the following letter to Governor Flower:

"I have the honor to report that at the close of the fiscal year (Sept. 30), for the first time in over half a century, the state of New York is practically free from debt. The only obligations of the state now outstanding are:

"First—One hundred and fifty thousand dollars of the canal debt, which matures on the 1st day of October, 1893. There are sufficient funds in the treasury to the credit of the canal fund to liquidate this indebtedness, and I hope to induce the holders of these securities to accept payment thereof before maturity and upon satisfactory terms.

"Second—Three hundred thousand dollars of the Niagara reservation bonds, which mature as follows, viz.: One hundred thousand dollars on July 1, 1894, and $100,000 on July 1, 1895, all of which are held in trust by the comptroller for the several funds of the state, and they can be canceled and paid at any time by a proper legislative authority. There are sufficient moneys in the treasury with which to pay these bonds after meeting all the appropriations made by the legislature and now in force.

"The cash balance in the treasury to the credit of the general fund at the close of the fiscal year was the sum of $1,958,312.11."

He Sang Too-ra-ra.

LONDON, Oct. 6.—At the church congress in the Dover town hall Major Edwards, recent labor candidate for parliament, rose between the opening prayer and the bishop of Manchester's address on theosophy and began singing loudly "Ta-ra-ra-boom-de-ay." Several clergymen tried to quiet him, but he clung to a pillar and sang on. The constables ejected Edwards.

The Puritan Beaten.

Failed for Two Million Marks.

HAMBURG, Oct. 6.—Rudolph Rettich, a coal importer, failed for 2,000,000 marks. The general stagnation of trade is the cause.

The Lizzie Peak Murder.

MOUNT HOLLY, N. J., Oct. 6.—The trial of Wesley Warner for the murder of Lizzie Peak was put over till December.

NEW YORK'S MASONIC HOME.

Dedicated at Utica in the Presence of Fifteen Thousand Persons.

UTICA, Oct. 6. — The dedication of the Masonic home of the state of New York occurred here. It is estimated that 15,000 strangers were in the city. The town was gay with flags and emblems. The parade included thirty bands of music and 9,000 men, representing almost every lodge in the state. Waving flags and kindly greetings met the men all along the line of march. On account of the unpleasant weather the line of march was not continued to the home, but after the procession passed the reviewing stand the column was dismissed, and the thousands reached the home grounds by various conveyances. At the dedication ceremonies Past Grand Master Scherer made an address. He said in part:

Fifty years have been added to the past since the Masonic hall and asylum had its inception. The plan evolved by its founder and approved by the brethren for the building and support of the noble asylum was of such a nature that many years must have elapsed ere the work could be completed.

Today we meet on this beautiful spot, which is henceforth to be sacred to the care of charity, to dedicate this home to that noble purpose. Again our hearts are attuned to aspirations of praise to the Giver of all good for his manifold blessings. As at the dedication of the temple at Jerusalem our ancient brethren bowed their faces to the ground and exclaimed, "He is good, his mercy endureth forever," so should we in recognition of divine mercy and goodness at this time dedicate our hearts anew to a common cause—the care and protection of the helpless.

Grand Master Ten Eyck made an address, in which he gave much of the history of the order, contrasting the dark past with the bright future.

Incidents of the day were the presentation of a baton of solid gold to Grand Marshal Ehlers by Grand Master Ten Eyck, and the presentation of a grand master's jewel, worth $1,500, to Grand Master Ten Eyck.

The Pope on Renan's Death.

ROME, Oct. 6.—When a telegram announced the news of Renan's death to the Vatican the pope asked, "How did he die?" When told that he had died impenitent, the pope answered that it was better so, as had he explained his attitude toward the church he would have shown that he was not sincere in his doubtings. "He will be judged by his sincerity," the pope is said to have added.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

LITTLE PEOPLE AT SCHOOL.

A Short Story of Two Small Boys Who Did Not Like to Do Sums.

"I don't like sums," said George.

"Neither do I," said Fred. "I can't do them."

"And I won't do them!" said George. And he threw his slate on the ground and put his foot upon it.

"But if we don't do them," said Fred, "we shan't get out into the playground." And Fred took up his slate and rubbed to make the figures that were half rubbed out clearer. At last he managed to put them in right. "See, George," said he, "I have got the figures right and now I shall try to add them up. You had better do so, too, and then we shall get out."

KEPT IN FOR SUMS.

"Well," said George, "perhaps I may as well try, too, but I am afraid I have rubbed mine all out with my foot."

But it happened that George's slate had got the side with the sum on next the floor so that it was not rubbed out a bit.

"Hurrah," said Fred, "now I am sure you can do it." So George took out his pencil as Fred had done and they both sat quite still for some little time, adding up the figures very carefully.

"Mine's done," said Fred.

"So is mine," said George.

Then they knocked at the door of the teacher's room and showed him their slates. He told them the sums were right, and both boys were soon out of doors.

"Next time," said George, "we will not lose half an hour in the playground by not trying to do our sums."

Scrapbooks.

There are few occupations more entertaining than the making of a scrapbook, especially when the book is made up not solely of pretty prints, but short stories, odd bits of information, humorous poetry, etc. It is often difficult to fill up the corners of the different pages. There may be something very pretty, or quaint, or amusing to fill up the best part of a page, but somehow it looks unfinished with nothing but big things. It is with pages of scraps as it is with single pictures. What makes a picture really interesting is not only the chief figures or scene, represented in it, but also the way in which the details are carried out. You group the main subject of a picture very quickly, but it is only by studying each little detail that you get the full amount of pleasure out of it.

Of course it is like this with nearly everything interesting and beautiful. Look at a flower in an offhand way, and you get only the fleeting impression that a rose is of a beautiful pink, a dandelion of a clear golden yellow, and a bit of lichen a rough-ish little shrub. But study them, examine them carefully, and the longer you go on the more wonderful and lovely they will appear. Now and then a principle ought to be observed in the making of a scrapbook. When you are not permitted to cut out a paragraph or verse of poetry that attracts your fancy, copy them neatly to a slip of paper and paste that in, or write on the page itself if the paper is smooth enough. If you can draw or paint you might illustrate, either in colors or by a pen and ink sketch, some of the jokes.

Then there is another kind of story that does beautifully for scrapbooks. This is the fable, or, in other words, that most delightful story in which animals think and talk and act as if they were human beings. Its home is in the far east, and from times immemorial the Arabs and Nubians and Egyptians have been great artists in inventing and telling fables.

What the Grass Does.

The grass so little has to do,
A sphere of simple green,
With only butterflies to brood
And bees to entertain,

And stir all day to pretty tunes
The breeze fetch along,
And hold the sunshine in its lap
And how to everything.

And thread the dew all night like pearls,
And make itself so fine—
A duchess were too common
For such a notice.

And even when it dies, to pass
In odors and in hay—
As lovely spices gone to sleep,
Or anniseed or java.

And then to dwell in sovereign barns,
And dream the days away—
The grass so little has to do
I wish I were the hay.

—Emily Dickinson.

Wood Doves.

Where the shades are falling.
And the branches meet,
I can hear them calling,
Wood doves, mild and sweet.

A HAPPY PAIR.

What to them is weather?
What know they of care?
Nestling close together,
Oh, so fondly, there!

THE MILLER'S DAUGHTER.

The lady with suspenders,
She is to me so fair, so fair,
That I would be the sailor hat
She wears upon her hair,
And her sky eyes so fabulously
I'd grant that across the sun should see.

And I would be the surcingle
About her dainty, dainty waist,
And with my buckle bite the band
That holds her petticoat,
Around her lithesome, and I would
Make my vocation understood.

And I would be her shirt waist,
And all day long be full and rise
Upon her balmy bosom, with
Her laughter and her sighs,
And my soft pulse should be so light
It scarce should go unseen at night.

And, chiefest, the suspenders
I urgently desire to be,
Which then her sloping shoulders
Depend so gallantly.
And I would hug each shoulder blade
Of this most most adorable maid.

—New York Sun.

An Idyl of Peace.

The stentorian voice and loud clash of arms at midnight awakened everybody on the third floor of the big hotel, and guests, bellboys and chambermaids ran shrieking into the corridors.

"What's up! Where are the soldiers?"

"Are the troops ordered out?"

"What's the row, anyway?"

"Forward now! Present arms! Change bayonets! Fire!"

Heads ducked, and a foreign voice called out over a transom: "Vat on 't? Zee cyclone mos come? Ha?"

"Boom ta-ra-ra boom de-ay!" Company F! Halt! Left! right! Hep! hep! About-face! Order arms! Stack arms!"

No Charge for Medical Advice.

Dr. Jones was wandering down the road, soliloquizing on the position of affairs, when his old friend Smith hailed him from a dogcart.

"How do?" said Dr. Jones. "Taking a drive for your health?"

"Not precisely," was the answer; "I am going to see a man who wants to buy a horse. What will you give me for my nag, Jones?"

Dr. Jones viewed the animal, and then answered with a professional air, "A prescription."

Mr. Smith drove on.—Boston Globe.

Kind to His Teacher.

Mother—Tommy, I hear you got a thrashing at school today.

Tommy—Yes, ma; the teacher whipped me, but he is getting old and weak, so that it didn't hurt much.

"Did you cry?"

"No, ma. I bawled so you could have heard it on the next block."

"Why did you do that?"

"I wanted to make the old man feel happy."—Texas Siftings.

Saved.

Briggs—That was a marvelous escape of Miss Neatfoot from the top floor of a burning hotel at Barker's last week, wasn't it?

Griggs—Why, how did she get out?

Briggs—She tied all her neckties together and reached the ground without any trouble.—Clothier and Furnisher.

Seeking an Opportunity.

He—I have something to say to you, but there are so many people in the room I am afraid I won't have a chance.

She—Wait a moment, and I will ask one of the young ladies to play on the piano.—Harper's Bazar.

"Miss De Trop had on the longest gloves last night that I ever saw. She buttoned them from her wrist to her elbow."

"That's nothing. My girl buttons hers all the way from home to the theater."—Chicago News-Record.

HOW TO MAKE TEA.

The Proper Way to Prepare "the Cup That Cheers."

The delicate leaf of tea should never touch metal. It should be kept in paper, wood, glass or porcelain. To make it good, a small quantity in a porcelain cup, fill the latter with boiling water, cover it with a porcelain saucer and let it stand three minutes.

Then, if you desire to be an epicure, drink only the upper layer of the golden liquid, throw the rest away, rinse the cup and begin drawing de novo. Never use sugar any more than you would sweeten Chamberlin or pour molasses into Mumm's extra dry. Do not use milk. It ruins the flavor of the tea and the combination injures the stomach.

Above all things do not boil tea. The best nerves of the perfume, spoils the flavor and extracts the tannin, the astringent principle. If the boiling be done in a tin or iron pot the tannin attacks the metal and makes the liquid black.

Never let the tea stand except in a tightly closed porcelain pot. Standing changes it from a delicious, wholesome beverage into an ill-tasting and bilious liquor. Either makes it in small quantities and make it often. In summer sip the tea boiling hot, with a slice of previously peeled lemon or, nicer still, of orange without the rind floating in the cup.

Beware of green tea! It is the unripe leaf and bears the same relation to the best article that the green dose to the ripe peach. The green tea of commerce derives its color from being dyed, or rather killed, on dirty copper pans, from being mixed with verdet and shrubs from being stained with indigo and chrome yellow, from being colored with verdigris, grass juice or chlorophyl.

A Useful Chair Back.

The accompanying cut shows a neat chair back, one designed for the use of cane or rattan chair, and one that will come from the laundry looking as good as new. It is simple, inexpensive and yet really artistic.

One yard of Turkish toweling, two and one-half yards of ribbon and one dozen skeins of linen rope floss are required to make it. The ribbon and floss must be the same color; either blue or red can be selected, as best suits the room in which the chair stands. Measure the width of the chair, and make the hems on the sides of the toweling of such a depth that it will be the exact width of the plain part of the chair; put a narrow hem across each end. Measure the ends and calculate the number of tassels needed to go across each, placing them half an inch apart. Cut the floss into suitable lengths, allowing five strands to a tassel. Knot these strands into the toweling, using a strong crochet needle to draw them through, just above the narrow hem.

Place on the chair and arrange the ribbon as seen in the sketch, with a full bow. At the back there is only a knot. With a strong needle and floss thread over into place through and through the back of the chair.

THINGS USEFUL TO KNOW.

Tannin mixed with mutton tallow is good for chapped hands.

Put a teaspoonful of salt into a kerosene lamp once in a while.

A good-sized sponge is nice for cleaning paint and washing windows.

A large, soft sponge, either dry or slightly dampened, makes a good duster.

Nitre is excellent for a cold, especially a feverish one. Use ten drops to a teaspoonful, according to age, once in four hours.

About Airing Beds.

In airing beds the most thorough, careful housekeeper often errs through her very thoroughness. She will shake the sheets, blankets, etc., and hang them out of the window and over chairs, having every fold exposed as much as possible to the direct rays of the sun and in the strongest breeze and this is just what should be done. Then the pillows will be taken up and shaken and thumped until they are soft and fluffy and placed in the very sunniest spot, and this is all wrong. The sun will draw the oil from the feathers, and the pillows will have a rancid, disagreeable odor. Expose them to the air daily, be as thorough as you please in this, and place the pillow slips in the sun if you wish, but do not make the mistake of giving pillows, bolsters, cushions or anything containing feathers a long sun bath, or you will do them more harm than good.

Ironing Flannels.

Flannels should be ironed as little as possible, and never with a very hot iron, as it shrinks the goods and spoils the finish. It is much better, for most flannels, to simply press the seams, facings, and other cotton or similar parts, folding the woolen part smoothly, and putting it away for use. White clothes are to be ironed on the right side, but calicoes, ginghams, embroideries, stockings and the like on the wrong side of the work, or most with a light passage of the iron over the right side. A very excellent effect is obtained on fine embroideries by ironing upon the wrong side with the fabric laid carefully between two thicknesses of flannel.—Good Housekeeping.

His True Title.

A man who lived near the Barrys was devoted to the harp and "practiced" with commendable assiduity. But some people do not enjoy music.

The other night Miss Barry said:

"Uncle Charles, the Bible says 'harpers,' but I notice that the newspaper critics usually write 'harpist.' I wonder which form is the more correct. If you were speaking of Mr. Crouch in the next house, which should you call him, a harper or a harpist?"

"Neither," said Uncle Charles, with the utmost promptness; "if I called him anything I should call him a confounded nuisance."—Youth's Companion.

What She Was.

One evening during a diplomatic reception at the White House, among the guests was a woman whose perfect neck and arms were the admiration of every one. Mme. de Struve's escort, in justifiable pride at the loveliness of his own countrywoman, commented as she passed, "There goes a perfect type of American beauty." Without hesitating the minister's wife, looking down at her own dark head, responded, "And I represent a perfect type of Russia leather."—Argonaut.

A REPUBLICAN MEETING.

THE CAMPAIGNERS ARE PUSHING THINGS.

At the Rink a Large Audience Last Night Hear Hon. Messrs. Finnerty and Buchanan Tell of the Benefits of Protection.

The Wheelmen's Division of the Republican Association had their first parade last evening in uniform, just before the Republican meeting in the Rink, which was called to order about eight o'clock by ex-Judge John Ulrich. Ex-Councilman E. R. Ackerman was made chairman, and ex-City Clerk Joseph B. Coward, secretary.

There was a good attendance. After the list of honorary officers was read and approved, and the band played, "Rally Round the Flag," ex-Congressman Finnerty of Illinois was introduced as the first speaker.

He thought that it was good to have the parties of nearly equal strength. It made a harder fight, and excited more interest.

He observed, however, that so far this was an exceedingly quiet campaign.

When Lincoln took control, he found a betrayed army, a decrepit navy, and a divided country, empoverished by free trade.

He had to rely on the young Republican party and its principles of Protection to pilot the country to success.

Thomas Jefferson and Andrew Jackson were too good Americans to support the kind of Democracy that now supports Cleveland. "I am not here, however," said the speaker, "to abuse the Democrats individually or collectively, but am here to show the fallacy of Democratic principles, or want of principles."

He reviewed the career of the Democratic party from its beginning, showing that it was the cause of all the distress, and all the bloodshed from riot, and even civil war, that this country has ever known. It was the party of treason, of slavery, of repudiation, and has always been constantly at war with the best interests of the country.

In 1884, after being a quarter of a century out of power, it was placed in temporary control, but could not commend itself to the confidence of the people enough to be continued.

It favors Great Brittain rather than the United States in its policy on the leading question now before the country.

The laboring classes are particularly interested in this matter, since it affects the currency and banter, for they receive from 100 to 150 per cent. more wages here under our Republican system of Protection than they could receive under England's Free Trade policy.

The British laborer is glad to get 50 cents per day and board himself, and the Irish laborer, 25 cents per day and board himself.

Ask any Irishman, any English, Scotch or Welshman, if he is willing to go back to old country customs and wages. Not one but would answer with a free and emphatic "No!"

He can have three meals a day of meat and bread and coffee. No European laborer ever had such good food, and the Democratic party would commit the crime of trying to break down the laws which give such opportunities to our workingmen—laws which have been made for them by the Republican party.

Cleveland, while Governor of New York, vetoed every bill intended to benefit the workingmen, among them the bill to prevent children of tender age working in factories, and the mechanics' lien bill, and advocated the employment of convicts, favored pitting convict against free labor, and authorized a bill to manufacture goods which would come in competition with, and vetoed every bill for the good of, workingmen. Yet he is the man now standing for workingmen's votes. Grover Cleveland has shown himself to be not only the enemy of the workingman, but he has also shown himself to be the enemy of the veterans, as shown in his vetoes of pensions.

The speaker reviewed the McKinley bill, and showed how greatly its provisions had blessed the country and brought us general prosperity.

Respecting the South he said that if the war wasn't settled at Appomattox, it was the fault of the Democratic party, which was forever sowing the seeds of sectional hate.

The Southern States never voted the Republican ticket, for they feel that it was the soul and the sword of the Republican party which led to the victory that preserved the Union. Yet the South has received nothing but kindness from us. In 1884 I was in the Republican Congress which voted one million dollars to relieve the misery in Louisiana from the overflow of the Mississippi. I voted for it, and feel that the course of the South against our party is poor return for our efforts generally to help them along. But the Northern dough faces in the Democratic party are to blame for it. They fear the lash of the Southern whip, and do not dare to vote except as the South commands. They never have patriotic purposes, but are constant marplots against the country's welfare.

He gave a number of anecdotes of instances to prove this statement.

As an Irishman he could not understand how any Irishman who knew the history of Ireland, and the principles of the Republican party could fail to vote the Republican ticket first, last and always.

The audience seemed to thoroughly appreciate the points made, judging by their frequent applause.

Mr. Finnerty was followed by Congressman Buchanan, who handled the tariff in a masterly manner, and explained the McKinley bill which he helped to frame.

After his speech the meeting ended.

A RAT IN THE STOVE.

It Caused Great Excitement When it Came Out.

At the first touch of cold weather a few days ago a family residing on Somerset street, North Plainfield, had their stove brought out and thoroughly blocked.

Later it was put in position and a fire started. As the stove became heated a succession of squeals came from the interior. They were echoed in a more pronounced manner by the girls of the family, who were in the room.

The squeals became louder and louder and suddenly a large rat sprang through the isinglass of the stove door. Then there was excitement.

Two rats in the room refused to touch the rodent.

The girls, seeing this, pluckily got down from their suddenly assumed elevated positions and in desperation seized anything handy and went for the rat, which was running wildly about, squealing.

Finally it went up the train of one of the young lady's dress, was shaken out after awhile, and, by a fortunate rap on the head, was killed.

It is a matter of surprise how the rat remained in the stove while it was being cleaned and the fire started.

The West End's Janitor Causes a Sensation.

Two weeks ago Benjamin Mitchell, janitor of the West End Athletic Association club house, at Somerville, went to New York with $100 he had saved from his wages and his pension. A week ago he came back, having spent his $100 and what other money he could get by pawning his extra clothing. Out of pity for his forlorn and shattered state, the Sheriff let him sleep in a little room in the Court House.

According to his story he awoke in the night and heard several men who have threatened his life several times before, conspiring outside the window. He arose, dressed himself, made his bed, and fled to the woods. This was Monday morning early. On Tuesday he got lodging at the poorhouse, but left there at midnight to return to the house of Mr. Ely, from whom he got his ticket for the poorhouse. He broke into Mr. Ely's house, secured a shotgun and made ready to defend himself against the conspirators whose buzzing voices he was always hearing.

Mr. Ely, Mr. Van Cleef of the poor farm, and a constable, rushed upon him. He aimed the gun, but the cartridges stopped, and he was disarmed without doing any mischief. He was brought back to Somerville and locked up. As his insanity is the result of drink, he will in all probability come around all right as soon as the New York whiskey is well out of him. He is already beginning to doubt the existence of the dangerous conspirators. Last December, after a long debauch, he heard them in a roundhouse in this city, and was with difficulty dissuaded from cutting his throat.

Two Coal Trains Wrecked.

While the engine attached to a long train of coal cars on the C. R. R. of N. J., was taking water from the tanks near Skillman, a small station between Bound Brook and Hopewell, at five o'clock this morning, it was run into by an East bound coal train which came suddenly around a sharp curve. The engineer says he put on his brakes as soon as he saw the signals, but that they refused to work. When he and his fireman saw a collision was inevitable, they jumped and escaped serious injury. Eight box cars were wrecked blocking the main tracks until noon. Five of the cars were tossed down a steep embankment into a brook, and the engine turned a somersault and landed across the tracks bottom side up. The Washington express trains were very late and had to transfer passengers and baggage to trains waiting at the other side of the debris. One track was cleared at noon.

That Girl from Mexico.

The debut of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew as joint stars at the Standard Theatre, on Monday night, was made with marked success. The vehicle used to bring this young couple before the public was a revised version of Gordon's "That Girl from Mexico." It serves admirably to show their talent.

The piece is a kind of parody on "The Taming of the Shrew." A young man is left money on condition that he marries a certain girl. The girl lives in Mexico, and is alone with a man who is a murderer. Forging the name of the absent girl from Mexico he led to suppose that the young man from New York is the person. To this the marriage takes place. As Jack Randolph, Sidney Drew was very amusing. He plays with great tact and distinction, and has a keen eye for the points. It is unquestionably the best work he has done.

It is to Mrs. Drew, however, that we must attribute the great success of the evening. Miss Drew is revealed in the character which Disbrowe Thompson has played as exceedingly exacting part with infinite tact and cleverness. Gentle and refined, assumed shrewishness, she was charming always.

Mr. and Mrs. Drew are distinct additions to the list of American stars. They should have a permanent place in New York.—N. Y. Mirror.

New Residences to be Erected.

Mr. E. C. Mulford is having built a handsome new residence on East Fifth street. He is also erecting a new house on Fourth street.

Mr. McGinnis is to build on Somerset street, near Grandview avenue. Ground was broken this morning.

Bicycle Notes.

At Evansville, Indiana, yesterday, Tomaimas Lumsden of Chicago broke the five-mile world's bicycle record by covering the distance in 12:36 3-5.

CLEVE. AND STEVE.

BANNER RAISED BY NORTH PLAINFIELD DEMOCRATS LAST NIGHT.

A Large Crowd, and Fireworks, and Mayor Saunders and Other Great Orators Talk.

The North Plainfield Democratic Association, in front of their headquarters on Somerset street, swung their banner last evening, with the portraits of "Cleve" and "Steve." They also treated the large crowd of men, women and children to a pyrotechnic display, which pleased their eyes, and to speeches by Mayor Saunders, Hon. J. J. Bergen, ex-Speaker of the House of Assembly, Mr. Luersen, a funny mountaineer, and Mr. D. I. Cheney, -the irrepressible, which of course tickled their ears.

The meeting was enthusiastic, in fact, vociferous.

Mr. Luersen was made chairman, and a long list of vice-presidents was read.

When the banner was unfurled with the pictures of Cleve. and Steve. on it, the band played "Hail Columbia." The banner looked like a very small affair compared to the Republican banner of the U. S. A. from such a short distance down the street, probably one hundred feet away. The expressions on the faces of both Cleveland and Stevenson seemed that of anxiety, as if they didn't feel well up there compelled to look for the balance of the campaign upon the serene and kindly faces of Harrison and Reid, the next President and Vice-President of the United States.

But the North Plainfield Democrats appeared happy, as the rockets shot skyward and Mayor Saunders tried to make a speech amid the roar and uproar. It was supposed that he was telling, in his modest way, of the virtues of the virtuous Grover, who, according to his friend, if elected once more don't intend to do anything as naughty as he did before.

Mr. Saunders, since he was recently cornered by Mr. Reese, a News' correspondent from Westfield, has announced that he is not a Free Trader any more, and is in a singular coincidence that that other great citizen of the United States, Brother Cleveland, wants people to believe that he don't believe in Free Trade either, since he was also cornered once on that issue, and is between the devil and the deep sea, with the Democratic Free Trade platform on one side and the unanswerable logic of a people prosperous as the result of Republican Protection and Reciprocity on the other.

But, like the heathen carpenter of old, who fashioned a god out of one side of the wood and warmed himself with the other, the doughty Mayor is supposed to have told of the principles of Democracy so that it would work either way, to suit such of his hearers as didn't know any better, and those who knew better of nothing of the history of the country.

The crowd knew by the movements of his lips that he was saying something in the open air, and taking it for granted that it was all right, applauded first, last and all the time. Of course, from such an unfailing source of Simon Pure Democracy it must have been all right to those who didn't know whether it was or not.

He was followed by ex-Speaker Bergen, who undertook to defend the last Democratic Legislature, of which he was a member, for passing an act legalizing the coal combine, and helping it to advance the price of coal, at present as a result one-fifth more than the former prices. He decided that the bill was a Democratic measure designed to injure the masses, and he said this notwithstanding the record to the contrary, and as if his saying so would alter the fact.

He was followed by Mr. D. J. Carney, who spoke only for a few moments as a sort of a wind-up.

After the meeting "the great tide of democracy" surged into the little club room and overwhelmed those within, on general principles, while somebody extinguished the candles in the numerous Chinese lanterns outside. Incidentally it might be mentioned that the light of these candles was greatly dimmed by the electric lights on the Republican banner. Just as Democratic principles are dimmed by the glory of the principles of the Republican party.

But the crowd was happy, or seemed so, and who would say them nay, except that Tom News would like to see them as much happier, as we think they would be, if they would reflect a little, and allow reason, rather than blindness to guide them. Reason would lead them to vote the Republican ticket, and not to follow blindly in the footsteps of the Democratic party right or wrong, but mainly wrong, and this year especially so.

With such a handsome banner as the U. S. Grant Club has raised as the Republican standard to swing in the sunlight by day, and the electric light by night, they need not fear, and the rioters for they will, but, if not, we must regretfully let them go unto the—left.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Walking Season.

The seaside time is over and the walking season is on. It is the season when the town worker feels as if he ought to have two vacations, one in the hot weather and the other in October, to enjoy a glorious tramp through the open country. The leaves begin to turn brown, red and gold; the food products of garden, farm, orchard and dairy are at their best and most abundant. It is neither too hot nor too cold, but just right. How the individual who can get off for a fortnight or a month's tramp is to be envied! A week is much, and even a day makes a jolly picnic in one's life. See if you can. The autumn walking party is even more delightful than the woods or lawn party in hot weather.

Bring together a few people who are as one in harmony and taste. A "seed" affair of men and women both is pleasant, but men alone or women alone will enjoy the pedestrian trip. Even one person can have a thoroughly "good time" all by himself, but a chum is more enjoyable. If the trip is only for one day, select some object of natural or historic interest two to fifteen miles away. Start early, while the crisp is in the air, and make the spot by noon. Have dinner and return, afoot for the strong ones; by rail or carriage for the feebler. If you can have the luxury of two days or more, take no luggage that you cannot carry in your hand, only the smallest satchel, and do not load it heavily. Man, or even woman, wants but little here below when he has the air and sun. If you are unused to walking, practice some for several days or a week before you start. Take a map of the country folded into a small book form if you are unfamiliar with your route. Then you will know that when a rural inhabitant tells you a place is three miles away he really means five and a half, and says three to keep you from feeling discouraged.

Take no thought for the morrow. Country hotels and the spare bedroom of a nice farmhouse will shelter you for the night. Your meals, the fat of the land, will not cost you much. You will get your money's worth ten times over for the health you will gain, the fun you will have. Some of your experiences will give you a laugh ten years after. Finally, before you start out, in the words of an authority on the subject, "Cut your corns and put on your old clothes."

Insuring Investments.

It is not uncommon for brokers dealing in stocks and bonds on commission to advertise that they have had certain properties examined by experts and can guarantee them. England a step ahead of this has taken. There has arisen a new kind of insurance company, the one that guarantees the payment of stocks, bonds, etc., both principal and interest.

In some cases the fee for this insurance is a certain sum in cash; in others it is a small per cent. yearly. There are many investment insurance companies in England already. Some of the companies require a cash payment of 6 per cent. on the value of the money invested. In return the investor is assured that he will get his interest regularly. Other companies charge one-half of 1 per cent. a year.

The idea is a good one. As wealth accumulates in this country more and more persons will wish to live on their investments. Industrial stocks are a permanent thing and all must useful to community of any. They are likewise the most risky. But if companies could be organized to insure investors in these and other securities the regular payment of their dividends and the principal at maturity it would be a prosperous business all around.

Doubtless some persons are surprised to find that America's greatest bandmaster, Patrick S. Gilmore, was an Irishman. It is nothing strange, however, for the Irish are capable of anything outside of their own country. But in his native Ireland Gilmore was a music teacher at the age of fifteen. At the time of his death he did not begin to look his sixty-two years of age. As a military bandmaster, as the organizer of great musical "jubilees," at which 20,000 voices sang in chorus and fifty brass bands played all at once, Gilmore had not his equal in his lifetime. Now, see, after he is dead, it will do no harm to let the public know he wrote the song, "When Johnny Comes Marching Home." He was so loved among people who knew him in private life that even his hired girl wept like a child when she heard of his death. No higher tribute can be paid to a man.

When railroads are prosperous the country is prosperous. When the country is prosperous, railroads are so, too. If they manage right. The federal investigators assure us that this year the Union Pacific railway has nothing to complain of. If it cannot pay its debt to the United States, perhaps the government will buy the whole road and itself operate it, thus realizing the dream of the Nationalist party.

If you are a bank president, never borrow from the funds of the bank to engage in speculations on your own account, even though the loan is secured by mortgages. Then you will not get into trouble.

WEALTHY AND A SUICIDE

Remorse Caused William M. Runk to Take His Own Life.

HE HAD USED HIS PARTNER'S MONEY

It Was Lost in Speculation, and Rather Than Expose His Weakness to His Friends the Philadelphia Dry Goods Merchant Put a Bullet in His Temple.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 7.—William M. Runk, aged forty-six, a member of the large dry goods firm of Darlington, Runk & Co., a director of the Penn Mutual Life Insurance company and a wealthy and influential citizen of this city, committed suicide at his country home at St. Davids, near here, by shooting himself through the temple.

A week ago Mr. Darlington returned from Europe. During his absence Mr. Runk had been dealing in stocks. It appears that Mr. Runk, whose own personal estate is represented to be a very handsome one, did not make these ventures with his own funds, but aided by the absence of Mr. Darlington he employed the money of Darlington, Runk & Co., an aggregate of about 800,000.

Upon Mr. Darlington's return he made natural inquiries as to the course of business while he was abroad, and was informed by Mr. Runk that certain bills which had accumulated in the interval, aggregating the total stated above, had been paid.

When the discovery was made that such was not the case Mr. Runk went directly to his handsome home. His wife was exceedingly solicitous over his great depression and tried to cheer him up. Later he received two letters and left them upon his library table.

When the horrible discovery was made that he had killed himself word was sent to Mr. Darlington, who resides at Haverford, and to Samuel R. Brown, and they arrived quickly. The two letters were addressed respectively to Mrs. Runk and to Mr. Darlington and acquainted them with the cause for the act. It was at once evident that the resort to suicide was not because of an unbearable embarrassment, because his own estate would have made good the loss, and the firm itself is reasonably loaned to be seriously affected by it.

Remorse Caused the Deed.

It seems entirely probable that the remorse for the deed is to be found in the remorse that he had deceived his partners and lacked the courage to make a clean breast of his transactions. One word of explanation would at once have brought his partners, and more than all his friend, to aid; but he was not strong enough for the word.

The deceased was born in Kingwood, N. J., the late Stacey B. Barcroft having been his uncle. He became a partner in the wholesale dry goods store of Barcroft & Co., and upon Mr. Barcroft's retirement the latter made him a gift of $500,000.

Mr. Runk was especially active in church work. He devoted much of his time to Sunday school and city missionary work at the Protestant Episcopal church and was connected with most of the charitable institutions of this diocese.

He was a member of the Church of the Holy Apostles, Twenty-first and Christian streets, and assistant superintendent of the Sunday school. He was also a vestryman at St. Martin's church in Radnor, besides being one of the board of managers of the city mission, with which he has been connected since its organization, serving as treasurer since 1888.

He was prominent in the Sunday School Association of the Diocese of Pennsylvania, being one of the executive committee and a member of the board of managers of the American Church Sunday School institute, and of the joint diocesan committee on Sunday schools for the Episcopal church, which in annual session in New York compiles the lessons for the use of the church throughout the United States.

As Active Church Worker.

As a member of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew he exhibited the greatest activity. He was also a member of the sentinels, congregation and of the last diocesan convention, and on Tuesday next was to have gone to Baltimore to represent with George C. Thomas, his colaborer in the work, at the Church of the Holy Apostles, the Sunday schools of this diocese at the American Church Sunday School triennial institute.

The Germantown branch of the Home for Consumptives attached to the city mission of the Protestant Episcopal church appealed especially to him, and he was most active in all appertaining to it. A few hours before he shot himself R. H. Dunlap, superintendent of the city mission, had an interview with him about the work and made an engagement to accompany him to Chestnut Hill next week.

Mr. Runk was also connected with the Northern Home for Friendless Children and the Howard hospital, and was associated with Mr. Dunning in the management of the Hahnemann Homeopathic hospital.

Mr. Runk was first married to Miss Hill, of this city, and had four children by her, two boys. The husband and two of the children died of diphtheria several years ago. Mr. Runk afterward married his cousin, Miss Runk.

OUR FLAG INSULTED.

Consul Hanna, at La Guayra, Fired on by a Venezuelan Warship.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—A special to The World from La Guayra, via Curacoa, says: Excitement runs high at La Guayra. United States Consul Phillip C. Hanna has been fired at from the guns of a Venezuelan warship while on a visit to Macuto in a private launch. Fortunately the United States consular representative was not struck.

Macuto has been the scene of several sanguinary engagements, which have ended in the defeat of the government forces by the Crosplatans.

The surgeons of our navy rendered good service during the fights in giving their attention to the wounded. Considerable courage was exhibited by them in the exercise of their charitable mission, as they were frequently in a most dangerous position.

Public feeling now runs strongly against the United States.

Newspaper Men Injured.

Bosworth, of the Boston Herald, was also stunned and injured internally. Daniel J. Kenniff, of The Christian Register, and J. W. Hennessey, of the Associated Press, sustained sprained ankles.

FASHIONS

MODES NOW TALKED ABOUT.

A New Cloth Costume for Afternoon—An Effective Russian Blouse.

The revival of First Empire styles is assured, and gowns with short waisted and decollete bodices, very becoming, especially for a young lady's evening toilet, are in vogue. From all the authorities comes the fiat that round sweeping skirts are no longer to be tolerated, and walking skirts will be worn sufficiently long to clear the ground, but the change is not yet discernible.

FRENCH AFTERNOON COSTUME.

Sleeves will be even larger than ever and comprise the empire and the mutton leg shapes. The latter consists of a full round puff extending to the elbow, the sleeve below being close fitting. Mixed silk and wool fabrics are largely seen, and poplins are to the fore again.

On costumes of plain cloth or silk will appear sleeves and corselet of plush or velvet.

Violets, blues and shades of green are in favor.

Our first cut shows a French afternoon costume of cloth of canada blue, embraced with a belt in old blue velvet folded flat and crossed over the point of the bodice, which is draped without any gores; large loops are placed sprigntly and two long streamers droop on the fourreau skirt, bordered with a treble flounce. Cuffs and waistcoat front in fine guipure, with coquilles in cream chiffon.

It appears that the Russian blouse is to continue to find favor during the autumn and winter, and has flourished for some months it has not appealed to the taste of the multitude, and so has contrived to keep itself, to a certain degree, select. Its special advantages lie in the fact of its being extremely comfortable to wear, requiring no bones or only a very limited number, and its equal COSTUME WITH RUSSIAN BLOUSE.

appropriateness for indoor or outdoor wear. The Russian blouse, though so simple in appearance, requires to be well cut. It is made up in all sorts of materials.

A very happy effect in a gown with Russian blouse was recently secured in a pale Arab blood cloth, outlined with oriental tetanella edged with a narrow roll of beaver. A very reasonable example is the one illustrated here. This is of a ballarage century brocade, conventionally figured with faint lines of a darker shade. It fastens of course over upon one side, and there are three braided ornaments to clasp it. Round the waist is a fold of dark blue velvet, tied into a short assortive bo-knot here, and the tight collar band, as well as two cuffs on the characteristic blouse sleeves, are made of the velvet.

HIS DEATH WAS A POEM.

Tennyson's Demise Evolved a Scene of Exceeding Beauty.

A FIT CLIMAX TO THE POET'S LIFE.

With the Laureate Bathed in Moonlight and Holding "Cymbeline" in His Hand, the Peaceful Dissolution Occurred—The Present Aspect of the Death Chamber.

LONDON, Oct. 7.—Tennyson's dying hours and the scene around the death bed at the supreme moment are well worthy of recital.

Lady Tennyson, his son Hallam and his wife, Sir Andrew Clark, Dr. Dabbs, the nurses and other servants who had been with him for twenty-five years were at his bedside when death came. He was tranquil, conscious and painless to the end.

In the morning Tennyson was turned, at his request, to face the light. After looking out the window for several minutes he spoke of the brilliancy of the sunshine and the clearness of the air. Early in the afternoon he slept lightly. He awoke in full consciousness and asked for his favorite copy of Shakespeare, turned the leaves until he found "Cymbeline," and gazed at one page for several minutes, moving his lips as if reading to himself.

The watchers were in silence for him to speak, but he finally laid down the volume without having uttered a word, and with his finger still between the leaves he fell asleep. The book was not removed.

Died Holding "Cymbeline."

When Tennyson awoke late in the evening he could speak only in a weak whisper. He thanked Dr. Dabbs and Sir Andrew Clark for their faithful attendance, and commended each of the servants who had helped care for him during his illness. He uttered a word or two of gratitude to the nurses.

As the evening advanced the moon rose in unusual splendor and flooded the room with light. Tennyson watched it through the curtainless window with his hand still resting between the leaves of "Cymbeline." As light faded he was sinking fast. Hallam Tennyson gave him a few spoonfuls of brandy and milk. He swallowed with difficulty and was unable to take further nourishment. At midnight he whispered very feebly his last words to his wife. His finger still marked the passages of "Cymbeline" which he had last read, and thus he died.

"In all my experience," said Sir Andrew Clark, "I never witnessed anything more glorious. The moon was in splendid state in the chamber. All was darkness except for the silver light of the full moon, which fell upon the bed and played upon the features of the dying poet like the halo in a Rembrandt picture."

Looks Hardly Sixty Years.

"The end was beautiful, calm and painless," said Hallam Tennyson. "He passed away as if in sleep, and the watchers could hardly distinguish the final moment."

Tennyson lies on the bed on which he died. He looks hardly sixty years old. The lines and wrinkles have vanished from his face, and his beard, usually unkempt, has been trimmed and brushed. His hands are folded on his breast, wreaths of laurel are at his head and feet and Virginia creepers and autumn leaves are scattered round him. The room is lighted dimly with candles.

Although the surroundings of the death-bed are of the most impressive, plans have been taken, in deference to the dead poet's feelings often expressed to his family, to avoid everything suggestive of funeral forms. The Dean of Westminster abbey for Tennyson's body is just to the left of Robert Browning's tomb. No memorial service will be held in Haslemere or in Surrey. It is understood that the bishop of Winchester will refer in his sermon at the parish church to the poet's death.

Several newspapers were in mourning for Tennyson. All published long leaders, which agree that it is too soon to give a proper estimate of Tennyson's position among the British poets.

The English Press on the Poet.

St. James's Gazette says: "The poet of our age is gone, with his singing robes about him, leaving a name which will not die. It may be that others soared higher and touched deeper notes, but none spoke more words which knock at the hearts of the men of his time. He embodied all that is best in the Victorian age. Since Goethe none has had a larger vision, but the English own him more than the Germans owe Goethe. The whole world is poorer by his death."

The Pall Mall Gazette says: "His name will shine through the ages in the poetical galaxy. According to the judgment of the civilized world, he was immortal long before he died." The Pall Mall Gazette adds that Swinburne will probably succeed Tennyson as poet laureate, and that, in view of "that element Swinburne has involved upon Mr. Gladstone, the choice would be characteristic and an instance of a great man's magnanimity."

The Evening News and Post says: "He was the Mendelssohn of poets. He played upon the unvoiced emotions of hearts. Posterity probably will not reckon him as high as Milton or Shakespeare. Even Browning had loftier notes. No one, however, upheld better England's name and fame; never was there a clearer guide to things beautiful. There was no narcissism in his mind; it was as placid as a lake."

The Globe says: "We have lost the first English poet of letters and the first poet. Perhaps he did not rise to Shelley's heights, but he knew the beautiful language of the heart. The verdict will always be that he was the greatest singer of the Victorian age."

The Hoosier Poet's Tribute.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 7.—The News prints the following: "In Memoriam" by James Whitcomb Riley on Tennyson:

We of the New World sleep hands with the Old
In newer fervor and with firmer hold
Of mutual heritage.
O master singer, with the finger tip
Of death laid thus on thy motionless lip,
All speech we have, and heart with thine art,
And save yet unborn, thou will be poet
Of all songs pure and true.
These new lays our mirrored homage dye
From Old and New World—aye, and still the new.

DEMOCRATS WANT CASH

The National Committee Issues an Appeal for Funds.

PENNSYLVANIA'S AWFUL BALLOTS.

They Are Over Four Feet Long, Nearly Two Feet Wide, and May Not Be Printed in Time to Supply the Voters of the State—The Latest Returns from Georgia.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—The Democratic national committee has issued an address to the people of the United States calling for contributions for campaign purposes. The address, after asking the suffrage of the people for the candidates of the Democratic party, says:

"With abundant means, with subsidized industry, with a body of hired professionals skilled and experienced in political chicanery, our opponents are preparing a final assault upon the freedom and honesty of the ballot. Those most exposed by temptation to poverty or debt, from necessities, petty ambition or personal dependence, are being assiduously sought out under a carefully organized system, and the agents are made ready who are most likely to serve the purpose with the time shall come to tempt those to be false to their country at the polls.

"Wherever men are employed in any art or trade, their organization and history set down, and the most powerful influence likely to control each one noted. Where open bribery will not succeed it is to be brought to directly vote as ordered, the system includes the alternative of starving them into the polls by universal and deeply paid employment, by intimidation or by other methods within the ingenuity and experience of skilled manipulators employed for such purpose.

"This committee has not troops of officeholders at its command. It will not agree to sell any future legislation of congress for money paid now into its party treasury. It will not promise to fill places in the people's service with money. It will not contract to uphold any bargain heretofore made by the Republican party, under color of law, for any contributor who, however great. It appeals to the people against one and all of these aggressions threatened against the friends of good government.

"We have no resources except what the people furnish. We call for means not only to spread the truth among the people and to aid in getting to the polls the full and honest vote of the masses, but also to detect, to prosecute and punish crimes against the purity of the ballot, whether in the United States they are perpetrated and by whoever committed or directed.

"Every indication points to the defeat of the Minneapolis candidates and to the triumphant election of Cleveland and Stevenson. The people will clearly favors the Democratic cause. All anxiety about the state of New York is allayed and she will give her electoral vote to our candidates. All reports from independent and conservative sources in other parts of the country are equally promising. With vigilance and timely action everywhere, which with your aid we pledge, honest ballots will be polled, counted and declared throughout the country, and if this is done defeat is not possible.

"The committee calls upon all good citizens for the aid which it requires, for those objects it invites and will welcome contributions from every honest man. No contributions will be accepted too small. Wherever a bank or a postal money order office can be found the means exist for placing at the disposal of the committee the hands in aid of the great cause which we uphold. WILLIAM F. HARRITY,

Chairman Democratic National Committee.

JOHN M. DICKINSON,

Chairman Democratic Campaign Committee.

PENNSYLVANIA'S BALLOTS.

They Will Be 52 by 22 Inches and May Not Be Printed in Time.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 7.—The politicians exercised over the new ballot law which will become operative at the general election. Chairman Reeder, of the Republican state committee, has received information that the official ballot decided upon by Secretary of the Commonwealth Harrity will be 52 inches long by 22 inches wide, and in the three columns will be given the Republican, Democratic and the Prohibition, People's and Socialistic-Labor tickets. The last three will be in one column.

Charles H. Mullen, an extensive paper manufacturer at Mount Holly Springs, who was a delegate to the national Republican convention at Minneapolis, says:

"There is not paper of that odd size or enough paper to print and print one-tenth of the number of ballots that will be required in this state this fall, and you can say for me that there is not product or stock enough in the markets of America to allow such a thing to be done. It is a question of all the mills in this country, were they to begin and run continuously, could turn out the paper needed for such a job in time, and I am certain they could not be printed. The tickets must be printed for sixty-seven counties—perforated, gummed, numbered and bound in books more than 52 inches long by 22 inches wide."

State Chairman Reeder: "I do not see how the work is to be done unless they get to work immediately and go to New York or perhaps other places for paper and printing. It can't be done in the time allowed. Unless the work be commenced at once there will be a terrible mix."

"The tickets must be ready for the distribution of half of them on the 4th of November, must they not?" was inquired.

"Yes, and there's where there will be trouble. The secretary of the commonwealth certifies to the county commissioners the nomination of candidates, and four days before the election the ballots must be distributed. The sheriff is required to issue his proclamation for the election upon the filing by the secretary of the commonwealth of certificates of nomination."

"What is to be done then?" "I don't know. The ballots may be gotten out in time if the work is commenced immediately, otherwise I cannot see how it is possible to get them printed in time."

Both Democrats and Republicans fear that the blanket ballot will be too complicated for the average voter to understand. In various parts of the city a regular school is held three times a week to teach voters how to use it, and it is found that the most intelligent business men cannot readily grasp its intricacies. In giving instructions only the two foot tickets is used, and the voters will be able to do so with a pointer half a foot long. The time allowed on election day cannot be changed. The average voting time is computed to be one minute for each man, and it is feared that the election will not be over by midnight Nov. 8 in every part of the state. There will be the state $4,000,000 for ballot boxes and booths.

Swarks Cockran in Boston.

BOSTON, Oct. 7.—Congressman Bourke Cockran and Hon. James M. Beck, of Philadelphia, addressed a big Democratic protection meeting at Fremont temple tonight. Among those on the platform were Frederick A. Pribee, General Collis Whitney and Dr. William Everett. Mr. Beck discussed the tariff and eulogized Governor Russell, and was loudly applauded.

Mr. Cockran received an ovation when he rose to speak. He predicted that Massachusetts would be in the Democratic column, and then discussed the tariff from a labor standpoint. After speaking of the merchant marine, which he said was originally destroyed by the Republicans, the speaker discussed the force bill, which he declared subversive of American liberties. A reference to party unity caused somebody to call for three cheers for David B. Hill, which were given with a will.

Mr. Cockran spoke over an hour, and it was 10:30 when the meeting broke up, but the hall was as crowded at the close as at the beginning.

It was Governor McKinley's first appearance in public in Connecticut and the only speech he will make in the state during the campaign. He spoke for over an hour and a half on the tariff.

THE COLUMBUS CELEBRATION.

Forty Thousand Men Will Be in Line in New York's Parade.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—The programme for the mustering of the military parade in connection with the Columbian Day celebration in New York city, Wednesday, Oct. 12, has been issued. In its details it is even more elaborate than the correspondingprogramme of the naval display of the day previous, which takes in the whole harbor and most of the mercantile marine as an adjunct to the procession of foreign and national naval vessels.

The military parade is to be divided into ten divisions under General Martin T. McMahon, grand marshal. They will stretch across Manhattan island like an octopus, according to the arrangements for their mustering. The places and time of assembling have all been arranged with great care, so as to permit each division to fall into line at the proper moment.

The first division will comprise 3,000 United States army troops. Afterward are to follow 5,000 men of the First brigade of the New York National guard as an escort to the visiting troops. Next will be a naval brigade of 250 men. Following these will be a brigade of 2,500 men from New Jersey, with Governor Leon Abbett as commander in chief. After these will come a brigade from the state of Pennsylvania, 300 strong. These are to precede the guard of honor to the president.

Next are to come the firemen and exempt firemen, and all the ramifications of the firemens' organization in New York and neighboring cities. The Italians will follow next. Their strength, infantry and cavalry, is placed at a thousand or so. After them will follow the French military organizations, but their feeble ranks will be entirely swamped in the Grand Army men of the state and visiting posts who are to tramp next to them, 6,000 strong.

The German-American societies, who will form the last division, are estimated to run over 10,000 men. This will make a total of considerably over 40,000 men to be handled in the parade. If all the estimates are fulfilled the time which the military parade will take to pass a given point on this basis will make a very long day's show.

To govern a baby rightly the mother should first learn to govern herself, for the little suite of humanity which she holds in her arms is almost constantly watching her every action, even to the movement of her lips while engaged in conversation and the very expression of her face, and will no doubt in a few short months reproduce her mode of speech and imitate her manners almost invariably to an exaggerated degree; hence as a rule impatient, irritable mothers need not expect the calmest and best of babies.

When the first opens his eyes so wonderingly upon the grand old world, a little dose of baby government should be adopted not right now severe by any means, for baby indeed has rights that must be respected. First of all and at all times the little darling's comfort must be promptly secured. Then since he is snugly tucked away in his little bed the art of leaving him undisturbed to sleep and grow until nature prompts him to call for further food is a very essential feature in his early government. The old fashioned way of taking baby up from his warm nest for the eyes of curious neighbors to behold or to be fondled by loving friends each hour in the first days of his existence may not only prove serious physically, but be sadly detrimental to making a calm, contented baby. Nor do we spoil baby's temper by allowing it to cry long for what is needful for its comfort. This habit will grow into a very painful disposition.

And since the weeks of his babyhood have numbered into months, with due respect for his individuality as one who has come, though of a different nature, yet undeniably as acute for the time being as those of the adults, but as his reasoning faculties are not yet developed, the mother becomes the wise judge, discerning for her little one right from wrong, with that unswerving faithfulness which only lives in the sanctums of maternal love.

If possible never speak nor act hastily, for a quick decision might prove a wrong one, it being quite a serious matter for a baby to find that mamma has made a mistake in regard to his government.

While there seems to be no set of established rules by which to govern a baby, yet the mother by studying her infant's own peculiar nature, which will very soon assert itself, may be able to choose the best plan for his safe government, who ever aiming in a firm, gentle, loving spirit, and ever teaching parental obedience to the God of the law. Do this, dear mothers, and it may not be said of your seven-year-old, "Ah, me, that child rules the house!"—Violet Morris in Baby.

Health of Women Workers.

The investigations of sanitary science have proved beyond all question that vast numbers of women, in common with men, work at the present time in many occupations which tend materially to shorten life. Some of these are unsuspected by the public at large, and even by the sufferers themselves, while others are notorious for their evil influence on those who pursue them. The fact that tubercular disease is three or four times as frequent among prisoners and convicts as among the public generally has long been known to medical men. It is true not only of the prisoners in England, but of other states in Europe and America. This tubercular disease affects prisoners not only in the form of pulmonary consumption, but in other diseases arising from the same source. The evil influence on prisoners arises from the defident ventilation of their cells, their sedentary occupation, want of bodily exercise and dejected state of mind. In such places as Dartmoor, where prisoners work in the open air, there is a much smaller percentage of disease than in prisons in which they are confined in cells.

It is obvious that this also lives of a vast number of women and girls in our textile and other factories devoted to indoor work are closely comparable to those of prisoners. These persons work often eight or ten hours a day, mainly in one posture, leaning forward and compressing the chest; they are occupied in weaving at looms and stocking frames, stitching gloves or lace making, etc., often in badly ventilated rooms, and, although without the mental depression of prisoners, there is nothing cheerful or hopeful in their work. The dreary monotony of the pursuit produces in itself a mental depression of a very severe order, and in consequence tubercular disease and consumption prevail largely among these female workers. Another great cause of disease is working in an atmosphere rendered irritating sometimes by dust and at other times by chemical substances diffused through the air or employed in the process of the manufacture.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

The Jewess in Authorship.

It is not difficult to forecast the future of the Jewess in authorship. She is a partaker in the new education; she enters all the professions; she shares the ziest culture of the time; she responds to every movement that leads to honest, helpful living. The educated Jewess who graduates from Vassar or Bryn Mawr, from Cornell or Barnard, who pursues his/her collegiate training at Harvard or Yale, is on the same intellectual level as her non-Jewish chum. Her work in literature will follow the bent of her tastes and capacities, and will not be so much a question of her ancestral religion.

Her womanhood and womanliness will guide her right, and as the religious instincts of the Jewess are innate, and her domestic qualities strong, one may expect her to champion all that is pure and sweet and wholesome. She will be enthusiastic and resolute, but however positive her convictions she will not be less feminine in their utterance. Her taste will be those of her age, and her inspiration the newspaper, every startling incident of the day.

The work of the Jewess in authorship will hardly vary in quality and tone from that of her non-Jewish sister, and the charm and influence of her pen will depend upon her spiritual insight and intellectual range. But there is every probability that for some years to come her intensity will be largely devoted to action. The problems which are due to the Russian exodus, the spectacle of poverty, ignorance, overcrowding in our large cities must fascinate the sympathetic women of Israel.—Abram S. Isaacs in Ladies' Home Journal.

Husband Your Strength.

The girl grown to womanhood is to be blessed to the full changed to a full blown flower. Then will be a time when she must fade and when her petals of beauty will fall, but it is possible to delay this period of decadence to a very considerable length. A young woman fully matured and starting on her most essential period of life has in her own hands the power to lengthen or shorten the duration of her youth and old age. Looking about one occasionally sees a hale old lady with white hair, some few wrinkles and other minor evidences of the progress of time, but with a comparatively good complexion and sprightliness and general vigor which are not in keeping with her years.

In contrast you will find a score or more of women, of the same age and in the same atmosphere of life, who are faded and pinched, devoid of energy, and either greasy or sharp or decrepit.

The one has taken a proper care of her self during the early years of her maturity, while the others have relegated to nature the task, unassisted, of taking care of them.

"Beauty sleep" is a thing most essential for a young woman. It makes her fresh complexion and gives her a healthy complexion. Too much artificial light has the effect of straining the eyes, making them appear heavy, dull and congested. Social occasions occurring at late hours are essential to pleasure and relaxation of the mind, but get your early sleep whenever you can.

The matter of rest, aside from sleep, is also important. A day of shopping ages a woman more than a week of ordinary home duties, and should be followed by a day of comparative rest. Make it a rule that from whatever source fatigue may come it is necessary to give your nerves a chance to regain their strength, and rest will do this.—New York World.

The Trouble with Many Women.

Women are always flying off the handle. This is American slang, but excellent to convey my meaning. If a woman stands on a street corner as passive as if there were no slumbering feline instincts in her makeup, and the driver of a passing car does not know by intuition that she wants him to stop, she flies all to pieces. She is going to be late for some public function or nightmare. She has taken the number of his car and will report him to the office. Did he suppose she was standing on that corner for amusement? By this time another car has come in sight. She waves her hand or an umbrella, or the driver has intuitions, and asks her in dumb show if she wants to ride, and she does on her way and down's report the affair or do anything but work herself up to fever heat.

So it happens nearly every day of her life. Fret, stew and worry make hard, and resolute, but however positive her con- and a small number of old enemies every day of their lives that they could learn the art of fascinating others by means of their graceful, exquisite manners. The secret is an open one. It is so easy to learn that it has all the simplicity of truth. Those who would give their fellow creatures so find it pass unknowing.

It is only this: Fill your heart with good will to everybody and then let it overflow in the kindliest manners you know, particularly at home. If you begin at home this morning and practice it, so to speak, get up with joy and never leave your bed. Be just as polite to your sister as you would to your best girl. Strive to gain the good will of mother, father and brothers and sisters and children exactly as you strive to gain good will abroad.

There is no place for practicing manners like the home circle; no place, permit me to say, where it will be so appreciated. It will be a cultivation of heart, mind and body, this endeavor to feel nothing but affection for the people home and treat them as though they were worthy of as much consideration as your hauds as if they were the president and his family. So they are worthy. Then from the home will float out around you those sweet, magnetic influences which will draw the hearts of mankind toward you.—St. Joseph's Gazette.

Plants for the Table.

There is a demand for growing ferns for the table centerpiece. Many persons who have nothing available in the house for the dining table and who prefer foliage to cut blossoms, because odors sometimes interfere with flavors, have a permanent fern basket arranged in the following manner: Have a pine leaf made for the middle of the table. A hole in the center of this will hold the tin pan or fern basket and bring it even with the surface. The embellishment may be put on in the following manner: There must be two tablecloths ironed, with not one seam length wise placed on the table; lay these two seams together with one overlapping the other, and pin firmly at the center about the fern pan under the foliage. A heavy, warm flannel will prevent the lapping down neatly. This is very easily accomplished, and looks nice.—Jennie Miller Monthly.

A Safety Baby Carriage.

The careless nursemaid who leaves a perambulator upon a sloping footpath unattended, perhaps on a windy day, is responsible for many a sad accident. In an attempt to grapple with such disasters is seen in a safety perambulator which has been introduced by a firm in London. In this little vehicle there is a brake which fixes the wheels except when the handle of the perambulator is grasped by the person in charge, when they are at once released. Close to the handle is a lever bar which is grasped by the attendant with the handle, the lower end of the lever being connected with a strap which passes around a drum attached to the axle of the hind wheels. By the coiling of this strap around the drum the wheels are effectually locked and the vehicle cannot be moved.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Girls Who Help Their Mothers.

There is one family in Washington society that manages its affairs with delightful informality. It is that of Attorney General Miller. He has two daughters, but only one of them, Miss Florence, is "out." She is a pretty, brown haired western girl, and her mother declares she is invaluable as a social and household assistant. Miss Miller shares all her mother's cares and responsibilities for her as reserve her hills, and every other week takes the reins of the household. She superintends the servants, does marketing and manages the kitchen. During these weeks her mother is the queen of the family, and the following week Miss Florence takes that part. By this plan the strength of both is saved and they are able to meet all demands upon them.—Washington Letter.

A Dainty Present.

A dainty present for a baby's outfit is a wrapper made of cheese cloth. Cut out the wrapper using a silk pattern, only opening it down the front. Each piece must be cut double, but seamed up separately. When seamed cut cotton wadding to fit the whole gown and place in between the two parts. Bind the edges with ribbon or turn them in, overhanding them on the under side. Tack the whole with blue or pink worsted and sew strings to match down the front.—Exchange.

The Handkerchief.

The handkerchief affected by the young woman of fine and original taste is an extra size square of linen finished with a narrow hem, and having a shield in one corner on an oval or square shape which is embroidered in white her initial letter. A pretty idea in the marking of handkerchiefs, too, is that of writing the name in the corner and embroidering the signature in old fashioned raised lines.—Buffalo News.

The Time to Remedy Defects.

A noted medical man strongly advises all parents who have had the great misfortune of having a child with any deformity to consult a surgeon within a short time after its birth, as a great many forms are most readily and perfectly removed while the child is young. This refers more especially to birthmarks, moles, harelips, web fingers, supernumerary toes, clubfeet, etc.

For a Sallow Complexion.

To remove your sallow complexion take plenty of exercise with the arms and the upper extremity of the body. Keep your digestion in good condition, and do not use a lot of drugs advised by persons who know nothing of their ultimate effects. Nature is very kind in helping one to vigor and giving a tone to the complexion; so help her along in her efforts.

She Is Man's Equal.

Matthew Henry says, in his quaint way, "The woman was made of a rib out of the side of Adam—not made out of his head to rule over him, or out of his feet to be trampled upon by him—but out of his side to be equal with him: under his arm to be protected, and near his heart to be beloved."

To make a good cup of chocolate let the milk come to a boil. For every two cups milk a heaping teaspoonful of grated chocolate with enough cold milk to form a paste. Pour this into the milk which has come to a boil. Let it boil three minutes. Serve with whipped cream.

Out of a force of thirty-four teachers in the public schools of Salem, Or., only five are men. The superintendent is a woman, and receives a salary of $1,200 a year. The principals receive $700 to $900, and the assistants $600.

It is the sensitive, nervous girl who blushes easily, while the girl stolid by nature or when by education has her nerves under perfect control seldom blushes.

PERSONAL.

James Armstrong has just completed a new house on West Fifth street.

Mrs. Fred. Dunn lies seriously ill at the residence of her father, on West Fourth street.

Mrs. Seely Edsall and J. Linn Edsall went yesterday for a ten days' stay to Port Jervis, N. Y.

Mrs. Genevieve W. Hoyt of Brooklyn, formerly soprano soloist in the Church of the Heavenly Rest, is visiting the family of Mr. I. E. Morse of Franklin place and will sing in the Congregational church to-morrow morning.

Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Brown of "Brook Lodge", West Dunellen, have issued invitations to the wedding of their daughter, Miss Laura A. Brown, to Mr. James L. Armstrong of Jersey City. The ceremony will take place at the home of the bride's parents, at 6:45 o'clock next Wednesday evening. A number of people from this city are expected to be present and to accommodate them a train will stop at Dunellen station at 6.30 o'clock.

Dr. Marion Miller, Professor of Language and Literature in Princeton College, returned to Princeton yesterday, after a brief sojourn here as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Morrison of Mountain avenue. Professor Miller has recently returned from a year of extended travels in Europe. It is his first visit to Plainfield, and he considers it the most beautiful city of its size he has ever seen.

A brother, Prof. Arthur Miller, is Professor of Geology and Paleontology in the Kentucky State College.

A few years ago Prof. Gesung of the Chair of English Literature in Amherst College published a book, which has been pronounced the best work, upon Tennyson's In Memoriam, that has ever been written. At the beginning of this year he issued a book upon Job, which is now considered the best exposition of that poem that has appeared. He styles the book of Job "The Epic of the Inner Life." Rev. C. L. Goodrich, the pastor of the Congregational church, will base his sermon upon Prof. Gesung's book to-morrow.

The Rahway Democrat of Friday says: Miss H. Newton Spencer, of Plainfield, accompanied by her daughter Fannie drove to the residence of her son Alexander, on Jackson avenue, bringing birthday gifts and greeting to her little grandaughter Alecia, who was one-year old. The cheerful presence of Judge E. D. Shotwell added to the merry-making occasion, his grand-stories being the chief attraction. Other friends participated in the amusements of the evening, all of whom will regard the event as a pleasant reminiscence of home life.

THE BOROUGH COUNCIL.

REGULAR OCTOBER MEETING HELD LAST NIGHT.

The Somerset Street Railway Ordinance Passed on Its Second Reading —Comments About Its Not Being Published—Bills Ordered Paid.

The North Plainfield Borough Council held its regular October meeting in the Council chamber last evening. Those present were Mayor Saunders, and Councilmen Connolly, Hegeman, Hummer, Neal, Needham, Sebring, Clerk Broksaw and Counsellor Reed.

A number of petitions for lights were read and referred to the proper committees.

The petitions of the Warren Engine Co. to take part in the Plainfield Firemen's moonlight parade, Oct. 18, and Round Brook Columbus celebration with their engine, was referred to the Fire, Water and Lamps Committee with power. They also reported the steam chime whistle and electric appliances in perfect order and received thanks of Council.

The following claims were ordered paid:

Davis & Stevens	$ 29 00
Thos. J. McGann	2 00
F. E. Richard	2 25
North Plainfield Elect. Light Co.	109 00
W. L. Sharkey	6 25
L. M. Powers	39 00
W. J. Conroy	7 75
P. M. French	7 50
H. E. Brokaw	100 00
S. W. Van Horn	14 50
W. N. Pangborn	49 25
C. Kiegel	125 00
Peter Seader	3 00

The quarterly report of Justice Crossley showed that $71.50 had been received for fines.

The street railway contract in "its in complete form," which is a copy of the Plainfield contract, was read for the second time, and, upon motion, adopted. It is proposed to amend it and pass it at the next meeting, to be held Nov. 4, after which it will be advertised as required by law.

There was considerable whispered comment among the audience, the general opinion being that the ordinance ought to be freely advertised before being made a law, and the audience was right.

The meeting adjourned at 9.30.

It was stated by Mayor Saunders informally, after the meeting, that the Council had several plans in contemplation regarding the taxation of the road, the most probable one being to tax a certain amount the first year and increase it each year for five years, after which time a regular rate could be set.

The Journal Bowling League of Union County.

The Journal Bowling League of Union County was formed in Elizabeth, Thursday evening. Mr. John W. Wooten of the Villa Lintas was elected president, Mr. R. M. Davis, Elizabeth Field Club, vice president; Mr. G. W. Cooley, Arthur Kulls, secretary; Mr. George A. Hallock, Crescent League, Treasurer. The Plainfield Crescent League and C. Y. M. I. were represented. The Passaic Bowling Club was unable to join the organization because of schedules already arranged. Each club in the league will pay $5 per year to defray league expenses. Each club will be assessed for prizes. The league adopted a constitution and by-laws. No games are to be bowled where liquor is sold. Provisions were made to divide the league into sections. If fifteen clubs are members two sections will be formed, three sections for twenty clubs.

The president will appoint committees from each section, consisting of one member from each club, to arrange schedules of games for their respective sections, and the winners in each section will play a schedule of games to decide the championship of the county. The winner to hold the Journal trophy for one year until the trophy has been won three times by one club, when it will become the property of that club.

The league will offer several prizes each year, one to be presented to the champion team, and others to be awarded for the highest individual score averages. To compete for one of the latter a bowler must roll in at least two thirds of the schedule championship games.

The annual meeting of the league will be held on the first Thursday in October, when officers will be chosen.

The schedule are to be prepared before the first day of November in each year, and the first championship game must be played between the fifteenth and thirteenth day of each November.

The rules adopted governing the game were those of the Amateur Bowling League.

The constitution, by-laws and rules will be printed in leaflet form and furnished to each member of the league.

There was a general discussion of general matters, and President Wooten appointed a committee of three to divide the league into sections. The gentlemen selected were Messrs. Tobin, Whelan and Sheppard, and they were instructed to report to the executive committee at its next meeting.

The meeting adjourned to reassemble in the Elizabeth Journal office, Thursday evening, October 13th, at eight o'clock.

—The trial of William Lee for illegal liquor selling was adjourned this morning until next Friday.

—Dorflinger's American Cut Glass is shown in every requisite for the table and in beautiful pieces for wedding and holiday gifts. Genuine pieces have trade mark label C. Dorflinger & Sons, 36 Murray street, New York.

M'KINLEY AT NEWARK.

FULLY TEN THOUSAND PEOPLE HEAR HIM.

The Meeting a Great Success—Hon. John Kean, Jr., the Candidate for Governor, Among the Speaker.

The immense audience which turned out to hear Gov. McKinley last night at Caledonia Park, Newark, applauded for five minutes as he stepped forward to speak. A party of Plainfielders took the GOVERNOR M'KINLEY.

6.45 train to attend the meeting, and returned enthusiastic. The speaker said in substance:

"All political parties are agents of the people. We Republicans have no desire to hide our platform, but we don't intend that the Democrats shall escape theirs. Their leaders have been financially unsound for thirty years.

"Their last effort is for the abolition of the ten per cent. tax on State banks. We do not want to carry the bank note detector again.

"They not only want to debase national currency, but to degrade labor. They favor tariff for revenue only. That's English Free Trade, a tariff heedless of labor, of industries or wages.

"In 1890 95 per cent. of our hardware was imported; now 95 per cent. is made here and only 5 per cent. imported. Prices have become 48 to 60 per cent. lower than in 1890. A protective tariff never failed in peace or war. It furnished the finest opportunity for the higher civilization of mankind. Everything comes in free but luxuries and articles that compete with home production.

"Democrats say it is unconstitutional. This sort of talk usually precedes acquiescence and surrender. The authors of the Democratic platform have not read the history of their country. The Constitution says that the Congress of Congress was one for the protection of American labor. It levied duties to pay the debts and expenses of government and to promote manufactures.

"Is Grover Cleveland a better constitutional lawyer than Grover? or Adlai Stevenson a better interpreter than Madison? or Henry Watterson a better expounder than Henry Clay, of his old Kentucky home? Are they all combined better than the United States Supreme Court, which sanctioned the law of 1890? If that law is not protective it is a result of accident, not design.

"It has not kept us out of a foreign market. The foreign trade in the last twelve months, for $1,500,000,000, which called it a billion dollar Congress. It was a $1,892,000,000 Congress, $580,800,000 was imported last year, $1,035,000,000 was exported. We don't want soup houses now; every man can eat soup at his own table.

"We can have free trade when every nation in the world pays the wages we do—not before. In every European city the American watch is selling. "Hail Columbia." Grover Cleveland says we must consult morals as well as markets. Does he think protection is immoral? The Democrats? The Democrats have always predicted failure. If facts did not overtake predictions the Democratic party would be the greatest in the world."

Protection in New Jersey.

The official report of labor statistics recently compiled by Commissioner Peck, of New York State, is not the only one that shows the improved condition of the laboring man since the McKinley law went into operation. The official documents recording the savings of labor in New Jersey, recently made public, are crammed with facts which conclusively prove that the party of Protection has done much in this county for good to the workingmen in New Jersey as well as in New York State.

The statistics of New Jersey's savings institutions alone should be a sufficient argument to convince every thoughtful man of this. The total assets of these banks have increased from $61,895,309 in the year 1880 to $96,676,749 in 1892, a gain of nearly $35,000,000. The books of deposit show that these savings are made chiefly by the working classes. That they are the savings of men employed in protected industries is proved by the fact that the great bulk of these banks comes from the manufacturing centres in Essex, Hudson, Passaic, Mercer and Middlesex counties.

There is still stronger proof, however, that New Jersey workingmen have found prosperity in the Building and Loan Associations furnish this proof. The report of Commissioner James Bishop, made to Mr. Peck, a Democrat, shows that the number of these associations increased in one year from 254 to 272, the number of shareholders from 426,000 to 448,000; the number of shareholders from 71,000 to 78,000, and the total assets from $95,000,000 to $95,600,000; an increase of seven per cent. in the number of associations, 12 per cent. in the number of shareholders, and 16 per cent. in net assets.

These figures of Commissioner Bishop alone furnish proof of Republican prosperity that cannot be perverted by the Democratic leaders or stump speakers. They show that New Jersey's wage-earners are rapidly progressing in condition, and that McKinley tariff, and are yearly putting away millions in the savings banks of the State. There is no apparent decrease in the earnings of workingmen in any part of the State, and this gives encouragement to the hope that the Democrats may be overthrown on both the the State and National tickets this fall.

—Rice & Co. have secured a new article which they will advertise to-day. It is called Royal Dutch coffee.

—Mrs. Judd's concert at the Second Reformed church, Somerville, last evening had a number of Plainfielders who took part in the chorus, which was a gratifying success.

STATE SCHOOL CENSUS.

TOTALS 24,687 LESS THAN LAST YEAR.

Union County Gains 344, but Plainfield's Loss is 153—Somerset County Gains Only 53—Hudson Drops 17,451.

The first report of the State school census superintendent, showing the school population of the State, which has just been submitted to the State Board of Education, shows some surprising figures.

In the three most populous counties of the State, namely, Essex, Hudson and Camden, there is a total decrease of 25,090, which is mostly in Newark, Jersey City and the city of Camden.

The total number of children in the State is 402,705, between five and eighteen years of age. There 204,177 males and 198,585 females. This shows a loss in the State from last year of 24,687, almost exclusively in a few of the large cities and in the seaside resorts. The number attending private schools is 46,113. The number reported as attending no school whatever during the year is 89,565. This accounted for by the statement that probably 80 per cent. have not yet begun to attend school or who have already received a common school education.

Essex county has sustained a decrease during the year of 4,444, which is made up entirely in the city of Newark. In Newark the loss is almost entirely in two or three wards.

The decrease of over 24,000 is made up mostly in Hudson county. Last year's report was 111,694; this year it dropped to 94,243, which is a decrease of 17,451. Of this number Jersey City's decrease is 13,162. The balance of the decrease in Hudson county is made in Hoboken, where the loss is 3,640.

In Camden county there is a decrease of 3,155, almost all of which is in the city of Camden.

The enumeration will have an important effect on the State school reserve fund this year. Hudson county, with its great reduction, will not get its usual slice from that fund.

The losses and gains in the counties this year are as follows:

Atlantic	1891. 6,638	1892. 6,598	Loss. 40	Gain.
Bergen	13,626	13,202	424
Burlington	14,266	14,477		211

Sussex	6,211	6,211		1,000
Union	18,174	18,018		844
Warren	10,130	9,813	317

The figures for the principal cities of the State showing the increase and decrease for the past year are:

	1892.	1891.	Loss.	Gain.
Jersey City	73,000	86,162	13,162
Newark	97,484	96,680	4,805

Millville	2,000	1,960	100	40
Woodbury	1,295	1,070	100
Millville	2,000	1,961		39

The census shows that there has been a gain in the State outside of Jersey City, Newark, Camden and Hoboken.

A Dangerous Sport Wiped Out at Princeton.

There will be no more rushes at Princeton. At a mass meeting of the undergraduates held Thursday several earnest speeches by prominent students were made against the practice. Among those opposed to it were Capt. King and Parke Davis of the football team. There was a unanimous vote to abolish the rush and substitute for it the cane spree as a regular annual athletic event.

The Widow Won.

Mrs. Mary Spencer, the widow of John L. Spencer, of North Plainfield, won a law suit in the Supreme Court of New York against the Citizen's Mutual Life Insurance Company, getting a judgment for $2,418, the full amount of the claim, principal and interest, with costs against the company, thus establishing a precedent in insurance cases.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

The "Central" in Collision Again.

New York, Oct. 8. (Special.)—The New Jersey Central Railroad's ferry boat Central collided in the North river, at nine o'clock this morning, with her sister boat, the Communipaw. The boats came together in midstream during the prevalance of a heavy fog. The Central was coming to New York, the Communipaw makinga westward trip.

Both vessels were running slowly and came together head on. No one was hurt, though passengers were badly shaken up and a good many were frightened. The boats suffered no injury.

The Central has a record in the collision line. Among her feats are the sinking of a steamship, the smashing of a harbor steamer and nearly overthrowing a tugboat.

Fever Worse Than Cholera.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 8, (Special.)—Advices say that yellow fever has been raging at Santos, Brazil, for months, and the dead have been piled in trenches of great length. It is claimed that more victims have been numbered than have died in Central Europe from cholera.

Three hundred and forty-seven vessels are awaiting their turn to discharge valuable cargoes shipped from all parts of the world, and some have to wait a year to be towed alongside the discharge berth.

Mrs. Harrison No Better.

WASHINGTON, October 8.—Special.)—No marked change was noted in the condition of Mrs. Harrison this morning. She was resting comfortably, with more or less natural sleep.

About Children.

A child in its fourth year should be three feet high and weigh more than thirty pounds. In the sixth year it should be three-and-a-half feet high and weigh forty pounds. At eight years of age it should be four feet high and weigh fifty-five pounds.

Growth is very irregular in children and young people generally. Perhaps two inches may be gained in two months and for the next ten months not another inch, even up to the age of ten or twelve years.

While growth is rapid fatigue is readily induced. During the pause weight is gained and work of training can go on again.

Thatcher's minstrels will appear at Music Hall next Thursday evening, Oct. 13th, in their new sparkling "Tuxedo" for the benefit of Major Anderson Post, No. 109. "Tuxedo" is declared the most successful of Mr. Thatcher's theatrical ventures, the profits from which he is investing in Plainfield real estate.

It is pronounced a new type of amusement, touch with the times. The old-time minstrel entertainment is entirely out of date. The absurdities of plantation life and the sentimental side of slave life are no longer of genuine interest to American audiences, as the entire condition of affairs in the South has undergone a change since abolition of slavery. Consequently, minstrelsy in its old garb, is a leaf from ancient history. To regain its former hold on the public is aimed at.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Pity 'tis, a thousand pities and the more the pities grow that great men do not keep some lively newspaper man handy to boil down their manifestoes for them.

Bishop Potter admits that undoubtedly a majority of the American people desire the World's fair to be closed on Sunday. But he himself declares that there are other doors which should first be closed on Sundays—doors into which the average stranger tumbles of a Sunday afternoon—that are vastly more hurtful than if the gates of the exposition were open to the extent of allowing him to visit the picture galleries, gardens, etc. "Shut other doors first," says the bishop.

ACCUSED OF CONSPIRACY

An Alleged Democratic Plot to Capture Pennsylvania's Vote.

THE NEW BALLOT LAW THE VEHICLE

Chairman Reeder Says the Scheme Is to Hold Back the Republican Tickets Till Too Late for Use at the Election—Funds for Democratic Headquarters.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 8.—The Press today says that Chairman Reeder, of the state Republican committee, gives out an expose of what he terms a Democratic conspiracy to steal the thirty-two electoral votes of Pennsylvania for Cleveland and Stevenson. The charge of the conspiracy, The Press says, is based on an affidavit of A. Nevin Pomeroy, editor and proprietor of The Franklin Repository, of Chambersburg, Pa.

Mr. Pomeroy swears that while in Harrisburg on Oct. 5 he was met by E. Hayes Greer, superintendent of public printing, who evidently mistook him for a clerk in the state department, congratulated him on the good work and read him a letter he had just written to J. Marshall Wright, chairman of the Pennsylvania Democratic state committee.

The letter, said Greer, stated that the ballot would be twenty-two inches wide by fifty-two inches long, and that Hon. William F. Harrity, secretary of the common wealth, would hold it back until Oct. 25 before officially certifying it to the various county commissioners, as provided in the Baker ballot bill, which delay would prevent the Republican counties from getting the form and list of nominations in sufficient time to have ballots printed.

Greer further urged, Pomeroy continues in his affidavit, that he said Chairman Wright to cause personal letters to be written to county commissioners in Democratic counties requesting them to make arrangements with E. K. Meyers, Democratic state printer, to have their orders filed for ballots at once and they would be given the preference, as Meyers had made arrangements with all the large printing offices to print tickets for Democratic counties only, and that as the county printing offices had not the facilities to print the ticket in the present shape, the Republican counties would be prevented from getting any tickets, and that the state would thus be carried for the Democratic party.

Greer further said: "If we can prevent Republican county commissioners from getting their tickets printed they cannot hold any election. Mr. Harrity says special elections can be ordered afterward for county officers, but the national and state elections will then be over and Pennsylvania carried for Cleveland."

An Appeal to Patiison.

General Reeder sent the following telegram to Governor Pattison at Harrisburg:

DEAR SIR—Convinced that there is grave danger that many localities will have difficulty in getting the ballots for voters that they will be entitled to vote, I think that there is a simple remedy for this difficulty, I have telegraphed the secretary of the commonwealth as follows: 'Official information satisfies me that it is practically impossible to have the ballots printed by Nov. 8 unless there is a reduction in the size of the ballot.

"There are not more than six or seven in the state which can print a ballot fifty-two inches in length. There are at least 30 each that can print it if reduced to forty-five inches.

"I submit that the ticket can be brought within that length by reducing the top margin, taking out leads and omitting the unnecessary repetition of the words appearing at the head of each group and separate offices in the third and fourth columns.

"As reduction in short should be made to keep the length of the ticket within forty-six inches, since to exceed that length may result in disfranchisement of many voters. Please wire me by telegraph you this at this time, so that there may be no further confusion in the publication of the law. Respectfully, etc. Have sent telegrams to county commissioners or the sending out of a ballot of unnecessary length. Will you please let me know at the earliest moment, either by wire or mail, what you have decided upon as to the form, arrangement and size of the ticket?

"FRANK REEDER,

"Chairman Republican Committee."

Senator Quay was seen by a United Press reporter in reference to the conspiracy alleged to have been formed as above stated, and he did not seem at all agitated over the matter. The senator said that there was not the slightest danger that President Harrison will lose Pennsylvania by reason of the ballot law.

AT DEMOCRATIC HEADQUARTERS.

Chairman Harrity Gratified with the Response to the Appeal for Funds.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—The report that ex-Mayor W. R. Grace had handed in a check to the Democratic national committee for $100,000 was denied at headquarters as a silly fabrication. It was stated that Mr. Grace, since the campaign began, had contributed and caused friends to contribute, but that he did not send in anything since the appeal of the national committee.

Chairman Harrity said that the first day's response to the appeal for aid to the campaign fund was very gratifying; that while the amount was not large, numerous checks came by mail during the day, and the largest number were received by the last mail. The checks are for various amounts, from $5 to $100. A number of small sums were received in postal orders and in cash handed in by callers.

Ex-Mayor Grace was not able to hold his antisnappers in at the meeting last night, and in spite of his advice it adopted a report which he was opposed to. The conference committee submitted a report stating that it had had interviews and conferences with representatives of the various Democratic organizations in the city and county opposed to Tammany Hall upon the subject of independent nominations for local offices.

The committee reported progress and asked to be continued. Ex-Mayor Grace was opposed to the report, but it was carried by an overwhelming majority, and the meeting adjourned subject to the call of the chair.

FOSTER IN MARYLAND.

The Secretary of the Treasury Opens the State Republican Campaign.

FREDERICK, Oct. 8.—Secretary of the Treasury Foster and Hon. Benjamin Butterworth, of Ohio, opened the Republican campaign here at a monster meeting of Republicans. The secretary reviewed the history of the two great parties, and said the accomplishments of the past showed the tendencies of the future. "The country needs a good strong party to criticise, to find fault, to scold, if you please. As fault finders the Democrats are a remarkable success," he said. "They may be denominated a congress on scold. As critics I am uncertain of their value. But as a governing party this country has no use for them."

A good part of the speech was taken up with an exposition of the financial condition of the government in answer to the charge attributed to Mr. Stevenson, Democratic nominee for vice president, in one of speeches that the treasury is bankrupt. A charge which, said Secretary Foster, the Democratic press, Democratic stump speakers and Democratic members of congress have been making for more than a year. Upon this point the secretary said:

The press credits him (Mr. Stevenson) with saying that there was turned over to the Harrison administration one hundred millions of money, and that notwithstanding this fact the present administration was not able for the first time in the history of the country to pay its debt when it matured. He referred, he added, to the 4½ per cents, but he (Foster) was not ignorant upon the subject he would know that this administration had redeemed and paid of 4½ per cent bonds of the debt at a cost more than $200,000,000, and with a saving in interest by the time the right to pay matured of $50,000,000. The balance of more than $100,000,000 of these bonds requested that they be continued at 2 per cent., and this administration enjoys the enviable position of having placed a government loan at a lower rate of interest and in a more advantageous position than any government on earth, and illustrated by a practical test that the credit of the United States government under the presidency of Harrison enjoys the highest and best credit it ever had before.

The remaining $25,000,000 have been paid.

Secretary Foster then discussed the tariff and the financial plank of the Democratic party, and in conclusion he urged his hearers to give their votes to the Republican candidates, local and national.

McKinley in Newark.

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 8.—Governor McKinley spoke before an audience of several thousand Republicans at Caldonia park last night. He was given an enthusiastic reception by the various political organizations and was driven in the ball through streets crowded with people. John Kean, Jr., the Republican candidate for governor, and H. Wayne Parker, the nominee for congress, both addressed the meeting before Governor McKinley was introduced. The governor spoke for half an hour on the tariff question. A banquet was served after the meeting.

Senator Quay's Movements.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 8.—United States Senator Matthew S. Quay, who is in Philadelphia under the treatment of a physician, says that he is improved but will not talk politics. From expressions made by the distinguished Republican his friends infer that it is his health continues to improve he will leave for New York next week to take an active part in the work of the national campaign committee.

FASHIONS.

THE DOMAIN OF FASHION.

INFORMATION THAT WILL BE SURE TO INTEREST THE LADIES.

Pertinent Points About Present and Coming Styles—New Fall Costumes—Methods of Dressing the Hair—Various Hints—Some Seasonable Suggestions.

An authority warns women who would preserve or enhance the beauty of their complexion—and what woman would not?—to use rain water, if possible, to wash their faces in. If this is not procurable, boil the water before using it. With this good soap should be used, as the basis of all beauty is cleanliness. It is a mistake to fancy that oils and unguents will cleanse the skin. A few women still cling to this most mistaken idea, and there never was a greater delusion. Water is the best of all cosmetics.

SHOT DOWN BY OUTLAWS

A Dastardly Assault on Brave Revenue Officials.

SLAIN BY AMBUSHED MOONSHINERS.

Two Deputy Collectors Killed and One Other Fatally Wounded—The Leader of the Cowardly Attacking Party Pays the Penalty with His Life.

FLINTVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 8.—Captain S. D. Mather, J. L. Spurrier and Creed Caldwell, three of the best and bravest men in the United States internal revenue service, were ambushed and shot down by moonshiners near here.

The district in which the assassination occurred is dreaded more by government officers than any other portion of middle Tennessee. R. S. Robinson, deputy United States marshal for the Third district; General Deputy Collectors S. C. Cardwell and J. L. Spurrier, Deputy Collectors J. E. Pulver and S. D. Mather and Mr. Harris, son of the United States commissioner at Flintville, started out to seize twenty barrels of illicit brandy which had already been located at a point about ten miles from Flintville. When the party had proceeded about four miles from Flintville they were fired on from the bushes in their rear. Mather fell dead at the first shot, having received twelve buckshot in his head.

Before the surprised party could defend themselves Cardwell and Spurrier fell mortally wounded. Cardwell received ten buckshot in the back, and Spurrier received a rifle bullet in the back between the shoulder blades. Robertson turned and shot at two of the cowardly moonshiners, and one of them named Patrick, the leader, fell dead. The other three escaped into the bushes.

Inquest to Be Commenced.

A courier brought the news of the tragedy to Flintville at about noon, and a hastily summoned posse of officers and citizens went out at 3 o'clock this morning. Cardwell died in a wagon at the depot as he was being taken home. He was perfectly conscious and gave his statement to a coroner's jury at once. He sent loving messages to his family and died with a prayer for his slayers on his lips. His body was brought to Lincoln county for burial.

The remains of Mather were taken to his home in Belvidere. Spurrier was brought to this city and taken to his home, where he received every possible medical attention. The wound has almost completely paralyzed him, and if he recovers, which is hardly probable, it is doubtful if he will ever be able to walk.

Mather, Cardwell and Spurrier were well known and highly respected all over the state, and had been in the revenue service for years. Cardwell was last winter transferred to this district from Kentucky, where he had been in the service a long time. The three men leave wives and children. A vigorous war against the moonshiners will be instituted at once.

He Feared No Man.

DANVILLE, Ky., Oct. 8.—Creed S. Cardwell, who was fatally wounded in a fight with moonshiners at Flintville, Tenn., was known throughout southern Kentucky as a courageous officer, who feared no man. The announcement of his death created considerable excitement here, as he is Pendleton, where he has lived for years, and where his two brothers, Judge T. M. Cardwell and ex-Mayor W. H. Cardwell, and his brother-in-law, Judge Wm. Quigley, and two sisters now reside. His two brothers have left for Nashville to take charge of his body. Creed Cardwell had been in the revenue service for twenty years and was about forty-five years of age.

Washington Officials Act.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—Acting Commissioner Wilson, of the internal revenue bureau, received a telegram from Collector Nunn at Nashville, informing him of the moonshiner tragedy. He conferred with Attorney General Miller, and as a result instructions were telegraphed to Marshal Harrison, Collector Nunn and Revenue Agents Chapman and Enisley to procure assistance and proceed at once to the scene of action and arrest all persons connected with the shooting upon the officers.

THE GOVERNMENT FORCES ROUTED.

Villegas-Pulido and His Ministers Take Refuge in Flight—No Confirmation of the Report That United States Consul Hanna Had Been Fired Upon.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—Confirmation of the report that a decisive battle had taken place between the government forces and those of the revolutionary party in Venezuela has been received at the navy department. A dispatch came to Secretary Tracy from Rear Admiral Walker, commanding the United States vessels in Venezuelan waters, saying: "It is reported that an engagement has taken place, resulting in total defeat of the government and capture of the Venezuelan commander in chief near Caracas. Revolutionists will occupy Caracas tomorrow." This message was dated at La Guayra and came to the navy department twenty-four hours after it was filed. Shortly after came another dispatch from the admiral. This was also dated La Guayra and read as follows: "President and Venezuelan ministry have abandoned Venezuela. Revolutionists successful."

It will be noticed that neither of these dispatches contains any mention of the report that the United States consul, Mr. Hanna, was fired on by a Venezuelan warship while in the harbor of Maguito in his naphtha launch, and because of this omission, and from the fact that neither Consul Hanna nor Minister Scruggs has sent a statement of such an occurrence to the state department, it is believed in official circles that the report is not true.

An official of the department whose position entitles him to speak authoritatively said to a United Press reporter in reference to the matter that had any assault been made on Mr. Hanna Admiral Walker would undoubtedly have notified the navy department of the fact.

Discussed by the Cabinet.

"I can hardly believe the report is true," he said, "for with two United States vessels near by, the Venezuelans would not have dared to fire on our flag. They could not hope to cope with our vessels, and if an engagement had taken place the small guns of the Chicago would have been sufficient to quickly silence the Venezuelan craft."

No message of any sort from either Minister Scruggs or Consul Hanna had been received at the state department up to the time of sending this dispatch. The only official information in the possession of Acting Secretary Adee was contained in the dispatches from Admiral Walker.

These messages were laid before the cabinet at its meeting, and the report that Consul Hanna had been attacked was also discussed, but in view of the fact that no official information concerning the reported outrage against him and the flag had been received the subject was passed over without action.

The United States has two vessels—the Chicago and the Kearsarge—in the harbor of La Guayra, and other vessels—the Concord—is within a day's sailing of Guayra. The Chicago and the Concord are two of the new vessels and are thoroughly equipped for warfare, so there is no fear in official circles that the interests of this country will not be well protected. Germany and Italy are each represented by one warship at La Guayra.

The Revolution Practically Ended.

CURACAO, W. I., Oct. 8.—News has been received here of the complete overthrow of the de facto government of Venezuela in the persons of Villegas-Pulido and his ministry. The place where the battle occurred was at San Mateo, on the way to Caracas.

It was a hot and bloody battle, but of short duration. The discontented soldiers of the government army were no match for the trained veterans of Crespo. The wholesale desertions to the ranks of the revolutionists added to the discomfiture of Villegas-Pulido's followers. His generals made desperate efforts to rally their men, but it was a hopeless task.

Dismayed by the terrible onslaught of the enemy they were routed and fled after the battle had been raging only a short time. The Crespists followed up their advantage, firing guns and machetes to wreak vengeance on the demoralized fugitives. Many were killed in the combat, the large majority of losses of course being on the government side, and the slaughter which characterized the pursuit of the unlucky soldiers of the administration was terrible. In this way the killed and wounded among the government troops were more numerous than those who fell in the battle itself.

The Commander in Chief Captured.

Villegas-Pulido's soldiers in their flight threw their arms away and scattered in all directions, their sole idea being to escape from the fury of their pursuers.

Besides the capture of an immense amount of ammunition and arms the Crespians made hundreds of prisoners, among the latter were many prominent leaders. The most important capture was that of the government commander in chief. Without waiting to rest his tired but enthusiastic men, General Crespo is reported to have given the order to advance at once upon the capital. It is quite probable that he is now in Caracas.

The latest de facto president, Villegas-Pulido, has installed Palacio and quitted the republic. He took with him all his cabinet. As soon as the news of their defeat at San Pedro was received they held a hurried consultation, and in pursuance of apparently fully prepared plans left Caracas by special train. Upon their arrival at La Guayra, which was still in the possession of their representatives, Villegas-Pulido and his ministers went aboard a vessel in the harbor. It is rumored that they have sailed already for Europe, but this is not confirmed.

Mayor Miller Was Murdered.

OMAHA, Oct. 8.—The coroner's inquest over the body of Mayor Miller, of South Omaha, who it was supposed had committed suicide, develops that it was probably a case of cold blooded murder. An expert testified that the handwriting of the note found on the body saying, "My head hurts me and I can stand it no longer," is not the mayor's handwriting. The pawnbroker from whom the revolver was bought that was found by Miller's side, and who at first said that Miller purchased it, now says that it was another man. The woman who said Miller told her it was his last night on earth gives a description that does not fit Miller. The developments have caused a sensation.

Science Progress.

AMUSING SCIENCE.

A Clever Bit of Magic for a Parlor Entertainment.

Problem—To find the position in which a knife must be held that a pear, suspended high up near to the ceiling, shall on the severing of the thread to which it is attached so fall as to cut itself in half upon the blade.

There is no necessity for line or plummet; one need only dip the suspended pear in a glass of water, which we forthwith remove. The water drips from it; we note the exact spot on floor or table where the drops fall and make a private mark on each spot. This is done previous to the entertainment, so that the guests on their arrival find the pear suspended ready for the feast and know nothing of the telltale drops.

At the proper moment you hold the knife, edge upward, immediately over the the point which you have marked, while some one applies a lighted match to the thread. If you have duly followed instructions and have selected a very ripe pear and very sharp knife, the pear in falling ought to cut itself in halves upon the blade.

For the experiment described in the foregoing one knife only is used, but it may also be performed with two knives, as shown in the cut. The knives must cross each other precisely over the point where the drop falls. The pear should then cut itself into four pieces. A few trials ought to be made previous to the public exhibition in order to suspend the pear at a correct height from the knife or knives upon which it is to fall.

Electricity and Plant Forcing.

There can be no doubt that electricity will eventually become a prime factor in the production of forced fruits, vegetables and flowers, and that this time is not far distant may be gleaned from the fact that a market gardener has introduced the light into a gigantic glass house devoted to the production of winter and spring salads. He uses three 2,000 candle power arc lights all night throughout the winter for the sole purpose of hastening the growth of salads. He has proved by actual experiment that the maturity of lettuce is hastened by 10 per cent., and that the actual gain upon one crop pays for running the lamps throughout the entire winter. With an actual gain of five days for each crop he secures a gain equal to fifteen days during the winter. It is also claimed by The Horticultural Times that the growth is more robust and the quality more perfect in every respect.

Balancing a Pulley.

Care must be taken that it is in "running" as well as "standing" balance. That is, the pulley having considerable width or being in fact a short cylinder, the counterbalance should always be located diametrically opposite, but on the same end of the cylinder that the excess of weight is found. When this is not done, the tendency when running is to turn the rim of the pulley parallel with the shaft, which is really the axis of rotation of the pulley. Thus the tendency of the pulley rim is to wabble sidewise in its attempt to bring the two or more heavy points opposite each other and at right angles to the shaft.—Power.

Origin of the Name La Grippe.

The name is grippe as used to designate the influenza, which was epidemic over so large a part of the world during the past two or three years, seems to have had a curious origin, according to a correspondent of Science. Dr. Grant, in an essay on the disease published in 1782, states that the French term la grippe is derived from an insect of that name remarkably common in France during the previous spring, and which the people believed contaminated the atmosphere and caused the disease.

Historic Cypress Tree.

The large cypress tree planted by John Bartram in 1808 in his famous botanical garden near Philadelphia is still growing there, and is about 70 feet high and twenty-eight feet in circumference.

THE BARTRAM DECIDUOUS CYPRESS.

The illustration of this celebrated tree here given is a reprint from Meehan's Monthly, which says of it: "Some excitement was created in Philadelphia by the statement that the city of Philadelphia, which has now control of this garden, intended to cut down the tree and send the trunk to the Chicago fair. Of course there was no truth whatever in this rumor, but it is needed to show how much interest the public took in preserving fine old t[illegible]

THE EVOLUTION OF BRASS.

Its Claim on Antiquity and Its Place in Ancient and Mediæval Progress.

Brass has a respectable claim on antiquity. It was used in the temple of Solomon; was known in old Rome in the Middle Ages and was associated with palace gates and monumental tablets, as it is today with buttons and pins. It has figured in architecture and statuary, and varied its uses from representing the person of a monarch to the dignity of a doorknob. It is found in spoons and kettles, and has honored the humble thimble and embellished the deadly cannon. In popular use and general service it has had a royal and ancient lineage, while its hard and unchanging complexion has furnished a metallic comparison for such human countenances as are more significant of brass than modesty.

As an American industry it owes its inception to an accidental shortage of supplies. When King George made his historic blunder and sent his fleet to blockade American ports, there was a consequent dearth of imported brass and official buttons. The latter was for a time substituted by bone, but the metallic article, in spite of patriotism, drove the other out of fashion. Israel Coe, of Waterbury, Conn., made a canvass of the local housewives and solicited wornout copper kettles and saucepans. These were cut up by slow and laborious efforts, melted with other alloys in an iron furnace and cupsized into rude molds. These uneven slabs of brass were passed through rolls until reduced to the desired thinness, the annealing being done in an open fire of chestnut wood in the millyard. Success attended these crude and original efforts and led to the establishment of a rolling mill at Waterbury, where the surprising output was made of 80,000 pounds of brass in one year. Today they make annual totals of millions.

The manufacture of brass kettles was a logical sequence, and the brass industry started in the Naugatuck valley perpetuates as it preceded all American enterprise in this direction. It has deployed on every available line of service and kept in touch with the volume of demand and the fastidiousness of taste. It represents an industry with many ramifications, and has kept a level step with progress in improvement and manufactures. Its inception and development is, says The Age of Steel, authority for the foregoing, a notable example of the persistent and energetic qualities so largely characteristic of American metallurgical progress.

Calligraphy of Men of Genius.

A Parisian, who has been making an examination of the calligraphy of the illustrious writers of France, agrees with an Englishman who has been similarly employed with the writings of Englishmen of genius, that celebrated literary men and great artists are, as a rule, wretched writers. The Englishman says, "I once secured a letter from Dean Stanley which took me three weeks to read, and a friend to whom I afterward showed the letter pointed out to me that I had not read it correctly." It appears from the Parisian's examination the able men in Paris resemble Dean Stanley. Alexandre Dumas, fils, and Victorien Sardou are the worst of contemporary writers. Balzac, Janin and Victor Cousin have also a bad name for their calligraphy, while Victor Hugo was the terror of compositors. Planat was also a bad writer, his manuscript of the "Pandects" being like a collection of hieroglyphics. Chateaubriand made many alterations in his manuscripts; but Delille, the musical Delille, was indecipherable. On the other hand, it is noted that among the fairly legible writers are Lamartine, Alfred de Musset, Rousseau and Fenelon. Voltaire was very careful with his manuscripts, and frequently took the trouble to recopy what he had written.

Wedding Anniversaries.

The custom of celebrating wedding anniversaries with peculiar gifts dates back to the mediæval Germans, among whom, if a married couple lived to celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding, the wife was presented by her friends and neighbors with a silver wreath, partly in commemoration of the good fortune that had prolonged the lives of the couple for so many years, and partly in recognition of the fact that they must have known a fairly harmonious existence. On the celebration of the fiftieth the wife received a wreath of gold. Thus these anniversaries came to be known as the silver wedding, the golden wedding day. This custom has been enlarged upon until now we have the cotton, which is the first anniversary; paper, second; leather, third; woolen, fifth; woolen, seventh; tin, tenth; silk and fine linen, twelfth; crystal, fifteenth; china, twentieth; silver, twenty-fifth; pearl, thirtieth; ruby, fortieth; gold en, fiftieth, and the diamond wedding on the seventy-fifth anniversary.

Notable Needlework.

Tambour work on fine cambric or muslin was practiced extensively in the reign of Queen Anne—Indian dimity patterns chiefly. The muslin was often cut and drawn, and worked in back stitches in fine interstices, in addition to the beautiful tambour needlework. A great deal of this lovely old work is still in existence. With the house of Hanover, a heavy kind of embroidery in gold and silver was introduced from Germany, a kind of stiff Anglo-German Louis Quatorze. Still it was not without a certain effect of richness and magnificence, and was suited to the decoration of coronation robes, beds of state and hangings for occasions of ceremony. White satin was sometimes used for a ground work, and some embroidered dresses and waistcoats of the time of the Georges, embroidered in gold and colored silks, are well worthy of careful study and admiration.

A Characteristic Letter from Carlyle.

Carlyle, while suffering from what he termed a "low, lost state," wrote as follows to Thackeray, dating the letter from Chelsea, May 24, 1860:

Alas, dear Thackeray, I durst as soon undertake to dance a hornpipe on the top of Bond Steeple as to cut a whitebait dinner in my present low and lost state! Never in my life was I as sick a man. You are a good brother man, and I am grateful. Pray for me and still flope for me if you can.

The Oldest Chest.

The earliest chest was simply the trunk of an oak tree scooped out and cut down the middle, one-half serving as a lid, which was at first kept closed by a strap of leather, and later by one made of iron. As late as the Fourteenth century, the oak chest, in addition to being a repository for valuables, served as a seat, and sometimes also as a table.

Good Health

WASHING OUT THE STOMACH.

Some Dangers Attending a Practice Now Much in Vogue.

In some quarters it has become almost a routine practice to wash out the stomach for nearly all diseases of this organ. After meals, especially the noonday meal, in private or in suitable cases, Dr. Soltan Fenwick, of London, in a timely article in The Practitioner, deals with the dangers attending it and the harmfulness arising from its employment in unsuitable cases. He mentioned six cases of convulsive seizures in chronic diseases of the stomach, apparently brought about by the use of the stomach tube. A case of perforation of a gastric ulcer occurring immediately after the use of the stomach tube is reported. Hemorrhage from the use of the stomach pump is not uncommon in some cases.

Dr. Fenwick has been able to collect three cases of boracic acid poisoning from the employment of this agent as an antiseptic in diseases of the stomach; two of the three cases proved fatal. The irrigation of the stomach not having been thoroughly performed, a sufficient quantity of the acid remained behind, absorption of which proved fatal.

The proportion of cases in which any of the grave accidents related make their appearance is certainly very small, but the possibility of their occurrence should ever be before the practitioner's mind before deciding on using the stomach pump, which is not only of questionable benefit in many cases, but decidedly injurious, if not dangerous, in a considerable number.

To Insure Long Life.

Sir Walter Scott and Bulwer Lytton said that for literary men three hours' work a day was all that was good for anything. A high authority has stated that a child's capacity for learning is at an end after three hours. And both these statements Dr. Everett Hale believes to be quite true. Dr. Hale, who at the age of seventy-two is strong and hearty, puts sleep as the prime necessity of health. He sleeps ten hours out of the twenty-four. About food, the less thought of, Dr. Hale believes, the better. He advises everybody to take time enough for their meals and to eat them in company whenever possible. The modern fad of the doctors—of meals often and light—he thinks a good one. "You should never sit down to the table to eat when you come in from work dead tired. Lie down for ten minutes first, or take a cup of tea, or even of wine—that is what wine is for, and the only thing it is for. But before you eat wait till the machine is a little rested or refreshed."

Dr. Hale further insists on the open air and enough of it every day, rain or shine. A man ought to be able to walk six miles a day without feeling tired. But it is rather a matter of time in the air than of physical exercise. For body or mind Dr. Hale does not believe in getting tired for the sake of resting. The work of a tired brain is useless, and it is a mistake to overstrain a tired body if it can be helped.

Housework as an Exercise.

To preserve gracefulness and agility of motion The Medical Record claims that there is no gymnasium so valuable, no exercise more beneficent in result than sweeping, dusting, making beds, washing dishes and the polishing of brass and silver. One year of such muscular effort within doors, together with regular exercise in open air, will do more for a woman's complexion than all the lotions and pomades that ever were invented. Perhaps the reason why housework does so much more for women that games is the fact that exercise, which is immediately productive, cheers the spirits.

Etiquette

ENTERTAINING.

The Art of Making Your Guests Feel Comfortable and Otherwise.

There is a very funny story told of a man who visited for a long time in a house with a woman he adored, and owing to the assiduous attention of his hostess found no opportunity to declare his devotion. In sheer desperation, as he was about to depart, he scribbled on his menu card, "Will you marry me?" and sent it to the lady in the dining room. "Tell the gentleman yes," was the message returned.

Apropos of which story a writer in the New York Sun reminds people that few hostesses appreciate that the fundamental principle in the art of fine entertaining is to gracefully leave your guests alone after having given them the freedom of your house and provided them with every comfort and convenience possible within its environment.

Every one remembers the unutterable exhaustion of visiting in a household where the hostess, with the kindliest and best motives in the world, demands the complete sacrifice of one's individuality and inclination to the pleasures she provides and the plans she formulates; where the hurried round of drives, visits and banquetings precludes all possibility for rest; where the letters you ought to write, the books you like to read and the sweet self communion which all but shallow natures enjoy for refreshment are turned to dust and ashes between fete and festival.

The theory of entertaining is nowhere so thoroughly understood and so exquisitely carried out as in English country houses, where the guest is taken in as one of the family, left entirely to follow his own bent through the long mornings, and only expected to be on duty at the full dress parade of the formal dinner. And this idea may be carried out even in small households where only one maid, and perhaps that one incompetent, is included in the menage, if the hostess is hospitable enough to receive her guest as one of the family.

The best sign of effort, either in the preparation of meals or the provisions for enjoyment on the part of the hostess, unconsciously defeats her intention to please her guests.

There is opportunity for the expression of pretty courtesy and welcome in the arrangement of the guest chamber, which should have all the little comforts and conveniences that are not easily transported or that may be forgotten.

If a person comes for a long stay in your household he will be most satisfactory if you are not constantly together. Every one needs at times intervals of solitude—retirement within the self home—to make companionship which precedes and follows more delightful, as we sip our sherbet after the roast, to prepare for the game.

This Date in History—Oct. 8.

1422—Columbus again in trouble, the ship being unseaworthy, and sea rough, but no land in sight, and the ships moving rapidly westward, the sailors declared they were in a region of enchantment, and all the "signs of land" were but disbelief delusions to allure them to destruction.

1792—John Hancock, statesman and "signer," died at Quincy, Mass.; born 1737.

1825—Samuel Colt, inventor, poet, born in Hartford.

1858—Franklin Pierce, fourteenth president, died at Concord, N. H.; born 1804.

1872—Horrible destruction of life at Peshtigo, Wis.; 700 people burned to death and at least 1,400 persons in the surrounding country; pine forests took fire in a drought, without a fortnight's warning; Chicago and Michigan many million dollars and over 2,000 lives by fire.

The Passing of Summer.

Summer is gone! We now regret with tears
Her varied charms—the strawberries, the peas,
The roses, all her wealth of benefits
Which from her horn of plenty she outpours,
Forgetting and forgiving minor woes
Of flies or bees, mosquitoes, sun or frost,
That spoil complexions, temper, frocks and fun.
Summer has fled. And with her disappear
Her severe critics, the fair sex, of course,
Whom flippant people, knowing not her charms,
Delight to libel as the Summer Girl.

Sweet daughter, she of August and July!
I love and her lovers count her queen.
'Tis she who wears those luring gowns displayed
In great shop windows in the early spring
That men admire and their wives never buy.
Hers are those ginghams, muslins, malls and things
Which make a rainbow of the baking streets;
Hers are those dainty shoes, red as the rose
Or white as lilies, or yes brown or tan.
Or bright, deep yellow, like the marigolds
That dot the dusty sidewalk till it blooms
And blossoms with a brilliant flower bed.
Hers, too, those haunting, flirting, fleeting skirts
So deftly raised to allow those pretty feet
And just a glimpse of something more above,
That when displayed, her frocks flutt'ring by
Fanned the hot air and seemed to soothen it.

She cheered the stay at home till he forgot
His missed vacation, troubles, woes and debts,
And stepped to wonder why she was, and then
Just thanked his stars and blessed the pretty face.

She loved her much in white or pink or blue,
So clean, so cool, always so sweet a sight.
But now, alas, said autumn is here,
In twinkling leaves she's lost the same.
Our love is fled, the Summer Girl has gone!

BREVITIES

—A meeting of the Republican Association will be held in the Rink to-morrow evening at eight o'clock.

—The Washingtonville Gun Club will hold a clay-pigeon shoot on Wednesday afternoon at two o'clock.

—The Camera club will take an "outing" to-morrow morning. They will start from the club room at eight o'clock.

—About twenty members of the Plainfield Bicycle Club will take part in the Columbus Day parade in New York Wednesday evening.

—The grocers of Plainfield are going to New York on Wednesday to see the big Columbus parade. Consequently all the grocery stores will be closed on that day.

—Windie thinks that if a horse is permissible as a pace maker a locomotive would also come under that head, and he will try a mile between railroad tracks, mixed in this manner.

—Leal's Cadet Corps of this city took part in the school and college parade of the Columbian celebration in New York to-day. The line of march was along Fifth avenue from Washington square to Fifty-ninth street.

—Mr. E. Hill, assistant deputy of the United States Sub-Treasury of New York, who lives at Cranford, was robbed of his gold watch and chain while listening, with 10,000 others, to Gov. McKinley at Newark last Friday night.

—The publishers of the Plainfield local papers, falling in with the spirit of the people here, have agreed to observe Wednesday as a general holiday and to publish no papers, thus giving their employees a chance to see the great Columbus celebration in New York on that day.

—The North Plainfield public school has so many pupils this year that the directors have been compelled to increase the classes and have engaged carpenters to put a large room at the highest class, and thus make two rooms of it. More school room is imperatively needed.

—Rain spoiled the parade of the Elizabeth Wheelmen on Saturday night at Elizabeth. A shower just before the start, when 500 were in line with uniformed corps and gay decorations, caused a general stampede from the ranks. A start was finally made, but more rain effectually stopped parading.

—Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew will be seen at Music Hall this evening. Speaking of the principals the critics say that Sidney Drew is very clever. He is young, intelligent, a thorough gentleman and a popular club man. He can row superbly if necessary, and walk over any cricketer pitted against him, can shoot anything abroad from a hat to a buffalo, bat base ball record and a wrestler's championship. He can act, Mrs. Drew is a young and very handsome woman of great promise. Her performance of Diabella Hope-Jones is a revelation. Mr. Drew is a graduate of Yale and during his course of college took many prominent parts in college athletics.

Red Men Celebrate.

The Miantonomoh Tribe of Red Men had a pow-wow Saturday evening and celebrated their third anniversary in bowling style. There were visiting Red Men from Somerville, Raritan, and Jersey City, there were also several Great Chiefs present. Past Sachem Eli Odam, Past Colonel Julian Scott in full cowboy costume, assisted by John H. Carney and Sidney B. Flower, dressed as Indians, all with full accoutrements, told an interesting story of wild Western life, and showed many curious relics gathered during a Western trip. John H. Carney initiated a "Dutchman," Charles H. Holstein-ang, and Sachem Coleman of Raritan and Great Sannop Forsyth of Jersey City delivered addresses. The affair ended with a supper.

New Work for the Women's Exchange

Arrangements have been made at the New York Exchange for Women's Work, on Fifth avenue, to develop photographs, reliefs, kodaks, and to supply material for workers. Photographs of the various processions of the Columbian celebration will also be taken and kept on sale.

Township Liquor Licenses Refused.

In the special sessions of the Court of Common Pleas held at Elizabeth Saturday morning, Judge McCormick said, "the court feels that the townships have as many saloons as they ought to have," and consequently refused three of the applications and referred the other applications for consideration.

A MOST AWFUL DEATH.

A YOUNG MAN'S LIFE CRUSHED OUT OF HIM LAST NIGHT.

The Royal Blue Line Sends him into Eternity while he is Trying to Catch a Train for New York, at a Station.

A fine-looking, well dressed young man, about twenty-three years old, was struck by a westbound express train of the Royal Blue Line at Greenville, about six o'clock last evening, and instantly killed. He had rushed in front of the express train while endeavoring to catch the way train for New York, which was approaching the depot on a side track. He was thrown against the waytrain, a passenger car, with such force as to split in the side of the car, and the tremendous suction caused by the fast express train carried him along the narrow space between the two trains.

Passengers in the way train say they could hear his body bumping several times, first against one train and then against the other. A crowd rushed to where the body lay, and a doctor upon examination found that every bone was broken, and the poor fellow's intestines forced up into his thorax, in such a manner that when the doctor endeavored to ascertain if the heart was still beating, the jelly-like flesh gave way under his touch and rebounded like rubber when he removed his hand.

Our informant was unable to ascertain the man's name.

But allowing a train to wait at a station for passengers when such a flying express is likely to pass is extremely wrong.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Samuel T. Lawson of New street to-day bought the house of Wm. H. Lyon on West Front street above Grant avenue.

Mrs. A. H. Chase a grower of roses, has bought the house at 109 Jackson avenue, and will remove to it from her present home in New York State.

Councilman Elias H. Bird yesterday picked a second crop of red raspberries from a bush at his home on Elm place. He says the fruit was of excellent flavor.

Rev. Hobart B. Chittenden will lecture this evening at eight o'clock in All Souls Church, Park avenue, on "Christopher Columbus and the Discovery of America." Admission free.

Mr. Simon Mantz who was so badly cut about the head about a month ago by being struck by a Lehigh Valley train at New Brooklyn, has so far recovered that he is able to go about.

Major F. W. McGettrick of Vermont, and the Hon. Charles Winfield of Hudson county will address the mass meeting of Democrats to be held at Music Hall, Wednesday evening, Oct. 19th.

Walter Smalley of Woodland avenue, who while racing on his bicycle a week ago, had his arm dislocated by a fall caused by the tire of his front wheel coming off, has now recovered from his injury.

The death of Randolph M. Titsworth, as elsewhere noted, after a brief illness, removes probably the oldest Central commuter. He having resided here over half a century. Three sons survive him. One of his sons is a member of the firm of Chas. Potter & Co., and City Treasurer Titsworth is a nephew of deceased.

Mr. W. B. Miner of 60 East Front street, who last Spring resigned his position as superintendent of the Boys' Club to devote his attention to music, is now studying under Campanini. He also leads a society of one hundred and fifty voices in New Haven, and under his direction they are now rehearsing the Messiah.

Messrs. C. Smith, T. Brantingham, T. H. Keller and Niel Apgar, all of this city, will with other crack shots from various parts of New Jersey, compose a state team to shoot at the Wilmington Gun Club Tournament, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week. They will also take part in the ninth monthly team championship match of the New Jersey Trap Shooter's League next Saturday.

Dunellen Doings.

"Ladies' Day" of the Middlesex County Bowling Green club was celebrated on Schepflin's green Saturday afternoon. The ladies did some fine bowling and among those present appeared the familiar faces of many New Brunswick and Somerville ladies.

On Thursday, the 13th, the Dunellen Bowling Green club will compete for the Adams Challenge Cup. This will be the closing game of the season.

The entertainment given by Prof. DeSoto under the auspices of Tuscarora Lodge, Knights of Honor, at New Market, Saturday evening, was a decided success. The hall was well filled.

The C. Y. M. L. Bowlers Win.

The Catholic Young Men's Lyceum of this city defeated a team from the Holy Cross Lyceum of New York, by bowling, in the club house on West Sixth street, Saturday evening. The C. Y. M. L. won the first game by 6 pins the score being 624—603. The latter team gained a second game, winning by 72 pins and a total score of 729 against 699.

The highest individual score, made by John J. Lynch of the C. Y. M. L., was 190.

The visiting team remained over Sunday and were entertained at the homes of the members of the league.

There were five bowlers on each team.

—Doane & Edsall's shoe department, lately added to Edsall's popular establishment, they say is coming in for a goodly amount of favorable comment. It is conducted on the right plan to make it go. See their new "ad" to-day.

POLITICAL PICKLES.

—The U. S. Grant Republican Club will hold an interesting meeting in Spencer's Hall, Somerset street, to-night. W. S. Ford will speak.

—Every time a coal wagon passes through the street it is earning seventy-five cents extra, for the gigantic coal combine that the Democrats voted to legalize.

The Republican State Committee has secured Mr. W. J. Ford of this city to address meetings four times a week, or oftener if he can spare the time, on "the tariff."

—The Wheelmen's Division of the Republican Association will ride to Scotch Plains to-morrow evening to take part in the banner raising. They will wear their uniforms.

—"Yes, the Democratic party is the party of the poor man, and if he continues to vote that ticket he will never be anything else than a poor man."—Terence V. Powderly.

—The Cleveland and Stevenson Campaign club will meet to-night in their club room in the Crescent rink building.

—Mayor Saunders, of North Plainfield, and Mr. Shallow of Rahway, addressed a Democratic meeting in the old council rooms on West Front street, Saturday evening. Sleek and Shallow!

—"We Told You So."

Mayor Saunders' second stump speech, reported as made a few nights ago, makes him say that the question of wages is controlled by the law of supply and demand. That is right. We said the same thing in THE NEWS of June 23d last, nearly four months ago, and in the campaign of 1888, in THE NEWS and on the stump, and Mayor Saunders, in saying so at this late day, is but preaching good Republican doctrine, which he can always find in THE NEWS.

But he wants to go a little further.

We also said that whatever tended to increase manufactures tended to increase the demand for labor. Protection works that way. Free Trade don't.

We don't claim anything new for this idea. Our mutual friend, George Washington, of hatchet fame, said the same thing in substance, in one of his first messages to Congress, and as the noble George didn't consider it private, we don't suppose it would cause his revered bones to rattle, if our good Democratic convert were to look at it twice. It is a hundred and some odd years old, and has a good flavor about it yet—good enough for Republicans to swear by and also intelligent Democrats, as the Mayor is showing himself to be, the closer he gets to understanding Republican principles.

In his first speech in favor of the Democratic Free Trade platform, he was so completely cornered by a Mews' correspondent that he manfully came out and frankly admitted that he didn't believe in Free Trade.

Now he is going a step further. We trust he will grow in wisdom just enough to help uphold our worthy principles by voting for Harrison, Protection and Reciprocity, thereby helping to swell the big majority we are going to have four weeks hence.

Let Thinking Voters Read and Act.

CHAPTER LVI.

AN ACT to provide for the use of the proceeds of certain grants and leases.

Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey that all moneys hereafter paid into the State Treasury as the proceeds of sales, grants or leases made of any lands subject to the passage of this act, of lands under water belonging to the State shall be deemed a part of the current revenue of the State and shall be applied to and used for the payment of the ordinary expenses of the State and for the payment of such general or special appropriations as may now or hereafter be authorized by law to be paid from the State fund; provided that nothing in this act shall be construed as transferring to the general fund of the State any right, title or interest in any securities or property now a part of the assets of the fund to the proceeds or income derived from any securities or property now belonging to said school fund.

And be it enacted that all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect immediately.

Approved March 30, 1892.

LEON ABBETT.

Up to the time of the passage of that act the riparian income had been sacredly devoted to the growth of the State's school fund. Under that act it has since been used to pay the Democratic hecklers whom the Governor has put up the State payrolls.

George Thatcher's New "Tuxedo."

Major Anderson Post, No. 109, have secured Geo. Thatcher's company to appear at Music Hall, in "Tuxedo," next Thursday evening, Oct. 13th, the proceeds of the engagement to be used as a benefit of the relief fund of the Post. This is the first engagement of New York G. A. R. "Tuxedo," it is said, has been rewritten for the present theatrical season and contains a number of new and entirely new draws. The same excellent company which characterized its appearance in the city last season has been retained, including such well known performers as George Thatcher, Harry Hunter, Burt Shepard, John A. Coleman, Ed Marble, Geo. W. Lewis, Jay Quigley, John Daly, W. W. Durham and Ed. Wheeler, comedians; R. J. Jose, Raymon Moore, H. W. Fridhman, Theo. Otis, Miss Ida Fitchugh and Miss Grace Hamilton, singers; and the Misses Alice Evans, Blanche Hayden, Corine Cook and Laura Armstrong.

—The Plainfield Council, Royal Arcanum, No. 711, will celebrate their decennial anniversary to-night.

CORRESPONDENCE.

The Absurdity of Socialism.

No. V.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—I can hardly, with a grave countenance, take serious notice of a very common expression, "Oh, Henry George and some of those Anarchist, Nationalist, and Socialist fellows ought to be shot, etc." But assertion does not make him one, so let us show him in his own way as serious argument as the case will stand.

Communism and Socialism are so much allied, and so near to close upon each other, that writers on the subject do not always know where they agree and where they differ, but one thing is most however about them is that they wish to protect the citizen from competition. They wish to provide an artificial barrier against the present jostling crowding for a bare living, instead of allowing competition to naturally adjust matters, as would be the case were land easy of access to any one willing to work on it.

In socialism it is the State which is to control everything—the way to work, the amount of work, how much pay to get, how many hours to labor, etc., etc., leave it to my readers to imagine how long any such scheme would work. It would be a boonzua for the lazy and a millstone to the intelligent and industrious. In face a little consideration of what human nature is, ought to convince any one that sumptuary laws always fail of their aim. Nature turns up on against natural conditions and consequently do not represent the actual wants of the people at large.

The moment a man allows his actions to be controlled by others he at once loses his freedom, and, to put it in true language, he becomes a slave.

In socialism there are two parties, the governing and the governed—the upper dog and the lower dog. I need not say which party would fall to.

I met a man the other day who had returned from one of the socialist settlements which are the disciples of philanthropists have started in Topolobampo, Mexico, and he said to me "well the idea is not a bad one, but I couldn't stand the management, it was very bad." And so it will always be with Socialism—the management will be bad. It cannot help being so for human nature is fallible. Pride, anger, sloth, envy and all the other passions of man will have their sway and it is only by a natural and healthy competition that the sense of man neutralize each other. In any artificial State they would be only nursed and fostered either to break out in anarchy or to fall flat as a dismal failure before despairing humanity.

Half the land in the world is uncultivated and more than half its inhabitants are unjustly taxed. Remedy those evils first, then talk to me about single taxers, voting, and Socialism and communism will soon become unmeaning and senseless bywords.

PLAINFIELD'S LATEST IMPROVEMENT.

Electric Clocks set Every Hour by Telegraph from Washington.

In the direction of some irresponsible people Plainfield may be a slow town. However their estimate of what a town should be like is not worth considering, and the progress of our city has been at a speed consistent with safety—as the Central Railroad of New Jersey crossings is, in referring to their elegant express trains. Plainfield is now furnishing her people with good water in their houses. As for illumination, it has been many years since the gas works were started. Then the Electric Light Company was started and a month ago the electric railroad was built, and altogether we have a lively gobble. But our elder folks are somewhat bewildered, yet we are going at a speed that is consistent with safety.

The latest improvement added is that of electric clocks, clocks that have Washington as the one common centre of information for the time, which is sent to us by electricity, and is always "right." Each subscriber is furnished a clock; the same as a telephone, only of much less cost. It is kept synchronous with Washington time and each clock has a battery which generates current for winding the clock every hour, while a wire leading from the main office, in the shape of a circuit of the phone, sends over the time every hour, in other words sets the hands at the exact time.

The Tree seemed Loaded with Raccoons.

Arthur Phillips and Harry Stewart, two local Nimrods, while hunting the latter part of last week on the mountains back of Scotch Plains, had their attention called to a large whitewood tree by the actions of their dog.

They examined the tree and saw a raccoon. They commenced firing and other raccoons appeared until the tree seemed filled with them.

Finally, after forty shells had been fired, and the tree almost denuded of leaves, the raccoons came tumbling down. There were, however, so many injured by the small shot, that the aid of the dog and heavy stones were required to dispatch them. They proved to be a mother 'coon and four young ones. The old one weighed twenty pounds and the youngsters weighed of the smaller ones was fifty pounds.

Somerset County Grand Jury Returns

The Somerset county Grand Jury, in concluding its labors, brought in twenty-two indictments and presented several charges presented for their consideration. To the surprise of most people in the county, Mrs. Mary Ann Dunkerley Stasch, the Raritan policeman who killed James Hahn for resisting arrest, was not among the number presented for custody. Two prominent farmers living near North Branch were indicted on a charge of arson, they are Jacob Van Nest and Simeon Cole. Both are charged with planning and aiding in the burning of Van Nest's daughter. The girl died, so her father says, as the result of the crimes committed by Cole and Van Nest. Both pleaded not guilty.

MAY BE HER DOOM.

The Statement of a Witness Against Lizzie Borden.

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 10. (Special)—Concerning the Borden murder mystery John H. Murphy, of Fall River, will testify that he was standing on the sidewalk close to the Borden house when Mr. Borden entered his yard, about 10:40 o'clock on the morning of Aug. 4, and he saw him a minute or two later ushered into the house by Bridget Sullivan. Mr.

MISS LIZZIE BORDEN.

Murphy will swear that while Mr. Borden was walking in the yard he saw a window blind of the room in which Mrs. Borden's body was afterwards found cautiously opened by a young woman, who had that same morning told him when he called at the Borden house, about 8:30 o'clock, that her father had gone downtown and would not be back until noon, or later. This woman he has identified as the defendant, Lizzie A. Borden.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—(Special.)—The Morning News of October 6 says: "The export trade of Great Britain is on the decline. The last returns show a decrease of 12 per cent. Four are manufacturers of plush, four of tube tourtins, one of linens, one of cotton, one of machinery, and three of woolen goods.

CORYDVILLE, Ken., Oct. 10. (Special)—Emmet Dalton, the survivor of the Dalton gang, is so greatly improved that it is probable he will recover. It is thought that he will be lynched.

Raising the Railroad Tracks at Elizabeth.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company has bought the Tannery Building opposite the old depot at Elizabeth for $40,000. The building is to be torn down and a new street opened through the site.

The work of getting ready for the track elevation of the Pennsylvania Railroad in Elizabeth began on Saturday, when a gang of about 200 men from the Central and Pennsylvania Roads, with a couple of construction trains, were put to work at the point where both railroads intersect, lifting the Central's tracks so as to make room for the big pillars that will be used to support the new street running to Central Railroad tracks at the spot. The arch is to be eighteen feet high, and on it will run the four tracks of the Pennsylvania railroad. The work of changing the tracks had to be done on Sunday, as the travel over the crossing is lighter then on week days, when 700 trains on both roads cross this point every twenty-four hours.

The Elizabeth's elevated tracks will be higher here than anywhere else in the city and the grade will change gradually toward North and South Elizabeth, at which points it will end. When the work is completed, covering all of the space for the arch pillars had been made.

Columbus Day Exercises at Park Place Chapel.

Columbus Day exercises were held yesterday afternoon in the Park Place Chapel of the Methodist church. The interior of the building was prettily decorated with flags and flowers. All the scholars marched down carrying flags and singing "America," and the "Star Spangled Banner," in which they were accompanied by the organ. An address was made by Superintendent John Vallandingham, in commemoration of the event.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Indian Schools.

At last the government has found out what to do with the Indian. It is to educate him and give him industrial training and a farm, and then let him scrabble for himself or starve. He does not starve.

In April, 1878, seventeen Indian warriors, who had been captured while on a raid, were sent to the government school for freedmen at Hampton, Va., perhaps to punish them in the worst possible way. This was the beginning of government Indian schools. An appropriation of $20,000 had been made the previous year for educating Indians. The appropriations have increased almost steadily from year to year till for 1892 $2,291,650 were set apart for this purpose. From the seventeen braves sentenced to the freedmen's school at Hampton in 1878 there are now 4,686 pupils in the various Indian schools that receive government aid.

There are now in operation and to be opened immediately seventeen national training schools for Indian youth. All are open to boys and girls, thus instilling into the plastic youthful redskin mind the idea of coeducation and equal capacity of the sexes. The institutions are in four different states of the Union—from North Dakota to Arizona: from Carlisle, Pa., to California. The pioneer government school especially for these students was established at Carlisle, Pa., in 1879. The Indian schools are the especial pets of the interior department, and the fostering care bestowed on them has not been in vain.

The largest Indian school is that at Carlisle, where there are now 1,000 pupils. The second largest is Haskell institute, Lawrence, Kan., with 600 pupils. The instruction is practically the same in all. The true idea of Indian education is of course primarily industrial training. At Haskell the student spends half the day in getting book learning, the other half in learning how to work. The farm occupied by the institution was a gift from the citizens of Lawrence. It contains 650 acres. The red youth is not taught as rapidly as white children, but they do learn, with painstaking care, and retain what they receive. They are quieter than white children. Even when the boys play ball they do it in silence—not splitting the air with yells. They excel in the athletic training naturally.

A Question for Women's Clubs.

The New York Herald has sprung an important question on the industrial and domestic world both. It is practically this: If a husband is too poor to keep a hired girl, which will conduce most to the highest domestic happiness—for the wife to do her own housework, or to earn money enough herself to pay a girl for doing the housework? Mrs. Mildred Atkins Warner says emphatically that it is better for her to earn money and have some other elegant leisure not be tired to death evenings. She will have at least a little time to greet her husband with a smile, and make both husband and children look up to her as something else than a mere domestic slave. She will have time to go in for the esthetic side of civilization, higher education, pretty clothes, etc.

There is one point, however, which Mrs. Warner seems afraid to meet fully. She says it would be a reflection on a man's ability to support his family if it should be known that his wife earned money. Therefore she is of opinion that a money earning wife should earn it at home on the sly, unbeknown to the public, as it were. But really, now, what is the use of humbug, or must women be always trying to know something, wherever they go about? It is to be considered that the conditions of life and society are so changed that we now need to satisfy our civilized longings at least four times as much as the people of half a century ago did. It is not always within reach of the best of husbands to supply these needs. Is it anything against him, or her either, that his wife earns money if she wants to and needs to? And if at all, then why not squarely and openly?

We pause for answer.

Marie Corelli, the novelist, is called by the London Spectator the "apostle of yearsomeness." However that may be, she now seems to have a misunderstanding in regard to her name set right. It seems to hurt her little feelings for people to say that she is a daughter of Charles Mackay, and that her name is the simple plain Scotch one of Miss Mackay. Why it should is not clear, but at any rate she does wish, does Marie, that we would not say she is the daughter of Charles Mackay when she is only his adopted daughter. She does wish, too, that the press of America would correct the impression about her name and let the world know her real genuine Jacob of a name is Marie Corelli. All right, Marie. We make the correction with pleasure, if it will do you any good, though of what earthly consequence it is to anybody we fail to see.

Savannah is to have the largest street car motor in the world upon her electric roads, which altogether take in nearly forty miles.

ANXIETIES OF POLITICS.

Republicans Warned to Look to Congress and the Senate.

PENNSYLVANIA'S BALLOT MUDDLE.

Chairman Harrity Sounds an Address on the Vexed Question—Another Letter on the Alleged Conspiracy—Cleveland's Contribution—Stevenson's Acceptance.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—Senator John Sherman is at the Fifth Avenue hotel. He said in reference to the effect of the present presidential contest:

"I regard the election of a majority of Republican senators as next in importance to the election of a Republican president of the United States. The most careful attention should be given to the election of legislatures and the selection of suitable candidates for the legislature of each state. It is probable that the election of a Democratic president would carry with it the election of a Democratic senate and house, and if so place the whole government in the hands of men bound to revolutionize our tariff laws.

"Our excellent financial policy would be changed so as to produce panic and desolation in all parts of the country. All the people of the United States are deeply interested in maintaining the principle of the present tariff laws, and a question of vital importance is the threatened overthrow of our system of currency by the introduction of state bank paper money, the effect of which is to reassert in an emphatic way the decline of states' rights in respect to our currency."

Chairman Thomas H. Carter, of the Republican national committee, speaking of the election, said: "There should not be any doubt about the result. The people are opposed to free trade and the reactionary policy of the Democratic party. The common sense of the people stands as a bulwark opposed to any policy which by any possibility may result in hauling the nation down to commercial chaos, industrial distress and financial ruin.

"I think the people understand that both branches of congress would necessarily be Democratic in the event of President Harrison's defeat. We cannot lose the presidency and save either the senate or the house. We are therefore confronted with what must seem to the ordinary citizen an appalling proposition to promptly and absolutely reverse the policies under which our present prosperous condition has been brought into existence."

Secretary of the Treasury Charles W. Foster was present when Chairman Carter made this statement, and he nodded his head approvingly at every word. "There is no doubt," said Secretary Foster, "that the control of both branches of congress is at stake in this election, as well as the presidency.

"The senate is already close and the Democrats have the house. It is well that the people of the whole country should understand that the election of a Democratic president would carry with it the surrender of the entire legislative branch of the federal government to the Democratic party."

Cleveland's Contribution.

The announcement is made at Democratic headquarters that three weeks ago Mr. Cleveland contributed his check for $10,000 to the campaign fund. It is also reported that Mr. Cleveland's personal friends E. C. Benedict, Mr. Whitney and Mr. Dickinson, have each contributed $10,000.

Mr. Harrity said that the money sent from Pennsylvania of an effort by Democratic officials of the Keystone state to prevent the use in Republican counties of the official ballot for the purpose of rendering it ridiculous. Mr. Harrity handed out the following on the subject:

The statement that there has been any suggestion or effort upon the part of any of the Democratic officials of Pennsylvania to prevent or retard the counting of the official ballots for use at the coming election is the work of Chairman Reeder's very vivid imagination.

Mr. Reeder ought to know that Sept. 13 was the last day for filing certificates of nomination in Pennsylvania and Sept. 20 the last day for filing nomination papers. He ought to know further, that objections to such certificates of nomination and nomination papers designed for the state at large may be filed at any time within thirty days after the last day for the filing of such certificates and papers.

It is therefore very obvious to even ordinary minds that there can properly be no certification of the form of the official ballot to be used in any district of the state until after Oct. 20, and if objection be filed as to nominations in any district the form of the official ballot in that particular district cannot be certified until after such objections have been considered by the board appointed for that purpose.

When the proper time arrives the nominations certified to the state department of Pennsylvania will be duly certified to the county commissioners of counties as required by the act of June 19, 1891, and sensational stories of the character given out by Chairman Reeder of Mr. Pennypacker's or any other of the Republican state central committee, will neither expedite nor retard their action.

I am really sorry that Chairman Reeder has become apprehensive about the result in Pennsylvania. In many quarters there has been a disposition to concede Pennsylvania to the Republicans, however much the ballot may prevail that many states heretofore Republican will vote the Democratic ticket this year. It has remained for Mr. Reeder, however, to serve public notice that the ballot to be used in Pennsylvania may be found in the Democratic column this year.

Stevenson's Letter of Acceptance.

The following letter has been received at the Democratic national headquarters:

BLOOMINGTON, Ills., Oct. 3.

Hon. W. F. Harrity, Chairman Democratic National Committee, New York:

DEAR SIR—I have returned home after a very satisfactory visit to the South. I have read with great pleasure Mr. Cleveland's letter of acceptance, and I am pleased with your views upon all questions discussed. Ably and tersely he reflects the views of the Democratic party upon the currency question. I need hardly say to you that I fully and earnestly indorse that part of his letter. He is the able exponent of the Democratic doctrine. Should I be elected I will to the best of my ability cooperate with him in giving practical effect to the views contained in his letter. Yours very truly,

A. E. STEVENSON.

PENNSYLVANIA'S BALLOTS.

More About the Alleged Democratic Plot to Capture the State.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 10.—As a proof of the complaint of the Republicans that the Democrats were planning to capture by stratagem the vote of Pennsylvania at the coming election, the following confidential letter, dated Oct. 6, from the state printer, W. H. Griest, to Chairman Wright, of the Democratic state committee, has been made public:

I want to call your attention at once to a important matter. It is evident by my mind that the change in the size of the ticket will prevent some counties in the state from having an election.

We are now preparing a form of ticket that will be office, and the county ticket to be voted on. It is to be printed for the ticket and colored paper for the opposite side of the ticket. This will be for Erie county, but I am of the opinion that no county will take a sheet less than that for the ticket and stuff for the ballot.

The time required for printing is limited by law, and but very few printing offices in the state have a perfecting machine. You, or state committee should notify chairmen of Democratic counties to be on the alert and get contracts made wherever they can.

There is not enough paper in the country sufficient size to print the tickets. Fayette county has contracted for her tickets (by wire) with E. K. Meyers. He can only do for only three or four counties, and will not go beyond his ability to contract.

Democratic counties ought first to receive attention, for Philadelphia will by her actions get her tickets in time. Lebanon, Northampton and others whose status you know better than I can tell you should be given a portion. The trouble I see, as stated in this matter; it is a "condition, not a theory" that presents itself, and you may do well to remember that any paper will be used in any localities in the state will not be able to vote in November for want of tickets.

No Change Will Be Made.

HARRISBURG, Oct. 10.—No further change will be made in the form of the official ballot under the Baker act so far as the state department is concerned. After Oct. 20 the nominations on file in the department will be certified to the proper county officers, and the county commissioners will have to arrange the ballot to suit themselves. It is understood that no more sample ballots will be sent out from the state department.

Politics in Yale.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 10.—Mr. Robert Bacon, Wade, of St. Louis, president of the Yale Republican club, has received the following cablegram from United States Minister William Walter Phelps at Berlin: "I challenge the honor of mailorming the Yale battalion."

The Yale Republican marching club now numbers about 600 men. It will march in battalion formation and will be commanded by Noah H. Swayne, of New York city, with the rank of colonel.

The Democratic club at Yale has about 200 members on its roster, but President Whitney says it will make a big showing when its organization is completed. It is understood that ex-Secretary of the Navy William C. Whitney will provide uniforms for the latter organization.

Mr. Chauncey M. Depew is billed to address a distinctively Yale Republican meeting on the 28th inst.

FASHIONS.

Plaid Waists.

The foulard and cotton blouses of summer are superseded by waists of plaid silks, which may be had in gay Scotch tartans and also in more subdued French colorings. Sometimes only the upper part of a gimp and large bias sleeves are made of plaid silk cut on the bias, and all else is of serge, tweed or vigoone, but the entire waist of plaid is largely imported to wear with various skirts of dark wool or silk. A gay silk waist of bright Stuart plaid, with red as the prevailing color, is gathered on a fitted lining that points slightly in front and back, the sides defining the waist line. The silk is bias throughout, with the fullness from the shoulders drawn down under a folded girdle of the same that points upward quite high in front and slopes to a 3-inch belt in the back. A slender gilt buckle which curves in with the figure is passed through the ends of the girdle, while the back is fastened under a rosette. A collarette of the silk with selvage finish is plaited below a high collar and points low in front and back, while the shorter shoulder plaits reach only to the top of the sleeves. These sleeves are large gigots of bias silk, with turned over cuffs. A fashionable blend of blue, red or green dresses is made of white silk, with bias bars of blue and green, each edged with bright yellow.—Harper's Bazar.

New Styles in Woolens.

The fine plain serges have been succeeded by a wide ribbed variety, which shows to advantage in a plain trimmed skirt. Blue serges are cut in attractive colorings. In tweeds are not iceable boucle effects, fluffy curls breaking out of unexpected places in textures of this kind. The color harmonies are daring this season—as, for instance, blendings of blue and crimson. Rep goods, always ladylike material, have come to stay for the winter. There are the self colored reps and reps with a fine stripe of contrasting silk. A new rep is that which has pinpoint spots of bright color on a dark ground. Many of the new woolens are striped.

Tea Gowns.

Frills of silk muslin plaited concertina wise are quite the daintiest finish for the sleeves of evening or tea gowns, and, moreover, are quite universally in vogue at the hand. A pretty tea gown was of sea de nil silk falling in concertina plaits from the yoke, and with full sleeves arranged in the same way. The pendent tea gowns are fashioned princess style and do not fit the figure with too much precision. A very dainty gown was of cream crepe with large flowers of gray blue fancy silk and a double cascade of creamy lace down the front and gray-blue ribbons.

Jacket Corsages.

The imported dresses are many of them made with jacket corsages. These jackets vary in fashion and include the short divcolor jacket made with the prominent revers, and the Mikado jacket open up the back as well as the front.

IN HONOR OF COLUMBUS

New York in an Unprecedented Blaze of Flags and Bunting.

THE CELEBRATION ON IN EARNEST.

Twenty Thousand Boys, Including a Delegation from the Indian School at Carlisle, Pa., Participate in the Schools' Parade, the First One of the Week.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—It is probable that no city was ever before so beautifully, so gayly, so artistically, and above all so boldly decorated as New York city is today in honor of the Columbus celebration. It was to be expected that the city buildings, federal buildings, hotels, club houses and prominent business houses would be resplendent in gala attire, but the patriotism of private citizens comes as something of a surprise in the history of celebrations even in patriotic New York.

Besides being the banner of the United States, no flag is so effective for decorating purposes as the Stars and Stripes, and of course it is the piece de resistance of the decorations. The flag is seen everywhere, in all sizes and arranged in every conceivable form. Huge creations of cotton, dotted with stars and barred with stripes, and of course colored red, white and blue, are also used extensively for drapery purposes. Next to the Stars and Stripes are most frequently seen the red and yellow colors of Spain and Italy's cross in its center of green, white and red. The three flags blend well and are effectively used together in thousands of cases. The portrait of Columbus occupies a prominent place in all the more elaborate decorations.

Broadway and Fifth avenue of course carry off the palm for brilliancy and profusion of effect. From the Battery to Twenty-third street Broadway runs between two banks of color. Every building from the Battery to Bowling Green, with its historic memories, begins the blaze. The Washington building is the most notable there. The next building to catch the eye by its profusion is the Equitable, which is literally covered with flags, banners, shields, streamers and pictures. Across the way old Trinity joins in the gayety.

In the Wall street district the walls of money and public buildings hide their veiled fronts under panoplies of flags. The Drexel building, subtreasury building and custom house are the most profusely decorated. Coming back to Broadway, awaited in brilliant colors, and passing by St. Paul's chapel, gracefully trimmed with the national ensign, the stranger finds himself in the center of everything, City Hall park.

The city hall, as is befitting, is certainly the most elaborately decorated building in New York. On all four sides the walls are literally smothered with flags, banners, shields and all manner of gay devices. The cosmopolitan idea has been carried out to its fullest extent. No matter from what remote country came the stranger who stands in the park and views the historic pile, he will see his nation's flag entwined around its coat of arms. Above all are gayly fluttering strings of numerous small banners.

Newspaper row is resplendent. The home of every journal is more or less attractively decorated. The most elaborate work has been done on the Pulitzer building. Colored lights make a fine sight at night, and by day bell up, Bunting loses itself in a maze of color. Each building, without exception, has something in the way of decoration. Many have original and striking designs, all having reference, of course, to Columbus and the greatness of his New World. To describe each in detail would be impossible.

Union and Madison squares, central points of interest always, are bounded by four lines of profuse decorations.

Arlington and Fifth avenues, that Meets of the country visitor, does not rival Broadway in profusion of decoration, but it is still a very gay and festive looking section square to Central park. At Twenty-second street a big triumphal arch has been erected. The arch is outlined with red, white and blue bunting. Palms, flowers and potted plants fill the spaces between. Flags are lavished over the main structure. At night colored lights give brilliancy to the scene.

The Columbus Arch.

By all odds the most interesting and most beautiful thing in the way of decoration is the arch spanning Fifth avenue at Fifty-eighth street. It is imitation marble. The design is classic and tasteful. Two Parian marble columns on each side, in close niches, in each of which is a group of sculptural representation of peace. The pillars are entwined with grapevines and garlands hang from the top. Surrounding the arch are five allegorical female figures. The central one stands boldly in the prow of an advancing boat. On either side are two heralds with outstretched arms. On the brow of the arch is the inscription, "The Genius of Liberty Carries in Memoriam Glorious to Christopher Columbus."

The second day of the quadrennial celebration of the discovery of the New World was devoted to religious services. All in Roman Catholic and Protestant churches the services were of the most impressive character. The more important services were held in St. Patrick's cathedral, where Archbishop Corrigan officiated.

Today, the third day of the celebration, the parade of the schoolboys took place, and it was a brilliant affair. There were 20,000 boys and twenty-nine bands of music in line. Thousands of boys from the public and parochial schools of Brooklyn and other cities the students of the higher institutions of learning, then bodies of uniformed cadets, including one of 300 Indian boys from the Indian school at Carlisle, Pa.

THE ALASKAN BOUNDARY

Great Britain Trying to Get a Slice of Our Arctic Shore.

MOUNT ST. ELIAS A DISPUTED POINT

British Columbia Contends That the Shore Line Is Not Correct and Commissioners Have Been Appointed by the Two Countries to Settle the Question.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—When the United States bought Alaska from the emperor of Russia in 1867 it accumulated two lively quarrels with Great Britain—the seal question and the boundary between Alaska and British Columbia.

The controversy regarding the boundary line has now reached a stage where each government has appointed a commissioner. The British appointee is the chief astronomer of the Royal College of Canada; for the United States, Professor T. C. Mendenhall, superintendent of the coast and geodetic survey, has been named by the president. They will meet in Montreal, probably next month.

The line in dispute was laid down originally in the treaty between Russia and Great Britain, executed in 1825, and is there described as follows: "Commencing from the northernmost point of Prince of Wales island, which point lies in the parallel of 54 degs. 40 min. north latitude, and between the 131st and 133d degs. of west longitude (meridian of Greenwich), the said line shall ascend to the north along Portland channel as far as the 56th deg. of north latitude; from the line shall follow the summit of the mountains parallel to the coast as far as the point of intersection of the 141st deg. of west longitude, and finally the meridian line of the 141st deg. in its prolongation as far as the Frozen ocean."

What "Coast" Means.

It was understood first that the island called the Prince of Wales island shall belong wholly to Russia (now, by this cession, to the United States).

Second, that wherever the summit of the mountains which extend in a direction parallel to the coast, from the 56th deg. of north latitude to the point of intersection of the 141st deg. of west longitude, shall prove to be at the distance of more than ten marine leagues from the ocean, the limit between the British possessions and the line of coast which is to belong to Russia, as above mentioned, shall be formed by a line parallel to the winding of the coast, and which shall never exceed the distance of ten marine leagues therefrom.

At that time the interior of the country was but little known, hence the insertion of the alternative line, "ten marine leagues from the coast." Better acquaintance with the territory has developed the fact that the then supposed range of mountains parallel to the coast does not exist, so the other line must be established.

There will not be much difficulty in locating the line after the meaning of the word "coast" has been agreed upon. Here lies the only probable important points of difference. The British officials assert that what is meant is the outside line of the fringe of islands skirting the coast, and to support the contention will allege that Portland channel was named in the treaty by mistake, that what was meant was another arm of the sea some miles to the westward. Another point made by the British officials is that Portland channel does not extend to the 56th deg. of north latitude, and therefore could not have been meant.

A Valuable Territory.

The United States commissioner will contend that the "coast" line means the main land, not that of the outlying islands. He will assert that at the time the treaty was made the channel was believed to extend as high as 56 degs. by both parties and was used advisedly.

Mount St. Elias is at the beginning of the north and south boundaries of Alaska. It is not in the exact corner of Alaska, but is just one mile from it. Its height is 17,391 feet. The British may lay claim to this mountain.

"The boundary question," said Professor Mendenhall yesterday, "ought to be settled soon. The territory is not known to be valuable. There are reports of good mineral finds, but they are not verified. If they should turn out to be true of course the settlement will be that much more difficult to make. We could have agreed with England about the seals in two minutes a quarter of a century ago; now several years are required to reach a settlement.

"I shall suggest to my co-commissioner in Canada," continued the professor, "that the best way to settle up the several streams emptying into the ocean, a distance of thirty miles, establish those points and then unite them by short, straight lines. Of course this is upon the theory that the coast of the main land be taken as the base of the thirty miles operations; if that is not the case the territory will scarcely be worth contending for. If the island line be taken it will cut off from the United States the greater portion of the mainland, including Sitka, the largest city in Alaska."

Poisoned in "Fort Hell."

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 10.—Unconscious from the effects of a drug, Chesser Grissom, a prominent real estate broker of Tacoma, Wash., was taken from a dive known as "Fort Hell," at 425 Spruce street, by the Philadelphia police on Saturday night and died at the Philadelphia hospital Sunday afternoon. From his story told during a few minutes of consciousness to a physician and from the diagnosis of the case opium poisoning, the police authorities became convinced it was a murder.

Married by Proxy.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Oct. 10.—Pedro de Cossio, first secretary of the Spanish legation in Mexico, passed through here on his way to New York, where he will take passage for London. He was married last Wednesday by proxy to Miss Conception Gomez Farias, daughter of the Mexican minister in London. The ceremony was performed in the residence of President Diaz, before a select party of the friends of the bride and bridegroom.

CRESPO IN CARACAS.

The Victorious General Proclaimed Provisional President of Venezuela.

LA GUAYRA, Oct. 10.—General Joaquin Crespo was accorded a most enthusiastic reception upon his triumphal entry into Caracas yesterday, and the city last night was brilliantly illuminated in his honor. The streets were crowded with wildly cheering multitudes. The gallant old warrior marched into the capital this morning at the head of the remainder of his army of 3,000 men having taken possession of the city yesterday.

As soon as General Crespo had reached the congress building he summoned his chief military and political leaders about him.

The result of their conference was the proclamation of Crespo as provisional president of the republic. He is to hold office only until the regularly elected congressmen shall have had time to meet again and proceed to the election of a constitutional successor to ex-President Raimundo Andueza Palacio. Caracas shouted itself hoarse over the choice of Crespo. The veteran promptly issued a pronunciamento naming the members of his provisional cabinet. They are as follows:

Minister of Foreign Affairs—Pedro Ezequiel Rojas.

Minister of the Interior—Leon Colina.

Minister of Finance—Senor Pietri.

Minister of War—Guzman Alvarez.

Chief of Police—General Victor Rodriquez.

Chief of Telegraphs—Leopoldo Baptista.

Minister of Public Works—Munoz Tebar.

Minister of Instruction—Silva Gaudolphy.

General in Chief—Ramon Guerra.

Governor of Caracas—Senor Andrade.

These are all well known Venezuelans who have aided the cause of the legalists by active service in the field or by financial contributions. The provisional cabinet gives general satisfaction. It is believed that as quickly as is possible under the circumstances it will restore order throughout the distracted republic.

General Ramon Guerra is the owner of a large coffee plantation. He led Crespo's fierce Banecos, or men of the plains, in the late war. General Leon Colina was at the head of the artillery and General Victor Rodriguez also rendered efficient aid in bringing about the triumph of the Crespists.

The rumors concerning the escape of the de facto President Villegas-Pulido and his ministers are confirmed. They managed to get on a vessel bound for Martinique. It is said to be their intention to proceed to France and join their former chief, Dr. Palacio, in Paris.

That Mail Pouch Found at Last.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 10.—Detectives have been on the track of the robbers who pilfered the valuable mail pouch bound for New Haven, at Guilford, two months ago. Until today their efforts have been fruitless, but this morning the missing bag was found in the woods two miles from Guilford station, where it disappeared. It had been cut and all the contents were abstracted. Letters and parcels were found close by, and a few checks for large amounts had also been left with the other nonnegotiable matter. The pouch contained a large sum of money, which has been lost beyond recovery, it is feared. There is no substantial clew for the detection of the parties connected with the robbery.

Hamburg Dancing Again.

HAMBURG, Oct. 10.—For the first time since the plague broke out this city has resumed its usual appearance. Music in the streets has been permitted and dancing in the dance halls begun. Up to last night 2,500,000 marks had been contributed to the relief fund. The number of fresh cases of cholera has been thirty-one, of deaths seven and of burials 141. In Altona there have been five fresh cases and four deaths.

On a Redhot Stove.

LITTLE ROCK, Oct. 10.—Marion Williams (colored) threw Miss Rosa Henderson (white) on a redhot stove, burning her severely. Neighbors were attracted by her screams and rescued her. Williams is in jail.

The Cholera in the Caucasus.

ODESSA, Oct. 10.—The number of cholera cases in the Caucasus during August and September was 127,276; the number of deaths, 64,276. At present the cholera is at its worst in Erivan.

THE HOUSEHOLD

NEEDLEWORK NOTES.

Dainty Bits of Cushions—Old Fashioned Chenille Work. Soft and Showy.

Coarse crochet insertions and borders are effective on sideboard cloths. In linen towels, doilies, serviettes, etc., a showy result may be secured in a spray of blue on Green Derby cins, done in blue and gold, with touches of orange and terra cotta.

Soft surah is used for all kinds of pretty sofa bags, etc. A delicate ashy cushion recently seen was of myrtle green, worked with shades of red, terra cotta, orange, green and brown.

A unique and effective bedspread is worked on blue jean in scarlet and white knitting cotton. The coverwork is made from an old German design, with border to match and groundwork of small stars at stated intervals.

Pretty little pincushions are now often made in sets of five or seven, attached to pieces of baby ribbon of various lengths and widths, and all the ends finished under a full bow. These little cushions are made over a square foundation measuring about an inch across. This is tightly stuffed with bran, and a pongee silk cover drawn over it and tied round the top in sack fashion. Each pincushion should be of a different color.

The old fashioned chenille work, so soft and showy, is once more coming into vogue, and answers well to depict by means of a few strokes the petals of such flowers as daisies, sunflowers, etc., while the heart filled in either with a cluster of French knots in two hues of gold silk or with a button work laid over an applique of cloth of gold, and finished with a twisted cord or braid of cardboard, over which are stretched the radiant stitches of the corolla to bring this quick work to a too fleet appearance.

Pretty squares for drawing room cushions or fancy table mats are noticeable for their exquisite silk embroidery representing fishes and carnations, with gay butterflies wrought on corded silk. Still handsomer are the white brocades, with true lovers' knots and dainty baskets of flowers, outlined and accentuated with eastern shades of floselle, which is preferred for this fat work to twist silk, as it allows of better blending of hues and stitches.

Domestic Measurements.

Soft butter the size of an egg weighs one ounce.

Four teaspoonfuls are equal to one tablespoonful.

One pint of coffee A sugar weighs twelve ounces.

One pint of best brown sugar weighs thirteen ounces.

One quart of sifted flour (well heaped) weighs one pound.

Two teacups (level) of granulated sugar weigh one pound.

Two teacupfuls of soft butter (well packed) weigh one pound.

One and one-third pints of powdered sugar weigh one pound.

One pint (heaped) of granulated sugar weighs fourteen ounces.

Two tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar or flour weigh one ounce.

Two teacupfuls (well heaped) of coffee A sugar weigh one pound.

Two and one-half teacupfuls (level) of the best brown sugar weigh one pound.

One teacupful (well heaped) of granulated, coffee A or best brown sugar equals one ounce.—Good Housekeeping.

A Quick Pudding.

One teacupful of flour, one of sugar, one ounce of butter, one egg, half a teacupful of milk and a level teaspoonful of baking powder. Mix flour, butter and sugar well together in a basin; add the egg, previously well beaten (yolk and white separately, then together), and the milk; when thoroughly well mixed, and just before putting into the oven, add the baking powder and pour into a well buttered tin, which has been first made hot in the oven. Bake twenty minutes in rather a quick oven. Cut in half, spread jam over, fold as a sandwich, sprinkle sifted sugar over and serve at once.

An Inviting Arrangement.

With the gradual lessening of the size of our apartments, owing to the rapid increase of the population in cities, more and more attention is given to the consideration of articles of furniture having a twofold purpose, and among other results of this is a "threefold bookcase screen," the center piece of which is provided with shelves for books.

Carrying this idea to a still greater extent, The Decorator and Furnisher shows by the accompanying sketch of a library cozy corner how a fireplace seat can be utilized as a cozy seat and receptacle for books at the same time. The shelves for books on either wing of the seat will allow of a convenient distribution of books on widely different topics. As will be seen, the bookshelves form a comfortable inside nook in a manner which has every convenience to commend it, and the cost of making the same is but very little.

A Macedoine of Fruit.

A macedoine of fruit may be either fruit arranged in a mold of jelly or a variety of fruit tossed in syrup, stood on ice and served with whipped or iced cream. For the former line a mold with lemon jelly and arrange it in as many different kinds of fruit as you choose, setting each layer with a little jelly. Set it on ice or in a cool place and serve, when turned out, with a garnish of the fruit tossed in equal parts of brandy and sherry, sweetened to taste and cooled by being left some time on ice.

The average length of life is greater in Norway than in any other country on the globe. This is attributed to the fact that the temperature is cool and uniform throughout the year.

Starting on a Small Capital.

Mrs. K. was left a widow with two or three children. One of them died, another, a daughter, married a man who soon left her, so that the mother had to provide for the grandchild, as well as her own family. This was difficult, and soon the stock of supplies got low, and there was no money in the house, on which also a mortgage had to be met. One day the son, a schoolboy, came in to say that Miss J., a neighbor, was going to "open a store," had given him five cents for shutting her cellar door. This five cents seems to have been the only capital of the widow and her little family, the sum it appears she might have obtained more had she made her condition known to her prosperous neighbors. That would have injured the story, however, and I am glad she did not get a loan, but invested her son's earnings in popcorn, as she by inspiration did.

With some molasses she had left in the jug, the corn was soon made into fifteen of those sticky but enticing cornballs which have created many a copper out of a boy's pocket. The town school was close by, and before noon they were all sold for a cent apiece, and the little capital trebled. "Quick returns and large profits" was the maxim of this merchant-lady—such is the world over—all in this instance—as my rate after fourteen years of trade in the village of Plymouth, at the old stand, Mrs. K. is now the owner of her own house, with not a mortgage, has money in the bank has educated her children (her grandson is now fourteen years old), and has very much increased the variety of her merchandise —Boston Advertiser.

A Friendship.

One of the pleasantest of friendships is that between a young and a middle aged woman. (There are no old women nowadays.) If the two women are of exactly the right sort the friendship is almost an ideal one. There can be no jealousy. The elder woman is too old to be envious of the younger, either of her loves or her companionship. The younger feels the superiority of her youth too keenly to care for the regard cherished by the older for her contemporaries. But each possesses a charm to which the other returns with never ceasing delight.

The older friend smiles over, but rejoices in the freshness and ardor, the eager anticipations and daring impetuosity of her companion. She speaks no word of discouragement. It is beautiful, this demanding youth, this splendid audacity, to which all ready achievement are impossible. It is the highest earthly wisdom to recognize that all this enthusiasm is needed for the success which divine wisdom shall teach.

And the younger woman, pouring out her hopes and expectations, her passionate longings and wistful imaginings, feels strongly the mellow graciousness which experience has brought. Dimly she wonders at the content that is always the most puzzling to the youthful heart. Contentment should only be found upon mountain peaks, she thinks.—Harper's Bazar.

Women and Dress Literature.

Men should comprehend that women read descriptions of dress just as men read the city articles—not for fun, but for business purposes. No woman finds it particularly amusing to read about styles and stuffs, but it is intensely interesting because it is imperatively necessary when she is going to have a new frock or bonnet herself. John Stuart Mill remarked that the amount of observation and reflection that a lady had to bestow on having her own and her children's costume all that it should be might suffice, if otherwise applied, to produce really great results.

This is quite true; and sad enough it is to see how, just for want of looking at the serious standpoint—that we should have to waste our time so utterly. But from the practical, worldly point of view, to one elder sister in the family no means a waste of time. Until we wear a uniform, every woman who wants to hold her own socially (and to do this is the main duty for the average woman) must give much thought to make her various costumes suit her person, agree with her purse and march with the fashion. For these ends descriptions of dresses must be duly and carefully read by women.—Mrs. Fenwick Miller.

Woman's Faithful Slaves.

Woman, dear, do you know the two most faithful friends that you have ever had in this world? No, they are not your father and mother, but your own two feet. Do you appreciate them? Do you keep a time when home and weary they have carried you home safely without exacting a fare when you have spent your last sou for ice cream soda or a ride in a car?

And now the question arises, Do you take proper care of these patient carriers? Do you bathe them carefully every night after a long day's tramping? Do you rub gently, the poor, tired things, after all your foolish gadding around—with a little alcohol or just a wee bit of Florida water, and then stick on a pair of violet powder between the toes that they may feel cool and rested?

If you neglect these things, oh, woman you deserve all the corns and bunions that outraged nature will send. She will get even with you in one way or another, and knowing of your black ingratitude to the friends that bear your form under through every step of your life, this is the way she has of showing you her methods of preventing cruelty to feet.—St. Louis Republic.

A Pretty Baby Quilt.

To make a pretty quilt for baby double two yards of yellow cloth, basting a layer of wool between. Turn in the edges and run them together with fine stitches. Tack in squares, alternate with any color of worsted, as in a comfortable, and button hole stitch the edges all around with zephyr of accontrasting shade. Use white, pink or pale blue chevne cloth.—Exchange.

For the Slender Girl.

If your figure is slender do not hesitate to arrange about it a loose coat with a very large roomy collar to the front. The fashionable tailors say such an arrangement only tends to bring out your girlish figure, and they are correct.—Mrs. Mallon in Ladies' Home Journal.

PROFESSOR WADKINS ADVERTISES.

And He Is Called Upon by Several Real Leaders.

When Wadkins lived in Thompson street he used to brag about his skill in whitewashing and calcimining, particularly in the shades of blue. So they called him Professor Wadkins, and he used for up town to 630 West One Hundred and Thirty-first street and rented three rooms for himself. Mrs. Wallace, the colored housekeeper, looked him over very deliberately.

"What's yo' name?" she finally asked.

"Professor Wadkins," was the grave answer.

"Huh!"

Heedless of scorn, the professor soon established friendly relations with the housekeeper, and she agreed to keep his rooms in order. A few days later these friendly relations were dissolved when he announced his intention of advertising for a housekeeper.

The advertisement was subjected to revision and appeared on Saturday morning as follows:

Housekeeper—A lady wishing to recommend a housekeeper for a gentleman of good standing, apply after 7 o'clock p. m., Professor Wadkins, 630 West One Hundred and Thirty-first street.

Harry McManus, who works in One Hundred and Thirty-first street, opposite the professor's house, read the notice that morning. He could hardly believe his eyes. He read it again and again, and even went so far as crossing the street to compare the numbers. Then he went into Mooney's stable and said to the group that stood there:

"Say, fellers, get on t' this. Professor Wadkins is advertisin for a housekeeper. Just hang round 'nd you'll see fun."

SHE RANGED HIM.

The fun began promptly on time. They could see the professor standing near the window of his room shaving himself. After finishing this operation he combed his hair very carefully, and then spent ten minutes in tying his scarf. That over, he lighted a cigar and sat at the window.

At 1 o'clock a short, stout woman of middle age came down the street. She reached the professor's house, glanced at the number and then at a slip of paper in her hand. Then she went in. Less than a minute later the door opened, and out she came blazing with wrath, strode up the street at full speed and was lost to view.

This woman was hardly out of sight when another came down the street. She was a motherly looking woman, with blue eyes and a face, according to McManus, "that wouldn't scare a sparrow." Just as she reached the door Mrs. Wallace came out of the house. McManus had taken up a position in the adjoining doorway and overheard the following:

"Does Professor Wadkins live here?"

"Yes'm."

"Why,—what kind of a man is he?"

"He's a colored man." (Grin.)

"Wh—what?"

"If you mean Mistah Wadkins, who calls himself professor of calcimining and whitewashin, and has rooms a housekeeper, I can inform you that he's a colored person," said the colored housekeeper, with great dignity.

"Huh! I'd do you (swallowing invisible lumps) mean p-p-put that advertisement in the newspaper?"

"I said a colored person" (with more dignity).

"Wait till I get a policeman."

The motherly woman strode off quivering with rage, but she never came back. For the next two hours women continued to come—old women and young women, tall women and short women, lean women and fat women, blonds and brunettes; some poorly dressed, some clad in stylish splendor. Not one of them boasted African blood. And every one of them was turned back by the housekeeper, who guarded the honor of her house.

All this time Professor Wadkins sat at his window unconscious of the storms that raged in so many female breasts. About 4 o'clock he came down stairs.

McManus called to him, and the professor came excitedly across the street.

"Been some ladies here to see you," McManus said regularly.

"Wh-where? Wh-when? Wh-wh"—

"Don't get excited, old man. They learned you were colored and they went away."

"That's tough, isn't it?" exclaimed the professor, with rounded vanity. "If I'd a had a chance to talk to 'em"—

"Don't say a word," hurriedly interriedly interrupted McManus. "There's two more coming down the street."

Sure enough, two women were approaching. They were tall and rather good looking, and the scarlet they came to the professor's house did not escape the expression of disgust on their faces. The professor crossed the street, stroking his whiskers. He saw that one of the women held a piece of a newspaper in her hand. He dodged his hat and bowed.

McManus can best tell what follows:

"The perfesser had a cleer on, and when he bowed I thought I'd die laughin. Seen, 'Ladies, I' yer lookin for Perfesser Wadkins?' 'Yes,' says they. 'That's me,' sez the perfesser. 'You Perfesser Wadkins,' sez one o' de ladies. De perfesser grinned 'nd sez: 'Yes, dat's my name. I we'i lookin for a housekeeper.' Den one o' de ladies kinder screamed, 'nd she up widder umbrella and banged de perfesser on de cleer. De perfesser made a break for de udder lady goldim by de coast and grabbed him by de t'roat. Den de first lady she banged 'im all over de head 'nd she hollered for 'assistant 5' life out o' de poor nigger. De lady wot had hold uv 'im tried to scratch 'im in de eyes, 'nd de perfesser gave a ting 'nd got loose. Den, I'jed he run fer de river, 'nd I ain't seen 'im since."

According to McManus, Mrs. Wallace and the other neighbors, at least forty head, left the place for lambaste housekeeping that day. The professor saw only two, but he does not regret that as much as he did.—New York Sun.

Breeding a Bore.

Patent medicine is for the most part worthless stuff. Now and then, however, a bottle of it may be of real service in the hands of some man who knows how to use it.

In 1854 President Lincoln was greatly bothered by the well meant but ill advised efforts of certain good northern men to bring about a termination of the war. A gentleman, very dear to Lincoln's heart, was especially persistent and troublesome.

Again and again he appeared before the president, and was got rid of by one and another ingenious expedient. One day when this angel of mercy had been boring Mr. Lincoln for half an hour, to the interruption of important business, the president suddenly rose, went to a closet and took out of it a large bottle.

"Did you ever try this remedy for baldness?" he said, holding up the bottle before his astonished visitor.

No; the man was obliged to confess that he never had tried it.

Mr. Lincoln called a servant, had the bottle wrapped up, and handed it to the bald philanthropist.

"There," said he, "go and rub some of that on your head. Persevere. They say it will make the hair grow. Come back in about three months and report."

And almost before he knew it, the good man was outside of the door with the package under his arm.—Youth's Companion.

—The Boston Daily Advertiser says: The Hotchkiss Family Concert Company, consisting of five young ladies, gave a concert before a full house in the Association Hall on Saturday evening. The program was the most novel of any ever presented before the association. All of the young ladies appeared to be creditable performers on a half a dozen or so different instruments. So much enthusiasm was aroused among the entire audience that an engagement was made by the family to give another concert next Saturday evening. The Hotchkiss family entertainment at the Warren Mission chapel on Thursday evening at eight o'clock is attracting considerable interest.

—A notable event will take place on Monday evening, October 17th, at Stillman Music Hall, it being the appearance of Miss Celie Ellis (Mrs. Blake) in the leading part in the merry and laughable comedy, Dr. Bill, from the Garden Theatre, New York. It is said that Mr. and Mrs. Blake have a large number of friends in Plainfield and that a great deal of interest is being shown in her appearance here. She has met with a great amount of success and is said to be charming in the part she plays. The combination of an excellent comedy and the appearance of Miss Ellis will undoubtedly crowd Music Hall on Monday evening. See advertisement elsewhere.

The New Firm.

White & Van Arsdale say they can justly claim to have the largest floor surface of any one store in Union county. They say the stock they constantly carry, valued at $40,000, is unequalled in quantity, quality and variety; that the millinery department, they have added has met with such prompt success that Monday morning an extra milliner was added to the force of employees; that their department of house furnishing goods is a great attraction; and that our great of their success is the amount of business they estimate the weekly average number of customers at 2,500 or 3,000.

NEW JERSEY BUILDING AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.

The above illustration, for which, with this account, we are indebted to the Elizabeth Journal, is taken from the architect's original drawing of the New Jersey building at the coming World's Columbian Exposition, to Chicago, Ill.

This building is to be used as the headquarters of the New Jersey Commissioners of the Exposition, and will be a place where every Jerseyman and his family will be made to feel at home, where he will meet his friends, can register his address and receive his letters. It will, in fact, be a part of his own State transported to the Exposition grounds.

The Commission selected the design here shown from among about a dozen others submitted in competition, and commissioned the architect, Mr. Charles Alling Gifford of Newark, to prepare the working drawings. These drawings were made and duly approved by the Department of Construction of the Exposition, and then submitted to builders in the State for estimates; the contract being awarded to Mr. James W. Lanning of Trenton, the lowest bidder.

Everything has been done by the Commission and Mr. Gifford, the architect, to make the building a credit to the State, and several journeys have already been made to Chicago to insure the best interests of the State in regard to location and general position.

The site of the New Jersey building is centrally located among those of the other States; New York, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut being near neighbors.

The building is not intended for exhibition purposes, but will be more in the nature of a club house, for the use and convenience of all Jersey people. Large and inviting piazzas are on the front and rear. The main entrance opens into a large general assembly hall, two stories high, with a circular balcony looking ing down from the second story. This hall contains the post office and hat and check counter, a large open fireplace, nearly ten feet across, and the main staircase, this latter being made a feature of the design.

On the right hand side of the building are located the rooms set apart especially for the ladies, these consist of the general meeting room of the Ladies' Board of Managers, two parlors on second floor, with lavatories and bath rooms. On the left hand side of the building are the rooms set apart for gentlemen, the secretary's office, board room, president's room, committee rooms and lavatories.

In the third story are the caretaker's apartments and storerooms for documents, etc.

Those familiar with the appearance of the Washington Headquarters in Morristown, will recognize it as the museum of Mr. Gifford's design; and, while it will not be attempted to make any exact reproduction of this building, its general lines and details will be adhered to. The historical interest of the Morristown building will no doubt be somewhat shared in by the New Jersey building at the Exposition, and it seems that the State could not do better than it has done in selecting the old headquarters as a starting point for the design of its Chicago building, to be returned to New Jersey and located at Sandy Hook camp, when it is remembered that under the roof of the old Morristown house more of the noted characters of the Revolution have gathered than under any other roof in America. General Washington made the building headquarters during the Winter of 1779 and '80, and Alexander Hamilton lived here during the same long Winter, and there he met and courted the lady he afterwards married, the daughter of General Schuyler. Other famous guests, including Greene, Knox, Lafayette, Steuben, Kosciusko, Schuyler, "Light Horse" Harry Lee, old Israel Putnam, "Mad Anthony" Wayne, and "that brave soldier but rank traitor, Benedict Arnold," have all been beneath its roof.

The commission which has carried this work to a successful culmination is composed of Stephen J. Meeker, president; Walter S. Lenox, secretary; Garret A. Hobart, Edward Bettle, Frank A. Canfield, Millard F. Ross, P. E. Swartswelder and Peter Hauck, with the following lady managers: Mrs. J. D. B. Stevens, Mrs. Washington A. Roebling, Mrs. Thos. T. Kinney, Mrs. Stanwood Talley, Mrs. Sarah C. Ware, Mrs. Robert Adrain, Mrs. M. T. Barrett, Miss Stose Murray and Miss Mary F. Clark.

Mr. Ford Has Been There.

The U. S. Grant Republican Club held a rousing meeting in Spencer's Hall on Somerset street last evening, continuing enthusiastically until after eleven o'clock. Mr. W. J. Ford spoke. He spent many years in Australia and attacked Mayor Saunders' remarks about that country. He said that his term about Free Trade prosperity in New South Wales, and the poverty and hard times in the adjoining province of Victoria, was all bosh, and could be proven by common sense argument. Take the States of New Jersey and New York, for instance. If wages were low and the price of the necessaries of life high in New Jersey and wages high and commodities low in New York, would people be content to live in this state? Would they not go to New York and stay there? "I am an Englishman" said Mr. Ford, and have lived under the Free Trade system, and also under the Protection system. You can't tell me that Free Trade means prosperity. It means poverty and ruin." The speaker spoke for half an hour and was heartily applauded. Singing and piano and violin music were features of the evening.

—The Wheelmen's Club will go to Scotch Plains to-night and take part in the Republican banner raising.

"C. S.," the old initials of the Confederate States, stand also with startling significance for Cleveland and Stevenson, the candidates of the party which adopted in its platform the free trade doctine of the Confederate constitution.

Relics from the Old Bridge.

In clearing away the piers of the old Although street bridge at New Brunswick, it has been discovered that some of them have been built upon rafts of oak logs, about one foot square, sunk to a depth of five feet below the river bed. The logs are in an excellent state of preservation, as solid as when they were put down, nearly one hundred years ago.

Two of these logs have been secured by one of the Press Gangs, and are being made into canes, one of which will be presented to each of the Councilmen. They will not only be handsome canes, but will be also valued relics of one of the oldest land-marks in Middlesex county.

—Like a tide our work should rise—
Each later wave the best;
Toward the sunset let us strive,
To-day is the speediest.

Like a sawyer's work in log,
The cut behind the saw,
And the only field for strife
Is the task before the law.

—John Boyle O'Reilly.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—Your correspondent W. B. S. T. must not think me "backward in coming forward."

On only one point will I however reply to him. He evidently thinks Henry George has a selfish motive—the size of his books. Nothing can be more unfair or untrue. Henry George is at this moment a comparatively poor man. Were he willing to prostitute his great oratorical powers, his promptness in debate, he is ready with, to party purpose, or to selfish ends, he might to-day be a very wealthy man. Do not attack him, my friend; attack his theories if you like, but let our argument be for truth alone not for Politics or Pelf. "Magna est veritas et prævalebit."

The greatest question of the present day is that of Labor and Capital. Thanks to the broad-minded liberality of the editor of this paper, both sides of this or any other important question will always find space in his columns, and every word that is written in them can only tend ultimately to one end, the greater good of the people at large. The New Westfield Athletic Club House.

The new club house of the Westfield Athletic Club will be opened this week with a grand fair. The club house is situated on Elm street just off from Broad and nearly opposite the old quarters. It is right in the center of the town and only a short distance from the station.

The present house was started late in the Spring and has been pushed forward with untiring energy. The building is 100 feet long and 86 feet wide. In the basement are four fine bowling alleys besides the boilers, engine room, etc. On the first floor are billiard and pool rooms, smoker card, dressing and stewards rooms, while on the second floor is an auditorium which will seat about 500 people and has a well equipped stage.

The whole building is finished in hard wood ceiling, no paint being used, and the effect is very pleasing.

The fair will open this week Wednesday and will last the balance of the week with dancing every night except Saturday.

TIN PLATE INDUSTRIES.

HOW THEY WERE GOT INTO OPERATION.

The Trouble Caused By a Misplaced Comma—Tin to Go on the Free List If—

Congressman Buchanan, in the course of his speech at the Republican mass meeting last Thursday evening, told about how the duty came to be put on tin plate.

He said the Republican party believed that the American people had energy enough to manufacture tin plate if they were given half a chance.

It was the intention to have protected this industry long ago, but a mistake in the punctuation, the misplacing of a comma, permitted coated iron plates to be imported for less than the black plate, that is without the coating of tin, although the iron formed 98 per cent. in value of the product and the tin but five per cent. As I said before this was a mistake in placing a comma in the wrong place, thus changing the intention.

Now the McKinley bill simply corrected that error, and levied a duty sufficiently high to make it possible to make tin plate here. But, after a fair trial it is found that we cannot make it, then there is a provision in the bill that it shall come into the country free. Of course we don't want to tax ourselves upon what we can't manufacture.

This proviso requires more than this. We must not only be able to manufacture tin plate, but if by Oct. 1, 1897—that is, after a five years' trial—our manufacture of tin plate does not equal one-third of all the articles in quantity, then tin plate goes on the free list. And I for one will be quite willing to take off the duty if we can manufacture within the next five years produce tin plate better than any other country in the world, silver our own people a bonus.

Why look at what we have done already this season. We have manufactured eighteen million pounds of tin plate and the industry has not had time to get fairly started yet. Now that represents considerable money in wages, and is a help to a good many of our people.

No wonder the Democrats are in such a terrible fear lest we succeed.

Of course we all know that capital is timid, and it is not likely that men are going to put their money into the industry or any other if it is going to be consisting threatened by politicians.

If the tin plate industry does succeed, we take off the protective tariff and levy a duty for revenue only. That is the law. Now, I ask you what can be more reasonable?

Is there indeed any American object?

That man has not the heart of an American who objects to adding another home industry to give our people employment.

Well, let us go into the McKinley bill just a little further.

It costs one thousand millions a year to run this government. Now the duty on dutiable goods, after deducting the cost of collecting, pays only one-fourth of this amount. So you see the tariff is not such an important factor as the Democrats would have us believe.

Before the McKinley bill became a law amounted yearly to $600,000,000.

Now the McKinley bill went into effect they amounted to only $360,000,000. The reason is plain:

The McKinley bill reduces the tariff on as many articles as it increases the duty on.

The matter of fact, it goes further than that, for it has made the Free Imports $240,000,000 more than they were. On all articles only 30 per cent. The exact figures are 30.65-100ths. And this is the lowest average duty ever known in this country.

Yet the Democrats, trying to cry down our prosperity, say we have imposed a war tariff for the benefit of the robber barons.

Nothing could be more unjust.

The "robber barons," as the Democrats are pleased to call the manufacturers, are of little or no real importance in the matter, because Capital is abundantly able to take care of itself.

The Democrats fear that the wages of the masons, the painters and the carpenters will be higher than they are now protected by the tariff. But this is a mistake. If other industries were not protected by high duties there would be no extra trades, and would soon from necessity force down the wages.

The laboring man receives all the protection we could give him.

I know what I am talking about, because I was a member of the Committee on Labor of the House of Representatives, and I have never heard any class of workingmen so ever waited upon us complain that their interests had not been sufficiently protected.

On the contrary we took special pains to see that the workingmen were protected, and besides all who know were fully satisfied on that point.

But if there is any man who has any doubt on the subject, let him look over the McKinley bill for himself. I hereby leave a copy of it in pamphlet form with your chairman, so that you can look it over at your leisure and to your full satisfaction.

I have briefly touched on the other position of the Republican party in this campaign with equal clearness, in his address of twenty one hours.

But the tin plate question has not been gotten off from my mind. Another thing is, Congressman Buchanan having been one of the committee who helped to build up the bill.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Humorous Side.

There never was an event so solemn or an occasion so doleful that it did not have a funny side to it. After dress regard has been paid to the proprieties, look always for the fun in a thing, even if your best girl runs away with another man and marries him on the eve of your wedding day. In the most miserable times of your life keep this humorous side before you. It will make life lighter and more prosperous. It will help you throw off the blues sooner, and as soon as you can throw off the blues courage and hope will come back to you. With courage and hope you will be ready to face the fiends of ill luck and try again. A sense of humor has made many a man's fortune, and kept both men and women from madness and suicide.

A sense of humor is conducive to good digestion, and we are told now by the doctors that it is the chronic dyspepsics who are most apt to "catch" cholera. A sense of humor will therefore keep off the cholera. Fate has not done her worst for a man as long as he is gifted with a funny bump. There is fun in the world, and he will always see it, no matter what happens, and will always gather friends about him because of this merry, sunny disposition. If you have not the sense of humor, cultivate it. If you will not do that, go and shut yourself away from your fellow man and live in a coffin, for nobody wants you around.

A Literary Interval.

In the history of American literary achievement a singular state of affairs exists at present. There was probably never before so much literary and journalistic activity in the country, and there certainly were never before so many writers. Yet in the summing up of American literature there will never be a time when the general record represents so little that will last. The great New England group of writers is all gone except Dr. Holmes, and there is no group or any collection of writers anywhere that can take its place. We have a hundred respectable writers where there was one when Emerson and Whittier began to write, but we have not one who can take their place or the place of Longfellow, Lowell or Mrs. Stowe. Walt Whitman, who represented himself, is gone too.

There is a lull in American literature which portends the coming of great authors. That is the only way to look at the present lack of famous writers among us. There are a hundred who fill the second rank, and more than one treads closely on the first, but none that quite reaches it. Yet the present marvelous activity of writing cannot go for nothing. We may look certainly in the next five or ten years for the appearance of writers of illustrious genius, both in prose and verse, or the signs will go for naught.

Glass would be almost as precious as the diamond if it was as scarce, for it is nearly as beautiful. A better thing than manufacturing diamonds would be for Mr. Nikola Tesla to find some lightweight and handy generator of electricity that would "run a car." Every Cubic Foot of Vantage Crowded with Dense Masses of Humanity to See the Dazzling Sight—Nearly Half a Million Visitors in the City—The Naval Parade.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—The city today is literally crowded with visitors from all parts of the country, and it is computed that fully 200,000 visitors are in the city. Nearly all the hotels are full, and unless rooms have been engaged in advance transient customers find considerable difficulty in securing accommodations.

Ex-President Hayes and his daughter, Miss Fanny Hayes, arrived at the Fifth Avenue hotel and were registered from Fremont, O. Mr. Hayes shortly sent word to the committee on reception, who waited upon him in his parlor. The anticipation must be made that President Harrison will endeavor to be in the city for a short time on Wednesday, but that he must hurry back to Washington to the bedside of his wife.

Word was also received that Secretary of State Foster had consented to respond to the toast, "The United States." With this information came the statement from the committee of one hundred that at the banquet the health of President Harrison will be drunk, Vice President Morton acknowledging the courtesy and pleading the cause of the president's absence from the banquet.

Ex-President Cleveland and party, after viewing the parade, this morning and afternoon, returned to the country residence of Mr. E. C. Benedict, at Greenwich, Conn.

Magnificent Fireworks.

Thousands upon thousands of pairs of eyes witnessed on the New York and Brooklyn bridges last night a pyrotechnic exhibition of unexcelled splendor. The scene from The Tribune tower was gorgeous, lurid, wonderful.

At 8 o'clock, when the cars on the great structure had ceased running, all that could be seen was a string of electric lights and the dim outline of the towers back ground ed by the dense black of night. For about the twinkling stars shed no light; below the moving lights on river craft threw but little radiance on the dark waters.

Suddenly there was a sound as of distant thunder, and a hundred detonating shells announced the commencement of the evening's programme. Then there was a blaze of light which lit up the entire bridge, lit the moving spectacles on the water and showed the crowded mass of humanity on land. The brilliancy was such as though by a reflection of a great conflagration. Slowly the glow died away, and the towers of the bridge cast a weird shadow on the flowing water as of a giant hand laid upon them.

From the New York tower appeared in fiery figures "1492," and from the tower on the other side "1892" blazed forth. Then from the summit of either tower blazed a great and magical light, blue at first, as the eyes of a hundred who fill the second rank, and more than one treads closely on the first, but none that quite reaches it. Yet the present marvelous activity of writing cannot go for nothing. We may look certainly in the next five or ten years for the appearance of writers of illustrious genius, both in prose and verse, or the signs will go for naught.

THE TRENTON CASES

Justice Paxson's Charge to the Grand Jury Against the Strikers.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 11.—Chief Justice Paxson, of the supreme court of Pennsylvania, charged the grand jury in the cases of the Homestead strikers charged with treason. The charge is noteworthy for the defendants. In charging the jury Judge Paxson said:

We can have some sympathy with the feeling of desperation by honest men in the days of the French revolution, but we can have none for men receiving exceptionally high wages in this country who have lost none of the rights of freemen and who, in the assertion of imaginary rights, and entailing such a vast expense upon the taxpayers of the commonwealth.

In defining the law Judge Paxson said:

When the company shut down its works and discharged its men it was acting strictly in the line of the law. It could not compel the men to work, nor could the men compel the company to employ them. Any interference with either is made in such regard except in the nature of a contract agreed upon by the parties.

The right of the men to refuse to work unless their terms were acceded to them and persuade others to join them in such refusal is undoubted, but it must be peaceable. The moment they attempt to control the works, and to prevent by violence or threats of violence other laborers from going to work then they place themselves outside the pale of law. They have a perfect right to quit work, no laborer shall say to another laborer, 'You shall not work for this man for those wages without any reason, but violence must not be commanded by brutal violence upon his person.

A mere mob, collected upon the impulse of the moment without any definite object beyond the gratification of its sudden passions, does not commit treason, although it destroys property and attempts to drive off by force a large number of men arm and organize themselves and conduct in a common purpose to defy the law, to rob it of its offenders, deprive their fellow citizens of the rights to which they are entitled under the constitution and laws, is a levying of war against the state and the offense is treason.

The chief justice concludes as follows:

We have reached the point in the history of the state where there are but two roads left to us to pursue. The one leads to order and good government, the other to anarchy.

FASHIONS

DECLINE OF THE CORSET.

Short-waisted Bodices Favor Generous Waists and Broad Hips.

Though the short-waisted bodice is becoming to well rounded slight figures only, still the fashion is decidedly on the decline, says the New York Sun. No style exactly repeats itself, and the new short-waisted bodice is much more graceful in the cut and finish than the preceding, much less suggestive of negligee and easier adjustment than those of the Recamier or the Watteau women, who have never enjoyed any real popularity for the reason that is grotesque and ungraceful in dress. The reign of the short-waisted bodice, however, suggested a new fashion, and provides a return to the age of powder and patches and of a fancifulness in dress indicating a slackening of strict moral tendencies. In the wake of its wearers. The rise of the short bodies announces the decadence of the corset, or at least of all compression of the figure by the corset. Where corseting is in vogue it is worn, even fashionable culture, which now includes all manner of athletic and wholesome sport, the corset and its concomitant fat are no more. Tight lacing, like starched shirts and jewelry with street costumes, all once the sign manual of gentility, are now relegated to the serving maids or to the questionable characters on the other side the crystal wall which separates the grande from the demi monde. Tight lacing is a good deal would now as soon think of using stage make-up on her face by daylight as of tightening her corset unduly, and the best-dressed woman on the promenade you will find indulging not in tight shoes, tight gloves, or a tight bodice.

Novelties in Buttons.

There is no doubt that as the season advances buttons will grow in popularity and elegance. Already the most unique designs have been put upon the market, and manufacturers are busy preparing many handsome specimens. Mother-of-pearl, bone, steel, jet and smoked ivory are being made up in numerous styles among the autumn novelties, and buttons of twisted celluloid are tinted in every color of the rainbow, so that gowns may be matched with little difficulty. Perhaps the most original buttons are in leather, designed to go along with the leather trimmings which are so much in vogue. Quaint little Kate Greenaway house robes are to be fastened at the back with tiny buttons, showing the tinted miniature of some French beauty. The edges of these exquisite fancies are set with jewels.

BAD FOR LIZZIE BORDEN.

Awful Evidence Which, if True, Brands the Girl a Fiend.

HORRIBLE METHOD IN THE CRIME.

According to This Testimony There Was a Man in the Case, and Lizzie Was Intensed to a Sudden Quarrel with Her Unfortunate Murdering Mother and Parents.

BOSTON, Oct. 11.—The Boston Globe publishes a startling confession story from Fall River, setting forth in detail new and startling developments in the Borden murder cases, which, it says, are in the hands of the police and to be given by twenty-five new witnesses who will testify for the state at the preliminary trial of Lizzie Borden. The evidence, The Globe states, is forthcoming from people all of whom stand high in the communities where they live, and who could have no motive for speaking maliciously of the defendant. The story according to The Globe, is briefly stated as follows:

John H. Murphy, who resides on Bedford street, Fall River, will testify that he was standing on the sidewalk close to the Borden house when Mr. Borden entered his yard about 10:40 o'clock on the morning of Aug. 4, and he saw him a minute or two later ushered into the lobby by Bridget Sullivan. Mr. Murphy will swear that while Mr. Borden was walking in the yard he saw a window blind of the room in which Miss Lizzie Borden sleeps afterward found cautiously opened by a young woman who had the same morning told him when he called at the Borden house about 8 o'clock that her father had gone down town and would not be home until noon or later.

This woman he has identified as Lizzie Borden. The window Mr. Murphy designates as the one in which he saw Miss Lizzie is so situated that she must have been standing over the mutilated remains of her mother at the very time her father was about to enter the house.

A Man in the Case.

The next witness of importance is Mrs. Gustave F. Ronald, of Pawtucket, R. I., who was a guest at the Wilbur House. About 9:40 o'clock of the morning of the murder she was awakened by carriages near the Borden house when she heard a terrible cry. She looked up at the Borden house and saw in a room through a partially open window a woman, whose head was in part covered by a rubber cap or hood, whose face she saw plainly, as the distance was short. This window she has designated is the same as the one pointed out by Murphy. Mrs. Ronald was almost at that minute approached by Mr. Peter Maloney, of 70 Thirteenth street, Fall River. He likewise had heard the cry, seen the woman at the window who wore the peculiar head covering, and recognized her as the younger daughter of the Borden family, all members of which he knew quite well by sight.

Augustus Canning, at that time a lodger in Mrs. Churchill's house, also saw Lizzie Borden in the window at the same time and under the same circumstances. These witnesses, The Globe says, fix Miss Borden at her mother's side almost at the same minute when she probably was killed, and when Miss Lizzie, according to her own statement, was elsewhere.

Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Chase, of Fall River, and Mrs. Abigail Manchester, their daughter, were friends of the elder Bordens, and visited them on the evening previous to the murder. They overheard, it is stated, a quarrel between Lizzie and her father. All heard Mr. Borden say: "You can have your choice, Lizzie, to go tonight. Either let us know what his name is or take the door on Saturday, and when you go fishing, fish for some other place to live, as I will never speak to you again. I will know the name of the man who got you into trouble."

Morse and Lizzie Talked of a Will.

Lizzie is said to have replied, "If I marry this man he will put me in a position that everything will be kept from the outside world." Then the visitors were announced, and tonight we will see Mr and Mrs. Borden on the subject of the quarrel.

Mr. Borden said, "I would rather see her dead than have it come out."

Mr. G. Rosaline, a wealthy New York dealer in machinery supplies, has made affidavit that a few days prior to the murder Mrs. Borden consulted him as a friend about Lizzie, whose trouble he regarded as deadly.

Mrs. George J. Sisson, of Fall River, is said to have heard Lizzie say to Bridget Sullivan, the hired girl, "Why don't you say how much money you want to keep quiet?" Bridget's answer was, "I don't know what you mean, but you are not the girl I took you to be." Mr. George Sisson, it is said, will swear that less than a month before the murder Mr. Borden told him he had made a will giving Emma and Lizzie $25,000 each, which was more than he would have allowed them but for his wife's intercession.

Bridget Sullivan will, it is claimed, corroborate the story of the quarrel between Mr. Borden and Lizzie, also that she heard the night before the murders Morse and Lizzie talking about a will; also that on the afternoon of the day of the murder Lizzie whispered to her, "Keep your tongue still and don't talk to these officers and you can have all the money you want."

The Quarrel with Emma.

Detective McHenry and his wife will, it is said, give important evidence which relates in part to the story of the row between Lizzie and Mrs. Borden in the matron's room in which the former accused the latter of having "given her away." This talk, it is said, will be corroborated by the McHenrys, who overheard and saw the affair through a hole in the wall especially provided by the authorities. It is claimed that in this quarrel Lizzie kicked Emma several times on the leg

Mr. Frank Burroughs, a lawyer of New York city, formerly of Fall River, is, it is said, the attorney employed by Lizzie Borden about property rights in a father's estate should a stepmother die first. He is said to have made a statement for Mr. McHenry and manifested a willingness to testify.

Matron Reagan will, it is alleged, tell the story of the quarrel between the girls, and Mrs. Hannah Fish, of Hartford, George F. Revere, of Somerset; Minnie C. Wilson, of Fall River; Detective Hathaway, of Fall River, and two others will give further testimony for the government.

The Statements Denied.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Oct. 11.—The Borden murder case is the sole topic of conversation here. The story just published has influenced feeling in favor of the girl, and it is felt that the government's case has been injured. In an interview had by Attorney Jennings, Miss Emma and Mr. Morse absolved emphatically all statements regarding quarrels, etc. Mr. Morse is intensely angry and will seek legal redress.

SHERMAN IN NEW YORK.

The Senator Addresses a Big Republican Mass Meeting.

CHRIS MAGEE DOWN IN ALABAMA.

The Pennsylvania Republican Trying to Gerrard His Party in That State to Break the Solid South—Minnesota Democrats and Populists Fuse on Electors.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—Senator John Sherman addressed a large and enthusiastic Republican mass meeting at Cooper Union last night. As the senator stepped to the front of the platform he received an ovation that caused a glow of pleasure to spread over his grizzled features. After some minutes of continued applause three rousing cheers were given, which the band capped by playing "Marching Through Georgia."

Senator Sherman devoted his speech to a discussion of three points—the tariff, silver and state banks. His mention of Blaine in connection with reciprocity drew forth cheers, and when he named Benjamin Harrison there was an enthusiastic tumult which compelled him to pause for nearly a minute.

He congratulated the Republicans that they had at last got the Democrats to be fair and square and to meet them on issues of the campaign.

There were three issues: Whether the imposing of duties on imports should be considered merely a question of revenue or a question of protection; whether the holders of 371 grains of silver worth seventy-three cents shall deposit it and get a dollar in payment or gold and silver dollars shall remain of equal value; whether we shall have our notes backed by the honor of the government or return to a currency under the old system of state banks, with no security whatever. Senator Sherman evidently considered the tariff the most important question, because he devoted the greater portion of his speech to that.

The Tariff.

"Never before this campaign," said he, "has the Democratic party of this country taken the position that a tariff for protection is unconstitutional. I am glad we have got them there. It has gone back on its traditions. In the first congress of the United States after the new constitution a bill was introduced providing that duties be imposed on imports for the purpose of fostering manufacture in this country. It was drawn by James Madison and signed by George Washington.

"Thus it was written, and it was left to Larry O'Neal, of Ohio, to declare that the system was unconstitutional. [Laughter.]

"He was agreed with, I remember, by the Confederate states, which in their constitution said about the same thing, but the constitution of the Confederate states is not the constitution of the United States. Our soldiers settled that. [Applause.]

"Senator Hill," went on Mr. Sherman, "favors protection, but is against a protective tariff. He favors the laboring man, but is opposed to the laboring man. He is very sure of one thing—that is, quite of all temptation he is a Democrat. [Laughter and applause.] Our theory and practice is that a tariff shall be levied with such discriminations as shall protect the laboring man in making everything that can be produced at home as well as if can be abroad. We have extended the rule to all classes of American citizens—to the mechanic, the farmer, the miner."

Free Silver.

Senator Sherman warmly praised the McKinley bill, saying it was the best embodiment of the principles of protection that has ever been produced. Peck had been arrested for telling the truth about it. They might arrest Peck, but could not arrest the progress of American industries.

If Harrison is elected president the McKinley bill will stand. If Cleveland is elected president the McKinley bill will be repealed and ruin will follow. It is for the men of New York, because here the battle will be fought, to decide. Ohio will be all right. [Applause.] Speaking of the free coinage bill, Senator Sherman said Harrison would veto it. He had heard it while sacred here that Cleveland would never sign it, but he will be bound to obey the behests of his party.

Senator Sherman scored the proposed repeal of the 10 per cent. tax on state bank issues. "It was put there," said he, "to cut the throats of the state banks which existed before the war and give us a sound currency. I helped pass the law and I am helping to keep it on the statute books. It is now the tendency of the Democratic party, dominated by the south, to revive all the issues before the war but slavery and disunion, and destroy all the achievements of the Republican party but the preservation of the Union."

At the conclusion of his speech Senator Sherman was tendered a reception by the Republican club.

The Baker Ballot Law Denounced.

WEST CHESTER, Pa., Oct. 11.—On Friday Judge Thomas Waddell appointed ex-Judge Thomas S. Butler as judge of election of one of the new precincts in West Chester. In court yesterday ex-Judge Butler refused to serve, saying: "I do not intend to assume the responsibility of determining what some of the provisions of the Baker ballot law may mean. It is, in my judgment, the most damnable piece of legislation ever put on our statute books, and I do not propose to submit myself to the danger of arrest and fine for the failure to determine who is entitled to vote under the act."

This coming from a man who was but recently on the bench of Chester county has startled the other election judges, and it is probable that many others will decline to serve. It is feared that difficulty will be had in securing enough men willing to serve to carry on the election in all the districts.

Chris Magee in Alabama.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 11.—Chris Magee, the prominent Pennsylvania Republican, is here in conference with the leading Republicans of both factions and the third party endeavoring to effect a of all anti-Democratic forces in Alabama in an effort to carry the state against Cleveland. The Republican party is split in this state, one faction having out its own ticket, while the other is supporting the fusion ticket made up of the third partyites and Republicans. The two Republican committees will meet here to see what can be done toward forming a union.

Electoral Fusion in Minnesota.

ST. PAUL, Oct. 11.—The Democratic state central committee withdrew the names of four of the Democratic presidential electors and indorsed four of the People's party electors. By this action the Democrats hope to elect their four remaining electors and divide the state with the Republicans.

JUSTICE SHIRAS SWORN IN.

He Takes His Place on the United States Supreme Court Bench.

GEORGE SHIRAS, JR.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—The opening session of the October term of the supreme court of the United States, with the attendant ceremonies of the induction into office of the new associate justice, George Shiras, Jr., filled the court room to overflowing. After the usual announcement of the opening of court Chief Justice Fuller said: "I have much pleasure in announcing to the gentlemen of the bar that since the adjournment of the court the existing vacancy has been filled by the appointment of Mr. George Shiras, Jr., of Pittsburg. Mr. Shiras is present and ready to take the oath."

The clerk of the court, Mr. McKinney, then read the commission issued to Mr. Shiras, at the conclusion of which the law associate justice arose and read in a moderate voice the oath in which he swears to do equal and exact justice to all, both rich and poor, agreeably to the constitution and the laws of the United States to the best of his knowledge and ability.

"So help you God," added the clerk. The new associate justice bowed affirmatively and was then conducted to his seat at the extreme left of the chief justice, next to Associate Justice Brewer. As he stepped upon the level occupied by the court the new member stopped, bowed gravely to his associates, who stood facing him and as formally returned the salutation. Associate Justice Brewer received him with a handshake, and then all the members of the court took their seats.

The ceremony was quite brief, and all the persons present stood during its continuance, as well as the court.

Associate Justice Shiras is about fifty-five years old. He stands 5 feet 10 inches in height, but beside the larger members of the court, Justices Gray and Harlan, does not look all his inches. He has brown hair, slightly tinged with gray, gray side whiskers, his chin and lip being shaved clean. His eye is blue, complexion verging on the ruddy, and his mouth shuts straight across the face, indicating firmness and decision. Justice Blatchford is encouraging a beard and the chief justice has a luxuriant mustache, so the new justice's whiskers are not so striking on the bench as they otherwise would be.

HARRISON RECEIVES EGAN.

The Chilian Minister Complimented for His Work by the President.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—President Harrison gave a conference to Minister Egan, who has just arrived from Cuili. Mr. Egan received the president's commendation for the manner in which he had discharged the delicate duties of his position. The president also expressed his sense of satisfaction at the fair and honorable settlement of the recent difference between the two countries.

Mr. Egan delivered a message from the president of Chili to the president of the United States, expressing his joy at the equitable adjustment of the controversy between the two nations and his personal appreciation of the kindly offices of the American minister in bringing about such a happy result.

At the state department Mr. Egan gave to Secretary Foster the memoranda of the treaty agreed upon by him and the Chilian officials for the appointment of a commission to settle the claims of citizens of the United States against Chili. He also informed Secretary Foster that the $75,000 paid by Chili as indemnity for the wounds upon the sailors of the Baltimore in Valparaiso, by which two of them were killed and a number badly injured. The money was in the shape of letters of credit on Paris. Minister Egan will leave Washington this evening.

Quincy and Peck.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—Secretary Quincy, of the Democratic national committee, wrote Commissioner Peck that no more transcripts of his tables were needed by the committee, particularly as they were changed for Mr. Peck answered that he only charged the legal rate, and that he "could supply any amount of additional tables equally as interesting as those already delivered."

Church Steeple Politics.

MADALIN, N. Y., Oct. 11.—Eccentric old General de Peyster ordered a picture of Harrison nailed to the steeple of a memorial church he is having built here, which was done. Excited Democrats then had a picture of Cleveland nailed over it, and then there was a row. Finally both pictures were taken down.

An Earthquake in Wilmington.

WILMINGTON, Del., Oct. 11.—What is thought to have been an earthquake shock was felt in points widely distant in this city last night. The shock was not generally noticed, but it was accompanied by the usual seismic roar.

Sylvester Wilson's Bail Reduced.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—Sylvester F. Wilson, the female baseball manager, under sentence for abducting Libbie Sutherland, of Binghamton, N. Y., had his bail reduced from $10,000 to $5,000. His case is before the court of appeals.

FRENCH CERAMIC ART.

The Royal Porcelains of France—St. Cloud, Chantilly and Sevres Wares.

The royal porcelains of France are unique in their exhibition of the utmost perfection of every effort and artistic skill. Voltaire, in his "Siecle de Louis XIV," tells us that porcelain was made at St. Cloud before it was manufactured elsewhere in Europe. Milky white and lucid, decorated with scallops and arabesques in the purest French taste, the new art had an immediate success. In 1778 the St. Cloud faïence was sent and artistic skill. Vet celains of Chantilly rose into deserved favor and notice. Their special note was a certain opaque glaze, containing tin, by the employment of which an exquisitely smooth surface was obtained. At first the decoration was borrowed from Japanese Imari ware. The distinguishing mark of this Chantilly production is a bunting horn, traced in red and blue. The Prince of Conde was the chief patron; such pat onage was not unknown among the great French nobles. The Duke of Villeroy had a pottery at Mennecy, places from which are extremely valued, and bear the dual initials "D. V." traced on the wet clay.

The paste of Sevres is hard or soft, to use the technical terms, the soft paste is made of kaolin or white natural clay, subjected to a most careful preparation, but the hard paste is a composition in which sand, alabaster, alum and marl find a place. The use of these clays constituted an epoch in French ceramic art; nevertheless Saxony still held the palm, and France determined to surpass her rival. The white, soft paste is made of soda were melted in a crucible and the glass so obtained was poured over, instead of dipping the pieces in. The surface thus produced was soft and velvety, and whether colored or plain absolutely smooth. At first all the pieces were white. Flowers reproduced from nature with admirable fidelity were the favorite decoration.

The potters were permitted to style themselves Manufacture Royal des Porcelaines de France, using the royal monogram as a stamp. In 1756 they were formally transferred from Vincennes to Sevres. Now we hear of the incomparable bleu de roi, the rose Pompadour and the rose Dubarry, the secret of which latter not seems now to be lost. Vanloo and Bouchey, Matthieu and Bachelier lent their talents and skill to the perfecting of this truly royal art. During the revolutionary period the fabrication of soft porcelain languished as the arts of luxury lost their patrons in the great nobles. It has since been revived, and a visit to the same time royal galleries is one of the greatest interest imaginable.

The Dress of Famous Englishmen.

William Pitt, earl of Chatham, was always very neat in his dress. It is said that he wore a new coat on every occasion with a bell dress coat and a tie wig. George Canning was plain and simple in his dress, but he thought tastefully. Indeed his personal appearance exactly agreed with his character. "No man," it has been observed, "was more removed from presumption or vanity. He loved simplicity and was affable to those about him."

Admiral Sir Charles Napier was in early life most eccentric in his dress. He had an olive green coat with gilt buttons, which he constantly wore till it was threadbare.

As a young man Sir Walter Scott was neglectful of his dress, but about the year 1790 he laid aside his carelessness, which, it would seem, had led his friends to ridicule him. According to his friend, Mr. William Clark, "he now did himself more justice in these little matters, and as his friend expressed it, began to set up for a squire of dames."

The Duke of Wellington was always smart in his dress, in which varied very little. In summer he might be recognized by "his low crowned, narrow brimmed hat, his white cravat, tied with a silver buckle behind, his blue frock, white waistcoat and white trousers. In winter there was the same hat, neckcloth and frock, with a waistcoat, blue sometimes red, and blue trousers. He never wore a greatcoat, but in severe weather he threw over his shoulders a short cape made of blue cloth with a white lining." His evening attire, except when he was in mourning, consisted of a blue coat with metal buttons, a white cravat and waistcoat, black breeches and silk stockings or tight black pantaloons."

The Speed of Fish.

Now that every effort is being made to increase the speed of ocean steamers, it is interesting to know the speed with which different fish can pass through the water. The Industrial World tells that for long distances swimming the shark may be said to hold the record, as he can outstrip the swiftest ships, apparently without effort, swimming and playing around them, and never at a loss for prey. Any human being falling overboard in shark frequented waters has very little chance to escape, so rapid is the action of the shark, the monster of the deep. The dolphin, another fast swimming fish, is credited with a speed of considerable over twenty miles an hour. For short distances the salmon can outstrip every other fish, accomplishing its twenty-five miles an hour with ease. The Spanish mackerel is one of the fastest of food fishes, and cuts the water like a yacht. Predatory fishes are generally the fastest swimmers.

Marriage Superstitions.

Married in white, you have chosen all right.
Married in gray, you will go far away.
Married in black, you will wish yourself back.
Married in red you will wish yourself dead.
Married in green, ashamed to be seen.
Married in blue, ae will always be true.
Married in pearl, you will live in a whirl.
Married in yellow, ashamed of your fellow.
Married in brown, you will live out of town.
Married in pink, your spirit will sink.

California's First Gold.

Marshall's gold nugget will be exhibited at the World's fair by California, says the Boston Herald. It is considered the most interesting object is the identical nugget which Marshall picked up in the American river Feb. 16, 1848, when selecting a site for Sutter's mill, and which constituted the first discovery of gold in California. The nugget is about the size of a Lima bean, and on account of its associations will be almost incalculable wealth and development which have resulted from its finding is regarded as an almost priceless treasure.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

IN SWITZERLAND.

Life in the Elevated Pasture Lands During the Summer Months.

Switzerland, the smallest and most mountainous country of Europe, differs in the climate of its various localities, according to their elevation above the sea level. At a height exceeding 9,300 feet the mountains are covered with perpetual snow. Below the level of perpetual snow the country is divided into a series of belts of different climates. In the highest of these belts, though glaciers fill the valleys, tiny plants begin to cloche the scanty soil of the ridges. In the second belt Switzerland is a country of pastures in which shrubs, but no trees, appear. In the third belt forests of fir trees and maples replace the meadows to some extent. In the fourth belt there are excellent meadows and forests of beech trees, and rye and barley are cultivated. Lower down there are chestnut trees, mulberries and vines and wheat is grown.

During the summer months the elevated pasture lands are inhabited by herdsmen and their families, who, at that pleasant season, drive their cattle up into the mountains and take up their abode in wooden huts known as chalets, where they make butter and cheese. There are large numbers of milk cows and other horned cattle in Switzerland, and each owner strives through the short summer season to make as much butter and cheese as possible, which may afterward be turned into money or exchanged for necessaries. Whole families often share in the annual migration to the mountains, and the women and girls assist in the lighter part of the work. Of course in these cases the chalets are built of more comfortable description than when only intended for the occupation of rough herdsmen and their assistants.

The Monkey and the Pie.

An Indian fakir had a monkey that he had brought up from babyhood. The pair were fast friends, the monkey being a faithful attendant on his master and as good as a watchdog. One day the fakir made a pie for dinner and left it to cook on a charcoal fire while he went for a walk. As the cooking proceeded the savory smell was too much for the monkey. It ate ed the crust and tasted the chicken. Finding the food very tasty it ate more and more, till nothing but the crust remained. The fakir returned with his master, who would shortly come back hungry and ready to enjoy his meal. What was to be done? The sharp eyes of the monkey detected some crows not far away, so without loss of time it lay down on the ground as if dead. By and by a crow came along and perched at the monkey, which seized the bird in a twinkling, strangled it, stripped off the feathers, placed it in pieces in the dish, covered it over with the crust and then contentedly awaited the return of the fakir, to whom the whole incident was afterward related by a witness of it.

A Bird Story for Little Folks.

One sunny morning Dame Redbreast
Resolved on building her house nest,
And bustling forth with cheerful lay,
Had gathered moss and sticks and hay
Until 'twas time to build speeches twining,
And looked about the downy lining,
Which, under birds so much admire
And tender nestlings' moods require.

While looking round with eager eyes
Beneath my window, she espies
Some scarlet yarn among the moss,
Which stricken by the wind to her distress
She sweetly sings, "If these were mine
How nice and soft my nest to line!"
But, oh, alas! the cruel boys
Laughed all her efforts quite to scorn.

She called her mate with tone severe,
He bustling came. With efforts queer
He sought to aid his weeping wife,
But all in vain their wordy strife,
On languid wing they sailed away,
The pair but now so glad and gay.

I quickly to the window drew
And softly up the sash I threw,
I loosed the threads, broke them in two.
Then out of sight again withdrew,
And thought, "Will she 'Try, try again'
As sweetly sings the old refrain?"
Ah, yes! they come and quickly bear
The thread they covet through the air—
And as they sped on sweeping wing
They sang the song that conquerors sing.
—Ohio Farmer.

Fred and Sam Go Shopping.

"Lollipop yellow, or lollipop red,
Which is the nicest?" said fat little Fred.
"I shall buy something all smothered in jam."
Where is my money? I've got it," said Sam.

"I SHALL BUY SOMETHING ALL SMOTHERED IN JAM."

Into the shoppie they went pit-a-pat,
"Little or big, and a little of that."
O'er goods quickly, their money all gone,
Sat laddies that ever were born.

SOLUMBUS DAY PREPARATIONS.

Preparations in the Public Schools for the Celebration of the Anniversary.

The official programme for the national school celebration of Columbus Day is now published. The first duty of each of our schools this fall, if it wishes to be in line with the other schools of America, is to begin preparations at once for its proper observance of Oct. 21, the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America. A few suggestions as to the first things to be done may be of some value.

Teachers, the superintendent and the school board should confer, that action may be harmonious and best results attained. The proposed celebration should be explained to each school at the earliest moment. It should be so presented as to awaken enthusiasm. Interesting topics relating to Columbus and the discovery should be suggested for special investigation. Such topics might be "The Map of the World Before the Discovery," "Important Inventions and Events in Europe Just Before the Discovery," "The Story of Columbus," "The Ships of Columbus," "What Columbus Expected to Find," "Geographical Growth of the United States," "Stories of South America," etc. The teacher should assign the address and the ode to those who can render them most intelligently. The flag salute and the songs should be persistently rehearsed.

Important committees of pupils should be appointed: First—A committee of invitation, whose duty is to see that the family of each pupil receives a special invitation to the morning exercises of Oct. 21, and also when they arrive to show them seats. Second—A color guard, whose duty is (1) to see that the school has a flag and a staff in proper condition; (2) to meet the veterans as they arrive and escort them with dignity to the principal in the school house; (3) to act as aids of the principal.

An efficient adult committee of arrangements should also be constituted. This committee must see—first, that seats are prepared out of doors in hope of fair weather, and that a room is also engaged for the exercises should the day be stormy; second, that fitting decorations and printed programmes are provided; third, that the local press is interested and invited; fourth, that arrangements are made with the veterans and other special guests for the parts they are to take.

But in all cases the school principal must make himself personally responsible for the work of each committee.

THE COLUMBUS AUTOGRAPH

The Great Explorer Handled the Sword More Skillfully Than the Pen.

There is a never ending dispute regarding the authenticity of the various portraits of Columbus. People who claim to know deny that the picture which is to adorn the souvenir half dollar is a correct presentment of the navigator's features, but whether or not the grounds on which they base their criticism are tenable will probably never be decided. Fortunately, however, the quarrel does not extend to a challenge of the variety of Columbus' autograph, a facsimile of which is given herewith.

To the ready pen wielder of the Nineteenth century the signa writing of the discoverer of America must seem queer indeed, but it should be remembered that in those days men wielded the sword as well as the pen, and it is to be presumed that the penmanship is to be preserved at the hands of priests and women. Most of the famed leaders of the Fifteenth century were unlettered and found it a laborious task to sign their names to important documents prepared by the monks who followed in their trains. Columbus of course was a man of great learning, according to the standard of his age, but the use of the pen was ever to him a burden, and his famous diary was probably written as a matter of duty and not of pleasure.

It is curious to note that he formed the individual letters in the same bold yet uncertain style which characterized the chirography of Queen Elizabeth. "Bess of England" could swear roundly and steer the ship of state with firmness: Columbus could bring monarchs to terms and cope with mutinous sailors, but when either of them took pen in hand the unsteadiness of small practice distinguishes the manuscript or autograph.

Felipa, Wife of Columbus.

More than the compass to the mariner
Went then, Felipa, to his dauntless soul.
Through adverse winds that threatened wreck, and blights
Of rayless ocean, thou pointed ever to
The north star of his great ambition. He
Who once has lost an Eden, or has gained
A paradise by Eve's sweet influence,
Alone can know how strong a spell lies in
The whisper of a woman's beckoning hand.
And thou didst draw him. stedfast, higher still,
Felipa, whispering the lessons learned
From thy courageous father till the flood
Of his ambition burst all barriers
And swept him onward to his longed for goal.
Before the jewels of a Spanish queen
Built fleets to waft him on his untried way
Thou gavest thy wealth of wifely sympathy
To build the lofty purpose of his soul.
And now the centuries have cycled by
Till thou art all forgotten by the throng
That lands in the great Pathfinder of the deep.
It matters not in that infinitude
Of space, where thou dost guide thy spirit flight
To undiscovered lands, supremely fair.
If to this little planet thou couldst turn
And weep, wraith like, to its cloud hung rim,
Thou wouldst not care for praise. And if perchance
Some hand held out to thee a laurel bough,
Thou wouldst not claim one wreath but fondly turn
To lay thy tribute also at his feet.

1865—The so called "Gordon plot" to cast an enormous navy Jamaicans, 18 whites were killed and 10 wounded, which some negroes were slaughter in the "Jamaica massacre" of 1865. Both Governor Eyre and Gordon, whose arrest led to much discussion in England, be forced to surrender. Johnson all the Confederate in Fort Warren, including Vice President Stephens, were released, leaving Jefferson Davis the only prisoner of the late war.

1870—Tolerably uniform Democratic gains in all the state elections that yearly gubernatorial members of Congress. General La Marmora took possession of Rome in the name of King Victor Emanuel, thus completing the unification of Italy; Cardinal Antonelli issued a protest against it as "a violent and sacrilegious usurpation."

Other Material at Hand.

Colonel Gilkerson's wife and daughter returned yesterday from their first summer at the seashore. The colonel was at the depot with the family carriage to meet them, and after the first effusive greetings were over he turned his eyes indulgently on the tall, beautiful girl and said:

"Well, Angeline, how did ye like it?"

"Oh, pepper," she exclaimed, "it was just heavenly! I never enjoyed anything so much."

"H'em!" observed the old man reflectively, "did ye get to 'love old ocean and its roar' an all that sort o' business?"

"Why, no, father, I didn't have any time to love that."—Detroit Tribune.

His Fatal Mistake.

Whyte—Why, old fellow, what's the matter with you? I never saw you look so disconsolately seedy in my life.

Browne—Matter enough, dear boy. I bet five dollars on Harvard's last week, and the horse I backed got left.

Whyte—Five dollars? Well, what of that? The loss of five dollars didn't break you, did it, old man?

BREVITIES.

—The pharmacies will close to morrow from one to six o'clock.

—There is to be a general closing up of all the stores to morrow.

—Boehm's advertisement will interest the feminine readers of THE NEWS.

—Laborers were engaged this morning in tearing up the Front street macadam and laying the tracks of the street railway.

—Chief Doane, of the Plainfield Fire Department, advertises in another column a notice to the people regarding bonfires.

—The Public Schools will have no session to-morrow in order that the children may witness the Columbus celebration in New York.

—A Dunellen bummer was arrested by Policeman Fredericksen about eleven o'clock last evening for being drunk, and was lodged in jail for the night.

—George Wyckoff of Park avenue, while riding his safety bicycle at Nethewood yesterday morning, collided with a moving milk wagon. His wheel was demolished and his leg painfully cut.

—The great Columbus parade to-day was witnessed by probably the greatest multitude of people ever seen in New York City. Plainfield is deserted, nearly all the stores being closed. THE NEWS appears as usual in order to comply with legal requirements.

—The Boston Daily Advertiser says: The Hotchkiss Family Concert Company, consisting of five young ladies, gave a concert before a full house in the Association Hall on Saturday evening. The program was the most novel of any ever presented before the association. All of the young ladies appeared to be creditable performers on a half a dozen or more different instruments. So much enthusiasm was manifested by the entire audience that an engagement was made by the family to give another concert next Saturday evening. The Hotchkiss family entertainment at the Warren Chapel on Thursday evening at eight o'clock is advertised elsewhere.

—A notable event will take place on Monday evening, October 17th, at Stillman Music Hall, it being the appearance of Miss Celie Ellis (Mrs. Blake) in the leading part in the merry and laughable comedy, Dr. Bill, from the Garden Theatre, New York. It is said that Mr. and Mrs. Blake have a large number of friends in Plainfield and that a great deal of interest is being shown in her appearance here. She has met with a great amount of success and is said to be charming in the part she plays. The combination of an excellent comedy and the appearance of Miss Ellis will undoubtedly crowd Music Hall on Monday evening. See advertisement elsewhere.

—There is an ancient superstition that the milk of red cows is better than that given by cows of any other color. A Frenchman traveling through Great Britain early in the eighteenth century noted that cows were oftener black than red in England, and that on this account the milk of red cows was preferred to that of black cows. He added that the contrary was true of France. Reference to the virtue of the red cow occur at various points in English literature, and among the sacrifices enjoyed for purification from sin in the Hebrew scriptures is a red heifer.

NEW JERSEY BUILDING AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.

The above illustration, for which, with this account, we are indebted to the Elizabeth Journal, is taken from the architect's original drawing of the New Jersey building at the coming World's Columbian Exposition, to open in '93.

This building is to be used as the headquarters of the New Jersey Commissioners at the Exposition, and will be a place where every Jerseyman and his family may feel at home, where he will meet his friends, can register his address and receive his letters. It will, in fact, be a part of his own State transported to the Exposition grounds.

The Commission selected the design here shown from among about a dozen others submitted in competition, and commissioned the architect, Mr. Charles Alling Gifford of Newark, to prepare the working drawings. These drawings were made and duly approved by the Department of Construction of the Exposition, and then submitted to builders in the State for estimates; the contract being awarded to Mr. James W. Lanning of Trenton, the lowest bidder.

Everything has been done by the Commission and Mr. Gifford, the architect, to make the building a credit to the State, and several journeys have already been made to Chicago to insure the best interests of the State in regard to location and general position.

The site of the New Jersey building is centrally located among those of the other States; New York, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut being near neighbors.

The building is not intended for exhibition purposes, but will be more in the nature of a club house, for the use and convenience of all Jersey people. Large and inviting piazzas are on the front and rear. The main entrance opens into a large general assembly hall, two stories high, with a circular balcony looking down from the second story. This hall contains the post office and hat and cloak counter, a large open fireplace, nearly ten feet across, and the main stairways; this latter being made a feature of the design.

On the right hand side of the building are located the rooms set apart especially for the ladies; these consist of the general meeting room of the Ladies' Board of Managers, two parlors on second floor, with lavatories and bath rooms. On the left hand side of the building are the rooms set apart for gentlemen, the secretary's office, board room, president's room, committee rooms and lavatories.

In the third story are the caretaker's apartments and storerooms for documents, etc.

Those familiar with the appearance of the Washington Headquarters in Morristown, will recognize in the sketch of Mr. Gifford's design; and, while it will not be attempted to make any exact reproduction of this building, its general lines and details will be adhered to. The historical interest of the Morristown building will no doubt be somewhat shared in by the New Jersey building at the Exposition, and it seems that the State could not do better than it has done in selecting the old headquarters as a starting point for the design of its Chicago building, to be returned to New Jersey and located at the State's expense when it is remembered that under the roof of the old Morristown house more of the sacred characters of the Revolution have gathered than under any other roof in America. General Washington made the building his headquarters during the Winter of 1779 and '80, and Alexander Hamilton lived here during the same long Winter, and there "he met and courted the lady he afterwards married, the daughter of General Schuyler." Celebrated men, including Greene, Knox, Lafayette, Steuben, Kosciusko, Schuyler, "Light Horse" Harry Lee, old Israel Putnam, "Mad Anthony" Wayne, and "that brave soldier but frank traitor, Benedict Arnold," have all been within its roof.

The commission which has carried this work to a successful culmination is composed of Stephen J. Meeker, president; Walter S. Emery, secretary; Garret A. Hobart, Edward Bettle, Frank A. Canfield, Millard F. Rose, P. S. Swartswelder and Peter Hauck, with the following lady managers: Mrs. M. B. Stevens, Mrs. Washington A. Roebling, Mrs. Thos. T. Kinsley, Mrs. Margaret Lindley, Mrs. Sarah S. Ware, Mrs. Robert Adrain, Mrs. M. T. Barrett, Miss Rose Murray and Miss Mary F. Clark.

Four Democratic Primaries were held last evening for the election of eight delegates to attend the Eighth Congressional District Democratic Convention to be held in Elizabeth, Friday, Oct. 14. All the primaries were well attended. The following is the result:

First Ward—Held in F. M. Bacon's office, 27 North avenue. Chairman, James Merritt; Secretary, John J. Kenney. Delegates, J. G. Miller, Louis B. Wadsworth.

Second Ward—Held in Bryant School building on East Sixth street. Chairman, John Dayton; Secretary, J. N. Morrison; Clerk—Rowland M. Stover; Judge, Chas. Stover; Delegates, Louis Timpson, J. N. Morrison. 76 votes were cast.

The delegates of all the wards will vote for James E. Martine for Congress.

Mr. Ford Has Been There.

The U. S. Grant Republican Club held a rousing meeting in Spencer's Hall on Somerset street last evening, continuing enthusiastically until after eleven o'clock. Mr. W. J. Ford spoke. He spent many years in Australia and attacked Mayor Saunders' remarks about that country. He said that his yarn about Free Trade prosperity in New South Wales, and the poverty and distress in the adjoining province of Victoria, was all bosh, and could be proven by common sense argument. Take the States of New Jersey and New York, for instance. If wages were low and the price of the necessaries of life high in New Jersey and wages high and commodities low in New York, would people be content to live in this State? Would they not go to New York and stay there? "I am an Englishman and a Free Trader, and have lived under the Free Trade system, and also under the Protection system. You can't tell me that Free Trade means prosperity. It means poverty and ruin." The speaker spoke for half an hour and was heartily applauded. Singing and piano and violin music were features of the evening.

—The Wheelmen's Club will go to Scotch Plains to-night and take part in the Republican banner raising.

"C. S.," the old initials of the Confederate States, stand also with startling significance for Cleveland and Stevenson, the candidates of the party which adopted in its platform the free trade doctrine of the Confederate constitution.

Relics from the Old Bridge.

In clearing away the piers of the old Albany street bridge at New Brunswick, it has been discovered that some of them have been built upon rafts of oak logs, about one foot square, sunk to a depth of five feet below the river bed. The logs are in an excellent state of preservation, as solid as when they were put down, nearly one hundred years ago.

Two of these logs have been secured by one of the Freeholders, and are being made into canes, one of which will be presented to each of the Freeholders. They will not only be handsome canes, but will be also valued relics as one of the oldest land-marks in Middlesex county.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—Your correspondent W. B. S. T. must not think me "backward in coming forward."

On only one point will I however reply to him. He charges that Henry George has a selfish motive—the sale of his books. Nothing can be more unfair or untrue. Henry George is at this moment a comparatively poor man. Were he willing to prostitute his great oratorical powers, he possesses that talent, his ready wit, to party purposes, or to selfish ends, he might to-day be a very wealthy man. Do not attack him, my friend; attack his theories if you like, but let our argument be for truth alone not for Politics or Pelf. "Magna est veritas et prævalebit."

The greatest question of the present day is that of Labor and Capital. Thanks to the broad-minded liberality of the editor of this paper, both sides of this or any other important question will always find space in his columns, and every word that is written in them can only tend ultimately to one end, the greater good of the people at large. The New Westfield Athletic Club House.

The new club house of the Westfield Athletic Club will be opened this week with a great fair. The club house is situated on Elm street just off from Broad and nearly opposite the old quarters. It is right in the center of the town and only a short distance from the station.

The club house was started late in the Spring and has been pushed forward with untiring energy. The building is 100 feet long and 36 feet wide. In the basement are four fine bowling alleys and the lockers, cooking room, etc. On the first floor are billiard and pool rooms, smoking, card, dressing and stewards rooms, while on the second floor is an auditorium which will seat about 300 people and has a well equipped stage.

The whole building is finished in hard wood ceiling, no plaster being used in any part and the effect is very pleasing.

The fair will open this week Wednesday and will last the balance of the week with dancing every night except Saturday.

TIN PLATE INDUSTRIES.

HOW THEY WERE GOT INTO OPERATION.

The Trouble Caused By a Misplaced Comma—Tin to Go on the Free List If—

Congressman Buchanan, in the course of his speech at the Republican mass meeting last Thursday evening, told about how the duty came to be put on tin plate.

He said the Republican party believed that the American people had energy enough to manufacture tin plate if they were given half a chance.

It was the intention to have protected this industry long ago, but a mistake in the punctuation, the misplacing of a comma, permitted coated iron plates to be imported for less than the black plate, that is to say, the coating of tin, although the iron formed 95 per cent. in value of the product and the tin but five per cent. As I said before this was a mistake in placing a comma in the wrong place, thus changing the intention.

Now the McKinley bill simply corrected that error, and levied a duty sufficiently high to make it possible to manufacture tin plate here. But if, after a fair trial, it is found that we cannot make it, then there is a provision in the bill that it shall come into the country free, because we don't want to tax ourselves upon what we can't manufacture.

This proviso requires more than this. We must not only be able to manufacture tin plate, but if by Oct. 1, 1897—that is, after a five years' trial—our manufacture at this place does not equal one-third of all the imported article in quantity, then tin plate goes on the free list again. General Washington made the building his headquarters during the Winter of 1779 and '80, and Alexander Hamilton lived here during the same long Winter, and there "he met and courted the lady he afterwards married, the daughter of General Schuyler." Celebrated men, including Greene, Knox, Lafayette, Steuben, Kosciusko, Schuyler, "Light Horse" Harry Lee, old Israel Putnam, "Mad Anthony" Wayne, and "that brave soldier but frank traitor, Benedict Arnold," have all been within its roof.

Of course we all know that capital is timid, and it is not likely that men are going to put their money into this industry or any other if it is going to be constantly threatened by tariff changes.

If the tin plate industry don't succeed, we take off the protective tariff and levy a duty for revenue only. That's the law. Now, I ask you what can be more reasonable?

Why should any American object? That man has not the heart of an American who objects to the establishment of home industry to give our people employment.

Well, let us go into the McKinley bill just a little further.

It costs one thousand millions a year to run this government. Now the duty on imports, after deducting the expenses of collecting, pays only one-fourth of this amount. So you see the tariff is not such an important factor, as the Democrats would have us believe.

Further, I would have the McKinley bill became a law amounted yearly to $300,000,000.

After the McKinley bill went into effect they amounted to only $300,000,000. The reason is plain.

The McKinley bill reduces the tariff on as many articles as it increases the duty on.

As a matter of fact, it goes further than that, for it has made the Free Imports 56 per cent. of the whole, whereas on all articles only 20 per cent. The exact figures are 20 66-100ths. And this is the lowest average duty ever known in this country.

Yet the Democrats, trying to cry down the tariff industries, say we have enacted a war tariff for the benefit of the robber barons.

Nothing could be more unjust.

The "robber barons," as the Democrats are pleased to call the manufacturers, were not considered of first importance in the matter, because Capital is timid and will go where it will always find protection.

The Democrat argues that the wages of the masons, the painters and the carpenters who put up the mills are not protected by the tariff. But this is a mistake. If other industries were not protected the workmen would be driven into these trades, and would soon from necessity force down the wages.

I know what I am talking about, because I was a member of the Committee on Labor of the House of Representatives, and had before me the organization of workingmen who ever waited upon us complain that their interests were not been sufficiently protected.

On the contrary we took special pains to see that the workingmen were protected, and believe all who knew were fully satisfied on that point.

There is never any danger now but any doubt on the subject, just let him look over the McKinley bill for himself. I believe a copy of it can be pamphleted form with your chairman, so that you can look it over at your leisure and to your entire satisfaction.

The speaker touched on the other positions of the Republican party in this campaign with equal clearness, in his address of nearly one hour.

But the tin plate question has not been generally understood, so no familiar with it, Congressman Buchanan having been one of the committee who helped to build up the bill.

Money-Making Ink.

James Eddy of Troy makes all the ink with which the Government prints its paper money. Mr. Eddy's father invented the ink, but he never told anybody how he did it until just before he died, when he let his son into the secret. Had an untimely accident gathered the inventor to his fathers before he told his son about the ink, the Government Printer would have been in a bad way, for Mr. Eddy's invention is the only kind of ink that will print on the peculiar surface of the fibre of which Government note paper is made.

The present Mr. Eddy employs only six men in the manufacture of his ink, and none of them is in the secret. None of them has yet seen Mr. Eddy to the interesting not of mixing the ingredients of which the ink is composed. Mr. Eddy locks himself up in his own room two weeks in every year, and it is there and then that he mixes stuff enough to supply the Government with ink twelve months.

This process of locking himself up surrounds Mr. Eddy's work with an air of romance something like that of a man whom Balzac made to search for the alkahest, the only difference being that the alkahest fellow shut himself up for a life time and got nothing, besides alienating the affections of his wife, while Mr. Eddy locks himself up for two weeks and gets $50,000 a year.

—Kid gloves have a way of ripping in spite of one's best efforts. Now, it is quite a disfigurement to sew a tiny rip in a brand new glove. So take a small piece of court plaster, or surgeon's plaster, turn your glove wrong side out, and neatly apply the plaster over the nicely-drawn-together edges of the glove. If you do it carefully you will not be able to find the rip. If the rip or tear is a large one, it should be nicely sewn, and then the plaster applied in the manner described. If treated in this manner, you will find the glove will not tear out in the same place again.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Humorous Side.

There never was an event so solemn or an occasion so doleful that it did not have a funny side to it. After due regard has been paid to the proprieties, look always for the fun in a thing, even if your best girl runs away with another man and marries him on the eve of your wedding day. In the most miserable times of your life keep this humorous side before you. It will make life lighter and more prosperous. It will help you throw off the blues sooner, and as soon as you can throw off the blues courage and hope will come back to you. With courage and hope you will be ready to face the fiends of ill luck and try again. A sense of humor has made many a man's fortune, and kept both men and women from madness and suicide.

A sense of humor is conducive to good digestion, and we are told now by the doctors that it is the chronic dyspeptics who are most apt to "catch" cholera. A sense of humor will therefore keep off the cholera. Fate has not dealt her worst for a man as long as he is gifted with a funny bump. There is fun in the world, and he will always see it, no matter what happens, and will always gather friends about him because of his merry, sunny disposition. If you have not the sense of humor, cultivate it. If you will not do that, go and shut yourself away from your fellow man and live in a coffin, for nobody wants you around.

A Literary Interval.

In the history of American literary achievement a singular state of affairs exists at present. There was probably never before so much literary and journalistic activity in the country, and there certainly were never before so many writers. Yet in the summing up of American literature there will never be a time when the general record represents so little that will last. The great New England group of writers is all gone except Dr. Holmes, and there is no group or any collection of writers anywhere that can take its place. We have a hundred respectable writers where there was one when Emerson and Whittier began to write, but we have not one who can take their place or the place of Longfellow, Lowell or Mrs. Stowe. Walt Whitman, who represented himself, is gone too.

There is a lull in American literature which portends the coming of great authors. That is the only way to look at the present lack of famous names among us. There are a hundred who fill the second rank, and more than one treads closely on the first, but none that quite reaches it. Yet the present marvelous activity of writing cannot go for nothing. We may look certainly in the next five or ten years for the appearance of writers of illustrious genius, both in prose and verse, or the signs will go for naught.

The mysterious new substance that Nikola Tesla, the latest electrical wizard, has invented or discovered is called "carborundum." He claims that carborundum will enable us to have electric lamps and lighting without wires, and that the lights will be twenty times as strong as they are now. Moreover, by means of carborundum the manufacture of diamonds will be possible. But who wants any manufactured diamonds? Glass would be almost as precious as the diamond if it was as scarce, for it is nearly as beautiful. A better thing than manufacturing diamonds would be for Mr. Nikola Tesla to find some lightweight and handy generator of electricity that would run a street car. That is what the world is sighing for now.

In the late tests of torpedo guns made by the navy department a torpedo that will run at the rate of twenty-eight miles an hour for nearly half a mile was fired from the guns on the torpedo boat Cushing. The missile plunged under water fifteen feet from the Cushing and spun along 300 feet, when it rose to the surface. This was to test, not the torpedo, but the gun, and every test made of the guns has thus far proved satisfactory. The torpedo in war will be loaded with 180 pounds of gun cotton.

The Australian labor commission, under the law consisting of eight employers and eight trades unionists, favors to a man the system of compulsory arbitration. The plan recommended is a law authorizing the action of arbitrators if either side to a controversy demands it in disputes between labor and capital. They believe an arbitration court should be established which shall thoroughly examine the question and give judgment as in a law trial.

Every Cubic of Vantage Crowded with Dense Masses of Humanity to See the Dazzling Sight—Nearly Half a Million Visitors in the City—The Naval Parade.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—The city today is literally crowded with visitors from all parts of the country, and it is computed that fifty anxious visitors are in the city. Nearly all the hotels are full, and miles rooms have been engaged in advance from silent customers find considerable difficulty in securing accommodations.

Ex-President Hayes and his daughter, Miss Fanny Hayes, arrived at the Fifth Avenue hotel and were registered from Fremont, O. Mr. Hayes shortly sent word to the committee on reception, who waited upon him in his parlor. The announcement is made that President Harrison will endeavor to be in the city for a short time on Wednesday, but that he must hurry back to Washington to the bedside of his wife.

Word was also received that Secretary of State Foster had consented to respond to the toast, "The United States." With this information came the statement from the committee of one hundred that at the banquet the health of President Harrison will be drunk, Vice President Morton acknowledging the courtesy and explaining the cause of the president's absence from the banquet.

Ex-President Cleveland and party, after viewing the parade of pupils yesterday afternoon, returned to the country re*dence of Mr. E. C. Benedict, at Greenwich*, Conn.

Magnificent Fireworks.

Thousands upon thousands of pairs of eyes witnessed on the New York and Brooklyn bridge last night a pyrotechnic exhibition of unexcelled splendor. The scene from The Tribune tower was gorgeous, lurid, wonderful.

At 8 o'clock, when the cars on the great structure had ceased running, all that could be seen was a string of electric lights and the dim outline of the towers backgrounded by the dense black of night. Far above the twinkling stars shed no light; below the moving lights on river craft threw but little radiance on the dark waters.

Suddenly there was a sound as of distant thunder, and a hundred detonating shells announced the commencement of the evening's programme. Then there was a blaze of light which lit up the entire bridge, lit the moving spectacles on the water and showed the crowded mass of humanity on land. The first piece was a portrait, lit by a reflection of a great conflagration. Slowly the glow died away, and the towers of the bridge cast great black shadows on the flowing water as of a giant hand laid upon them.

From the New York tower appeared in fiery figures "1492," and from the tower on the other side "1892" blazed forth. Then from the summit of either tower blazed a great and magical light, blue at first, changing to blood red, dying a strange, unearthly hue, and then fading away into two cities, the ships and the buildings. From the river came the sound of whistles and bells, and from the crowds mingled with the applause of the sight seeing people, carrying above the city a confused and muffled roar.

Scores of Roman candles followed bursting shells, screaming rockets of fire mingled with rockets and aerial shells and showers of sparks, until the whole east side, the golden shower fire similar to Niagara, covering the bridge from tower to tower, realistic and wonderful.

The crowds that witnessed the spectacle were beyond precedent. It seemed as though all the people of the great city had rushed like a great wave to the river side. Sitting docks and piers and decks, swarming diggings, streets, wagons, everything and everywhere. The windows, roofs and fire escapes of buildings all over the down town district were black with spectators, wherever a sight of the bridge could be obtained there were people in numbers, who crowded all possible footing and standpoint for the better places. For hours the people hurried toward the southern part of the city, and many were disappointed when the spectacle was at an end.

The Naval Parade.

The musical part of the Columbian celebration was begun last night, when the Oratorio entitled, "The Triumph of Columbus," was given at Carnegie Music hall. Chauncey M. Depew, without any introduction, addressed the audience. At the conclusion of the address "The Dream of Columbus" was rendered; then the "Council of Salamanca," followed by "Queen Isabella at Her Council." "The Voyage" and the finale, which was a grand triumphal march and reception. In part third, when Columbus and his boy, Diego, find themselves in watch, weary and travel torn, the recitation in song, "Oh, Give Me Bread," was very finely rendered. "Isabella's Prayer" and the chorus of "The Land, the Land," was received with great applause.

The great feature of the Columbian celebration today was the naval parade, which started from the Narrows about 12:30 o'clock. The display was the finest ever seen in this vicinity. The vessels were in three columns, and were two miles apart. The first and third columns were composed of American vessels, and the center column of the visiting ships of war. The receiving fleet consisted of sixteen. The parade was viewed by hundreds of thousands along the North river front to Riverside park, opposite Grant's tomb, where the warships came to anchor and the parade ended.

THE TREASON CASES.

Justice Paxson's Charge to the Grand Jury Against the Strikers.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 11.—Chief Justice Paxson, of the supreme court of Pennsylvania, charged the grand jury in the cases of the Homestead strikers charged with treason. The charge is unfavorable to the defendants. In charging the jury Judge Paxson said:

We can have some sympathy with a mob driven to desperation by hunger; as in the days of the French revolution, but we can have none for mere resistance to legally high wages by men of the law and resorting to violence and bloodshed in the assertion of imaginary rights, and unwilling such a vast expense upon the taxpayers of the common wealth.

In defining the law Judge Paxson said:

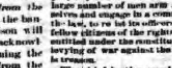
When the company shut down its works and discharged the men it was acting strictly in the lines of the law. It could not compel the men to work, nor could the men compel the company to employ them. No arrangement could be made in such regard except in the nature of a contract agreed upon by the parties.

The right of the men was to refuse to work unless their terms were acceded to them and persons could not be driven in such relation but the law will sustain them no further. The moment they attempt to control the works, and to prevent by violence or threats of violence other laborers from going to work they they place themselves outside the pale of the law. It cannot be tolerated for a moment that one laborer shall say to another laborer, 'You shall not work for this man for those wages without my consent,' and then enforce such command by brute violence upon his person.

A mere mob, collected upon the impulse of the moment, without leaders, subject to expend the gratification of its sudden passions, does not commit treason. It is destitute of the property that attacks human life. But when a large number of men aim and organize themselves into a body for the purpose both of the law, to re lst its officers and deprive their fellow citizens of the rights to which they are entitled, they are guilty of treason to the constitutional law against the state and the offense is treason.

The chief justice concludes as follows:

We have reached the point in the history of the state where there are but two roads left to us to pursue. The one leads to order and good government, the other to anarchy.



DECLINE OF THE CORSET.

Short-waisted Bodices Favor Generous Waists and Broad Hips.

Though the short-waisted bodice is becoming to well rounded slight figures only, still the fashion is decidedly on the increase, says the New York Sun. No style exactly repeats itself, and the new short-waisted bodices is much more graceful in cut and fashion than its predecessors. The suggestive of negligee and careless adjustment than those of the Examiner or the Watteau women, who are now so plainly responsible for the fashion that is grotesque and suggestful in dress. The reign of the short-waisted bodice, however, is suggestive of something beside a return to the age of powder and patches and of a fanciffulness in dress indicating a slackening of strict moral tension in the code of its wearers. The rise of the short bodice announces the decadence of the corset, or at least of all compression of the figure by the corset. When culture comes it is the higher culture, which now includes all manner of athletic and wholesome sport, the corset and its restrictions fly out in the light like tangled hair, the starched shirts and jewelry with street costumes, all once the sign manual of gentility, are now relegated to the dressing table or put on by questionable characters on the other side the crystal wall which separates the grande from the demi monde. Already we see in the world now as soon think of using stage make-up on her face by daylight as of tightening her corset unduly, and the best-dressed woman on the promenade you will find indulging not in tight shoes, tight gloves, or a tight bodice.

Novelties in Buttons.

There is no doubt that as the season advances buttons will grow in popularity and elegance. Already the most unique designs have been put upon the market, and manufacturers are busy preparing many handsome specimens. Mother-of-pearl, bone, steel, jet and smoked ivory are among the conspicuous ones among the autumn novelties, and buttons of twisted celluloid are tinted in every color of the rainbow, so that gowns may be matched with little difficulty. Perhaps the most original buttons are in leather, designed to go along with the leather belts which are to be worn with them. Quaint little Kate Greenaway house robes are to be fastened at the back with tiny buttons, showing the tinted miniature of some French beauty. The edges of these exquisite fancies are set with jewels.

BAD FOR LIZZIE BORDEN.

Awful Evidence Which, if True, Brands the Girl a Fiend.

HORRIBLE METHOD IN THE CRIME.

According to This Testimony There Was a Man in the Case, and Lizzie Was Released in a Rubber Garment While Deliberately Murdering Her Parents.

BOSTON, Oct. 11.—The Boston Globe publishes a thirteen column story from Fall River, setting forth in detail new and startling developments in the Borden murder cases, which, it says, are in the hands of the police and will be given by twenty-five new witnesses who will testify for the state at the coming trial of Miss Lizzie Borden. The evidence, The Globe states, is forthcoming from people all of whom stand high in the communities where they live, and who could have no motive in speaking maliciously of the defendant. The evidence, according to The Globe, is briefly stated as follows:

John H. Murphy, who resides on Bedford street, Fall River, will testify that he was awakened on the morning of the murder by Borden house when Mr. Borden entered his yard about 10:40 o'clock on the morning of Aug. 4, and he saw him a minute or two later ushered into the lobby by Bridget Sullivan. Mr. Murphy will swear that while Mr. Borden was walking in the yard he saw a window blind of the room in which Mrs. Borden's body was afterward found cautiously opened by a young woman who had the same morning told him when he called at the Borden house about 9:30 o'clock that her father had gone down town and would not be home until noon or later.

This woman he has identified as Lizzie Borden. The window Mr. Murphy desig*nates as the one in which he saw Miss Liz*zie is so situated that she must have been standing over the mutilated remains of her mother at the very time her father was about to enter the house.

A Man in the Case.

The next witness of importance is Mrs. Ginsford P. Ronald, of Newport, R. I., who was a guest at the Wilbur House. About 10:40 o'clock of the morning of the murder she was wheeling her baby carriage near the Borden house when she heard a terrible cry. She looked up at the Borden house and saw in a room through a partially open window a woman whose head was in part covered by a rubber cap or hood, whose face she saw plainly, as the distance was short. This window she has designated is the same as that occupied by Murphy. Mrs. Ronald was almost at this minute approached by Mr. Peter Mahany, of 92 Pleasant street, Fall River. He likewise looked up and saw a woman's head at the window who wore the peculiar head covering, and recognized her as the younger daughter of the Borden family. At most he saw of which he knew quite well by sight.

Augustus Canning, at that time a lodger in Mrs Churchill's house, also saw Lizzie Borden in the window at the same time and under the same circumstances. These witnesses, The Globe says, fix Miss Borden at her mother's side almost at the same moment when she was killed, and also when Miss Lizzie, according to her own statement, was elsewhere.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Chase, of Fall River, and Mrs. Abigail Manchester, their daughter, were friends of the elder Bordens, and visited them on the evening previous to the murder. They remained, it is stated, a quarrel between Lizzie and her father. All heard Mr. Borden say: "You can make your choice, and do it tonight. You shall not live with me and with her. I will take the door on Saturday, and when you go Bishop, fish for some other place to live, as I will never listen to you again. I will know the name of the man who got you into trouble."

Morse and Lizzie Talked of a Will.

Lizzie is said to have replied, "If I marry this man will you be satisfied that every thing will be kept from the outside world?" Then the visitors were announced, and conversed with Mr. and Mrs. Borden on the subject of the quarrel.

Mr. Borden said, "I would rather see her dead than have it come out."

Mr. C. H. Ronalie, a wealthy New York dealer in machinery supplies, has made affidavit that a few days prior to the murder Mr. Borden consulted him as a friend about Lizzie, whose trouble he related in detail.

Mrs. George J. Sisson, of Fall River, is said to have heard Lizzie say to Bridget Sullivan, the hired girl, "Why don't you say how much money you want to keep quiet?" Bridget's answer was, "I don't know what you mean, but you are not the girl I took you to be." Mr. George Sisson, it is said, will swear that less than a month before the murder Mr. Borden told him he had made a will giving Emma and Lizzie $95,000 each, which was more than he would have allowed them but for his wife's intercession.

Bridget Sullivan will, it is claimed, corroborate the story of the quarrel between Mr. Borden and Lizzie; also that she heard the night before the murders Morse and Lizzie talking about a will; also that on the afternoon of the day of the murder Lizzie whispered to her, "Keep your tongue still and don't talk to these officers and you can have all the money you want."

The Quarrel with Emma.

Detective McHenry and his wife will, it is said, give important evidence which relates in part to the alleged quarrel between Lizzie and Emma Borden in the matron's room in which the former accused the latter of having "given her away." This task, it is said, will be performed by the McHenrys, who overheard and saw the affair through a hole in the wall especially provided by the authorities. It is claimed that in the quarrel Lizzie kicked Emma several times on the leg.

Mr. Frank Burroughs, a lawyer of New York city, formerly of Fall River, is, it is said, the attorney consulted by Lizzie Borden about property rights in a father's estate should a stepmother die first. He is said to have made a statement for Mr McHenry and manifested a willingness to testify.

Matron Reagan will, it is alleged, tell the story of the quarrel between the girls, and Mrs Hannah Fish, of Hartford, George F. Revere, of Somerset; Minnie C. Wilcox, of Fall River; Detective Hathaway, of Fall River, and two others will give further testimony for the government.

The Statements Denied.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Oct. 11.—The Borden murder case is the sole topic of conversation here. The story just published has influenced feeling in favor of the girl, and it is felt that the government's case has been injured. In an interview had by Attorney Jennings, Miss Emma and Mr. Morse decided emphatically all statements regarding quarrels, etc. Mr. Morse is intensely angry and will seek legal redress.

SHERMAN IN NEW YORK.

The Senator Addresses a Big Republican Mass Meeting.

CHRIS MAGEE DOWN IN ALABAMA.

The Pennsylvania Republican Trying to Cement His Party in That State to Break the Solid South—Minnesota Democrats and Populists Fuse on Electors.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—Senator John Sherman addressed a large and enthusiastic Republican mass meeting at Cooper Union last night. As the senator stepped to the front of the platform he received an ovation that caused a glow of pleasure to spread over his grizzled features. After some minutes of continued applause three rousing cheers were given, which the band capped by playing "Marching Through Georgia."

Senator Sherman devoted his speech to a discussion of three points—the tariff, silver and state banks. His mention of Hising in connection with reciprocity drew forth cheers, and when he named Benjamin Harrison's name an enthusiastic tumult which compelled him to pause for nearly a minute.

He congratulated the Republicans that they had at last got the Democrats to be fair and square and to meet them on issues of the campaign.

There were three issues: Whether the imposing of duties on imports should be considered merely a question of revenue or a question of protection; whether the bubble of 371 grains of silver worth seventy-three cents shall deposit it and get a dollar in payment or gold and silver dollars shall remain on a parity; whether we shall have our notes backed by the honor of the government or return to a currency under the old system of state banks, with no security whatever. Senator Sherman evidently considered the tariff the most important question, because he devoted the greater portion of his speech to that.

The Tariff.

"Never before this campaign," said he, "has the Democratic party of this country taken the position that a tariff for protection is unconstitutional. I am glad we have got them there. It has gone back on its traditions. In the first congress of the United States after the new constitution a bill was introduced providing that duties be imposed on imports for the purpose of fostering manufacture in this country. It was drawn by James Madison and signed by George Washington.

"Thus it was written, and it was left to Larry O'Neal, of Ohio, to declare that the system was unconstitutional. [Laughter.]

"He was agreed with, I remember, by the Confederate states, which in their constitution said about the same thing, but the constitution of the Confederate states is not the constitution of the United States. Our soldiers settled that. [Applause.]

"Senator Hill," went on Mr. Sherman, "favors protection, but is against a protective tariff. He favors the laboring man, but is opposed to the laboring man. He is very sure of one thing—that in spite of all temptation he is a Democrat. [Laughter and applause.] Our theory and practice is that a tariff shall be levied with such discrimination as it shall protect the laboring man in making everything that can be produced at home as well as it can be abroad. We have extended the rule to all classes of American citizens—to the mechanic, the farmer, the miner."

Free Silver.

Senator Sherman warmly praised the McKinley bill, saying it was the best embodiment of the principles of protection that has ever been produced. Peck had been arrested for telling the truth about it. They might arrest Peck, but could not arrest the progress of American industries.

If Harrison is elected president the McKinley bill will stand. If Cleveland is elected president the McKinley bill will be repealed and ruin will follow. It is for the men of New York, because here the battle will be fought, to decide. Ohio will be all right. [Applause.] Speaking of the free coinage bill, Senator Sherman said Harrison would veto it. He had heard it while pierced here that Cleveland would never sign it, but he will be bound to obey the behests of his party.

Senator Sherman scored the proposed repeal of the 10 per cent tax on state bank notes. "It was put there," said he, "to cut the throats of the state banks which existed before the war and give us a sound currency. I helped pass the law and I am helping to keep it on the statute books. It is now the tendency of the Democratic party, dominated by the south, to revive all the issues before the war but slavery and disunion, and destroy all the achievements of the Republican party but the preservation of the Union."

At the conclusion of his speech Senator Sherman was tendered a reception by the Republican club.

The Baker Ballot Law Denounced.

WEST CHESTER, Pa., Oct. 11.—On Friday Judge Thomas Waddell appointed ex-Judge Thomas S. Butler as judge of election of one of the new precincts in West Chester. In court yesterday ex-Judge Butler refused to serve, saying: "I do not intend to assume the responsibility of determining what some of the provisions of the Baker ballot law may mean. It is, in my judgment, the most damnable piece of legislation ever put on our statute books, and I do not propose to submit myself to the danger of arrest and fine for the failure to determine who is entitled to vote under the act."

This coming from a man who was but recently on the bench of Chester county has startled the other election judges, and it is probable that many others will decline to serve. It is feared that difficulty will be had in securing enough men willing to serve to carry on the election in all the districts.

Chris Magee in Alabama.

BIRMINGHAM, Oct. 11.—Chris Magee, the prominent Pennsylvania Republican, is here in conference with the leading Republicans of both factions and the third party endeavoring to effect a [illegible] of all anti-Democratic forces in Alabama in an effort to carry the state against Cleveland. The Republican party is split in this state, one faction having out its own ticket, while the other is supporting the fusion ticket made up of the third party people and Republicans. The two Republican committees will meet here to see what can be done toward forming a union.

Electoral Fusion in Minnesota.

ST. PAUL, Oct. 11.—The Democratic state central committee withdrew the names of four of the Democratic presidential electors and indorsed four of the People's party presidentials. By this action the Democrats hope to elect their four remaining electors and divide the state with the Republicans.

JUSTICE SHIRAS SWORN IN.

He Takes His Place on the United States Supreme Court Bench.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—The opening session of the October term of the supreme court of the United States, with the attendant circumstances of the induction into office of the new associate justice, George Shiras, Jr., filled the court room to overflowing. After the usual announcement of the opening of court Chief Justice Fuller said: "I have much pleasure in announcing to the gentlemen of the bar that since the adjournment of the court the existing vacancy has been filled by the appointment of Mr. George Shiras, Jr., of Pittsburg. Mr. Shiras is present and ready to take the oath."

GEORGE SHIRAS, JR.

The clerk of the court, Mr. McKinney, then read the commission issued to Mr Shiras, at the conclusion of which the new associate justice arose and read in a moderate voice the oath in which he swears to do equal and exact justice to all, both rich and poor, agreeably to the constitution and the laws of the United States to the best of his knowledge and ability.

"So help you God," added the clerk. The new associate justice bowed affirmatively and was then conducted to his seat at the extreme left of the chief justice, next to Associate Justice Brewer. As he stepped upon the level occupied by the court the new member stopped, bowed gravely to his associates, who stood facing him and formally returned the salutation. Associate Justice Brewer received him with a handshake, and then all the members of the court took their seats.

The ceremony was quite brief, and all the persons present stood during its continuance, as well as the court.

Associate Justice Shiras is about fifty five years old. He stands 5 feet 10 inches in height, but beside the larger members of the court, Justices Gray and Harlan, does not look all his inches. He has brown hair, slightly tinged with gray, gray side whiskers, his chin and lip being shaven clean. His eye is blue, complexion verging on the ruddy, and his mouth shuts straight across the face, indicating firmness and decision. Justice Blatchford is encouraging a beard and the chief justice has a luxuriant mustache, on the new justice's whiskers are not so striking on the bench as they otherwise would be.

HARRISON RECEIVES EGAN.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—President Harrison gave a conference to Minister Egan, who has just arrived from Calil. Mr. Egan received the president's commendation for the manner in which he had discharged the delicate duties of his position. The president also expressed his sense of satisfaction at the fair and honorable settlement of the recent difference between the two countries.

Mr. Egan delivered a message from the president of Chili to the president of the United States, expressing his joy at the equitable adjustment of the controversy between the two nations and his personal appreciation of the kindly offices of the American minister in bringing about such a happy result.

At the state department Mr. Egan gave to Secretary Foster the memoranda of the treaty agreed upon by him and the Chilian officials for the appointment of a commission to settle the claims of citizens of the United States against Chili. He also indorsed to Secretary Foster the $75,000 paid by Chili as indemnity for the assault upon the sailors of the Baltimore in Valparaiso, by which two of them were killed and a number badly injured. The money was in the shape of letters of credit on Paris. Minister Egan will leave Washington this evening.

Quincy and Peck.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—Secretary Quincy, of the Democratic national committee, wrote Commissioner Peck that no more transcripts of the tables were needed by the committee, particularly as they were charged for. Mr. Peck answered that he only charged the legal rate, and that he "could supply any amount of additional tables equally as interesting as those already delivered."

Church Steeple Politics.

MADALIN, N. Y., Oct. 11.—Eccentric old General de Peyster ordered a picture of Harrison nailed to the steeple of a memorial church he is having built here, which was done. Excited Democrats then had a picture of Cleveland nailed over it, and then there was a row. Finally both pictures were taken down.

FRENCH CERAMIC ART.

The Royal Porcelains of France—St. Cloud, Chantilly and Sevres Ware.

The royal porcelains of France are unique in their exhibition of the utmost perfection of trained effort and artistic skill. Sevres, in his "Siecle de Louis XIV," tells us that porcelain was made at St. Cloud before it was manufactured elsewhere in Europe. Milky white and lucid, decorated with scallops and arabesques in the purest French taste, the new art had an immediate success. In 1773 the St. Cloud build ings were destroyed by fire, and the pot teries of Chantilly rose into deserved favor and notice. Their special note was a certain opaque glaze, containing tin, by the employment of which an exquisitely smooth surface was obtained. At first the decoration was borrowed from Japanese Imari ware. The distinguishing mark of this Chantilly production is a hunting horn, traced in red and blue. The Prince of Conde was the chief patron; such pat ronage was not uncommon among the great French nobles. The Duke of Villeroy had a pottery at Menneey, pieces from which are extremely valued, and bear the ducal initials "D. V." traced on the wet clay.

The paste of Sevres is hard or soft, to use the technical terms. The soft paste is made of kaolin or white natural clay, subjected to a most careful preparation, but the hard paste is a composition in which sand, alabaster, silex and marl find a place. The use of these clays constituted an epoch in French ceramic art, nevertheless Saxony still held the palm, and France determined to surpass her rival. Sand, silex, potash and salts of soda were melted in a crucible and the glaze so obtained was poured over, instead of dipping the pieces in. The surface thus produced was of great velvety, and whether colored or plain absolutely smooth. At first all the pieces were white. Flowers reproduced from nature with admirable fidelity were the favorite decoration.

The potters were permitted to style themselves Manufacture Royal des Porcelaines de France, using the royal monogram as a stamp. In 1756 they were formally transferred from Vincennes to Sevres. Now we hear of the incomparable bleu de roi, the rose Pompadour and the rose Dubarry, the secret of which latter still seems now to be lost. Vanloo and Boucher, Mathieu and Bachelier lent their talents and skill to the perfecting of this truly royal art. During the revolutionary period the fabrication of soft porcelain languished as the arts of luxury lost their patrons in the great nobles. It has since been revived, and a visit to the same time royal galleries is one of the greatest interest imaginable.

The Dress of Famous Englishmen.

William Pitt, earl of Chatham, was always very neat in his dress. It is said that he never wore on business without a full dress coat and a tie wig. George Canning was plain and simple in his dress, but in thorough taste. Indeed his personal appearance exactly agreed with his character. "No man," it has been observed, "was more removed from presumption or vanity. His lowest simplicity and was affable to those about him."

Admiral Sir Charles Napier was in early life most eccentric in his dress. He had an olive green coat, with gilt buttons, which he wore until it was threadbare.

As a young man Sir Walter Scott was neglectful of his dress, but about the year 1790 he laid aside his slovenliness, which, it would seem, had led his friends to ridicule him. According to his friend, Mr. William Clark, "he now did himself more justice in these little matters, and, as his friend expressed it, began to set up for a squire of dames."

The Duke of Wellington was always smart and precise in his dress, which carried very little. In summer he might be recognized by "his low crowned, narrow brimmed hat, his white cravat fastened with a silver buckle behind, his blue frock, white waistcoat and white trousers. In winter there was the same hat, neck cloth and frock, with a waistcoat, blue, sometimes red, and blue trousers. He never wore a greatcoat, but in severe weather he threw over his shoulders a short cape made of blue cloth with a white lining. His evening attire, except when he was in mourning, consisted of a blue coat with metal buttons, a white cravat and waistcoat, black breeches and silk stockings or light black pantaloons."

The Speed of Fish.

Now that every effort is being made to increase the speed of ocean steamers, it is interesting to know the speed with which different fish can pass through the water. The Industrial World tells that for long distances swimming the shark may be said to hold the record, as he can outstrip the swiftest ships, apparently without effort, swimming and playing around them, and ever on the lookout for prey. Any human being falling overboard in shark frequented waters has very little chance to escape, so rapid is the action of the shark, the monster of the deep. The dolphin, another fast swimming fish, is credited with a speed of considerable over twenty miles an hour. For short distances the salmon can outstrip every other fish, accomplishing its twenty-five miles an hour with ease. The Spanish mackerel is one of the fastest of food fishes, and cuts the water like a yacht. Predatory fishes are generally the fastest swimmers.

Marriage Superstitions.

Married in white, you have chosen all right.

Married in gray, you will go far away.

Married in black, you will wish yourself back.

Married in red you will wish yourself dead.

Married in green, ashamed to be seen.

Marries in blue, he will always be true.

Married in pearl, you will live in a whirl.

Married in yellow, ashamed of your fel low.

Married in brown, you will live out of town.

Married in pink, your spirit will sink.

California's First Gold.

Marshall's gold nugget will be exhibited at the World's fair by California, says the Marysville Appeal, which adds that this interesting object is the identical nugget which Marshall picked up in the American river Feb. 16, 1848, when selecting a site for Sutter's mill, and which constituted the first discovery of gold in California. The nugget is about the size of a Lima bean, and on account of its associations and its almost fabulous wealth and development which have resulted from its finding is regarded as an almost priceless treasure.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

IN SWITZERLAND.

Life in the Elevated Pasture Lands During the Summer Months.

Switzerland, the smallest and most mountainous country of Europe, differs in the climate of its various localities, according to their elevation above the sea level. At a height exceeding 9,300 feet the mountains are covered with perpetual snow. Below the level of perpetual snow the country is divided into a series of belts of different climates. In the highest of these belts, though glaciers fill the valleys, tiny plants begin to clothe the scanty soil of the ridges. In the second belt Switzerland is a country of pastures in which shrubs, but no trees, appear. In the third belt forests of fir trees and maples replace the meadows to some extent. In the fourth belt there are excellent meadows and forests of beech trees, and rye and barley are cultivated. Lower down there are chestnut trees, mulberries and vines and wheat is grown.

During the summer months the elevated pasture lands are inhabited by herdsmen and their families, who, at that pleasant season, drive their cattle up into the mountains and take up their abode in wooden huts known as chalets, where they make butter and cheese. There are large numbers of milk cows and other horned cattle in Switzerland, and each owner strives through the short summer season to make as much butter and cheese as possible, which may afterward be turned into money or exchanged for necessaries. Whole families often share in the annual migration to the mountains, and the women and girls assist in the lighter part of the work. Of course in these cases the chalets are built of more comfortable description than when only intended for the occupation of rough herdsmen and their assistants.

The Monkey and the Pie.

An Indian fakir had a monkey that he had brought up from babyhood. The pair were fast friends, the monkey being a faithful attendant on his master and as good as a watch-dog. One day the fakir made a pie for dinner and left it to cook on a charcoal fire while he went for a walk. As the cooking proceeded the savory smell was too much for the monkey. It pulled the crust and tasted the chicken. Finding the food very tasty it ate more and more, till nothing but the crust remained. Then it thought of the master, who would shortly come back hungry and ready to enjoy his meal. What was to be done? The sharp eyes of the monkey detected some crows not far away, so without loss of time it lay down on the ground as if dead. By and by a crow came along and packed at the monkey, which seized the bird in a twinkling, strangled it, stripped off the feathers, placed it in pieces in the dish, covered it over with the crust and then contentedly awaited the return of the fakir, to whom the whole incident was afterward related by a witness of it.

A Bird Story for Little Folks.

One sunny morning Dame Redbreast
Resolved on building her home nest,
And hunting forth with cheerful lay,
Had gathered twigs, sticks and hay
Until 'twas hung 'mid branches twining,
And lacked alone the downy lining.
Which, softer than much admired
And tender nestlings' needs required.

While looking round with eager eyes
Beneath my window, she espies
Those scarlet yarn among the roses,
Which whistling wind in her discloses;
She secretly steals, "If these were mine
How nice and soft my nest to line!"
But, oh, alas! the cruel thing
Laughed all her efforts quite to scorn.

She called her mate with tone severe,
He bustling came. With efforts queer
He sought to aid Lis worthy wife;
But all in vain their wordy strife;
On languid wing they sailed away,
The yarn but now so glad and gay.

I quickly to the window drew
And softly up the sash I threw,
I loosed the threads, broke them in two,
Then out of sight again withdrew,
And thought, "Will she 'Try, try again' As sweetly sings the old refrain?"
Ah, yes! they came and quickly bear
The thread they covet through the air—
And as they sped on sweeping wing
They sang the song that courage sing.
—Ohio Farmer.

Fred and Sam Go Shopping.

"Lollipop yellow, or lollirop red,
Which is the nicest?" said fat little Fred.
"I shall buy something all smothered in jam—
Where is my money? I've got it," said Sam.

"I SHALL BUY SOMETHING ALL SMOTHERED IN JAM."

Into the shoppie they went pit-a-pat,
"Little of this, and a little of that."
Out again quickly, their money all gone,
Lollipops not ladies that ever were born.

COLUMBUS DAY PREPARATIONS.

Suggestions to the Public Schools for the Celebration of the Anniversary.

The official programme for the national school celebration of Columbus Day is now published. The first duty of each of our schools this fall, if it wishes to be in line with the other schools of America, is to begin preparations at once for its proper observance of Oct. 21, the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America. A few suggestions as to the first things to be done may be of some value.

Teachers, the superintendent and the school board should confer. that action may be harmonious and best results attained. The proposed celebration should be explained to each school at the earliest moment. It should be so presented as to awaken enthusiasm Interesting topics relating to Columbus and the discovery should be suggested for special investigation. Such topics might be "The Map of the World Before the Discovery," "Important Inventions and Events in Europe Just Before the Discovery," "The Story of Columbus," "The Ships of Columbus," "What Columbus Expected to Find," "Geographical Growth of the United States," "Stories of South America," etc. The teacher should assign the address and the ode to those who can render them most intelligently. The flag salute and the songs should be persistently rehearsed.

Important committees of pupils should be appointed: First—A committee of invitation, whose duty is to see that the family of each pupil receives a special invitation to the morning exercises of Oct. 21, and also when they arrive to show them seats. Second—A color guard, whose duty is (1) to see that the school has a flag and a staff in proper condition; (2) to meet the veterans as they arrive and escort them with dignity to the principal in the school-houses; (3) to act as aids of the principal.

An efficient adult committee of arrangements should also be constituted. This committee must see—first, that seats are prepared out of doors in hope of fair weather, and that a room is also engaged for the exercises should the day be stormy; second, that fitting decorations and printed programmes are provided; third, that the local press is interested and invited; fourth, that arrangements are made with the veterans and other special guests for the parts they are to take.

But in all cases the school principal must make himself personally responsible for the work of each committee.

THE COLUMBUS AUTOGRAPH

There is a never ending dispute regarding the authenticity of the various portraits of Columbus. People who claim to know deny that the picture which is to adorn the souvenir half dollar is a correct presentment of the navigator's features, but whether or not the grounds on which they base their criticism are tenable will probably never be decided. Fortunately, however, the quarrel does not extend to a challenge of the verity of Columbus' autograph, a facsimile of which is given herewith.

To the ready pen wielder of the Nineteenth century the zigzag writing of the discoverer of America must seem queer indeed, but it should be remembered that in those days men wielded the sword and left the gentler arts to be preserved at the hands of priests and women. Most of the famed leaders of the Fifteenth century were unlettered and found it a laborious task to sign their names to important documents prepared by the monks who followed in their trains. Columbus of course was a man of great learning, according to the standard of his age, but the use of the pen was even to him a burden, and his famous diary was probably written as a matter of duty and not of pleasure.

It is curious to note that he formed the individual letters in the same bold yet uncertain style which characterized the chirography of Queen Elizabeth. "Bess of England" could swear roundly and steer the ship of state with firmness: Columbus could bring monarchs to terms and cope with mutinous sailors, but when either of them took pen in hand the unsteadiness of small practice distinguishes the manuscript or autograph.

Felipa, Wife of Columbus.

More than the compass to the mariner
Went thou, Felipa, to his dauntless soul.
Through all oceans winds that threatened wreck, and nights
Of rayless gloom, thou pointed ever to
The north star of his great ambition. He
Who once has lost an Eden, or has gained
A paradise by Eve's unhappiness,
Alone can know how strong a spell lies in
The witchery of a woman's beckoning hand.
And then didst draw him, tideless, higher still,
Felipa, whispering the lessons learned
From thy religeous father till the flood
Of his ambition burst all barriers
And swept him onward to his longed for goal.
Before the jewels of a Spanish queen
Built fleets to waft him on his untried way
Then gave thy wealth of wifely sympathy
To build the lofty purpose of his soul.
And now the centuries have eyeid by
Till then art all forgot by the throng
That lauds the great Pathfinder of the deep.
In masters not in that infinitude
Of space, where thou dost guide thy spirit bark
To undiscovered lands, supremely fair.
If to this little planet thou couldst turn
And voyage, wraithlike, to its cloud hung rim.
Thou wouldst not care for praise. And if perchance
Some hand had cut to thee a laurel bough,
Thou wouldst not claim one wreath, but fondly turn
To lay thy trophies also at his feet.
—Annie F. Johnston in Harper's Weekly.

1492—Columbus struck a current in which the seaweeds were floating from east to west and knew he was near land, whereat the crew again grew discontented.

1856—Dr. Kane arrived at New York from his arctic expedition.

1861—The Confederates won Manassas tried to capture Washington and New Orleans.

1865—The so called "Gordon Massacre" at Mount Bay, Jamaica, in which were killed about 30 whites, the whole number of negroes were slaughtered in the "bush" and several hanged, among them George William Gordon, whose execution late excited much discussion in England. By order of President Johnson all the Confederates in Fort Warren, including Vice President Stephens, were released, leaving Jefferson Davis the only prisoner of the late war.

1870—Tolerably quiet municipal elections took place in all the state elections, that party gaining several members of congress. General Lo Marmora took possession of Rome in the name of King Victor Emanuel, thus completing the unification of Italy; Cardinal Antonelli issued a protest against it as "a violent and sacrilegious usurpation."

Other Material at Hand.

Colonel Gilkerson's wife and daughter returned yesterday from their summer at the seashore. The colonel was at the depot with a carriage to meet them, and after the first effusive greetings were over he turned his eyes indulgently on the tall, beautiful girl and said:

"Well, Angeline, how did ye like it?"

"Oh, popper," she exclaimed, "it was just heavenly! I never enjoyed anything so much."

"H'm!" observed the old man reflectively, "did ye get to 'love old ocean and its roar' an all that sort o' business?"

"Oh, no, indeed! I didn't have any time to love that."—Detroit Tribune.

His Fatal Mistake.

Whyte—Why, old man, what's the matter with you? I never saw you look sodisconsolately seedy in my life.

Browne—Matter enough, dear boy. I bet five dollars on the races last week, and the horse I backed did not finish.

Whyte—Five dollars? Well, what of that? The loss of five dollars didn't break you, did it, old man?

Browne—No, that didn't break me, of course. The trouble was, I tried to get square.—Somerville Journal.

IN THE GREAT COLUMBIAN CELEBRATION.

All Business Stopped—The Schools Closed—Thousands Spend the Day in New York—Plainfield Bicyclers Take Part in the Big Night Pageant.

There was a general closing of stores in this city yesterday. All business was suspended in honor of the 400th anniversary of the Discovery of America by Christopher Columbus. The schools were also closed. Although there was no elaborate display made a number of the residences were decorated with national colors. Many Plainfielders witnessed the great celebration, both day and night, in New York. All the trains in that city were crowded. Excursions leading many specials were provided with coaches. Those who have travelled on the railroad for many years say they never saw the trains so crowded. About seven special trains left Jersey City between 11.30 and two o'clock and on every train the cars were packed, even the platforms and steps being occupied. Those who caught the 11.30 train reached Plainfield about 1.40 p. m., but a few minutes before other trains which left the city about an hour later.

The crowd which swallowed who took part in the night parade made a good showing. There were about twenty-five bicyclers headed by Capt. F. L. C. Martin. Color-bearer Louis Titsworth who made a tandem bearing a large transparency.

—The Journal and Courier of New Haven, Ct., says: The celebrated Hotchkiss family will hold a reunion next week at the Pearl street M. E. church last evening in an entertainment under the auspices of the Epworth League of that church. The Hotchkiss family are real wonders in a musical way, and their performances are unique and pleasing. The performance consisted of whistling solos, twins bell ringing, and a concert by twenty or more different instruments. Miss Anna Hotchkin, a young lady of extraordinary musical abilities, is master of ten different instruments. Among the pleasing selections were "The Chimes of Normandy," "The Blue Bells of Scotland," whistling solo and xylophone solo by Miss Hotchkin, and a number of twins and duets played a number of instruments. This company will appear at the Warren Mission chapel on Plainfield avenue under the auspices of the Y. P. S. C. E. at eight o'clock.

PERSONAL.

The funeral of the late Rudolph M. Titsworth took place from his late residence, 19 West Second street, at half-past two o'clock this afternoon.

The State Department of Public Instruction, which is to give a school exhibit at the World's Fair, has appointed Principal C. E. Boss of the North Plainfield high school, one of a special committee to prepare such exhibit.

Geo. A. Collins and Lewis Kline of this city spent yesterday fishing on the Passaic River at Chatham. Mr. Kline had a lot of "nibbles," but did not catch a fish. Mr. Collins, however, had only one "bite" on his line all day, but he came and he didn't get, and after considerable trouble he succeeded in landing a bass weighing three pounds and nineteen ounces.

A very pretty wedding occurred at 6.45 o'clock last evening at "Brook Lodge," West Dunellen, when Miss Mary Rose, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Brooks, was married to the wife of James C. Armstrong of Brooklyn. The house and grounds were handsomely decorated with flowers and colored lights. An informal reception followed the supper which followed the ceremony. To accommodate guests a train stopped at the Dunellen station at 8.30 o'clock.

TOOK LAUDANUM.

HOWARD WILSON'S SUDDEN DEATH THIS MORNING.

Not Feeling Well Yesterday, He Took the Drug to Cause Sleep.—His Heavy Breathing Startled His Wife. —Died Shortly After the Physician Arrived.

Mr. Howard Wilson, the oldest son of Col. John F. Wilson of Grantwood, road, North Plainfield, died at his home, No. 144 Grove street, about four o'clock this morning, from the effects of an overdose of laudanum. He had attended business at Elizabeth as usual yesterday, and had promised to meet his wife and sister-in-law in New York in the evening, to witness the Columbus celebration.

He had complained of feeling very tired in the morning, and instead of going to New York as he had promised, returned home and retired about half-past seven o'clock in the evening, saying he was not feeling well.

His wife and sister-in law returned from New York on the ten o'clock train.

About half-past two o'clock, Mrs. Wilson was awakened by her husband's heavy breathing, and sent for Dr. Carman.

While waiting for the doctor's arrival she discovered E. empty bottle of laudanum on the mantel piece, and immediately endeavored to arouse him from his stupor.

She was aided in her efforts by her sister, Miss Warnock.

Mr. Wilson, about three o'clock, recovered consciousness for a few moments and recognized those about him. From his talk it was learned that he had taken two teaspoonsful of the drug when retiring and then fell asleep. He then became unconscious again and remained so until his death, which occurred about fifty minutes after the arrival of Dr. Carman, not withstanding all efforts of artificial respiration.

He had been in the habit of taking small doses of laudanum when not feeling well, and believed the drug in small doses had no effect on him.

The effect of the drug is to paralyze the muscles of the lungs.

He moved here thirty years and seven months old.

The funeral services will be held at his late residence.

New Jersey Association Union Ex-Prisoners of War Re-union.

The New Jersey Association Union Ex-Prisoners of War will hold their annual re-union in Reform Hall to-day. The morning business meeting was called to order at eleven o'clock. Treasurer S. M. Long offered a prayer. A communication was read from Mrs. G. W. Pierce giving notice of the death of her husband.

Resolutions of condolence were adopted. The treasurer's report showed a net balance of $68.17. Several communications were elected. President Haynes declined to be re-elected. The following are the officers elected for the ensuing year:

Pres., J. Madison Drake; Vice-Pres., S. M. Biker; Sec., J. A. Pelouhet; Cor. Sec., Mrs. Mary A. Woodruff; Chaplain and Historian, A. M. Sherman. Executive Committee, W. G. Ackerson, E. L. Doyle, J. A. Pelouhet, Mrs. Mary A. Pelouhet, H. V. Crawford. Membership Committee Drake, Comrades Hopkins and Shaw. Delegates to the National Convention, Comrades Crawford, Ackerman, Biker and Long. It was also resolved to choose their own alternates and notify secretary.

Speeches were made by S. M. Long, S. M. Biker, Capt. Ackerman and Comrade Shaw.

A resolution making the Welcome Guest, published at Whippany, N. J., by the Rev. A. M. Sherman, the official organ of the Association was adopted.

A resolution accepting the declination of re-nomination of Gen. E. L. Hayes, who has filled the office of President for the past six years, was adopted and thanks extended for his past services.

The treasurer submitted a badge for the members and guests. August Schroeder was elected color bearer. The meeting then adjourned for dinner.

Among the new members elected were the names of E. E. Seaman, and John Mackey, of this city. Mr. Seaman served in Co. D., 8th N. J. Vols. and was captured at the battle of Spotsylvania. He was an inmate of Andersonville and Florence prisons and escaped March 1, 1865. Mr. Mackey served in Co. A., 7th Reg't, N. J., and was captured on June 16th at the battle of Petersburg. He was confined in Libby, Belle Isle, Danville, Andersonville and Savannah prisons and was released Nov. 28, 1864.

The afternoon session was called to order at three o'clock and the following program carried out. The entire audience joined in singing a patriotic song. A prayer was then offered. More singing followed. Mrs. Olsen, President of the Loyal Ladies' League, introduced the Ex-Prisoner of War speech, and John Ulrich delivered an address of welcome, to which the president, J. Madison Drake responded.

Instrumental music preceded the presentation of a large silk flag by S. M. Long for the lady friends of the organization, together with a handsome plush-lined, leather-bound carrying case made by Secretary Pelouhet. S. M. Biker, on the part of the ex-prisoners, received the flag with a short speech of thanks and appreciation. Mrs. Blair of this city sang "The Star-Spangled Banner" in a very effective manner.

The afternoon session ended with an experience meeting, in which Comrades Biker, Sutton, Hall, Hopkins, Pelouhet and Doty spoke, the talks being interspersed with music.

The members were invited to a supper, which the ladies had prepared.

THE PLAINFIELD RELIEF ASSOCIATION ANNUAL MEETING.

The Secretary's and Treasurer's Reports, Showing the Good that has Been Done.—Officers and Managers for 1892.

The annual meeting of the Plainfield Relief Association was held Tuesday in the rooms on West Second street.

The annual reports of the Secretary and Treasurer were read and received.

The following is the Secretary's Report.

The work of the Relief Association during the past year has followed the same lines as hitherto with little change of any sort. The same departments as those mentioned in the last annual report has continued in operation, but no new branches have been inaugurated. The contributors of past years have continued to give financial support, but few new names have been added to the list. A decided advance, however, has been made in the matter of securing the co-operation of other charitable societies, and perhaps more especially of the Associated Charities, which has been of the greatest advantage under which all such societies labor when there is not a proper understanding between them. If there is not some method of comparison, some interchange of relief discovered E. empty bottle of laudanum on the mantel piece, and immediately endeavored to arouse him from his stupor.

She was aided in her efforts by her sister, Miss Warnock.

Mr. Wilson, about three o'clock, recovered consciousness for a few moments and recognized those about him. EDITORIAL NOTES

Cures for Drunkenness.

Dr. T. W. Crothers himself states a great truth when he says in The Popular Science Monthly that when a great truth begins to find public recognition it is always first welcomed by the credulous and visionary enthusiast, who forms the most extravagant expectations of it. Then straightway steps forward the charlatan, who follows up this enthusiasm, trades on it and turns it to his own personal profit. Meantime, under all this heavy load of extravagant expectation on the one hand and quackery on the other, the real, solid scientific facts in the matter proceed slowly to evolution and length become part of the store of acquisition.

So with drunkenness cures. When all the chaff is winnowed out, when the cranks are sifeiced and the frauds who pretend to perform marvelous cures have worked the mine of credulity till it is exhausted, it will be found that this much solid truth has been attained: Drunkenness is a disease and curable as other diseases are.

The doctor does not deny that the quacks have made some cures. The old pledge of the Washingtonian Temperance society also wrought cures. It was believed that there was some peculiar occult virtue in the mere act of taking the pledge, and that some spiritual power descended with the solemnly pronounced vow into the soul of the man taking it, which controlled thenceforward his mad craving for liquor. This belief was due influence on the minds of thousands, and while it lasted did good. It was in fact the original mind cure.

In like manner, while the belief in them lasts, the quacks' specifics for inebriety will undoubtedly cure some drunkards. For the rest, it is tolerably certain that drunkenness is "an insanity of the border line type." Its origin is in a general defective condition of the central brain. When science learns how to remedy this condition, drunkenness will pass into the category of diseases remediable by medical skill.

Utilizing Hot Wells.

An interesting item of intelligence from Boise City is that the boiling wells a mile from that place are to be utilized for heating buildings. Boise City is fortunate indeed if this can be done. There are several artesian wells that pour out great streams of boiling water. It is not mineral water, but just pure, clean, hot water, utilized heretofore only for bathing. But now a 6-inch pipe is to be laid from the wells to the town, and the fluid is to be introduced into business blocks and private dwellings to secure a summer temperature in cold weather. The saving in coal will be 50 per cent., as there is no expense about getting the water except for its flow in pipes. It is to be hoped the supply will hold out, and that this unique experiment will be successful. The saving in dust, ashes, soot, coal smoke and labor is incalculable.

The method of heating buildings by hot water is coming to be recognized as the best. Florists found it out long ago, and now most of the large modern greenhouses that supply cut flowers to the trade are kept at the right temperature by this soft, steady heat. The machinery necessary to heat houses thus has become so complete and so reasonable in price that any house supplied with a constant flow of water can be warmed in this most healthful, cleanly and convenient of all ways.

The time will probably come when every well to do farmer will have his home heated in this way. Artesian wells are not so very expensive and many farms do not even need these, for they are supplied with never failing springs and brooks. A windmill will usually pump the water into a tank which gives the necessary pressure, and the piping can be done at not great expense. A small furnace and boiler will do the rest. There is really no reason why farmhouses should not have as complete arrangements for comfort as a city home.

The Columbus (O.) board of trade has done a public service in passing that resolution asking the World's fair authorities to see to it in time that restaurant keepers and boarding houses do not pile on extortionate rates during the exposition. The temptation to do this will be more than human nature can bear, unaided either by divine power or by a good, strong human authority. At the Paris exposition all was perfect except for this one thing. Restaurateurs fattened like cormorants on their prey, and the complaint of their extortion was universal. The fair authorities must make such arrangements at Chicago that when one buys egg or potato or sixteen prices on beef from the cows that got away from the flagship Santa Maria when Columbus discovered America he may be yanked up and made an awful example of.

What builders want now is a strong white cement, to be used in the making of white artificial stone. Portland cement gives a gray color to the stone always. Where is the man who can discover a white cement?

In London there is a Christian Police union, and London has 5,000 regularly praying policemen. How many has Chicago?

THE BIG PAGEANT ENDS

A Brilliant Finale to New York's Columbus Celebration.

MORE THAN A MILLION SPECTATORS

There Were 40,000 Men in the Day Parade and the Procession of Illuminated Floats at Night Closed the Outdoor Exercises in a Blaze of Splendor.

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—New York's celebration of the four hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America by Columbus came to a brilliant finale in the military parade, in which 40,000 uniformed men participated, and which was witnessed by at least a million more, and in the night pageant which followed it. The whole display of the celebration makes one wonder so gorgeous was it, what the World's fair would have been had it been held here.

Since Howe's redcoats chased Washington up Bloomingdale road, and, nearly gobbling Sullivan's brigade at the place where Union square is now, retook possession of Manhattan Island, no body of soldiers so large and so soldierly looking as that of yesterday has marched on Manhattan Island.

Larger forces have marched, notably at the centennial of the Washington inauguration three years ago last April. More experienced troops have marched, as when for instance, the Continentals came tramping under the leafless trees of the Bowery at a discreet distance behind the gilded troop which was hooting Tory houses at one minute after noon of the original Evacuation Day; or when General Worth and Colonel Baxter came back from the Mexican war to have the disreputable old Five Points named after them; or when "Johnny came marching home again."

"Upon the Gates as Army."

But never since Sir William's men came over from Long Island on that brotherly visit which lasted for seven years of misery has any general led so solid and homogeneous a force up Broadway as that which yesterday followed the lead of General Martin T. McMahon, grand marshal of the Columbian parade.

Between the left of the line of the West Point cadets, which led the military division, to that of the Fourth Connecticut regiment, which closed it, there was a force of federal and state infantry and artillery, armed, equipped, uniformed and drilled as well as the exception of the old fashioned "millish" uniforms of the Seventh and Twenty-second and the Atlanta-to-the-sea garb of the Pennsylvanians, which announced to a good sized army corps.

There was a large brigade of federal troops, say 2,000 strong; a full division of twelve regiments and three batteries of New Yorkers, say 9,000 strong.

There was a big parade of Pennsylvanians, four regiments, a battalion and a troop, say 3,500 strong; another brigade of two twelve-company regiments and a troop of Jerseymen, say 2,000 strong, while the four regiments of Nutmeg state's men, which did not parade up the street, the corps of two divisions, mustering in all between 16,000 and 17,000 men. Their ranks were not broken by the parade of honorary staffs or by the presence of civilian escorts.

Save in the case of the Twenty-second and Seventh New York regiments and the Philadelphia City troop, they were the uniform either of the United States army or the United States veterans, and the people—the pervasive, the omnipresent, the overwhelming people—could echo from the battery to Fifty-ninth street the saying which General Sherman was said to have used but once after the grand review—"There goes the country."

The Climax of the Celebration.

It was a bigger and a better force than Scott took to the conquest of Mexico, and before he had even started that expedition Taylor had already subjugated the northern part of that republic with about one-quarter as many men.

This was but one feature of the Columbian parade, which included besides 6,000 veterans headed by such commanders as Slocum and Sickles; Horace Porter, the friend and aid of Grant, and Fitz John Porter, the friend and lieutenant of McClellan "Baldy" Smith and W. B. Franklin, kid of the old sixth corps, bought and paid for from it before the war was half over Doubleday, who took the First from Rey beside dying hands, and Webb, who was raised in the thick of fighting to fight the reputation of a New York fighting family.

Last, but not least, was a general among those generals whose grandfather was the commander in chief of the first little regular army of the United States—Generals Schuyler Hamilton, second in descent from one General Alexander of that name.

With such military matters as these to see and think about, to say nothing of marching letter carriers and firemen and gay hued Italian military companies, and German societies and sea legged sailor men from the squadron and white decked naval reserves, and regalia decked Foresters and Pythian Knights and the rest, it is small wonder that New York made its third and last Columbian turnout the greatest of the series.

Vice President Morton, Governor Flower General Schofield, ex-President Cleveland ex-President Hayes and a host of distinguished men reviewed the parade from the president's stand at Madison square. As this procession of Columbian Fathers was for a moment mistaken by the crowd for Senator Hill and a great cheer went up but when it was discovered who he was it got the cheers for Governor Flower and Abbett and Russell got rousing reception from the crowd, and Governor Bulkeley came in for a goodly share of applause.

The Statue Unveiled.

Just as the crowning festivities of the great celebration were being veiled in dark tens the strips of white muslin that concealed the marble statue of Columbus at the entrance to Central park fell away and a heavy thunder of applause rose up from 20,000 men and women.

In the absence of Vice President Morton and Mayor Grant Uncle Jerry Rusk, on the part of the donors, presented the statue to the city and it was received by General James Grant Wilson.

Annie Barsetti, who was to unveil the statue, was dressed in white, and she per wented a pretty picture of modesty and grace.

As the white veil fluttered down the bands tried to play, but they were hushed and for a few seconds the great multitude had a chance to view the splendid figure.

The pose was a familiar one. It shows the great admiral with the big cloak full facing nearly to the ankles, his heavy lock clustering thickly about his neck, his left hand resting on his hip and his right hand hanging at his side.

In the granite column the three caravels the Santa Maria, the Pinta, and the Nina in which Columbus started on his first voyage of discovery for the honor and glory of Spain, are represented by three bronze figures that appear to pierce the column showing on both sides. Just below are the words in bronze letters, "A. Colono foro Columbo." At the base of the column is a winged figure scanning a marble globe.

The Night Pageant.

The historical and industrial night pageant, which closed the outdoor part of the Columbian celebration, had many difficulties to contend with. The crowds of people were simply too vast as to be absolutely unmanageable. They were good natured and raised no disturbances, but there were simply too many of them.

The line of parade from the Battery to Fifty-ninth street was inclosed by a wall as solid as if it had been masonry for all parade purposes, and it was therefore kept 10 o'clock, an hour and three-quarters after the appointed time, before the pageant was put in motion.

The preliminary part of the proceedings was a parade of bicyclers, some of them dressed in fantastic costumes to represent Indians, etc., and each machine carried a lighted lantern. The effect was very pretty. There were a number of women in line, and they rode more gracefully than the men.

The leading feature of the parade of floats was the application of electricity to displays of this kind. So far as regards the illumination of the city this was a splendid success without qualification. It is almost impossible to conceive of anything finer than some of the electrical effects produced on public and private buildings on the line of march by the use of colored incandescent lights. As to the result of the application of electricity to the illumination of street tableaux the verdict of those familiar with the Mardi Gras festivities of New Orleans, upon which this display was largely modeled, is that the old fashioned torchlight is thrown entirely upon the tableaux wivants gives the better effect. Nevertheless the tableaux were very effective and were loudly cheered.

The Floats.

The scenes presented were conveyed along the line of parade upon floats drawn by horses. The first was "Fame." The goddess was depicted as a winged figure flying over the earth and proclaiming the news of Columbus' discovery through the traditional trumpet to the four corners.

Next following and following on foot represented the early tribes of Indians, the cave dwellers and others supposed to have inhabited this continent at the time of Columbus' discovery.

Tableau 2, "The Car of the Stone Age," contained groups of cave dwellers and the earlier forms of vegetation during the era of mastodons and pterodactyls and other extinct creatures of the carboniferous epoch. An escort of sixty figures, supposed to represent the earliest denizens of Mexico, accompanied the float on foot.

Tableau 3, "The Sun Worshipers," showed Incas high priests sacrificing a human victim to the sun god on the steps of the Aztec pyramid. The heathen deity was shown seated in a colossal sun watching the sacrifice, while clouds of incense ascended from the censers swung by the priests.

Tableaux 4, "A Victory of Genius," was typical of the triumph of Columbus, and was presented by an Italian society of distinction and fraternity, who escorted it in the procession in a body.

Tableaux 5 was called the "Statue of Columbus." Upon a lofty pedestal the statue stood as the pioneer of western civilization An allegorical figure of History held a laurel wreath above his head. Fame stood beside him, and at the front of the car America was shown seated with Spain and Italy on either hand. In the rear two Indians appeared.

Following this car were representations of the court of Ferdinand and Isabella, including a court cavalcade on horseback, represented by the Spanish American colony in the city. Then came a model of the Columbus vessel, the Santa Maria, drawn by horses. Among other characters represented were John Allen and Priscilla, and scenes from the life of the early colonists.

The Capitol.

Tableau 6, "The Capitol," was one of the most effective in the pageant. It held a model, twelve feet in height, of the Capitol at Washington. The familiar columns and domes were lighted inside and out by electricity. A number of young ladies, daughters of veterans, were seated around the Capitol holding the shields of the forty eight states.

Tableau 7 represented "Liberty." Liberty held her torch aloft over a figure representing Intellect, Invention, etc., while groups of all nations were ranged around the pedestal, typifying Science, Fraternity and Equality rode in front.

Tableau 8, "The Press," had a youthful figure, supposed to be the Genius of the Press, standing upon an immense bottle of ink and surrounded by pages, each bearing a shield, upon which the name of a paper was emblazoned. At the rear of the car was a printing press, with compositors at work setting type.

Tableau 9, "Music," showed a gigantic lyre, with the Goddess of Harmony floating over it, while St. Cecilia played the organ in the background, and an orchestra was grouped around her dressed to represent notes of music.

Tableau 10 depicted "Science," carrying a reproduction of the great Lick telescope and an astronomer was shown attempting to study the geography of Mars, which was jealously guarded by the moon. Chemists retorts and other scientific implements represented other branches of science.

Tableau 12, "American Women," was decorated with Cupids, hearts, coronets etc., and presented the typical American girl seated in a rocking chair poised on the world, to whom a work individual is made active was handing over her pocket book and lunch kit.

Tableau 13 showed the Atlantic and Pacific oceans typified as an emperor and an empress, with arquus and nereids at their attendance, and the Atlantic cable encircling them.

Electricity.

Tableau 14, "Columbia's Ship of State," was a float on gallery raised by twelve centurions at the corners, containing a bust of Washington, surrounded by all the subsequent presidents down to Grant.

Tableau 15 and last was "Electra." In other words, "Electricity" It was the most successful of all. Electra was shown in a chariot curbing an immense electric Hydra, from whose eyes and mouth flame of electricity darted and whose whole form glistened with incandescent lights. At the rear of the car were thirty girls in metallic costumes, with electric lights grouped at their heads. Six other women bore also a globe, on which the latitude and longitude were indicated by electrical lines. These rows of lights revolved in opposite directions with stirring effect. It was long after midnight before the pageant closed

THE ARENA OF POLITICS

New York Democrats Indorse Judge Andrews' Nomination.

BLAINE WHITELAW REID'S GUEST.

The Ex-Secretary of State May Speak at a Republican Rally in New York City Republicans and Populists Badly Split in Alabama—The Fusion in Minnesota.

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—The Democratic state committee met at the Hoffman House to nominate a candidate for chief justice of the court of appeals.

The name of Judge Charles F. Andrews, Republican nominee, was placed before the committee by William B. Kirk, of Syracuse, and seconded by W. Bourke Cockran on behalf of Tammany Hall. Judge Andrews' nomination was also seconded by District Attorney Ridgeway on behalf of the Kings county Democrats. Mr. Ridgeway made a speech in which he said the fact that Judge Andrews was nominated by the Democrats in 1886. The nomination was then made unanimous.

A letter was read from Judge Wheeler H. Peckham, who was himself a candidate for the office. In the letter Judge Peckham stated that if the Republicans had decided to recognize Judge Andrews' twenty-five years of service on the bench by tendering him the nomination, the Democrats would not dare to refuse to indorse him.

The committee then proceeded to nominate Richard Croker, of New York, electors at large in place of Erastus Corning, of Albany, resigned, and also electors in the following districts:

Third—Samuel Stewart Whitehouse, of Brooklyn. Eighth—Peter F. Meyer, of New York. Twenty-fourth—Joseph Kegan, of Rockland. Twenty-sixth—Patrick J. McTighe, of Binghamton. Twenty-eighth—John Lang, of Watkins. Twenty-ninth—James H. Gay. Thirty-second—Edward G. S. Miller, of Buffalo.

BLAINE IS REID'S GUEST.

The Ex-Secretary May Address a Big Republican Meeting in New York.

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—Mr. Blaine arrived in this city direct from Bar Harbor and took the train immediately for Ophir farm. Mr. Whitelaw Reid, however, got on to his visit to New York. His voice was strong and his handshake firm, muscular and vigorous. Mr. Blaine expressed a disinclination to being interviewed, saying with a pleasant smile: "I am not worth being interviewed. I have been ill all summer, and hardly know enough to know anything of interest in the situation, much less to talk about it."

It was suggested to Mr. Blaine that he might be requested to make one or more speeches on the issues and on behalf of the candidates. "I have really been too ill to make a speech or take an active part in the campaign," he said, "but my health has improved somewhat, but as to my being asked by the national committee to speak, that is a matter which I have not considered."

It is hinted that Mr. Blaine will get out and speak for the ticket, and it is believed he will do it at a monster meeting to be held in this city.

THE ALABAMA CAMPAIGN.

Republicans and Populists Split and the Democratic Leaders Confident.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 13.—The attempt to arrange a fusion of the third party and Republican hosts in Alabama has resulted in nothing tangible but a split in the ranks of the third party, the Kolbites, and an apparently irreconcilable division of the Republicans, and the campaign is going on. The fusionist candidates for congress are on the stump. The straight Republican nominees are talking to the people. The Democratic leaders are hard at work. In some districts the negroes have cut their own congressional nominees and are whooping things up, and in other districts the People's party has split off from the fusionists and is running its own independent candidates.

The Democratic party has placed in the field every number of any note in the party. Besides, all the candidates and electors are at work. Special attention is being paid to the rural districts, where the third party and Republicans are strongest. The Democratic press in the state is in full accord and harmony and is materially aiding in the campaign work. It is a remarkable fact that there is no Republican daily paper in Alabama and only three Republican weeklies, all of the latter being simply campaign papers.

The Democratic leaders are confident. They are quite sure that Cleveland will sweep the state and that the Democracy will carry every congressional district.

What Minnesota Fusion Means.

ST. PAUL, Oct. 13.—The action of the Democrats and populists in several parts of the state makes plain what the fusion Weaver electors were put on the Democratic national ticket for. At Rochester two candidates for the legislature were nominated by the populists, and the Democrats promptly indorsed them. The same thing was done in three other counties. The scheme is to bring about fusion in every part of the state. The populists will withdraw all their candidates in St. Paul and Minneapolis, and in return the Democrats will withdraw all their candidates in the Alliance strongholds. The plan as laid out completes the control of the lower house, with the view of sending Michael Doran, Democratic national committeeman, to the United States senate to succeed Washburn.

McKinley in Ohio.

MARTIN'S FERRY, Oct. 13.—Governor McKinley had two big meetings in Belmont county. He addressed 6,000 people at Flushing, where the mines were closed down by the meeting. The governor spoke for nearly two hours on finance, the tariff and the elections bill. Governor McKinley was then carried to Bridgeport, and from there he was taken to the rolling mills at Bellaire by marching clubs from all the neighboring towns. Here he addressed another meeting. This was a larger assembly than the great Garfield meeting of twelve years ago and was highly satisfactory to the Republicans

HE SLEEPS AMID POETS.

Tennyson Laid to Rest in Grand Old Westminster Abbey.

HIS GRAVE ADJOINS BROWNING'S

The Last Poem the Laureate Ever Wrote, "Silent Voices," Set to Music by Lady Tennyson and Sung at the Funeral Service, Which Were Simple but Impressive.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—With all the honors which the church to which he belonged could pay, the body of the greatest poet England ever produced in latter days was laid in its final resting place beneath the pavement of the historic Westminster abbey. Throughout the night the body of Lord Tennyson lay in St. Faith's chapel, Westminster abbey, the union jack covering the coffin and a few trails of ivy placed there by Hallam Tennyson lying loosely over it. The volume of "Shakespeare" that Tennyson read on his deathbed was placed within the coffin before the body was taken to Aldworth. There was no vigil at the bier of the poet during the night.

Soon after daylight crowds began to gather around the door of the north nave, to which admission was free. It was noticeable that all were dressed in black and many in deep mourning. Long before the ceremony began the edifice was crowded. Outside thousands lingered, unable to obtain entrance.

The assemblage in the abbey was a distinguished one. The premier of England, Mr. Gladstone, was represented by the Hon. Arthur Lyttleton; the Prince of Wales by General Prelyn, of his household; the Duke of Edinburgh by his private secretary, the Hon. William James Colville; the Duke of York by Sir Francis Winton, and the British government by Home Secretary Asquith. All the prominent men of letters in London were present.

An Impressive Scene.

The scene was most impressive. The abbey choir was covered with a rich hanging of purple velvet. The nave was lined on both sides with orphan boys from the home founded by General Gordon, while along the aisle were a number of survivors of the light brigade. Most of them wore the brilliant red uniform of Chelsea pensioners, and all had broad bands of crape on their arms.

At noon Henry Ponsonby, the queen's private secretary, entered St. Faith's chapel, and on behalf of her majesty placed a beautiful wreath upon the coffin. Sir Henry then proceeded to the dean of Westminster's stall, where he sat as representative of the queen. The archbishops of Canterbury and York occupied stalls.

Among the wreaths which covered the coffin was one on behalf of the Tennyson Circle of Arkansas and Missouri, and one from Mary Anderson-Navarro. The Jerusalem chamber was piled with flowers, for which there was not room at the bier.

At 12:30 o'clock the coffin, bearing only the wreaths of the queen and family, was carried in from St. Faith's chapel.

The pall was a union jack. It was borne on the right (head) by Lord Salisbury, the late premier; Earl Selborne, Lord Rosebery, minister of foreign affairs; Lord Kelvin, formerly Sir William Thomas; W. E. H. Lecky, the historian, and Henry Montague Butler, D. D., master of Trinity college, Cambridge, and on the left by the Duke of Argyll, Earl Dufferin, Mr. Henry White, secretary of the American legation; Sir James Paget, Benjamin Jowett, master of Ballol college, Oxford, and James Anthony Froude, the historian.

Immediately behind the coffin walked the poet's son, Hallam Tennyson, with his wife and children, and some intimate friends of the family. The procession passed through the cloisters and nave to the niter, where the coffin was placed upon trestles, and the religious ceremony was conducted, the archbishop of Canterbury officiating, assisted by the dean and canons.

His Last Poem Sung.

As the body was carried into the abbey the music by Croft and Purcell was sung in the processional parts of the burial service. The lesson was followed by the singing of "Crossing the Bar," and another anthem with the words of an unpublished poem from Tennyson. The last anthem sung was "Silent Voices," a ten line poem composed by Tennyson just before his death, set to music by Lady Tennyson. It is as follows:

When the dumb hour, clothed in black,
Brings the dreams about my bed,
Call me not so often back,
Silent voices of the dead,
Toward the unlevel ways behind me
And the sunlight that is gone
Call me farther, silent voices,
Forward to the starry track,
Glimmering up the heights beyond me,
On and always on.

At the grave Dean Bradley said the prayer, the collect and the benediction, and the great crowd dispersed as the notes of "Dead March from Saul" sounded through the abbey. There was no procession from the abbey at the close of the services. The grave of the poet is beside that of Browning.

Among the Americans present were Edwin H. Terrell, American minister to Belgium; Samuel R. Thayer, American minister to the Netherlands; ex-Senator George F. Edmunds, of Vermont; Major Post, of the American legation; Senator George F. Hoar, of Massachusetts; Dr. Nevins, Andrew Carnegie, Joseph Choate, representing Harvard college; Mr. Emerson, of Boston, a nephew of the late Ralph Waldo Emerson and Mrs. White, wife of the secretary of the American legation.

Corsage for Day or Evening.

Handsome New Dress Materials.

New materials are appearing on the scene—rough tweeds with flat curls on the surface, indefinite stripes and checks, shot reps and bengalines. Cloth will be supplanted by soft and thick armures serges for the clinging, narrow skirts require supple materials. In richer fabrics, velvets will be shot with several shades; thick Lyons silk will be brilliant with a sort of metallic lustre, and Terry velvet will be much used.

Long, Loose Traveling Cloaks.

The traveling cloak most in vogue for the coming season will be of dark red, blue, or dull green serge, lined with changeable silk. It is fully the length of the gown, is double breasted and loose in front, has enormous sleeves and a loose back, which is drawn in by a belt of the same material buttoned just in the centre. The cape with which it can be taken off or put on is its great advantage.

GLORIFYING COLUMBUS.

New York's Celebration a Marvel of Fiery Magnificence.

THE CATHOLIC SOCIETIES PARADE.

Ninety-five Thousand Men in Line Reviewed by Archbishop Corrigan—Another Brilliant Display of Fireworks on the Big Bridge—Today's Pageant.

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—The number of visitors attending the celebration of the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America far exceed that which attended the centennial celebration. A conservative estimate places the number of additional visitors that have arrived in town today at 100,000. During the pyrotechnic exhibition on the Brooklyn bridge last night in some of the streets such a rushing and thronging was never before witnessed. The house tops for miles were crowded with eager spectators. South street was impossible for a distance of two miles, so dense was the throng.

Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland witnessed the naval parade yesterday from the deck of Mr. Benedict's steam yacht Oneida. The yacht anchored off East Twenty-sixth street. Mr. Cleveland wore a yachting suit and cap. Mrs. Cleveland walked up and down the deck of the craft looking very happy.

The climax to the naval parade was a tribute to General Grant. When the naval committee's boat with the vice president, Governor Flower and its other distinguished guests aboard turned the bend and passed into Gowanus bay the bombs let up the signal to salute was given, and the Columbian naval pageant closed with the echoes of the guns reverberating around the tomb of the silent Grant.

The Display of Fireworks.

The display of fireworks from the Brooklyn bridge last evening began at 8:30 o'clock. The bridge was a blaze of immense arch of fire. As early as 8:30 o'clock crowds began to gather along the East river front, and the streets from Broadway to the river were crowded with men, women and children, all looking toward the bridge and all seeking some point of vantage from which to view the pyrotechnic display.

Exactly at 8:30 o'clock, the bridge having been closed to traffic, a small Niagara of fire, accompanied by the explosion of innocuous bombs, was let loose from the bridge and fell in a sheet of liquid fire 140 feet to the river below. Then with another roar of bombs each tower became a mass of light, surrounded by immense suns of rainbow colors, which shed a radiance over the river far below and above the steeples of the adjacent cities. A moment of darkness, and then far up in the air a spiral of flame seemed mounting toward the stars. It burst and there hung a pattern of many colors swaying lazily in the still atmosphere, but moving not from its position directly over the bridge. Again and again were small balls of fire shot forth into space, each one apparently going a little higher than its predecessor, and then bursting forth into a myriad of tiny stars, each showing a different color as it fell in graceful curves to ward the river.

These peculiar combinations of many colored fire known as the Japanese spreaders were fired from huge mortars, the lights showing as they fell, looking like huge willow trees of fire. Other combinations of fire were sent high up into the air, only to burst and shower the great iron span with myriads of stars, each of a different color.

As the city clocks struck 9 o'clock there was a roar of bursting bombs, a shower of sparks and a most terrific screeching of steam whistles from all sorts of steam craft in both the East and North rivers. Both towers of the bridge were illuminated, and for a few moments the bridge presented a scene from some fantasma, and it seemed as if pandemonium was let loose on the water.

From then until nearly 11 o'clock the bridge was one blaze of light, showing all the tints known to the pyrotechnic art, when with one last flight of rockets, a shower of stars and a bursting of bombs the display of fireworks on the Brooklyn bridge was ended. The bridge was again thrown open to travel, the over-burdened boulevard and the down town district once more resumed its usual midnight aspect.

The Catholic Societies Parade.

Amid another blaze of illuminated glory the parade of the United Catholic societies took place last night, and was witnessed by great throngs of New Yorkers and tens of thousands of visitors. Madison square and Union square, where the crowds were largest, looked like sections of fairyland. The numerous trees in these squares had suspended from their branches thousands of colored lanterns, the rays from which cast a variegated glow on the steady stream of people moving under them.

There were 25,000 members of various Catholic societies in line, most of whom carried lanterns, some red, others white, with still others blue.

At the huge body of men moved down Fifth avenue the sight presented when gazing up the avenue from Madison square was a curious one. It looked as if myriads of will-o'-the-wisps were holding mad revel in the metropolis' most aristocratic thoroughfare.

Archbishop Corrigan reviewed the parade from the stand at the Worth monument in Madison square. With him were Bishops O'Farrell, of Trenton, and McDonnell, of Brooklyn, Judges Daly and O'Brien, John D. Crimmins, J. J. Donohue and others. They remained till the whole parade had passed.

Today's event was the grand military parade, which started from the Battery this morning. It was a magnificent spectacle, and swelling hundreds of miles to see. This evening the grand illuminated historical street pageant takes place.

Philadelphia's Parade.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 12.—The Columbian parade of the Catholic societies of Philadelphia last night was the biggest affair of its kind ever given in the Quaker City. Over 25,000 persons being in line. Broad street from one end to the other was brilliantly illuminated, and thousands of patient spectators lined the sidewalks. Fireworks and red fire abounded, and the scene was gorgeous in the extreme.

Editor Seward Shot.

STILLWATER, Minn., Oct. 12.—V. C. Seward, editor of The Mayor, was probably fatally shot by George Peters, some time ago employed as a reporter, but discharged for incompetency.

Lasker Still Wins.

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—Lasker won his third game in thirty-six moves at the Manhattan chess club. He opened with a Ruy Lopez. Simonson adopted Steinitz's defense.

MURDER LINKS TREASON

Carnegie Officials Indicted with the Homestead Strikers.

MANAGER FRICK HEADS THE LIST.

Robert and William Pinkerton Also Included in the True Bills Found by the Grand Jury—The Treason Indictment Names Thirty-one Men for Trial.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 12.—The grand jury sitting in the treason cases against Homestead strikers and the murder and conspiracy charges against H. C. Frick, various other officials of the Carnegie Steel company and of the Pinkerton detectives, has brought in true bills in all the cases.

After the charge to the grand jury by Chief Justice Paxson in the "treason cases it was thought that the murder charges would be postponed, and when the jury reported to them also it came in the nature of a surprise. Chief Justice Paxson, of the supreme court of this state, and Judge Kennedy, of the county court, occupied the bench when the jury entered the courtroom.

The courtroom was packed with spectators. Foreman Berlin presented the findings, which, after examination by the judges, were handed to the clerk of the courts.

The Men Involved.

The indictments for treason involve thirty-one defendants. They are Hugh O'Donnell, John McGluckie, David Lynch, Thomas J. Crawford, Harry Bayne, Elmer E. Ball, Henry Bayard, T. W. Brown, George Colgan, John Carp, Jack Clifford, Dennis M. Cash, William McConeghy, Michael Cummings, William Combe, John Dierkin, Patrick Fagan, W. H. Gaches, Matthew Harris, Reid Kennedy, John Miller, O. S. Searight, John Murray, W. H. Thompson, Martin Murray, Hugh Ross, W. T. Roberts, George Rylands and George W. Barnes.

The charges of murder against H. C. Frick and other Carnegie officials are for the killing of George W. Rutter, John E. Morris, Joseph Sotak and Silas Wayne, whose deaths resulted from the riot. The true bills are against H. C. Frick, F. T. F. Lovejoy, Robert Pinkerton, William Pinkerton, J. A. Potter, W. S. Covey, J. G. A. Leishman, C. W. Beddell, W. H. Burt, John Cooper F. W. Hinde, Nevin McConnell and James Dovey.

In the conspiracy cases H. C. Frick, George Lauder, H. M. Curry, Leishman, Otis Childs, Lovejoy, L. C. Phipps, G. A. Covey, J. A. Potter, J. F. Dovey, McConnell, the Pinkertons, Cooper, Beddell, Frederick Primer, Burt and Hinde are the defendants.

In the aggravated riot cases true bills are returned against Frick, Curry, Leishman, Lovejoy, L. C. Phipps, Dovey, McConnell, Cooper, Beddell, Primer, Burt and Hinde.

The indictment against H. C. Frick and others in the murder cases are separate, making four in all. The prosecutor in the murder cases is Hugh Ross, against whom there are charges of murder, treason, conspiracy and aggravated riot.

The Frick et al. Indictment.

The indictment against the Carnegie officials in the conspiracy cases is a lengthy document, comprising ten typewritten pages. Among other things it sets forth concerning H. C. Frick and the others named the following:

That they did unlawfully, falsely and maliciously combine, confederate and agree together to depress, lower, lessen and diminish wages, price and compensation of labor of divers persons employed by the Carnegie Steel company (limited), in then and there close up the said steel manufactory, and to cause work and operations therein, and thereupon to convey and cause to be sent 300 men and upward, armed with guns, revolvers, pistols, knives and other deadly weapons, to overawe, intimidate and frighten divers persons in the said township of Mifflin, who were then lately employed by the said Carnegie Steel company, to invade the said township of Mifflin and to attack the said persons who were then lately before employed, and to shoot off and discharge the said guns and other deadly weapons against the bodies of the said persons who were then lately before employed by the said Carnegie Steel company (limited).

In regard to the fight on the morning of the 6th the bill says the defendants "did counsel and advise the shooting."

The bill in the aggravated riot cases against the Carnegie officials differs very little from that in the conspiracy action, except that it specifies that in pursuance to the alleged conspiracy the alleged unlawful and riotous acts were committed.

A HORRIBLE CRIME.

A Woman Slaughtered in Glasgow After the Jack the Ripper Fashion.

GLASGOW, Oct. 12.—The most horrible murder in the criminal history of this city was committed last night at West Lodge, a villa on the Albert road, in Pollokshields, on the outskirts of Glasgow. A woman, still unidentified, was mutilated after the method of Jack the Ripper, was dismembered, and the pieces of her body were buried in the villa garden. McEwan, the gardener, who doubtless is guilty of the crime, has disappeared.

In a flower bed, from which the plants had been removed, the police found about two feet under ground the mutilated head and unjointed arm of a woman. In another similar bed, busy uncovered the trunk. It was absolutely devoid of all internal organs.

Beside the trunk was the woman's left arm, also unjointed. In another flower bed they found the missing organs and the legs, unjointed, as were the arms. The trail led from this last bed to a toolhouse. There, under a pile of rubbish and tools, was a blood-box containing a sheet of a large saw, the teeth still dotted with flesh and blood and several smaller pieces of the woman's body. The police say that the box was used by McEwan in transporting the limbs and the organs from his room to the garden.

A search in McEwan's room revealed several razors, apparently unused for some time, and an ax, recently washed, but still showing slight blood stains.

It is thought that McEwan had little money and will soon be captured. The woman's body has been put together as well as possible and now lies at the morgue awaiting identification.

The Way Out.

Sims—Good morning, Pennsmith. I have been enjoying your serial now running in the Social Economy, very much, too for the life of me I cannot imagine how it is going to come out. In the last installment you left Reggie De Pinhead in a barrel of turpentine, with the villain having nailed him by the ears to the floor of the deserted villa, saturated the building with kerosene and set fire to it. How in concluding paragraph the roof falls in and the nearest help is a stone deaf man digging in the bottom of a well half a mile away. Now, if you please, I wish you would tell me how you propose to save the hero.

Pennsmith—Oh, easily enough. You see, the Reggie De Pinhead who was in the burning house was not the real Reggie at all, though he had believed so all his life, but his own foster brother, for whom he was exchanged by a wicked nurse at the age of two days. The villain tells him this just before he jumps out of the window, and the poor fellow is so relieved at finding that it is not really himself who is about to be cremated, but a comparative stranger, that he does not mind it at all.—Life.

A Great Society!

First Customer—Are you sure this sticky paper will catch flies?

Dealer—Yes, indeed, mum. I sold half a dozen sheets to a boarding house keeper yesterday, and in two hours she caught enough for a huckleberry pie.—New York Weekly.

CORRESPONDENCE.

THAT GREAT CANAL.

For Uniting the American and Pacific for Our Commercial Benefit.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—I ask the use of your columns to speak about a matter which the American people ought to know more about than they do. Our committee have had your paper recommended as a desirable medium to reach the people in your locality.

The subject is the Nicaragua Canal, a map of which accompanies this article.

No enterprise has ever been inaugurated so fraught with advantages to every commercial, agricultural, mechanical, and financial interest as the construction of the Nicaragua Canal, which will shorten the distance between the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans over 10,000 miles.

Since 1849 the need of a water route joining the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans has been one of great importance to the American people, and the thorough work of exploration and investigation pursued almost uninterruptedly since that date has been mainly accomplished by or under the auspices of our army and navy engineers, acting in obedience to orders of the Government and at the Government's expense. Every locality from Tehuantepec to Panama that might afford claims for consideration has been thoroughly examined by these explorations. It is a significant fact that the engineers of our government from first to last have expressed a decided preference for the Nicaragua route, and that none of them has ever expressed any doubt regarding its entire feasibility. The solution of the problem of inter-oceanic communication by this route has moved more rapidly and more surely on its way as a full and intimate knowledge of its characteristics has been obtained, and it now commands public attention as never before.

Lake Nicaragua itself is one of the most remarkable physical features of the world. It fills a cavity in the midst of a broken region of mountains, whose height is reduced at this point nearly to the level of the sea, and it furnishes not only for the line of navigation a portion of the canal route, but enormous advantages as a safe harbor, sufficient in capacity for the navies and shipping of the whole world, and inexhaustible supplies of water for lockage. It is 110 miles long, 60 miles wide and 250 feet deep in its deepest parts. It is a great reservoir which receives and distributes over its wide surface the vast volume which flow down from the mountains and thus prevents sudden floods which otherwise would endanger the canal. Out of this lake flows the San Juan river, ranging in depth from 10 to 100 feet and emptying into the Atlantic ocean at Greytown.

The entire length of the Nicaragua Canal, from the Atlantic to the Pacific ocean, is 169½ miles. Of this distance only 38½ miles will have to be excavated, for the river and lake will form the distance between Plainfield and New York, the remaining 142¾ miles are in the lake, rivers and harbors, which will be made a part of the course by the construction of the necessary dams and locks.

The summit is 154 Nicaragua, 110 feet above the level of the sea. There will be three locks at each end, and the level of the lake will be raised by three dams, sixty-four miles down the river by the construction of a dam across the San Juan river at Ochoa which will raise the level of the water in that river to a depth of 65 feet. The work of excavation leaving the Atlantic ocean and entering the canal will sail on a level with the ocean a distance of 6½ miles. Of this 4 they will be raised by three locks to the level of the lake; thence along the San Juan river 17½ miles, when by two locks, within 5¼ miles of the Pacific ocean shore, where they will be lowered by now prosecuting the work. This estimate has been revised by a committee of distinguished consulting engineers, and the cost including payment of interest during the progress of the work, has been placed at $100,000,000, and the time required for completion is within five years.

While the question as to the financial returns of the canal is not one to be considered in connection with our duty, as a nation, in building it, it may safely be asserted that whether built by private enterprise wholly or with the partial aid of the government, the canal will be a source of wealth to the nation of individuals completing it. We refer in this connection to the precedent of the Suez Canal which saves only 3,600 miles of navigation around the Cape of Good Hope, while the Nicaragua Canal annihilates distances three times as great between points in our own territory.

The following results of the working of the Suez Canal prove that it has been a great success.

Statements showing the number of ships and net tonnage which passed through the Suez Canal, and the gross receipts therefrom from 1870 to 1891 inclusive.

Years.	No. Ships.	Net Tonnage	Gross Receipts (Francs.)
1870.....	486	436,609	4,486,750
1871.....	1,082	1,082,350	11,000,000

1876.....	1,457	1,561,000	14,000,000

In 1892, which may be taken as an average year, the cost of maintenance and operation of the Suez Canal was a fraction over $1,000,000. The annual net revenues of the Company for a series of years have been from $15,000,000 to $18,000,000 annually, and for the present year are estimated at $18,000,000.

October Weather Predictions.

Weather Prophet Hicks says that from the 12th, to 15th, it will turn much warmer and result in more storms, beginning in the west and traveling east. Navigators of the lakes should be watchful of all these storms. A freezing blast from the northwest will follow this period. The 18th, and 20th, are active storm days. Be watchful of what they may bring, and of the cold wave following. The 24th, and 27th, expect storms and freezing up to about the 30th—a reactionary day.

To Continue the Choral Society.

The Executive Committee of the Plainfield Choral Society met last night and decided to continue the organization again this season. Their concerts, however, will probably be of a miscellaneous nature instead of oratorical.

—The comedy of Dr. Bill, from the New York Garden Theatre, is to be presented at Music Hall on Monday evening, Oct. 17th. The company is said to be one of great excellence. The leading role is to be played by Miss Cecil Ellis, (Mrs. Blake,) who is very well known here. Both she and her husband have a large number of friends in Plainfield, and it is expected that a crowded house will greet them. The comedy of Dr. Bill is undoubtedly one of the best of comedies.

COL. FAIRMAN'S TALK.

INTERESTS AN AUDIENCE AT THE RINK LAST EVENING.

Logical from Beginning to end.—Good Stories to Illustrate His Points.—The Republicans Happy.

Notwithstanding several other attractions, there was a large audience present at the Crescent Rink to hear Col. William Fairman of New York talk about the tariff. Outside of the building red fire was constantly burned, while the music formed Wheelmen's Division, which paraded the streets, loudly clanging their bells.

Col. Fairman was introduced by Chairman Anthony. He is a distinguished looking man, with a brilliant record as a member of the 96th Reg't., Army of the Potomac. He is a well known and powerful speaker, and being thoroughly versed in his subject was able to bring out some of the most striking facts yet heard in this campaign, which, he said, is one of the two greatest campaigns of the world. The one was in 1864, when it was a vital question whether the government should live and prosper, and now in 1892 the same question is before the voters.

Tariff for revenue only is a system without any compensation, a system whereby the foreigner has all the best of it, while the American has to pay the duty. It takes money to run the Government, and, if foreign manufacturers don't pay their share for benefits received, it must come out of the American's pocket. Free trade is a British policy, and is contrary to all protective principles. There are only two parties in all the world who contend for free trade, the one of Great Britain and the one of the Democratic party.

Protection but gives the Americans an equal chance. If an article costs $1.50 to make in this country, and the foreign article can sell in this country for $1, there is almost no chance at all, and the American market, which is the greatest in the world, is the only one given to foreigners.

It is more to the advantage of American people to pay $2 for an ax manufactured in this country, than to pay $1 for the same thing made abroad. A dollar spent for foreign goods is lost forever, and it never comes back. The $2 stays here. It is paid to the workingman who in turn pays it for bread, the baker buys shoes, the shoemaker buys clothes, and thus it passes from hand to hand, and in this case buys $6 worth, thus the $2 spent four times buys $6 worth and the $2 itself still remains.

Any tariff below the protective points becomes free trade, and a non-protective tariff gives free trade to the world, the American himself paying the tariff.

A party of French scientists once endeavored, in a very learned debate, to discover the weight of a tub full of water weighed no more before than it did after a large fish had been placed in it. They finally concluded that the fish held himself up, and, therefore, added no weight, but the speaker could discover why the fish was. They endeavored to convince a practical American, who forthwith proceeded to get the tub full of water and the fish. The scientists said he was a fool, as it could easily be seen that the fish, holding himself up, added no weight, and that it was only a question for scientific explanation. The practical American said he watched the tub of water without the fish, and with the fish, finding that in the latter case the tub of water overflowed, and therefore the practical American was Benjamin Franklin.

The fallacy of the Democratic party is that this country will be no more weight on the taxpayers by having Americans pay the duties than we have been paid by foreigners. The factories may shut down, but that's all right, says the Democrat, the workingmen will not have to pay so much money for the necessaries of life, and these are more money. The practical American asks, where will the workingman get the money to pay for anything, if the American factories close down, as they would have to do if they competed with foreign factories that pay wages of two cents an hour.

In trading with foreign countries the balance of trade must always be paid in gold. For the first twenty years of this country's existence there were only nine years when the balance of trade was in our favor, and during the years of the war of 1812 with Great Britain, when we were compelled to manufacture what we wanted.

In 1860, when this country was producing such enormous quantities of gold, $10,000,000 was paid out every week as the balance of trade because of the Free Trade government. During the free trade era no new industries were started and paper money was put in circulation.

In 1861 over ten thousand of the 1,400 banks in this country 300 were closed at one time broken. The government would not take the paper money given for meat for taxes, and 500 farms in New England had to be sold to pay taxes that could not be paid.

In Muskego county, Ohio, during those terrible days, a file carriages and loads of wagons were sold for $5 each that could be bought for $75 cents each.

Protection conquers the world of goods commodity. Steel tools cost less than half what they did before we had protected it so tariff.

In 1866, steel rails cost $120 per ton at Liverpool docks, and amounted to $168 when they reached New York. Railroads could not be built. When America began to manufacture them, the British brought the price down, so did we, the building continued and the American manufactories would have been crowded out of the market had we not given a tariff of $27 per ton been placed on all foreign steel rails.

This country made in 1891, 1,700,000 tons of steel rails at $28 per ton. They are now selling for ton and manufacturing thousands of American workingmen are earning good wages in consequence. Formerly they were idle, starving, or in the poor house. Now the same factories of steel rails was $1.50 per ton less than England's price. Eighteen hundred miles of steel rails were laid last summer on the railroads of this country, and its greatest resources are attained by protection.

In 1873, when in one day 100,000 men, women and children were begging in the streets of New York, because they could get no work and were starving. During the 20 years of free trade the population of New York State had been continually growing and in 1892 there was one pauper to every 125½ persons.

Col. Fairman told of his experiences as an editor, when for 30 stormy nights, he watched the streets of New York. The poverty and suffering he spoke of was terrible beyond description, and an awful contrast to the present, when factories were closed and all business paralyzed on account of Free Trade.

He said, with all the terrible past to look back to, how could any person of reason vote for a party which proposes to again inflict these horrors? The Free Trade policy should be killed forever at the election in November. Col. Fairman was heartily applauded.

The Inter-State Fair Denounced for Permitting Gambling.

The Central New Jersey Baptists ended a two days' convention yesterday afternoon at Elizabeth. The sessions were held in the Central Baptist church. A feature of the convention was the attack made on the Inter-State Fair Association, which was roundly condemned for selling gambling privileges.

A resolution was adopted which alleged that the fair association, for a large sum of money, sold the privileges for gambling and gave the school children free tickets so that they were exposed to the chances of being contaminated by the gambling. It was decided to take a stand against the race track and other like pleasures and use every influence for their suppression.

The Rev. J. J. Sagebeer of Flemington was elected Moderator and C. B. Stout of New Brunswick, Clerk. The annual sermon was preached by Dr. Sagebeer. —Kid gloves have a way of ripping in spite of one's best efforts. Now, it is quite a disfigurement to pay a tiny rip in a kid glove. So take a bottle of pieces of court plaster, or surgeon's plaster, turn your left hand side out, and evenly apply the plaster over the nicely drawn-together edges of the glove. If you do it carefully you will not be able to find the rip. If the rip or tear is a large one, it should be nicely sewn, and then the plaster applied in the manner described. If treated in this manner, you will find the glove will not tear out in the same place again.

EDITORIAL NOTES

There is no longer left any disease which is admitted by medical science to be hopelessly incurable.

The New York Commercial Bulletin is of opinion that electric light companies can be made to pay for fires and accidents caused by carelessness in properly insulating their wires.

It was a strange and apparently trivial thing that defeated Archbishop Ireland's Minnesota plan for merging the Catholic parochial schools into the public schools. The Catholic sisters passed the state examination and got their certificates; religious pictures and observances suggestive of the Roman creed were left behind, and the sisters passed quietly into place as public school teachers. Then suddenly, when all seemed to go well, the Protestant parents raised a revolt because they were unwilling their children should be taught by teachers wearing the robes of a Catholic order. A contest of bitterest intensity broke out on this point and defeated the whole plan at Faribault, where Archbishop Ireland had the strongest hopes of it. A little matter of dress upset the scheme which the archbishop had formulated with the utmost care and to which the pope himself had given a qualified assent.

Change.

The secret of happiness is constant change within the limitations of reason and common sense. A rut in the human soul is like a rut in a road, dangerous and upsetting. If we must remain at the same tasks year after year for nearly the whole of a lifetime, then it should be our constant effort to get all the variety we can into our lives in other ways. The fact that farmers' wives go insane more than any other class of persons is attributed to the terrible monotony of their lives, which are one unceasing round of hard work. A machine bearing on a single point of metal wears out that point speedily. It is precisely the same with our lives. One dull round of thought, doing the same tasks at the same hour year after year, will break down the finest, strongest brain.

So get out and have a vacation. At least give yourself a vacation of thought. Read new things; walk along fresh roads; look at new pictures and new buildings. Invite fresh, new thought always to your soul; so shall you keep always young. So much is that your foulest theory is exactly the correct one. Nobody's theories are so perfect that they cannot be improved on by new ones. Standing still is decay and death. Hold the same plow handle, bend over the same desk forty years, with your thoughts chained down to them, and you become a lump shuddered old hunks—blind, deaf, weak and disagreeable.

Keep up with the wagon. Change your old views and habits for new and better ones when you find them, and be always on the lookout for them. Life is change, movement, sparkle.

"The Next Forward Step for Woman."

Hon. Carroll D. Wright says it is industrial emancipation. Dr. Flower, editor of The Arena, believes it is the emancipation of woman's lower limbs. He has been hammering away at this topic of dress reform with perhaps more genuine interest than any woman in the country. He is carrying on, man though he is, a brave crusade against long skirts and corsets. He asks, "What is the language of the skirt if it is not the badge of woman's inferiority inherited from a barbarous past? Well, we don't know. Ask us something easy.

In pursuance of his philanthropic aim Dr. Flower has a symposium on woman's dress in The Arena. Contributors to it are Lady Harberton, who is the inventor of the divided skirt for woman; Octavia W. Bates, A. B., the English college woman; Grace Greenwood and E. M. King, a Farmers' Alliance woman, who also lectures. All go in for the short skirt. This is the main thing at present demanded for reform in woman's dress, they agree one and all. Mrs. King, however, seems to be the only one who has the courage of her convictions and is brave enough to appear in what Lady Harberton calls a "two legged dress, the only suitable dress for a two legged creature."

In his editorial comment Dr. Flower gives a number of illustrations of this two legged dress for women. Some of them are pretty; others are otherwise. Miss Bates dwells on the danger to life, health and limb from the trailing skirt, also the expense of it in the "frequent renewals of braids and other accessories." A document is printed, signed by May Wright Sewall, Frances Willard, Clara Colby and other well known ladies, in which they agree to give their influence in favor of an improvement in woman's dress. But at the same time they distinctly decline to make any promise that they will wear any particular style of reform dress, so what is the especial good of their document?

Lady Harberton perhaps hits the nail on the head when she says energetically, "It is impossible to look at an assembly of women without remarking how devoid they seem to be of all idea of progress and of getting rid of disabilities in dress." That is probably it. The women themselves are "agin it."

MINERS ENGULFED ALIVE

Thirteen Unfortunates Buried by a Mass of Falling Rock.

DEATH BY FIRE DAMP AWAITS THEM

Two of the Victims Brought to the Surface in an Exhausted and Critical Condition—A Volunteer Receiving Party Striving to Save the Remainder.

SHAMOKIN, Pa., Oct. 14.—By an explosion of gas at the Sterling mine it is probable that thirteen men have been killed. The explosion was caused by a fall of rock in an old breast, driving a body of gas down a gangway, touching a naked light. William Mack, sitting on the bumper of a mine wagon, saw his four mules killed, and the body of Thomas Ogara hurled past him like a flash. Twenty yards beyond Daniel Reed, another driver, saw his two mules brained by falling rock, and he was scorched by a volume of fire lighting the gloom for 100 feet.

While eighty men a quarter of a mile in the rear wondered at the loud report, another body of the gas tore along the smoking gangway, and meeting a ball of flame in an alcove ignited with terrific force, causing great falls on top, creating the power of a tornado, and causing lamps to go out and closing different passages.

The missing men are imprisoned between two falls, and the black damp which arose immediately after the explosion had been so strong that the officials and experienced miners have faint hope of finding them alive. At great peril men are taking turns in forcing their way to where the men are supposed to be imprisoned. The inside foreman was brought out, overpowered by gas, and taken home in a special train. He says the men are certainly dead.

Many Half-breadth Escapes.

When the second explosion came men groped along different routes to get out of the place before the black damp set in. Falls were occurring along the line, and many were the half-breadth escapes. In a few minutes the bottom of the slope was filled with terrified men. The huge engines started to work, and for half an hour drew the half smothered toilers to the surface.

Then a count was made, thirty men being missing. News reached town of the explosion and that six bodies had been received, while the remainder were entombed. Doctors, ambulances, a special train and hundreds of people flocked to the scene. By this time all of the eighty men, except thirteen, had got out, including the injured.

Ogara's body was recovered and an hour later the two McCall brothers rang to come up. They were almost dead, having been wandering through old workings and carrying two fainting Polish men along. The party finally ran up against a small opening, through which they worked their way. Irvine Edwards was found faluting in a ditch. His experience was thrilling.

Having dodged many falls he escaped the fire by jumping in a ditch and severely injuring himself by falling over a dead mule. He brought tidings of the rest of the missing, having been with them when the second explosion came. His comrades ran up a passage which was a quarter of a mile nearer the foot of the slope. He would have followed, but lost the way, and finally struck the main gangway.

A Call for Volunteers.

Superintendents Moore, Shreffler and Jefferson, who had been summoned, called for volunteers. A number responded, but ten were sufficient for the first attempt. As the wagon went down a great cheer went up. Half an hour drew the men back, and others took their places. Whenever one was overcome another would respond. Thus the work went on. The main object of the work was to bench the gas back and establish an air current.

In this attempt small progress had been made up to dusk. The great quantity of black damp renders it impossible for anybody to live where the damp is thickest, and unfortunately it hangs in a body near the point where the men are supposed to be penned up. Everything in the power of the company is being used to push the work, and there is no lack of men to enter the mine. Crowds of men, women and children wait patiently at the entrance of the slope for news. The work will go on until all the men are found, dead or alive.

Later the rescuers succeeded in penetrating the gangway, finding the remains of one Minstock. Twenty yards further two more, Mcherlin and Ritavage, were discovered alive but unconscious. They were removed to their homes.

Four Negroes Lynched.

CAMDEN, Ala., Oct. 14.—Moses Johnson, aged seventeen; James Packer, aged nineteen; Dave Martin, aged eighteen, and Will Lewis, aged nineteen, all negroes, were arrested for the murder of Richard H. Jourdan and daughter, who were brutally slain in Monroe county last Friday night. The four murderers confessed, and yesterday a posse of citizens started with them to the scene of the crime. Last night, hearing of their coming, a mob of excited people, white and black, collected, met the posse in the woods and overpowered them. The murderers were shot and their bodies burned by the mob. They were tied to trees, bloodfolded and riddled with bullets.

Started Fires for Fun.

BROCKPORT, N. Y., Oct. 14.—For some time past incendiary fires have been frequent, causing a loss estimated at over $30,000. Today officers arrested the following men, all residents of this vicinity, who confess the crime: Frank Griffin, Harvey Almy, Clarence Stout, Henry Lotz, Frank Rann and George Gaines. Most of them are married men, and state that they started the fires simply for the purpose of seeing them burn.

Wildly Digging for Wealth.

SAVANNAH, Oct. 14.—Jupiter James (colored) while digging on his farm found an ancient urnpot in which were more than 2,000 French and Spanish silver coins 130 or more years old. Their value is placed at about $4,000. The coins are believed to be part of the plunder buried by Black Beard, the pirate. The negroes have nearly gone crazy over the discovery and are digging everywhere.

Jachne's Term Expires.

SING SING, N. Y., Oct. 14.—Henry W. Jachne, the ex-member of the "boodle" board of aldermen of New York of 1884, will be allowed to walk out of Sing Sing prison on Saturday morning a free man.

The Cholera in Belgium.

BRUSSELS, Oct. 14.—The official report on the cholera epidemic says that since July 25 there have been 1,050 cases and 501 deaths from the disease in Belgium.

KENTUCKY IS INDIGNANT.

Breckinridge's Refusal to Be Fair Dedicatory Orator Causes Complications.

LOUISVILLE, Oct. 14.—"Kentucky should abandon the idea of an exhibit at the Chicago World's fair." So says an editorial in The Times.

This advice is based on the complications that have arisen, due to politics, official disputes and questionable legislation, rendering the $100,000 appropriation unavailable until after recourse is taken in the courts, together with the indignities that have been offered Congressman Breckinridge by the Chicago press and public. The Times says:

"Because Colonel Breckinridge did not choose to regard his selection as dedicatory orator as a quid pro quo for his conscience vote in favor of the original congressional appropriation, he has been hounded by the representative clubs and press of Chicago to the point that he has been compelled to cancel his appointment, or to fulfill it at the sacrifice of his self respect and at the risk of suffering personal indignity.

"Not only that, as disregardful of all the proprieties have been the newspaper assaults upon the citizen that the state has been despatched with filth, and every son and daughter of the commonwealth treated with contumely and contempt. Parties and sectionalism have been dragged into the one aided controversy, and Chicago hrowed her record ill, not authorized spokesmen, has with brutal frankness notified the people of Kentucky and the entire south that they are not expected and not wanted at this family affair.

"Let the state representatives in the national commission—Lindsay, McKenzie and Bennett—resign, and Kentucky say to Chicago's management that if she is not an honored guest or host at this fair she will not be present in either capacity."

FASHIONS

Learn to Carry a Train.

Few devotees of the fashion of long trains know how to carry them so that the streets may be untouched while the long, graceful curves of the figure are preserved unspoiled. Watch the promenaders of a popular thoroughfare for an hour, and you may bet that not more than two of the long-trained gentry will perform their tasks gracefully. A bright girl, a long mirror and faithful practice will go far towards discovering a satisfactory method.

Looking-Glass Velvet Crowns.

Have our readers seen the new "looking-glass" velvet that is being used so much now for the crowns of hats and bonnets? It can be found in all the new colors and combinations of color. The hat pictured here has the new Tam-o'-Shanter crown made of this material. It is green, shot with a lighter shade of green, and the brim is black straw. The fleur de lis feathers at the side are also black. Green and brown is to be a fashionable mixture in millinery this season.

THE COLUMBIAN BANQUET.

It Appears to Have Been Somewhat Dull Without Depew.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—As if to justify Sydney Smith's witticism that every event, even an earthquake, must be celebrated by the Anglo-Saxon race by a banquet, even if they had to hunt a place amid the ruins in which to dine, New York's celebration of the discovery of America was closed by a banquet last night, which was in a measure as successful as the ceremonials which had preceded it. There were 800 guests at the Lenox Lyceum.

Mayor Grant presided, supported on the right by Vice President Morton, Secretary of State Foster, ex-President Grover Cleveland, Mr. Arnold, president of the board of aldermen; Baron Fava, Italian minister, and Mr. G. F. Wahle, Jr.; on the left by Governor Flower, ex-President Hayes, General Horace Porter and Bishop Potter.

The 800 guests included the governors of Massachusetts, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and South Carolina, Generals Schofield and many others of eminence.

But there was one empty chair at the table of honor. Chauncey Depew, who was to have acted as toastmaster, was absent. Mayor Grant supplied his place as best he could. Mr. Depew's unexplained absence deprived the after dinner oratory of much of its sparkle.

Neither of the ex-presidents of the United States took any oratorical part in the proceedings, which, though pleasant enough, were somewhat tame and long protracted.

THE DALTON GANG AGAIN

The Murderous Crew Not Yet Wiped from Off the Earth.

COFFEYVILLE MAY BE ATTACKED.

The Desperadoes Hold Up and Rob a Kansas Train in Jesse James Style, and Now Propose to Avenge the Death of Their Fellows Who Were Recently Slain.

COFFEYVILLE, Kan., Oct. 14.—In genuine James, Younger and Dalton fashion, a Missouri Pacific train was held up near Caney, Kan., last night. In all particulars it shows the trade mark of the profession which Frank and Jesse and Cole founded west of the Mississippi just after the war. It was successful, as the Dalton attacks have generally been, in all of the details of capture, robbery and escape. The rewards of the enterprise, however, were small.

The outlaws, as they were passing by the engine, talking loud enough for the train, to the effect that they had not got enough to buy a decent breakfast.

As the east bound passenger No. 486, in charge of Conductor Pearson, Engineer Sturgis, Fireman Fred Firemen Fred Bengay, pulled out of Caney's small station twenty miles west of this city, it was boarded by a mysterious looking stranger heavily armed.

The train had barely started when the stranger climbed over the tender, covering the engineer and fireman with a gun. The engineer took in the situation at once and began to slow up the train, when the robber ordered him to put on steam and go ahead until he was ordered to stop, which order was promptly obeyed.

Coffeyville Up in Arms.

By this time a second robber had made his appearance. Two shots were fired by the robbers, evidently as a signal to other members of the gang concealed in the neighborhood. The robbers then went to the express car, and with a shot forced Messenger Maxwell to open the door, which he declined to do. Three shots were then fired through the car, one of the balls glancing from the messenger's arm, but not with sufficient force to do him any injury.

They told him they would blow the car to pieces with dynamite if he did not open the door at once, but still the brave messenger refused to open it.

The robbers then compelled the engineer and fireman to go and beg the messenger to open the car. The messenger, fearing that the engineer and fireman would be killed if he did not obey, reluctantly obeyed.

The robbers then entered the car and helped themselves. It is not known how much booty was secured. After getting their plunder the robbers sprang out of the car and disappeared in the darkness. The engineer then pulled out the rest of the train and came on to this city.

A warning telegram put the town on its mettle today. Winchesters of every size and shotguns were loaded and made ready for immediate service. Ammunition was distributed. Coffeyville prepared to give the country another exhibition of her fine nerves. The telegram was sent from Wharton. It came from such a source as prompted the people to put a good deal of confidence in it.

Dodge, the detective of the Wells-Fargo Express company, and Thomas, the deputy United States marshal, who have been following the Daltons, had the warning. They said that the rest of the Dalton gang had started from their hiding place in the territory for the purpose of rescuing Emmett Dalton, who is awaiting trial at the raid on the banks last week. Officers were pursuing the gang on horses, and would try to overtake them.

Not Yet Out Yet.

It advised the people of Coffeyville to be on their guard against an intended attack tonight. Dodge and Thomas were here just after the raid on the banks. That attack resulted in the killing of four of the gang and the capture of the fifth.

After looking over the ground and identifying the dead and captured outlaws to their satisfaction, the detective and the marshal said there were five members of the gang unaccounted for. They predicted more trouble, and left at once for the haunt of the outlaws.

By today's mail John Klober, the livery man, who was one of the most active defenders of Coffeyville against the raid, received a threatening letter.

The letter is dated "Arkansas City," but was not mailed until the sender reached Oklahoma City. The spelling was bad, and the writing was evidently hard work. With the aid of an improved ear to make it intelligible, the warning reads as follows:

"DEAR SIR—I take the time to tell you and Coffeyville that all of the Dalton gang, also I will get by a hell of a sight, and don't you forget it.

"I would have given all I ever made to have been there on the 5th. There are five of the gang left, and we shall come and see you all some day.

"We were down in the Chickasaw Nation, and we did not know it was coming off so soon. We thought it was to be the 5th of November. We shall have revenge for the killing of Bob and Grat and the rest of them.

"You people have no cause to take arms against the gang. The bankers will not help the widows of the men that got killed there, and you thought you were playing hell fire when you killed three of us, but your turn will come soon when you will have to go into the grave and pass in your checks for the killing of Bob and Grat and Texas Jack. So take warning. We leave you in the hands of God for this time. Yours truly, DALTON GANG."

Cut Himself to Pieces.

CHICAGO, Oct. 14.—Albert Hapeke, aged twenty-five, put his left leg on a block of wood and chopped it off with a hatchet just below the knee. Then he cut his left arm so that it hung by a shred of skin, and battered his head with the hatchet until he fainted. He will die.

He Wanted to See Corbett.

THE ARENA OF POLITICS.

New York's Reapportionment Law Stands as Constitutional.

THE COURT OF APPEALS SO DECIDES.

The Two Republican Judges, Andrews and Finch, Dissent from the Findings of the Five Democratic Members of the Tribunal—The Essence of the Decision.

ALBANY, Oct. 14.—The court of appeals has sustained the apportionment law of 1892 and declared it constitutional by a vote of 5 to 2. The two Republican judges, Andrews and Finch, dissented. The court was unanimous in its opinion on all questions involved, except those discussed in Judge Andrews' opinion. This decides all three of the apportionment cases and the Democrats are jubilant over their victory.

The two main points of the case were: First, whether the adjourned session, at which the apportionment law was passed, was a second session within the terms of the constitution, and second, whether the division of districts by the legislature, not being in exact ratio, was equitable.

On the first of these points the Republican judges agree with their Democratic colleagues, but the second forms their only point of disagreement.

The opinions were written by Judges Peckham and Gray. Earl, O'Brien and Maynard concurred, and Andreys dissents on the question in which Finch concurs. Judge Peckham wrote the majority opinion of 11,000 words. It covers forty-six pages of typewritten copy. He says:

Peckham's Argument.

"The point is made that an extraordinary session is not such a session of the legislature as is contemplated by the constitution. To my mind the objection is wholly without force. An extraordinary session is nevertheless a session of the legislature."

He also said, "We also fail entirely to see the force of any argument based upon the assertion that the constitution intended that some considerable interval should elapse between the return of an enumeration and the apportionment of senators and members of the assembly under it."

The only question upon which the judges differed is thus referred to:

"Fourth—It is finally objected that the act is invalid because the senate districts do not contain an equal number of inhabitants as nearly as may be. This question of inequality contains, in my judgment, the only debatable proposition arising in these cases.

"We think that the courts have no power in such case to review the exercise of a discretion intrusted to the legislature by the constitution, unless it is plainly and grossly abused. The expression 'as nearly as may be,' when used in the constitution with reference to this subject, does not mean as nearly as a mathematical process can be followed. It is a direction addressed to the legislature in the way of a general statement of the principles upon which the apportionment shall be made. The act, according to the majority opinion, is not an absolutely ideal one."

Andrews' Opinion.

While concurring with Judge Peckham on the point raised as to the constitutionality of the law, Judge Andrews writes a dissenting opinion, taking the Monroe case as a basis, in which he says:

"I am of the opinion that the apportionment act of 1892 is void for the reason that in apportioning members of assembly among the counties of the state it violates the rule of equality established by the constitution. It is the cardinal principle of free representative government that every elector shall have equal weight in exercising the suffrage.

"I deny that the rule that apportionment must be 'as nearly as may be' according to population is or under any circumstances can be discretionary.

"The departure from the constitutional method in the act of 1892 is substantial, and its validity having been challenged in the courts, it cannot be upheld without establishing a dangerous precedent for the future.

"The claim that the legislature, in making an apportionment, may take into consideration the probable growth of population has no support in the constitution.

"That it is a judicial question cannot under the authorities be denied. The legislature and the courts are alike bound to obey the constitution, and if the legislature transgresses the fundamental law and oversteps in legislation the barriers of the constitution, it is a part of the liberties of the people that the judicial department shall have and exercise the power of protecting the constitution itself against infringement. The power of the courts to set aside an unconstitutional apportionment has quite recently been asserted and exercised by the courts of Wisconsin and Michigan."

BLAINE IN THE CAMPAIGN.

Held Says There Is No Political Significance in His New York Trip.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Oct. 14.—Mr. Blaine passed the day quietly at Ophir farm, the residence of Whitelaw Reid, resting after his trip from Maine. He saw no callers during the day, and although a distinguished delegation came up from New York in the afternoon he did not meet them until he came down stairs to dinner at 7 o'clock in the evening. The gentlemen whom Mr. Reid had invited to meet Mr. Blaine were General James S. Clarkson, Cornelius N. Bliss, Chairman Carter, of the Republican national committee; Secretary McComas, W. C. Bradley, of Kentucky; David Martin, of Pennsylvania; Warner Miller and Chairman Charles W. Hackett, of the New York state committee.

To a representative of the United Press Whitelaw Reid stated that the visit of Mr. Blaine and the meeting with the directors of the Republican campaign had no political significance whatever. It was a purely social affair, and not a gathering for the holding of an important conference as to the progress of the campaign.

Mr. Reid also said that Mr. Blaine was not induced to come on in order to give the managers of the campaign an opportunity to make a personal and unified appeal to him to deliver one or more campaign speeches.

"I have been expecting Mr. Blaine to visit me for some time," said Mr. Reid, "and he has not been able to come until now. He is on his way to his Washington residence, and while I would be most happy to have him with us for a long time, I am not certain that he will remain longer than the end of this week. Mrs. Blaine expects to arrive in New York on Monday, and will go to the home of her daughter, Mrs. Damrosch, for a visit. Mr. Blaine may be there also for a time, and he may then go on to Washington and he may return here. His plans are not yet settled.

A Factor in the Campaign.

"Now about Mr. Blaine's health. He has been unwell all summer and is now improving rapidly. The way in which he stood the trip from Bar Harbor speaks volumes. He is looking and feeling very well today after his twenty-four hours in the cars. He positively declines to see newspaper men and to talk politics."

It is the general opinion here, in spite of what Mr. Reid says, that a strong effort will be made to induce Mr. Blaine to appear at least once at Madison Square garden, and deliver one of his magnetic speeches in behalf of the Republican ticket. The absence of Mr. Harrison from the campaign, made necessary by the illness of his wife, has, it is said, led the members of the national Republican committee to decide that some strong climax is needed to arouse enthusiasm in the ranks and call out a full vote on election day.

Whether the arguments of General Clarkson, Joseph Manley, of Maine; Cornelius N. Bliss and Mr. Reid, all of whom are strong personal friends of the ex-secretary of state, will induce him to run the risk attendant upon a political campaign in his present physical condition is uncertain. The matter is evidently being seriously considered, and the visit of James G. Blaine to Whitelaw Reid may have a marked effect upon the campaign.

DAVENPORT WON'T APPEAR.

New York's Supervisor of Elections Snubs the House Investigating Committee.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—John I. Davenport flatly refuses to attend the meeting of the special committee of the house of representatives appointed to investigate him and his alleged election methods. He sent a letter to Congressman Ashbel P. Fitch, chairman of the committee, announcing his attention to disregard the summons of the committee and giving his reasons.

Mr. Davenport alleges that while the present house assembled in December, 1891, and contained a Democratic majority of 140, no step was taken to have him investigated until July 15, when Mr. Fitch introduced his resolution.

This resolution, Mr. Davenport says, was brought about not because of the alleged gross abuses mentioned in its preamble but because he had secured in the senate a resolution instructing the senate immigration committee to investigate the false and fraudulent naturalization certificates which Mr. Davenport says are issued by Judge McAdam, of the superior court. Mr. Fitch's resolution was intended, so the letter says, merely as an offset to the senate investigation.

"I was quite well informed as to both the purpose and scope of the house resolution, and they gave me no other sensation than one of amusement," says Mr. Davenport.

If Mr. Davenport persists in his refusal he is in danger of arrest and imprisonment by the house of representatives.

The first count charges them with the embezzlement of $200,000 of the order's funds, which they converted to their own use. The second count charges them with converting to their own use $300,000 by using it in Somerby's bank at Philadelphia. Arrests will follow as soon as possible.

WOMAN'S WORLD.

HINTS AS TO THE TRAINING OF NERVOUS CHILDREN.

In a paper on "Education in the Treatment of Nervous Girls" the author urged the value of cultivating a love of good books. "First should come the nursery classics, 'Mother Goose,' 'Cinderella,' 'Prince Fortunatus,' etc., to be followed later by Grimm, Hans Andersen, 'Alice in Wonderland,' Howard Pyle's 'Wonder Clock' and others equally fascinating. About the age of eight the child can be led by the hand through parts of Shakespeare's plays. At twelve come Dickens, Miss Edgeworth and Cooper, all of Hawthorne, and the most interesting works of the best novelists. At the age of fifteen the carefully guided child may be left free to tumble about in a library."

The paper later on advised the study of history, which the French consider the most important study of all for a woman. It will be noticed that all the books recommended until history is begun are stories of the imagination, which it would seem should lead to the badly excited nerves of a nervous child, but this criticism is answered in the paper with the assertion that interest must be developed and a healthy imagination cultivated, which is possible only through the love of good books.

Some listeners to this paper afterward discussed it informally, and one woman made the pertinent suggestion that mothers were often responsible for nervous girls through their mountain walks up hill.

"I have seen a mother," she said, "call her little daughter of four years of age perhaps to her side and deliberately go to work to put the child in a state of excitement, telling her of some promised pleasure with increasing animation, enjoying the expressive kindling of the child's face, till the little one runs off—a pretty picture with sparkling eyes and flushed cheeks, but with heart going pit-a-pat and nerves tingling. There may be some sterild natures that need such awakenings. For the most part, though, I think American children are far too excitable naturally to need any sort of stimulus. If the pressure is all the other way they will still rebound sufficiently to preserve the equilibrium.

"Another mistake, in my opinion, is to let nervous children understand that they are such. How often one hears a mother say, 'Helen is such a nervous child' in Helen's presence, and with the intonation of its being rather a thing to be proud of than otherwise! At least Helen is likely to think so, for I have noticed that such little girls decline doing something which they preferred not to do with the superior dictum, 'No, that makes me nervous.' What a pitiable distinction!

"To me, the mother of a nervous little girl has a tremendous responsibility, which she can meet only with unremitting vigilance in the matter of iron, food, hours of rest and occupation of the afflicted child which it has been her misfortune to bear."—Her Point of View in New York Times.

The Mouth, Teeth and Breath.

The lungs are the organs for the purification of the blood which comes from the various parts of the body. They also carry away a great many impurities by blowing them out through the air passages. This waste carries with it odors of all kinds, and deposits on the teeth and about the tongue and gums materials which may decompose and give the breath a character which would make it anything but agreeable.

One may be very clean in toilet matters, but not have a pure breath, and a few suggestions as to how to secure this should be of at least a passing interest.

The first essential in keeping the breath sweet belongs to the morning hours. During repose you cannot of course observe those little matters which engage a certain amount of your attention when you are awake. The consequence is that the impurities which would not accumulate during activity find a foothold.

After washing the teeth and rinsing the mouth, dip a soft handkerchief in lukewarm water and gently wipe the gums. Then take a little salted water—do not make it strong—and again rinse the mouth. After this scrape your tongue with the ordinary scraper which the druggist has for sale or with a spoon. These necessaries ought to remove any cause of bad breath which owes its origin to the condition of the mouth. When the stomach is the offending party, a draft of peppermint will be found of service.

Teeth which are not well nourished and preserved need the care which none but a skilled dentist can give. Every little spot which may mark a nucleus for decay and every little chipping of the enamel should be attended to at once if you wish to have your breath comparatively pure. When air passes over an impurity it carries with it characters not its own.—New York World.

A Plea for Single Beds.

If single beds were more numerous than they are, a great many people would be better off. When one is tired all the cross, restless, out of sorts, he or she ought to sleep alone and not communicate by proximity the maladies that affect him. The best specimens when sick go away by themselves till they die or get over their troubles, and this instinct a great many human beings have. How then have it are best if indulged in it, not to the slightest degree of neglect, however.

Left to themselves, they can compose their internal disorders, recover their lost equilibrium, and get back their habitual rate of "vibration," whereas, if continually disturbed and "crossed" and interrupted, they are a long time in getting back to the normal.

Where two children in a family must share the same room, in a great many cases they would be better off to have two single beds rather than one wide double bed. We can share a great many things with those we love, but solitude clings to us from birth to death. We came into the world alone, we must go out of it alone, and we live in it sharply in certain moods, in sense, and to get and keep our "bearings" we must sometimes be left alone. It is good that we should be.

He who has his bed to himself may be essentially alone for a portion of the twenty-four hours, may have himself to himself and depend his internal mechanism to his own satisfaction. For a great many woes and ills solitude is a balm—what we call solitude—for when alone the immortal asserts itself. Of all fades, the real is present with us.—New York Advocate.

Ancient Bills of Fare.

The accounts—more frequently found in romances—of the marvelous feasts often given to ralling powers of the olden times are eagerly read by the young and with great longings to see them repeated in the present time. Especially are they bewitching to the young housekeepers, who have visions of regaling their husbands with a bill of fare copied from ancient times. Yet they have no idea of what the peculiar dishes were composed.

A "young lady" writes us: "I have read so much of the wonderful feasts and banquets given in ancient times, the almost fabulous entertainments of the nobles and emperors of Greece and Rome, that I am curious to know something more definite about them. Do tell me, dear madam, if you can, how the dishes, which must have cost a small fortune, were prepared? Of what did they consist?

"I am young, expecting soon to go to housekeeping. I am fond of trying new things, and can afford a little extravagance to enable me to do so. It would be real pleasure, to surprise my husband by bringing him a dainty entertainment, entirely different from the common run of things."

You would indeed surprise your husband and guests, my dear child, with something "different from the common run of things," if we could give you such recipes; but few, if any, have been recorded, and none that you would willingly follow. Their banquets were wonderfully lavish in the amount provided—but gross—almost beastly in the composition. Served in barbaric splendor, on polished gold set round with precious stones, yet there was no delicacy or refinement either in the mode of preparing or arranging the food.—Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher in Godey's.

The Baby Carriage.

I have felt that some one should warn young mothers of many of the ways in which a baby carriage may be dangerous. I have heard that an elder pen than mine would take up the subject, but thus far have seen nothing. I know how much both mother and child need the air, but in their variable climate, with its easterly winds and sudden changes, a child is far better left at home until the weather has become settled. I often see babies in charge of children not large or strong enough to guide the carriage safely over a curbstone, and it strikes the curb or sidewalk with a jar that seems to me spine and brain. Again I see babies lying flat on their backs, with the sun, in all its blinding force, shining directly in their faces. Is it any wonder that so many of our boys and girls are wearing spectacles or eyeglasses?

Not long ago I saw a baby, perhaps five weeks old, lying with the face border of the shade dapping back and forth across its little face in a manner that must have been as painful to the child as it was to me, but as the poor baby could not complain for a change it was obliged thus to suffer. I know these things are not done intentionally, but all the same they are not pleasant for the child, and in many cases they are positively injurious. These are only a few instances, but if they lead the mothers who read them to observe for themselves I think they will agree with me that a baby carriage, although a great convenience, may, if not properly handled, be a source of discomfort to the baby.—"A Grandmother" in Lynn (Mass.) Wanted—Good Housekeeping.

Young women make a big blunder if they do not learn to take care of a home. It is a grievous social and moral wrong when girls are brought up helpless in household life. How often we see mothers busily engaged in domestic duties like a slave, intent that the girl may enjoy every luxury and do nothing; indeed many hardly let their daughters soil their hands. No woman ought to marry who cannot look well to the ways of her household. In case she may not herself be required to work she ought to be able to see whether the work is done in a proper manner. A woman is out of her element unless she is acquainted to a certain extent with the sciences of bakeology, bolliogy, stitchology, mukeology and mendology. There never was a greater blunder than to substitute good looks for good qualities.

The reason why so many men do not make love for themselves in these days is because they cannot afford it. The women are too much averse to working, and too extravagant in all their tastes. We want more frugality, industry and system. If we could introduce these virtues into our higher society we should diminish the envy, jealousy and sickness of the single, and the wretchedness, bickering and divorces of the married. Every girl ought to be brought up to have regular domestic duties. Idleness should be forbidden her. The only dignified life is a useful life.—Labor Tribune.

The Lady of the Bon Marche.

How many American women are aware that the colossal institution in Paris known as the Bon Marche was founded by a remarkable woman, Mme. Boucicaut, called by Parisians the "Lady of the Bon Marche?" Philip Hamerton says of her that she cultivated good as though it were an accomplishment. Managing the affairs of the huge enterprise which she had founded with energy and unfailing prosperity, she associated with her as stockholders the chiefs of the various departments who have given her faithful service, that they might share in the profits of the house, included as many of her employees as possible in the business by cutting her own shares to the common fund, subject to their purchase, and at her death distributed by will the shares that still remained in her possession among the other stockholders.

The pension fund which Mme. Boucicaut created with a gift of $1,000,000 from her own private fortune is used in the support of the employees forced to retire through age or illness. With all her great wealth and commercial power the "Lady of the Bon Marche" remained to the day of her death a plain, unpretentious woman, with a kind, motherly manner and genial expression.—Exchange.

Who Named the Flowers?

Who named the flowers? Eve perhaps, after Adam named the creatures. I think, dear women, that Eve must have named the flowers, because her daughters are so fond of them. They were named before the time of Solomon, you know. But how flowers is the name of many flowers have the same fancy names in more than one language?

Thus to take some of our common wild flowers—pinweed is in French herbe a l'esquinance; clematis is called by our country folks beggars' weed, in French it is herbe aux queux; mignonette—little darling—is herbe aux oiseaux; bouncing bet—adder's tongue is herbe aux mille fleurs; goose foot is herbe du bon Henri, and willow herb is herbe St. Antonio.—London Queen.

Children and Their Dolls.

The great love a little girl has for her family of dolls is only a copy in miniature of the maternal affection that is developed upon her own little self. The instinct is born in her, and there is no sweeter or more innocent play than the mimic representation of home life that she gives with her inanimate companions, large and small. Readers of human nature, if they watch a child with her dolls, will very readily ascertain how she likes her mother. The conversations between her and her doll baby are sure to be copies of those her mother holds with her.

The wise utterances she lets fall she has heard from father or mother. The poor little rag doll who is consinually being scolded and punished is receiving only such admonition as the child mother herself receives, while on the other hand, if she is sweetly reasoned with and is only gently rebuked, the dolls come in only for kind words and the same sort of training. Dolls are part of a little girl's life. She finds truer and sweeter enjoyment in the dressing and undressing of some pink cheeked, blue eyed babe Juneau than ever comes in the later years, when life assumes greater responsibilities than the bringing up of a family of interesting cities and wax beauties. Therefore let them cling to their dolls as long as they will.—Philadelphia Times.

A Great Care.

One phase of a woman's pride—great family pride—is self respect. It is a great care. She will dwell at great length on its strength, and is always on the alert to protect it. She is so jealous of it that she continually airs her grievances. She is so fearful that she will not be treated with the deference she considers her due that she must trivial things are taken for slights and insults. If the little things are explained away, then she harbors suspicions which will be her undoing some day. The suspicions are generally the fruit of a jealous mind; for women who are on the lookout for proper respect to be paid to them are usually the victims of attentions paid to others, and woe be unto the unfortunate individual if the one looking in attention to her should happen to be her husband. In her endeavors to properly protect her family pride and self respect her grievances become the common property and gossip of the neighborhood, and for that reason the most remote corners of the earth.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Women at Carlsbad.

The French, Austrian and German women all seem to have gone to hips and busts. They do not compare in grace, elegance or delicacy to the American woman. Beauty of a rare order is never seen. The thoroughfare of Baltimore will disclose more beauties any day than an entire season at Carlsbad. The saleladies in the large stores of Baltimore are infinitely handsomer than the conservatory beds of Vienna, Dresden or Berlin.

Although there is, outside the native, a population of 30,000 foreigners at Carlsbad, I would not discover a careless or lively behaved woman in the place. What is known in America as "mashing" is wholly unknown at Carlsbad. Any close scrutiny will reveal as full as Puffs, a thousand ladies can be seen well filled, and a still larger coterie of women and men are at the same time promenading, but there is no more flirting or mashing going on between these strangers then if they were at a Quaker meeting.—Cor. Baltimore Sun.

Castoff Gloves.

Now that leather forms so important an element of decorative work the economical woman will in her day and generation, "never a her old gloves of all light thin," because she knows that by ripping the wrists and washing them up in gasoline she can make the daintiest sofa pillow covers, photograph frames and tobacco pouches in the list. It only needs a few stitches by the clever needlewoman, a few strokes of the brush by the skilled artist, to transform the castoff glove into a thing of beauty, if not a joy forever.

And there might be some one foolish enough to care all the more for the gift you present because it was made of the gloves you had worn—so much sentiment has ever been attached to a woman's glove. It was for a woman's glove that the lover in the poem risked his life in the lion's cage, and it has been a woman's glove that many a knight has tied upon his spear for a talisman in the lists of honor and glory.—New York Sun.

The Heroine of Many Stories.

Lady Dilke has been well utilized as a heroine of romance. She is said to be the Dorothea of "Middlemarch" to the Mr. Casaubon, for which her first husband, Professor Mark Pattison, is believed to be the model. She is the charming Belinda of Rhoda Broughton's entertaining novel of that name, and, as the lovely young wife of Dyrasmus, has figured in numerous stories which always happily marry her finally to the other man.—San Francisco Argonaut.

Miss Sarah Pollard owns a half section of land in Polk county, Minn., which she works without any help except in harvest season. She is a young woman of many accomplishments and left a comfortable home in the east to become a western farmer.

Police matrons in Chicago are required to wear a uniform while on duty. The uniform consists of a dress of blue serge, with a tight fitting double breasted basque finished with blue buttons, and a plain skirt made short enough to clear the ground.

A good chocolate frosting is made as follows: Five tablespoonfuls of grated chocolate, with enough cream or milk to wet it, one cupful of sugar and one egg well beaten. Stir the ingredients over the fire until thoroughly mixed. Flavor with vanilla.

Babies' feeding bibs made at home are preferable to those bought, and the white rubber cloth is more satisfactory than the marbelized oilcloth, as it does not crack.

KILLED AT GRANT AVE.

A YOUNG BOY STRUCK BY A CENTRAL TRAIN.

Little Crossing the Tracks Young Welsh is Instantly Killed.—His Father a Workman in Pond's.

A young boy named James Welsh, residing on Lee place, while crossing the track at Grant avenue station about three o'clock this afternoon was struck by a Central train and instantly killed.

His father is a workman in the Pond Machine Tool Works.

The boy was about eight years old and had been riding on a coal train. He jumped from the coal train at Grant avenue and started to cross the track in front of the passenger train. The engineer blew his whistle and the boy calmly looked at him and then stepped off the track. A bar on the side of the locomotive struck him in the face. He died instantly.

A BOLD ATTEMPT.

A bold attempt at burglary occurred at Elizabeth early Thursday evening, and the would-be thieves are now lodged safely behind the bars of the county jail.

The attempt was made to rob the saloon of J. Howard Wilson, at the corner of Bond and Catherine streets. The proprietor died at his home in this city Thursday morning from an overdose of laudanum, and the saloon was closed. The bartender, John Quinn, was in this city, conferring with the widow, and everyone was away from the place.

The thieves were discovered by Geo. Erickeuts, a butcher, and frightened away before they secured any booty.

They had wrenched the shutter off its hinges and had then broken open the window, gaining entrance to the rear room of the saloon.

Detectives later arrested B. F. Coon and R. Clark for complicity in the attempt.

This morning the prisoners were arraigned before Judge Hetfield, and, in default of $200 bail, they were committed to await the action of the Grand Jury on the charge of breaking and entering with intent to steal.

STATE W. C. T. U.

The Election of Officers.—The Junior Work.

The election of officers of the State W. C. T. U. was held in Newark Thursday. The result was as follows: Mrs. Emma Bourne of Newark, president; Mrs. J. T. Ellis of Newark, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Isabella H. Demarest of Gloucester, recording secretary; Mrs. E. A. Mickle of Millville, treasurer. They were all re-elected except the recording secretary. Mrs. Greeman of Boonton, held that office last year.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. Jas. R. Joy of Orchard place, North Plainfield, is visiting friends in New York.

Mr. John P. Emmons of Prospect place, has made a clearing in front of his house by removing two large elm trees.

Lewis Randolph of Jerseyville, Ill., formerly a well-known resident of Somerset county, died Oct. 8th, aged 83 years 8 months and 25 days.

Congressman Dolliver, a brother of Mr. G. Q. Dolliver of Manning avenue, will address the Republican mass meeting to be held at the rink next Thursday evening.

About thirty young people met at the residence of Miss Grace De Forest, of Second street, Thursday evening, and had a very pleasant time with music and games. About twelve o'clock refreshments were served.

A reception was tendered to Mr. Chas. Dressler, the President of the Plainfield Saengerbund Society, at Saengerbund Hall, last evening, in honor of the fifteenth anniversary of his wedding. Prof. Stein of New Brunswick led the evening. Dancing and refreshments were features of the evening's enjoyment.

Mr. Fletcher Hallock of the class of '94, Lehigh University, is spending a few days at his home in this city. The college was closed Thursday, that being Founder's Day, in honor of Asa Packer, the founder of the college. Mr. Hallock is studying to become an electrical engineer. He will return to Bethlehem Sunday evening.

Great Meeting at Mt. Bethel.

The biggest political meeting ever held in Warren township was that of the Republicans at Mt. Bethel Hall last evening. Charles B. Corwin of this city spoke about the tariff in a very convincing manner. Warren township has about three Democrats to one Republican township, but many Democrats who were present last evening said they were in favor of protection, and it is quite probable that Warren may this year go Republican.

A young Republican farmer, a week ago, came into town and said to the Republicans: "Come up to the mountain! Come and help us convince our farmers, among whom we are in the minority by a large majority!" They went.

"Willie" Got the Medal.

A very beautiful diamond and gold medal, offered by Mr. Frank Linke to the Crescent League for the member who secured the largest score at batting during the season just closed, has been won by Plainfield's favorite, Gentle "Willie" Murphy. Willie weighs 214 lbs. and when he hits the ball something has got to go. The medal was presented to him this afternoon, and Willie is as happy (with it) as a boy in his first suit of breeks, Scotch for trousers.)

Scotch Plains Delegates.

The Scotch Plains Republicans at their primary Thursday evening elected the following delegates:

To Congressional convention—Hon. George Kyte, Dr. F. W. Westcott.

To County convention—H. Haud, L. W. Miller, M. Briggs, George Ball.

To Assembly convention—John Robinson, E. L. Hand, C. E. Moore, Joseph Clark, Jr.

—White & VanArsdale have something of interest to say in our advertising columns. Their extensive addition are all completed and open for the display of their large line of fine bric-a-brac, crockery, silverware, lamps and dress goods counters and home furnishing goods. They say they expect by the most liberal inducements to greatly increase their business and to make their store the Macy's of Plainfield.

CORRESPONDENCE.

What the President Says.

To THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—It may interest many of your readers to learn that during the coming season the Choral Society proposes to vary its programme somewhat by producing some works of a lighter character, and not to confine its efforts and study to Oratorios exclusively.

The last half only of the programme for the first concert will be devoted to Mendelssohns "Athalie," with its dramatic music, and impressive readings. If possible Mr. Charles Roberts, Jr., will be engaged as the reader.

The second concert will be of a popular and miscellaneous character, and the series will terminate with the "Creation," which, when rendered two years ago, met with such unanimous approval.

T. W. HOWLAND,
President Choral Society.

MARTINE DUNN OUT OF IT.

Tumultuous Convention of the Eighth New Jersey District.

The Democratic Congressional Convention for the new Eighth District, held in Elizabeth yesterday proved to be a stormy affair, the proceeding at times being disgraceful. Alexander Mayhaum, the candidate from Orange, opened a free bar in his rooms at the Sheridan House, and many of his delegates were not in a sober condition when they entered the hall.

There were four candidates, namely, Mayhaum, John T. Dunn of Elizabeth, James H. Martine of Plainfield, and Gustave Pollack of Summit.

The Mayhaum and Martine forces combined and elected Herman Bart of South Orange, and a recess was taken for dinner. When the Convention re-assembled Chief Tenny was on hand with a force of police to preserve order. A great hubbub arose over the report of the Committee on Permanent Organization which recommended Dr. Silvers of Rahway for permanent Chairman. A Rahway delegate charged that Dr. Silvers obtained his seat as a delegate by fraud, and said that the Martine ticket was made drunk by Dr. Silvers's friends and his credentials were taken from him. A friend of Silvers replied over and grabbing the speaker by the neck, flung him backward into his seat.

A riot was only prevented by the police, who rushed among the excited delegates and awed them into partial quiet.

The doctor was elected Chairman by a vote of 40 to 37, and the tumult subsided for a time. It eventually broke out again. Resolutions were adopted indorsing the National and State tickets.

The first regular ballot stood: Dunn, 57; Mayhaum, 35; Martine, 29; Pollak, 4. Summit settled the agony by casting half the vote for the latter. The ballot for Alderman and ex-Speaker Dunn, the vote being: Dunn, 65; Mayhaum, 35; Martine, 35; Pollak, 4. There was great cheering by the Elizabeth men at the result.

The Martine men addressed the convention and J. E. Martine, Judge Noonan of Bayonne and W. J. Curtis of Summit made the latter's speech being the redeeming feature of the turbulent gathering.

The Plainfield and Orange delegates left the hall in dudgeon. The Plainfield's arrived home exceedingly dejected, and declare that they had been very unfairly treated.

The Plainfield Courier said that John M. Crane of Plainfield was one of the delegates and was thrown out of the hall from one of the windows. Mr. Crane of Plainfield says he was that he was not at the convention at all, is not now and never has been a Democrat, and has never attended a Democratic convention. Our cotemporary ought to know better than to insult a Republican so well known, by calling him a Democrat—he, a gentleman who has been prominent in so many respectable and successful local affairs. But, alas! Such is life. How soon we are forgotten.

Loss of Shooting.

At the Inter-State team shooting contest held at Wilmington, Del., under the auspices of the Wilmington Gun Club, Thursday, the New Jersey team lost by only six points, over seventy men competing. The Standard Gun Club won the $75 prize by a total of 140 out of a possible 150, and the New Jersey team was second with a total of 136. In the team contest Messrs. Apgar and Smith made 24 and Mr. Keller 23 out of a possible 25. In the ten individual events which followed Messrs. Smith and Keller won first and second and Apgar won nine. The Wilmington Morning News published the pictures of Messrs. Smith, Keller and Apgar together with very flattering notices. The following members of the Plainfield team, 7: Brewster, Smith, Keller, Hoel Apgar, D. Terry, and E. D. Miller, shoot this afternoon at the ninth monthly contest of the New Jersey Trap Shooters' League this afternoon at Newark.

The victim of the assault is Lizzie Murphy, a school girl fifteen years old. Her father is a prosperous farmer in the Preakness Mountains, in the rear of Shepherd's Woods, and the family is of the highest respectability.

North Plainfield Democratic Primaries.

The North Plainfield Democrats held their primary last night in the basement of the schoolhouse.

Mr. John Bodine was elected chairman; Mr. Levi C. Kline, secretary, Mr. F. C. Schaun assistant secretary, and the following were chosen delegates to the county convention to be held at Somerville, next Monday; October 17: Andrew Lord, Lewis Stults, Wm. Stults, Lewis R. Blackford, Wm. H. Ludlow.

Those known as the "regulars" had a ticket in all ready to run, but on learning they expressed themselves after the meeting in terms which showed that they were not over their defeat. Those who defeated them became so jubilant that most of them are unable to attend to their business to-day. There was said to be a demijohn of free whiskey at the Democratic club room that had been sent for to do with the matter. Early in the evening it was the young men greatly "enthused." Later it had them patriotically. Too bad, Democratic voters have no higher ideas of their duties as American citizens.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Cholera germs will live in clothing, bedding and in the decayed corpses of those who died of it for months, perhaps years. The only safety is in burning all such clothing and bedding, and even the bodies themselves. The public for its own safety should learn to entertain the cremation idea to this extent.

Human sympathy is greater than political party divisions and always comes uppermost in times of general joy, sorrow or danger. It was a thoroughly graceful and kindly act for an association of Democratic clubs to pass resolutions of sympathy with President Harrison, in view of his wife's critical illness. And among all the people of this nation, of whatever shade of party politics, there is not one heart so warped and base that it will not respond fully to the feeling of the men who passed the resolutions.

Coffeyville, Kan., has immortalized itself in history by exterminating the Dalton robber gang. It has also shown what the reputable citizens of any town can do when they summon up their pluck and resolve to rid their neighborhood of a danger and nuisance of any kind. All things must go down before a determined will. Even a man of peaceable temper is a man of peace. For two years his Winchester rifle had hung upon its pegs unused. Yet at the threat of the Dalton outlaws to raid Coffeyville he got the old gun down and loaded it. When it had finished speaking three of the murderous gang lay dead. These Daltons had terrorized the whole southwest more than two years, yet one resolute effort on the part of Coffeyville citizens wiped them out, and thus effecting in a few minutes what the sole force of the law had been unable to do in months. It is of interest to note how long the career of a gang of outlaws continues. In case of the Dalton band it was two years and four months. Up to June, 1890, the three Dalton brothers were United States deputy marshals for the western district of Kansas. They were earning a good living and had as many friends as most people. But blood will tell. Their mother was a sister of the notorious Younger brothers—outlaws of a former generation. The blood in their veins stirred uneasily and finally drove them to become bloody and desperate outlaws.

Checkley on Physical Culture.

Edwin Checkley, "the strong man," gives some hints on acquiring bodily perfection that are interesting and important. He writes a chapter in Lippincott's Magazine on muscle building.

To begin, he has no faith in systems of physical culture that attempt to build up the human frame by alternate contraction and relaxation of muscles. These muscular movements he pronounces "straining methods." Neither does he believe that Indians are healthier, stronger or handsomer than white people. On the contrary, he declares emphatically that civilization does not cause the race to deteriorate physically.

His particular theory about health and physical exercise is worth noting: "The force called gravity, unless resisted, tends to destroy life." The more we allow ourselves to slump or lend over, the more we give way to this life destroying force. The more we strive to hold the chest up, the more we are able to resist the deadening power by giving room to the processes of digestion and respiration. Constant mental effort to brace up the body will help wonderfully. His somewhat novel ideas are partly to be found in the extract below:

I am bold to lay all stress on this theory of controlling the muscles by a mental effort, unassisted by any means other than the will. In my own experience and that of my pupils it conserves physical energy, and reduces to hygienic and true life. The body needs chiefly air and food to keep up its elements, as bone, blood, muscle and sinew. Thus, I firmly believe, can be preserved in a healthy state only by the cultivation of that subtle something which we call vaguely mental power. Vaguely pulls the string that moves our mass of matter, whether it be the instinctive or the voluntary movements of the brain, the root is the same.

The ancients held that death could be retarded, and they were by devising rituals aiding by conserving physical energy. As to the best means to attain the first of these ends, many theories have been held and many themselves advanced. My advice to those who wish to develop vitality is to attain a good circulation of the blood by perfecting the offices of digestion, secretion and excretion to perform their proper functions—not to shake up the body by violent exercise, but to secure the healthful effects of gravity as much and as constantly as possible, whether seated or standing. Don't slump. Don't sit. Hold the head erect, the top of the head to the joints of the hips, stretched out to its fullest extent, so as to give the organs inclosed within it all the room possible to perform their work, instead of refunding the inwardness perforce upon those of the stomach and intestines by letting the body sag down, as is so often done. Then fill your lungs with air by slowly drawing it gently into them through the nose and expel it through the same organ, as the horse does. Use the nose, the natural air organ to reach the stomach with, and not for breathing. During this process do not forget to relax the muscles of the arms, shoulders and chest. Let the abdomen, as an assistant to respiration, be free to act. Use the action of the upper lip and chest instead—they will do all that is necessary in the respiratory act without the slightest effort, and a great deal better. Relax the muscles of the arms and shoulders when walking or in any position in which these members are not employed. Let the person hang by his sides when still—they will get full off. There is no need of clinching the hands and contracting the muscles of the arms, or carrying the shoulders high or pressing them back. Let them alone; they will find their best position if the body proper is carried upright—i. e., if you stand and sit with your spine straight, pelvis back, trunk erect and head held with face to front with the body, and no round shoulders or "dorsal curve."

BLAINE BREAKS SILENCE

He Pleads for the Election of Harrison and Reid.

A NOVEL MEETING AT OPHIR FARM

The Meeting Was an Impromptu One and the Speech of the Ex-Secretary of State Was Unexpected—Depew and Minister Egan Also Address the Crowd.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Oct. 15.—James G. Blaine has spoken. The magnetic man of Maine has thrown the weight of his utterances into the campaign. He has silenced the Democratic claim that he was disgruntled by earnestly and with much of his old time vigor proclaiming the Republican cause and advocating the election of the Harrison and Reid ticket. His speech was delivered under unique circumstances. There were no cut and dried arrangements, no public hall, no set programme; but when informed at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon that the residents of White Plains and the surrounding villages intended serenading him at Ophir farm, the residence of Whitelaw Reid, in the evening the ex-secretary turned to his host and said:

"Then I will speak to them."

"That is good," replied Mr. Reid.

"Yes," said Mr. Blaine, "and ask Chauncey to speak also," and so it was arranged. Mr. Blaine had received a number of callers during the day, and the soft air of the Indian summer day had braced him up wonderfully.

Mr. Reid invited rather a formidable gathering to dine with Mr. Blaine, but it was a congenial party and a very pleasant one. There were Chauncey M. Depew, Charles W. Hackett, chairman of the Republican state executive committee, William Brookfield, chairman of the New York committee of the National committeemen Garrett A. Hobart of New Jersey, B. O. Kerens of Missouri, W. A. Hahn of Ohio; W. H. Robertson, ex-collector of the port of New York; Solomon Hirsch, ex-minister to Turkey, and Patrick Egan, minister to Chili.

A Remarkable Impromptu Meeting.

While they were dining word was passed about from mouth to mouth among Mr. Reid's neighbors that Mr. Blaine was to be given a welcome by citizens of Westchester county. From White Plains the news went by telephone to Portchester, Cos Cob and even to Rye, eight miles away. The result was remarkable. At 8 o'clock carriages began to arrive at Ophir farm from all directions. Then came carriages, family carryalls and omnibuses loaded with people. The whole countryside seemed to be astir. It was like an English hustings. The palatial residence of the Republican candidate for vice president was soon surrounded by people. Many ladies were present, and the men represented every walk of life from the retired merchant to the farmer or town blacksmith. The broad porch was soon filled with ladies and their escorts, while the men stood in groups on the lawn.

At 9 o'clock Mr. and Mrs. Reid and their guests appeared in the parlors, the shades were drawn up, and the party were plainly seen through the plate glass windows. At this moment a brass band, followed by a torchlight procession, marched up the driveway from the south. It was the Colored Republican club of White Plains. They were followed by the Portchester Republican club, and also led by a band and carrying torches. The two bodies of men ranged up in line in front of the entrance to the Reid mansion. The big folding doors were then thrown open and Mr. Reid and his guests appeared. They were loudly cheered. Mr. Blaine stood on the porch and spoke as follows:

Blaine's Speech.

FELLOW CITIZENS OF NEW YORK—I should be ennobled indeed if I did not make response to your call after you have come several miles in this beautiful home of Mr. Reid on a pleasant October evening. At the same time I am not making speeches in the canvass for reasons which are well known to you and which have no connection whatever with politics.

Generally administrations in a presidential election are challenged on account of the condition of the business of the country, and I submit that the Republican administration of President Harrison can triumphantly endorse such a test. I doubt if since the government of the United States was instituted anybody at any time has seen what we call "good times" so general, taking in so many interests and spreading prosperity through the whole domain of trade. I might appeal to New York if the city was ever passed through a season more satisfactory in financial results than for the past few years, in which the general effect on capital and labor has been more prosperous.

The opponents of the Republican party always represent New York as a commercial city and not a manufacturing one, and yet the product of the manufacturers of this city alone is $3,000,000. Anything that would cripple that great interest would cripple the country very seriously and to a very hurtful extent. Women in New York get their living from pursuits protected by the tariff than from any other source. I know New York is the center of our commerce—the great entrepot of our trade—but the whole country is so connected and interwoven in and about New York are smaller in numbers than those who live outside. Then, I believe, can be preserved in a healthy state only by the cultivation of that subtle something which we call vaguely mental power. Vaguely pulls the string that moves our mass of matter, whether it be the instinctive or the voluntary movements of the brain, the root is the same.

The ancients held that death could be retarded, and they were by devising rituals aiding by conserving physical energy. As to the best means to attain the first of these ends, many theories have been held and many themselves advanced. My advice to those who wish to develop vitality is to attain a good circulation of the blood by perfecting the offices of digestion, secretion and excretion to perform their proper functions—not to shake up the body by violent exercise, but to secure the healthful effects of gravity as much and as constantly as possible, whether seated or standing. Don't slump. Don't sit. Hold the head erect, the top of the head to the joints of the hips, stretched out to its fullest extent, so as to give the organs inclosed within it all the room possible to perform their work, instead of refunding the inwardness perforce upon those of the stomach and intestines by letting the body sag down, as is so often done. Then fill your lungs with air by slowly drawing it gently into them through the nose and expel it through the same organ, as the horse does. Use the nose, the natural air organ to reach the stomach with, and not for breathing. During this process do not forget to relax the muscles of the arms, shoulders and chest. Let them alone; they will find their best position if the body proper is carried upright—i. e., if you stand and sit with your spine straight, pelvis back, trunk erect and head held with face to front with the body, and no round shoulders or "dorsal curve."

I have a word to say about the Irish vote. I see it stated that the Democratic boast of having the mass of them in their ranks. The year it is one of the mysteries of politics that a quo warranto suit is not instituted to oust the holder of an office which is canvassed almost as much as it is to New York. I could have the Irish vote on the side of Grover Cleveland. Intelligent Irish voters will vote for protection; they could defy all the machinations of their leaders in the party of free trade, and throw their influence on the side of the home market of America against the side of the foreign market of England. I make this appeal has been frequently made to the Irish voters, but I make it with more confidence than ever, unwilling to act upon that with light and knowledge before them they will do liberally be on the side of their former op pressors.

I think I shall rely on my good friend Egan, the brilliant and successful minister to Chili, whom I feel especially glad to meet at Mr. Reid's table this evening. I think I must rely on him to intercede with his countrymen in behalf of the election in two senses of the Democratic party in lowering the standard of the wages of American labor by their potential votes and their potential swords.

Egan and Depew Speak.

When the applause which followed Mr. Bl ine's speech had subsided there were calls for Patrick Egan, and the minister to Chili responded in a short speech, in which he claimed that the Republican party deserved all the credit for having called, and for the principles of humanity and civilization.

Chauncey M. Depew then spoke. He was in a humorous vein, and paid Westchester county many compliments that delighted his hearers. He said that Blaine is the one man in 100 years that commanded the respect of all parties and all men. Mr. Reid was called for at the close of Mr. Depew's remarks. He simply thanked the country people for their courtesy to his guest.

THE DEMOCRATIC CAMPAIGN.

Wayne McVeagh, It Is Said, Will Speak for Cleveland and Stevenson.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—It is announced at Democratic headquarters that Wayne McVeagh, attorney general in the cabinet of President Garfield, has accepted the invitation of the New York Democratic club, through Musgrave Cox, the chairman of the campaign committee, to speak at the mass meeting to be held under the auspices of that club at Cooper Union on Wednesday evening, Oct. 19, which is the next registration day. Frederick R. Coudert will also speak, and the president, J. H. Y. Arnold, will preside.

Mr. Cleveland is still at the Victoria hotel. He receives a steady stream of callers, but requested that their names be withheld. This request is made with the hope of dispensing any ambitious persons who take up his time with the hope of seeing their names in print in connection with his. Mr. Cleveland informed a reporter of the United Press that he had made no definite plans for the future.

Secretary Sherrin, of the Democratic national committee, arrived from Indiana. With regard to the apportionment case in that state he said that the supreme court had very properly declined to put it ahead on its calendar, and that it would have to take its regular course and would be reached some time after the election. He regarded the outlook for a Democratic victory in the state as excellent.

REPUBLICANS WANT MRS. LEASE.

She Is Offered $5,000 to Make Speeches on "Southern Outrages."

RALEIGH, N. C., Oct. 15.—Mrs. Lease, of Kansas, has received an offer of $5,000 to make Republican speeches in New York and other states, but mainly in New York, on "Southern Outrages." She received the offer while here and is yet considering it. Some of her relatives have advised her to accept it.

The third party has taken down one of its nominees on the state ticket, R. A. Cobb, who was nominated for lieutenant governor. Efforts have since been made to induce W. K. Pigford, of Sampson county, to make the race, but he has declined.

W. A. Guthrie, who was nominated by the third party for associate justice, declined and declared for Cleveland. William H Holmes, the nominee for superior court judge in the Fifth judicial district, declines and comes out for Cleveland. He is the ninth Republican of state prominence who this year has pursued this course.

Reeves to Wield Gilmore's Baton.

PORTLAND, Or., Oct. 15.—Bandmaster D. W. Reeves, of the American band, of Providence, which is playing an engagement here, has decided to accept the offer made to him to become the leader of Gilmore's band. He wired his acceptance, conditional upon the arrangement of satisfactory terms.

FASHIONS

THE NEW SLEEVES.

Some of the Eccentricities of Style and Color Shown.

The eccentricities of the sleeve of the moment are well worth studying. Something seems to have bewitched the ordinary plain sleeve. The sleeve for the fall and winter gowns has recklessly abandoned any suggestion of plainness. Colors run riot with one another and puffs and frills are combined in unique fashion. The three sleeves shown in the illustration are not designs. The new but eccentric sleeve has a black lace frill over the shoulder, from beneath which comes a loose puff of scarlet silk. From wrist to elbow is a tight fitting one of velvet covered with a latticework of fine red silk cord. The sleeve where puffs and lace are combined is designed for an elegant house gown. The sleeve is a succession of puffs of soft silk, while from beneath each puff comes a graceful fall of lace. The sleeve for a tailored suit is a plain one. It is a stylish sleeve for a street gown there is first a puff of tweed of tightly woven shevels, then two bands of velvet which extend with the material, that another puff outlined with more bands of velvet. It is finished with a tight fitting straight cuff.

DEDICATION OF THE FAIR

Henry Watterson Consents to Deliver the First Oration.

SENATOR DANIEL HAD DECLINED.

The Eloquent Kentuckian Was Three Invited to Accept the Honor, Which He Gracefully Did—The Arrangements for the Occasion—New York's Contingent.

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—Henry Watterson, of Kentucky, will deliver the dedicatory address at the World's fair ceremonies. When Mr. Breckenridge resigned on account of the criticisms of the Chicago papers an attempt was made to get Senator D. W. Daniel, of Virginia, to take his place, but Senator Daniel telegraphed his refusal. President Thomas Palmer, of the national commission, then telegraphed to Mr. Watterson, asking him to take this place of honor upon the programme, and Mr. Palmer received a reply last evening saying:

LOUISVILLE, Oct. 15.

The time is exceedingly short, especially for that I can prepare nothing adequate to the occasion, but the invitation with which you honor me, and the circumstances of the case, as a command, and I act upon a sense of duty in accepting it.

HENRY WATTERSON.

Dedication Arrangements.

The accommodations for the crowds that will assemble at the dedication exercises in the colossal structure known as the Manufacturers' building are rapidly nearing completion. There will be seating capacity for 60,000 persons, with scarcely one-third of the building occupied for the purpose.

The committee which has charge of the arrangements for the dedicatory ball held a meeting at General Hodges' office and decided to sell no more tickets for admission. Three thousand have been sold already, and about 1,000 of the Chicago people who have received invitations and failed to purchase admission checks before today cannot attend.

Fifteen hundred tickets have been sold among Chicago people, and the same number have been issued to guests abroad. Fully 1,000 Chicago people who have received invitations to the ball will be excluded by the action of the committee.

A serious omission of the committee is the failure to invite the members of the governing boards of the world's fair to attend the ball. Officers of the state World's fair boards have also been ignored by the committee, and do not know whether their presence is desired at the ball or not.

The unfortunates, if not otherwise provided for, have yet recourse to be admitted ball, of which Colonel Henry H. Turner is the presiding genius, and at which the attendance, it is estimated, will be 10,000.

All dining establishes, and the restaurants are being offered for rent for the day of the parades. Prices that seem astounding are demanded for the privilege of peering through the windows along the route for a couple of hours.

With a few exceptions the hotel keepers have not taken advantage of the demand for accommodations to raise the rates. However, to the disgust of the reception committee, one of the largest of the hotels has taken advantage of the occasion and is charging an exorbitant price for accommodations with four beds in a room.

A pleasant relief to disagreeable features was afforded by Chief Tomlins, of the music department, who ordered that all bands marching in the civic parade should play in unison, and that only the best patriotic airs are to be used. Another agreeable announcement is that, with good weather, people for fifteen miles around Lake Michigan the night of the fireworks display.

The Clevelands Will Be There.

Grover Cleveland, Mrs. Cleveland and Baby Ruth are coming to Chicago next week to take part in the dedication of the dedication of the World's fair. Mr. Cleveland and his family, accompanied by a party of New York ladies, will arrive here next Wednesday. Four parlors of the State street side of the Palmer House have been reserved for the party.

Mr Cleveland will arrive in time to take in the whole programme, beginning with the reception and ball at the Auditorium Wednesday evening, and ending with the dedication of the New York building on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Cardinal Gibbons Will Take Part.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 15.—Cardinal Gibbons will leave this city on Monday next for Chicago, where he is to deliver the closing prayer at the dedicatory services of the Columbian exposition on Friday, Oct. 21. On the same evening in Baltimore there is to be the most magnificent torchlight procession that Baltimore has ever yet seen. The cardinal was the originator of the idea of a torchlight procession, and his success in its accomplishment in Baltimore ranks among his associate churchmen that an unparalleled triumph is assured. The original was to have reviewed the procession, but he cannot do that now. He will be in Chicago. There he will be attended by his friend, Archbishop Ireland, and by Archbishop Satolli, the special representative of the holy father to the fair, and by Mgr. O'Connell, the rector of the American college at Rome.

New York's Delegation.

ALBANY, Oct. 15.—Chief Executive Officer McMenomon, who is the World's fair general managers, secretaries and chief clerks shall meet at the Iroquois hotel, Buffalo, on Monday next. The board of women managers will meet at the Genesee. Governor Flower and staff will also be at Buffalo on Monday night, and all will be a special train start for Chicago on Tuesday morning at 8 o'clock over the Lake Shore railroad. Rev. Dr. Brown, of New York city, will accompany Governor Flower, and William H. McElroy, the poet; Archbishop Corrigan and his friends will leave New York on Tuesday, reaching Chicago on Wednesday afternoon. Dr. Depew will leave New York on Wednesday and reach Chicago on Thursday morning.

The President Can't Attend.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—The president will not go to Chicago. Private Secretary Halford has so informed Adlai T. Ewing and John Addison, of Chicago, who are here in advance of the party of the notables to the dedication. It was a great disappointment to the president to be compelled to decline the invitation, but his wife is first in his mind, and her condition is too critical to risk leaving her long enough to go to Chicago. Vice President Morton will therefore represent him, not only in the social duties, but official as well.

An Exhibit Colony for the Fair.

BOSTON, Oct. 15.—A colony of Exhibits have arrived in Boston en route for the World's fair.

THE SHAMOKIN TRAGEDY

Five Lives Were Lost in the Sterling Mines Explosion.

EXPERIENCES OF THE SURVIVORS.

Two of the Men, After Having Given Themselves Up for Lost, Were Released from the Cell in Which They Were Imprisoned by Another Explosion of Gas.

SHAMOKIN, Pa., Oct. 15.—The awful calamity at the Sterling mine was the most thrilling that has occurred in the anthracite fields since the famous Greenbach mine explosion of 1868. Eight men were entombed in the mine for twelve hours, and when the 400 rescuers reached them only four were found alive—Patrick McDevitt, Michael Dunn, Joseph Ketchie, and Joseph Whetchock.

All day the rescuers, led by Superintendent Jefferson, labored to reach the chamber of death. Their progress was slow, for the black damp was strong, and every few minutes some of the men would succumb to its fatal power. They were immediately placed in cars and hauled to the surface, and new men took their places.

Finally the brave rescuers gained a direct passage to the entombed men in one of the passageways a short distance from the bottom of the slope. There they found Ketchie and Whetchock unconscious. The stricken miners were carried to the surface, where Ketchie recovered. The latter told a fearful story of suffering and gave information which led to the finding of three of the dead men.

Drank Oil and Chewed Wick.

Ketchie said that he and Wetchock separated from the others and started to find the right path. A half dozen falls of coal prevented them from making any headway, and at last they found themselves in a deserted chamber. Coal and rocks kept falling, and penned in on all sides they gave up all hopes of escaping.

Wetchock said he was hungry, and driven to despair he drank the oil from his lamp. Ketchie chewed the wick and also drank the oil from his lamp. They then went to sleep, expecting never to awaken. The black damp was gathering about them, and they were awakened by a loud report, caused by a small explosion, which occurred as are numerous after terrible calamities.

A current of air swept through their prison and they found that the last explosion had shattered one side of their pen. Ketchie and Wetchock half dragged themselves toward the bottom of the slope, and once the latter was struck on the head by falling rock and fell unconscious into a ditch. Ketchie seized him and pulled him along. On his way he stumbled over three dead bodies, and going a hundred feet farther Ketchie let go of his senseless companion and sank down by his side. Here they were found soon afterward by the rescuers.

An hour later the rescuing party which went over the route suggested by Wetchock and Ketchie came upon the bodies of Collins, Thomas and Doney. They lay side by side and all had died from foul air. None of them was burned nor struck by falling coal or rocks.

Five Are Dead.

A thousand feet farther back Minstone, McDevitt and Belcavage were found. The latter was dead, and black damp was fast sealing the lives of the others. All were removed to the surface. McDevitt said that Minstone, Belcavage and himself got lost in an abandoned gangway, and numerous falls of coal cut off the current of air.

McDevitt started to dig, Belcavage and Minstone having succumbed. At last he found a hole in the side of the chamber through which he crawled and dragged the unconscious form of Minstone after him. He was going back to secure Belcavage when the black damp overtook him and he sank to the ground.

Thus far the fatalities are confined to five—Thomas O'Gara, whose body was the first recovered; Samuel Collins, Benjamin Thomas, James Doney and John Belcavage. The injured are still in a bad way and more deaths may occur.

IRELAND'S EVICTED TENANTS.

The Commission to Examine into Their Condition Has Been Appointed.

LONDON, Oct. 15.—The commission to examine into the condition of the evicted tenants of Ireland consists of Sir James Matthew, C. P. Redington, Edward Murphy, John Roche and Marrough O'Brien.

The work of this commission, as defined by John Morley, Irish secretary, in a letter to Justin McCarthy, will be as follows: "The commission will report on the number of tenants evicted in recent years, with such of the particulars of the evictions as they may deem relevant; on the number of such holdings relet or sold to other tenants, and on the circumstances of such new tenants or purchasers; on the cases in which evicted tenants have been reinstated; on the present circumstances of the tenants, and on any specified offers of settlement that may from time to time have been made, on the estimated costs of eviction to the exchequer, and the estimated cost to the exchequer and to the local rates of any proceedings resulting from the evictions, including the cost of extra police and incidental legal charges, and on such other facts and circumstances connected with the evictions as the commissioners may deem it expedient to report, and what means should be adopted for bringing about settlements and the reinstatement of evicted tenants."

COFFEYVILLE WAS HOAXED.

An Attack That Didn't Come and a Letter That Is a Fake.

COFFEYVILLE, Kan., Oct. 15.—Last night was one of the wildest excitement in this town. Every male citizen was under arms until head daylight this morning. Detective Dodge, of the Wells-Fargo Express company, wired here from Wharton last night that large bodies of desperadoes were starting from that point to Coffeyville with the avowed intention of sacking it in revenge for the killing of the Dalton gang.

At once the alarm was given and guards were placed at every point in the town, with instructions to halt every one who approached and to kill any one who refused to stop when ordered.

The night passed under an intense nervous strain, but this morning dispatches were sent to towns along the line of the railroad in the Indian Territory, and it was learned that there were no indications of unusual bodies of men.

It is now believed that the whole thing was a fake, got up by some men who signed Dodge's name to the dispatch. The letter received by Kloehr and signed "A Member of the Dalton Gang" is also believed to have been written as a scare.

The Mitkiewicz Case.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—Elliott F. Shepard appeared before the grand jury yesterday and testified in the case of Count Eugene Mitkiewicz, whom Lawyer Arthur L. Tomes, of 52 Classon avenue, Brooklyn, charges with having obtained $1,500 from him under false pretenses. Mr. Shepard was closeted with the grand jury for thirty-five minutes and when he came out of the room he seemed much relieved. He said he had no reason to believe that Count Mitkiewicz is dishonest, as the count had always been honorable in the transactions between them.

Swindled the Government.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—A gigantic swindle by means of which the government, the federal grand jury charges, has been defrauded out of $30,000, but whose ramifications have as yet not been fully entirely bare, has been discovered by secret service detectives. One arrest, that of Francis C. Hewitt, a city weigher, has been made, and it is said that he bribed ex-United States Weigher Edward W. Semonds from 1888 to 1890 to underweigh cargoes of sugar. More arrests will follow.

Cholera Raging in China.

HONG KONG, Oct. 15.—Cholera is raging to an alarming extent at Panchow. Hundreds are dying daily. Haters of foreigners have spread the report that some Chinese are traveling around in the pay of Europeans dipping in the wells. Consequently all strangers are imprisoned, and many have had their heads cut off and their entrails and hearts thrown into the river.

Lasker Loses to Hodges.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—The game between Lasker and A. B. Hodges resulted in a victory for the latter, Lasker resigning after forty-three moves. Hodges is champion of both the Manhattan Chess club and the New York State Chess association.

THE MESQUITE.

Characteristic Shrub of the Desert Region from Texas to Arizona.

In the accompanying cut are illustrated the foliage, flower and fruit of the mesquite, which is one of the most abundant shrubs of the desert region from western Texas to central Arizona. L. H. Dewey, in a report to the secretary of agriculture, says of this characteristic vegetation of the desert region mentioned that it varies in size from a straggling bush two feet high to a well formed tree fifty feet high with a trunk two feet in diameter. Away from water it seldom becomes much of a tree. It is of such slow growth that it is almost impossible to count the annual layers.

The wood is very hard and brittle, and it is commonly said that it is easier to break it with the back of the ax than to cut it with the blade. The mesquite forms the chief wood supply of the region. In the streets of San Antonio it makes probably the finest wood pavement in the country. The fruit of the mesquite, or mesquite beans, is prepared in various ways for food.

The Impurity of Ice.

The old theory of the purification of water by freezing is, as everybody knows, not in accordance with facts, and yet it is not dead, according to a writer in Science, to say that water is not purified at all by its crystallization. He contends that while all bacteria are not necessarily killed outright by the freezing of the water the germs are always decreased in numbers, and in a longer or shorter time their vitality is lost. Of the different kinds of ice, classified as snow ice, bubbly ice, and clear ice, the two former contain a far greater percentage of impurity than the latter, while the upper third of the cake in all cases carries a higher percentage of impurity than the lower two-thirds.

In investigations made by the Massachusetts board of health, in snow ice was found 81 per cent. as much bacteria as in the water itself. The ice as a whole contained but 19 per cent., and the clear ice but 2 per cent. The average results of all the analyses show that the total organic impurities of snow ice amount to 69 per cent. of those of the water, and the organic impurities of all the ice except snow ice, 18 per cent., while the clear ice contains but 6 per cent. The impurity of the snow ice is not due to the water alone, but the air as well must be looked to to account partly for the great increase of organic matter. The decrease of organic matter in clear ice from that originally present in the water itself would seem to argue perfect safety in using ice from any ordinary supply. The authority quoted carefully points out that it is not the number of bacteria alone that is to be considered, but their kind, and insists that no water supply that is not fit for drinking purposes should for any reason be used as a supply for ice.

Telephone Companies.

According to statistics furnished by the census bureau there is a marked increase of operating telephone companies in the last ten years. The total invested capital has increased from $14,686,787 to $72,861,726. The number of exchanges is now 1,341, against 437 ten years ago. The number of subscribers has increased from 48,414 to 227,357.

Curious Form of Pocket Dial.

A peculiar form of pocket dial is here illustrated, which is used by the peasants of the French Pyrenees.

This instrument has a movable head holding a piece of metal, which moves on a joint like the blade of a knife. For convenience in carrying, it is turned down as in Fig. 2 and placed in the cylinder. When in use the metal style is turned outwardly, as in Fig. 1, and the instrument suspended by the ring at the top so that the shadow of the style is thrown vertically upon the cylinder. The extremity of the shadow falls upon the curved line denoting the hour. The instrument must be adjusted for every month in the year, which is accomplished by turning the movable head till the style corresponds with the vertical line denoting the month.

Such a dial is very accurate at the best, but it doubtless serves the purpose of the French mountaineers, to whom the loss or gain of a few minutes is of no importance. The necessary curves can easily be calculated by any one familiar with the higher mathematics; but if any reader should attempt to construct such a dial Popular Science News, from which the foregoing description is reproduced, advises that the hour points be determined empirically by comparison with a good clock or watch.

BIRTHDAY GEMS.

The Story of the Stones, the Months and the Mineralogists Connected Therewith.

A modern enthusiast has clothed the old superstition in metrical garb and retold the story of the gems:

By her who in this month is born
No gems save garnets should be worn
They will insure her constancy,
True friendship and fidelity.

The February born shall find
Sincerity and peace of mind,
Freedom from passion and from care
If they the amethyst will wear.

Who on this world of ours their eyes
In March first open shall be wise,
In days of peril firm and brave,
And wear a bloodstone to their grave.

She who from April dates her years
Diamonds should wear, lest bitter fears
For vain repentance flow; this stone,
Emblem of innocence, is known.

Who first beholds the light of day
In spring's sweet flowery month of May,
And wears an emerald all her life,
Shall be a lovel and happy wife.

Who comes with summer to this earth,
And owes to June her hour of birth,
With ring of agate on her hand
Can health, wealth and long life command.

The glowing ruby shall adorn
Those who in warm July are born;
Then will they be exempt and free
From love's doubts and anxiety.

Wear a sardonyx, or for thee
No conjugal felicity;
The August born without this stone,
'Tis said, must live unloved and lone.

A maiden, born when autumn leaves
Are rustling in September's breeze,
A sapphire on her brow should bind—
Twill cure diseases of the mind.

October's child is born for woe,
And life's vicissitudes must know;
But lay an opal on her breast,
And hope will still those words to rest.

Who first comes to this world below
With drear November's fog and snow
Should prize the topaz's amber hue,
Emblem of friends and lovers true.

If cold December gave you birth—
The month of snow and ice and mirth.
Place in your hair the bright blue—
Success will bless what'er you do.

Definitions of Pluck.

A London journal asked for a definition of "pluck," and the following are some of the answers received:

Silent endurance coupled with cheerful energy.

The how from which are shot the arrows of heroism.

Pluck is that spirit in man which falls to understand the meaning of despair.

Fearlessness free from foolhardiness.

The chivalry of nature's knighthood.

That which enables one when fighting against adverse circumstances and knocked down to rise and try another round.

The heart of a lion in the body of a man.

The best remedy for despair.

The force which converts an ordinary man into a hero.

Resolute daring without caring.

An iron tonic for invigorating the nerves.

The absence of fear in the presence of danger.

The stuff that heroes are made of.

The courage to do the right thing at the right moment.

Irrepressible stout heartedness.

The indomitable "I will," before which the resistless die, but cowards dodge aside.

That which keeps a man up when he's down.

The pulse of enterprise.

The offspring of courage and the mother of success.

Bottled energy, opened by the corkscrew of emergency.

Volapuk.

Volapuk, or less universal language, as it is called, is the invention of a German Roman Catholic priest, Johann Martin Schleyer, of Constance, in Baden. He published his system in 1879. On account of its extreme simplicity its grammar contains no artificial genders, a single conjugation and no irregular verbs—it is very easily acquired. The Volapuk dictionary contains 14,000 words, while any imaginable new word may be easily formed by composition. No sound is employed which is not common the world over, every word is accented on the last syllable and the orthography is strictly phonetic. The name is from vols, of the world, and pak, language. It is estimated that over 10,000 persons in Europe have mastered it, and it has been tried to a considerable extent in America also.

The Life Saving Service.

The ocean and lake coasts of the United States are picketed with the stations of the life saving service under control of the United States treasury department. Sumner I. Kimball is general superintendent, with headquarters at Washington, and there is a corps of inspectors, superintendents, station keepers and crews extending over the entire coast line, together with a board on life saving appliances, composed of experts selected from the revenue marine service, the army, the life saving service and civilians. At the close of the last fiscal year the life saving establishment embraced 238 stations, 178 being on the Atlantic coast, forty-eight on the lakes, eleven on the Pacific coast and one at the falls of the Ohio —Louisville.

Origin of Belfry.

The word "belfry" had originally no connection with bell, as idea which is now intimately associated with the term. The first meaning given is "watch tower," from the middle English "berfry," a watch tower. The last part of this word is connected with borough, the second with free. As the practice grew of hanging bells in such towers the reminded themselves of the fact by changing the word berfry into the modern belfry.

Floriculture.

Floriculture, though carried on as a business in the United States for more than a century, assumed important proportions only within the past twenty-five years. In addition to the Society of American Florists, 265 state and local floral societies and clubs and 358 horticultural societies, aided by the agricultural and horticultural press, help to develop this industry to its present large proportions.

The Presidential Flag.

The presidential flag has a blue ground, with the arms of the United States in the center. It was designed and first used by President Chester A. Arthur in 1883, and is now the regulation flag to denote this industry to its present large proportions.

THE HOUSEHOLD.

QUICK MENDING.

Rubber Tissue Will Mend Cuts and Tears, Strengthen Thin Places, Etc.

To keep household articles in repair seems more than full quick methods of accomplishing any of the daily tasks commend themselves. A writer in the Springfield Homestead advocates the use of rubber tissue for mending. She says: It is to be had at the rubber stores, and is usually sold by the ounce. It is just what the name would indicate, a very thin piece of transparent rubber. It is sold at fifteen cents an ounce, which means a piece perhaps six or eight inches wide and twenty inches long. That, I think, is a small estimate for an ounce. The tissue will not cover up holes—that is, not satisfactorily—but it will strengthen thin or weak places, mend tears or cuts, in fact, repair any goods which has not actually lost a piece of itself, and it is very nice for hemming.

We will suppose there is a three cornered tear in a garment: First, cut away the frayed threads, draw the edges together either with invisible stitches on the wrong side, or by holding it with the fingers. Place a piece of the tissue, the right side, over the tear, and a piece of cambric or any other fabric desired over that, and press with a warm iron for a few seconds, but not hot. Press firmly and then remove the iron, and the mending is done. There must always be a surface between the rubber and the iron, or the former will melt and stick to the iron.

For hemming, if the material is a goods which will not ravel, turn it up once, slip a strip of the tissue just under the edge, and press. If the goods must be turned twice baste the narrow turn with long stitches on what will be the inner side, then turn again, slip in the tissue as before, and press it. This of course does not apply to wash goods, unless you wish to renew the patch. It is very useful in mending umbrellas; in repairing sleeves which are almost worn through; in strengthening broken places in made over goods and in applying patches to the seat of the small boy's pants.

In a Woman's Workshop.

Housework is much simplified by having everything conveniently arranged in a "woman's workshop," as Ohio Farmer phrases it in a description of kitchen conveniences, from which we reproduce a sketch of a corner of the kitchen, showing window, doors, sink, shelf, closet, utensils, etc.

A CORNER OF THE KITCHEN.

Beginning at the left we see the door leading to storm porch, then the window with pails under it, then sink with double door and shelf for kettles, pots, blacking, dough utensils, etc.; then the dresser with a tier of drawers, one for kitchen cutlery, steel, wheatstone, etc.; one for spices, etc.; one for oatmeal, etc., and one for sundries. Next toward the right or these drawers are two flour bins, holding a'soun a barrel each, resting on a long pivot or hinge at the bottom, so as to swing out at the top when the door is turned, and two hackmouse tight under the dresser when not in use. This device is common in city houses but rather rare in farmhouses, except the newer ones.

How to Set the Table.

An inexperienced housekeeper is advised by Harper's Bazar: Place the largest knife and fork to the right and left of the plate, the fish knife and fork farthest from the plate; the oyster fork may either be laid to the left of all other forks or on the oyster plate, while the soup spoon lies crosswise between the plate and the middle of the table, or to the right of the knives. A knife is unnecessary with salad. The fork may either be laid by the others or be placed on the table when the salad is served. Put a plate at each place, not in a pile in front of the carver. If the servant uses a tray the guest may take the full plate while the waiter deftly removes the empty ones. In some good houses no tray is used in passing filled plates. The salad should either be passed for each guest to help himself or brought in served on plates. As you may have a teaspoon by each plate if you need it, but the spoon for the tea should be in the saucer, and a spoon for any sweet or dessert may lie on the plate that holds the saucer containing the portion. Finger bowls are necessary for a breakfast fruit course. A fruit napkin is only necessary at dinner when the fruit served is of a kind that would stain the white napkin. For winter fruit small doilies alone need be used.

Apple Butter.

Take sweet cider from the press, not more than a day old, or alcohol will begin to form and the cider will have lost its fruity quality. Boil it down one-half and then add apples pared, cored and sliced. There should be, by measure, slightly more than half as much apple as of boiled cider. Cook slowly and carefully, skimming whenever necessary, and stir with a long wooden paddle which reaches the bottom of the kettle. The apple is broken into one lumpy mass when the marmalade. When it begins to break sweeten to taste. It is more wholesome and appetizing if left quite tart. Good lovers sugar is better than white. The California Fruit Grower says this can be kept any length of time in stone jars or wooden pails or firkins if properly cooked. The usual apple butter sold in groceries is made insipid by too much sugar. The old fashioned apple butter, less rich and more palatable, preserved the very essence of the apple. Season with spice to taste, if spices are desired, but the apple flavor is itself incomparable.

Cranberry Water.

The following is a refreshing and strengthening drink, and is often greatly liked by invalids: Pound a teacupful of cranberries and put them into a cup of water. Meanwhile boil two quarts of water, to which have been added a large tablespoonful of oatmeal and a shred of lemon peel. Stir the cranberries, add a gill of white wine to this and sweeten to taste. Boil for half an hour; then pass it through a jelly bag or flannel. Do not sweeten too much or the flavor of the fruit will be lost.

It Were on Him.

Can any one tell why it is that in all the pathetic stories of housecleaning with which the newspapers periodically abound, it is invariably the husband and father who is represented as the other sufferer? Here now is the latest of such voracious chronicles, clipped from the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Perhaps the mystery is explained by the excessively sympathetic nature of the average man.

Directly after breakfast the man of the house took his accustomed place in the sitting room with the morning newspaper, while his wife set about the housecleaning. She was dismantling the front room, and before he had finished the sporting column she had carried past him seven chairs, three tables, a desk, four footstools, all the pictures, a stool, a bookcase and sundry other pieces of furniture.

Then she lugged in a pair of steps and a pail of water, and began to clean.

"Do you want any assistance, Maria?" said the man, at that point, as he rose and folded the paper.

"Not just yet, dear," said Maria.

"Well, then, I think I'll leave you," said he, and he started for the office.

On the way he stopped to tell three men that if there was anything that were him in the skin and bone it was that confounded housecleaning.

"We are right in the midst of is now, and I tell you I'm about used up."—Youth's Companion.

The entertainment will be given for the benefit of the Creche, or Day Nursery, and the tickets are now on sale. The particulars will be duly advertised.

—"Rail gambling" is the latest vice to develop in India, and the police of Bombay and Calcutta are just now vigorously at work prosecuting rash gamblers in the local courts in an endeavor to show that the law includes this form of gambling. In Calcutta, the "outfit" of the rail gamblers is in a street in the Burrabazar. Here into a small tank, four feet square and six inches deep, an ordinary spout discharges rain water from the roof of a three story-building. In connection with this apparatus bets are made at the beginning of the rainy season as to whether or not the tank will overflow at a given shower, to the extent that rain will overflow it when the water spouts come down in proper trough-like style. It is alleged that on busy days the bazaar several lakhs of rupees change hands. This scarcely vice made way for the lazy mass.

BOTH FEET AMPUTATED

JOHN WELSH INJURED IN A RAILROAD WRECK.

He Now Lies in Muhlenberg Hospital.

—He May Survive, but, as Present, is in a Precarious Condition.

Two trains on the Philadelphia and Reading railroad collided about one o'clock Sunday morning, near Weston. John Welsh, a brakeman on one of the trains, had both feet badly crushed. He is twenty-six years old, unmarried, and lives in Philadelphia.

A CHOWDER PARTY.

The Republicans of the Fourth Ward Hear Mr. Reese.

The Fourth Ward Republican Club held a very enthusiastic meeting in their club room, corner Grant avenue and Second street, Saturday evening. The meeting had been previously announced as a clam chowder party, and at the attendance was very large.

B. F. Millington was elected chairman and Chester Grote secretary. The chairman then introduced Samuel W. Reese of Westfield, who delivered a most interesting address, which he made extremely interested for two hours. He brought out many new and interesting facts regarding the tariff, and illustrated all his remarks with pictures and statistics, which were thrown upon a large canvas by means of stereopticon. After clam chowder was served and enjoyed, other speakers followed. Everyone was happy and pronounced in favor of Harrison and Reid

PERSONAL.

City Clerk Frank W. Runyon returned home last evening from an enjoyable trip to Ithica, New York, where he has been for a few days past attending a meeting of Alpha Delta Phi Alumni of Cornell University.

Mrs. Fred S. Dunn of West Fourth street, died about eleven o'clock yesterday morning from consumption, with which she had suffered several years. She was the wife of the popular young electrician, and had only returned about three months ago from the West where they had spent two years. Mr. Dunn had given up very bright prospects in the East and moved to the State of Washington and then to California in the hopes that she might be benefitted. The funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3.15 o'clock in the Trinity Reformed church. The interment will be private.

Just Grazed by a Royal Blue Train.

A gray-haired man started to cross the track, at the Plainfield depot, this afternoon, just as one of the Royal Blue trains was passing.

He paid no attention to the warning cries of spectators and had put out his foot to step on the track almost in front of the locomotive when a man rushed forward and pulled him back just as the train whizzed by.

It was a startling escape. Four seconds, or lack of quickness and presence of mind of the rescuer, would have made a sad tragedy at the depot.

More Glory for Columbus.

Newark is preparing to celebrate the landing of Columbus after the fashion of New York. There will be a parade of 7,000 Catholic school children, reviewed by Governor Abbett and Bishop Wigger. This will be on Thursday. On Friday afternoon a bronze medallion of Columbus, presented to the city by Italians and placed over the entrance of the City Hall, will be unveiled. On Friday night there will be a big Catholic torchlight procession.

Baptist Sunday School Convention.

The East New Jersey Baptist Sunday school Convention will hold its Forty-second annual meeting to-morrow in the Piscataway Baptist Church at Stelton, N. J. In the afternoon, Col. Rufus K. Case, Superintendent of the First Baptist Sunday school of this city, will deliver an address about "The Superintendency."

Tries Marriage at Eighty Two.

It has just transpired that eighty-two-year old Abraham Hitchcock of Newark has married a week or two ago to Lucy Elmun. She is thirty years of age, and the daughter of a former housekeeper of the octogenarian. Mr. Hitchcock is a man of wealth, and this his first marital venture.

—A house on the derusilem road, back of Westfield, has been riddled with shot and every window and door broken. It has been vacant but two weeks. Mrs. Doris, of Westfield, is the owner. She has no clue to the rascals who committed the deed.

—Miss Louise Holmes of East Front street while riding her bicycle on Front street near the post office, this morning, was run into by a wagon which came behind her. She was thrown from her wheel and her chin very badly cut. Dr. O. L. Jenkins took several stitches in the gash.

CHAMBERLAIN FOR CONGRESS.

The Republican Convention a Marked Contrast to the Democratic One.

Saturday, in Library Hall, Elizabeth, Hon. Winfield S. Chamberlain, of Bayonne, was nominated in the Republican convention for Congress. The meeting was a marked and favorable contrast to the Democratic convention.

Mr. Thomas L. Belknap of Roselle called the meeting to order at noon. Charles N. Griffen of Elizabeth, was elected temporary chairman.

The temporary secretaries selected were Hayward A. Harvey, of Orange; William Murray, of this city; John J. Lowden of Elizabeth, and George S. Bogert, of Bayonne.

On motion of Mr. Frank Marsh, of this city, a committee on permanent organization was appointed as follows: Joseph B. Coward, of Plainfield, William Parkinson, of Orange, and Morgan Thomas, of Bayonne.

An adjournment until half-past one o'clock was then declared.

During the recess the delegations held their caucuses.

It was two o'clock when the delegates were in their seats again, and the committee on permanent organization reported the officers of the convention as follows:

Chairman, Charles C. McBride of Elizabeth; vice-presidents, Edward S. Taylor Essex county; Winfield S. Chamberlain of Hudson county and John W. Murray of Union county; secretaries, George S. Bogert of Hudson county; Hayward A. Harvey of Essex county, and Thomas L. Belknap of Union county.

The report was approved unanimously, and with applause.

When the townships were called for nominations Union county roll came first.

Mr. Bulskamper of the Second ward, Elizabeth, nominated John W. Murray; James Dodd of the Third ward nominated W. S. Chamberlain of Bayonne; and Mayor McGinlay nominated John W. Murray.

The chairman of the Bayonne delegation in an eulogistic speech nominated Winfield S. Chamberlain of that city.

A delegate from Orange nominated Elias M. Condit.

The names of the several nominees were applauded.

The first ballot was informal and resulted as follows:

Chamberlain, 49; Murray, 38; Ulrich, 16; Condit, 14—Total, 105.

Judge Ulrich then arose and in a neat little speech withdrew his name. He was applauded.

A formal ballot gave Mr. Chamberlain the majority of votes and his nomination was made unanimous by acclamation, amid great applause.

One Bayonne delegate said his city was a Democratic stronghold, but the respectable Democrats were uniting with citizens of the Republicans to down the gerrymandering and coal combine powers, represented by Democracy.

PLATFORM.

The Republicans of the Eighth Congressional district in convention assembled do resolve as follows:

First.—We cordially endorse the national platform of the Republican party adopted at the convention in Minneapolis, and the platform of the State convention adopted at Trenton.

Second.—The steady and remarkable prosperity of our country during the past two years, and statistics carefully gathered, by both Democratic and Republican authorities, conclusively prove that McKinley tariff law is a wise, practical application of the principles of protection to American industries, and we rejoice that experience of only two years of its operation has completely refuted the false predictions of its adversaries.

Third.—We condemn most emphatically the action of the Democratic party in both branches of the legislature in attempting to legalize and perpetuate a great and gigantic combination of coal land owning and coal carrying corporations whereby the cost of anthracite coal to the people in the large cities of this, has already been raised from four dollars and twenty-five cents to six dollars a ton, thus robbing the poorer of our State, rich and poor alike, of large sums of money.

Fourth.—We believe that corporations are engaged in interstate transportation we affirm the power of Congress to pass such laws as are necessary to protect the people from extortion, and demand legislation from Congress on the subject, and that the State has been unable to accomplish it, and it is essential to the preservation of the existence of a Republican form of government, that a remedy for the evils of railroad rule be found, and the right of local self government must be restored to the people of the several States, and the power of the control of our State must be regained by the people of the confidence and respect of our people.

Sixth.—We call upon the Democratic members upon the bright prospects of the Republican party, both in the State and Nation, during the present year, to lay aside all personal ambitions and pledge ourselves to work with energy for success, and to support our party candidates in order to operate with them in a united effort to add New Jersey to the column of Republican States.

Mr. Martine didn't come within a mile of getting the Democratic congressional nomination yesterday; but one thing is certain, he has drawn at this time each to a mortgage on the nomination next year for Senator. Senator that he will get it if he wants it. There is not the slightest doubt that he will have to put this office, in order to conciliate the factions that were put on war footing yesterday.—Elizabeth Journal.

DEMOCRATS IN CONVENTION AT SOMERVILLE.

North Plainfielders Called to Order. —The Delegates and Probable Nominees.

SOMERVILLE, Oct. 17th, (Special.)—The Democratic County Convention met at Somerset Hall this morning at 11 o'clock after a lively time spent in wire pulling, by the various candidates, along the streets.

At this writing the ticket most likely to succeed is: Surrogate, A. T. Hoff; Sheriff, Jacob S. Hoagland of Montgomery; Assembly, George H. Cramer of Branchburg.

The convention was called to order by Joseph W. Ballantine, chairman of the County Committee. Lewis R. Blackford of North Plainfield, was chosen for temporary chairman, and John L. Anderson of Bridgewater for secretary.

The townships were called for the naming of committees and when North Plainfield's turn came there was a lively racket.

Chairman Andrew Love of the delegation announced the name of D. J. Carney for member of the Committee on Permanent Organization.

D-legate Ladue objected on the ground that Mr. Carney was not a delegate.

Mr. Carney stated to the convention that he had been asked by the delegate elected to fill his place and under a resolution just adopted by the convention permitting the delegate to fill vacancies he claimed a right to act.

Chairman Blackford stated that the delegation had had no meeting to fill vacancies and he thought Mr. Carney had no right to act. Carney again arose to speak when the chairman called him to order. He took his seat for a moment, and then arose and waving his hands in the air, dramatically, declared he would not stand such gag rule. "I am here as a Democrat from North Plainfield," he said, "and I will have fair treatment."

Chairman Blackford repeatedly called him to order in a loud voice, while from the delegates there came various cries of "Go on!" "Sit down!" "Put him out!" Finally Chairman Blackford asked if there was an officer in the hall.

"Yes, there are plenty of them," exclaimed Carney. "But no Democrat will put me out. I propose to be heard."

Carney was finally calmed and Delegate Ladlow arose, to explain. He said there were two Democrats in North Plainfield, and there was a bitter strife between them. He belonged to neither, but Carney did. The citizens of North Plainfield, he said, would not support the ticket if these factions were going to use their tactics.

He had hoped that nothing of the kind would appear in the convention.

Mr. Love endeavored to explain how Mr. Carney happened to act.

The matter was finally referred to the committee on credentials.

The other members of the committee from North Plainfield were: Rules—A. Love. Resolutions—Joseph Blatz.

The convention adjourned until two o'clock.

The nominations are Cramer for Assembly, Hoagland for Sheriff and Huff for Surrogate.]

U. at a meeting in Newark last Thursday, stated that petitions had been signed by 300,000 temperance lecturers given in that department during the year, and that 85,000 had been raised at meetings in the 300 schools connected with the department. Mrs. Commander, of Trenton, for the Sunday-school department, reported that 200,000 Sunday-school children in the State, of whom 16,000 have been pledged and 5,000 have signed a pledge.

Driven to Suicide by Despondency.

Jacob Meyerhoff of Brooklyn committed suicide last evening at Rahway by hanging himself from a tree in the rear of the residence of George Hardt, on St. George avenue. He had been there for some time and was visiting his sister, Mrs. Philip Hilmes. Despondency was undoubtedly the cause of the act.

He was a fine-looking man, about sixty-five years old. The body was found by R. D. Gibby, who notified the authorities. Mr. Gibby is a relative of Mrs. H. N. Spencer of Somerset street.

Truth Had to Come Out.

[From the Chicago News Record.]

They walked along in the twilight dim,
When rather strongly, she said to him;
"I'll tell it to you, for you've got it all,
A pearl one little moment was—
But I threw it away again."

"It's in it now," he quickly cried,
And then he looked back to the pearl-strewn road,
"You know not how much I'm glad
To find it there, for I've got it all,
And it's a splendid one, indeed."

The man insisted; the girl shoved fears
Of hurting out into tearful tears.
"I'll tell you now, since you're so shockin';
"It's not my thoughts; it's my stockings;
So it is."

A New Counterfeit $5 Bill.

The Secret Service division reports a new counterfeit $5 silver certificate. It has the new back and is of the series 1891, check letter, C. Rosecrans, Register; Nebeker, Treasurer. The paper is fair and is an imitation of the new distinctive distributed fibre paper used by the Government, the fibre being imitated in blue and pink ink by the use of a pen. The face of the note bears a light impression, which gives the numbering, though good, a heavy appearance. The portrait of General Grant is poor, the nose being broad and flat, the lettering, with few exceptions, is good and the small scalloped scroll is excellent in workmanship and color. The green on the back of the note is very light and has a blue tinge, and the geometric lines are so narrow and indistinct that a little scrutiny reveals the false character of the note.

HERE is the secret of its unparallelled success.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Election Tricks.

Professor J. W. Jenks, of Cornell university, contributes to The Century an article on "Money in Practical Politics," which is enough to lift the hair of the average citizen who votes on principle and believes other men do the same. Only for the risk of suggesting to some eager party manager the Scriptural quotation, "Go thou and do likewise," we might mention one or two of the villainous tricks whereby elections have been won. For instance, an honest farmer there was once on a time that wanted to buy a bull of a neighbor who was a party manager. The two could not come to terms. But election day the honest farmer and his two sons came to town with their freemen's ballots ready for sale to the highest bidder. The bull was made a consideration, and for the three votes he was turned over to the man who coveted him, while from the campaign fund the party manager carefully put into his own pocket the price he had stabled for the animal in the first place.

Professor Jenks knows what he is talking about. Under promise that no names should be made public he secured pollbooks, notebooks and account books and made sure of his facts. He says that after all legitimate election expenses have been paid "in close campaigns in doubtful districts by far the largest part of the funds goes for the direct or indirect purchase of voters." In this opinion the majority even of politicians would like to be honest if they could, but they think that loyalty to the party requires them to use every means, fair and unfair, to win—that, in fact, is their idea of both honesty and patriotism. The general corruption is bad enough, but in justice to those who buy votes it must be said that even they do not enjoy it. If a better way could be found they would be glad, but since one set party resorts to disreputable tricks to win, the other must also, or get left. The idea of there being any abstract principle of statesmanship involved in a campaign is something that the politician cannot in ordinary times comprehend. He simply goes in to win.

The education of public opinion is the only remedy, in Professor Jenks' estimation. He tells us that in one election the party managers managed to get more money to spend money to buy votes. They could not trust each other, however, and on election day they went in pairs, Democrat and Republican, about the polls, each man keeping an eye on his opponent. Professor Jenks would like to see "honest, rational politics" taught as a branch in the schools and colleges.

An Example from Philadelphia.

Can a political club flourish without a bar? The Penrose club, of Philadelphia, is going to find out. It has abolished its bar. If now there is not enough enthusiasm in grandfather's hat to keep that club on its feet without liquid enthusiasm being added, the organization will perish. The eyes of the country are on the Penrose club.

For years it has been a sort of wayside inn to travelers who wanted a drink at the club's bar. Men who were not members shared in members' privileges to this extent. It is also whispered that little games in which money was passed were not unknown in the long evenings at the Penrose club. It began to get a name, and old soakers, whose personal appearance was not a credit to the front entrance or the neighborhood, haunted its doors. Then the directors met and considered matters. The club's finances were low, the reputation was following suit. They resolved and issued a mandate, "Abolish the sideboard." It was done, and the bums found themselves homeless.

Melancholy shades of their former selves, they haunted the scene of their late happiness and begged for respite, but twas no good. They could get only cold water and colder comfort. Affronted and disgusted, they fled. The Penrose club proper then moved into new quarters without any sideboard and without any blear eyed atmosphere about them and settled down to work for political success on the dry basis. The president of the club is likewise president of the Philadelphia common council.

American tourists who hereafter visit Westminster abbey will stand with reverent mien beside one more tomb—that of Alfred Tennyson, Baron D'Eyncourt, poet laureate of Great Britain, and in spite of all that the greatest poet of his century. His tuneful poems is perhaps "Sir Galahad;" his best long one "Locksley Hall." The whole world bowed at his feet. For certainly the last twenty-five years of his life his income from his poetry has been not less than $50,000 a year; yet the idolized poet was almost a misanthrope. Smoking the strongest tobacco he could get for fifty years would have made him that in any case, so we forgive him. But it was the disappointment of his life that he was not also recognized as the greatest dramatist of his time. He was not loved, as Whittier was, but his poems traveled round the world, and all mankind knew and prized them. He destroyed every scrap of paper out of which a memoir of himself could be made, saying, "They shall not rip me up like a pig after I am dead."

CHICAGO'S TURN COMES

The City Ready to Dedicate the World's Fair Buildings.

PROGRAMME OF THE CEREMONIES.

It Is Announced That 80,000 Men Will Participate in the Grand Parade—Vice President Morton Will Officiate in the Absence of President Harrison.

CHICAGO, Oct. 17.—Dignity, impressiveness and splendor will characterize the ceremonies of dedication of the buildings of the World's Columbian exposition at Chicago. Never before in the history of the United States has such a distinguished company assembled for any purpose as will gather on the occasion when the palatial edifices of the fair will be dedicated by Vice President Morton, who will act for President Harrison, who unfortunately will not be able to be present on account of the illness of his wife.

Preparations of elaborate description have been made for the great event. By concerted action of citizens the streets and buildings of the city, particularly in the business center and in the direction of the exposition grounds, will be tastefully and profusely decorated. Several changes have recently been made in the programme of ceremonies first arranged, one of the more important being the elimination of the proposed water pageant, "The Procession of the Centuries," with its twenty-four symbolical floats. The main features of the programme as finally agreed upon are the following:

Wednesday, Oct. 19—In the evening the citizens of Chicago will tender a grand reception and ball at the new Auditorium hotel to Vice President Morton. An orchestra of sixty musicians will render the programme of dances and a military band will give the promenade music. Mandolin orchestras will play in the banquet halls.

Thursday, Oct. 20—An imposing procession, indicative of peace, prosperity and patriotism, participated in by fraternal and other civic organizations, will march through the business portion of the city. The parade will be under the direction of General Joseph Stockton, of Chicago, and 80,000 people will be in line.

The night of Oct. 20 Colonel Henry L. Turner will give a reception and ball to the officers of the army, navy, Marine corps, National reserve, National guard and Loyal legion. The entertainment will be held in the First Regiment armory, Michigan avenue and Sixteenth street. On the same evening the Fellowship club will give a dinner to Vice President Morton and other distinguished guests.

The Grand Parade.

Friday, Oct. 21—This will be dedication day proper, and the national salute at sunrise will inaugurate the ceremonies. The procession of invited guests will be formed at the Auditorium hotel on Michigan avenue and proceed southward to Jackson park in the following order:

When forming at the Auditorium the mounted troops that are to act as escorts to the governors of states and territories and their staff will accompany them from the Auditorium to Washington park will take their position in the rear of the staff of the governor whom they escort, and when the line of march is taken up will proceed in their proper positions.

The national and state troops will have been formed in the meantime by brigades in line of masses on the east side of the field at Washington park. As the vice president approaches the grounds a salute will be fired, and on his taking the position opposite the center of the line the commands will change direction by the left flank, forming column, and pass in review.

The troops having passed in review will then become the escort of honor for the entire procession, and will continue the march via Fifty-seventh street to the exposition grounds; thence to the Manufactures and Liberal Arts building, where the troops will take positions assigned them, the officials occupying the platform prepared for them. As Vice President Morton's carriage passes through the exposition grounds a battery on the lake front will fire the national salute.

The night of Oct. 21 there will be a display of fireworks in Washington, Garfield and Lincoln parks, instead of in Jackson park, as at first intended.

Inaugural ceremonies in connection with the World's congress auxiliary will also take place the night of Oct. 21 at the Auditorium. Vice President Morton will be honored on this occasion by the authorities having reluctantly concluded that safety to life and to the exposition property, and the comfort and consideration to which the distinguished guests are entitled, preclude the possibility of admitting the general public.

Arrangements have been made for seating 90,000 people in the Manufactures building, and room for 35,000 more people will be provided. There will be 15,000 reserved seats for specially invited guests, whose tickets will indicate the portions of the hall where good. All other ticket holders, excepting 2,000 distinguished guests, will occupy seats in the order of first come first served. Accommodations have been provided for all expected representatives of the American and foreign press.

Mr. Breckenridge has declined John Boyd Thatcher's courteous invitation to make a speech at the dedication of New York's clubhouse next Saturday. He will make no speeches in Chicago dedication week. Friends of Mr. Thatcher deny that the invitation was sent to Congressman Breckenridge in a spirit of criticism of Chicago's cool treatment of the Kentuckian.

FASHIONS

AUTUMN WRAPS.

Capes of Cloth and Velvet—Cloaks with Watteau Plaits—Patrol Jacket, Etc.

Rumors to the effect that the styles of the First Empire—high waists, short sleeves, princesse skirt and the rest—appear to be substantiated by the materials now being shown in the shops. These seem to have been manufactured for the proper carrying out of the dress of that period. Short waists are already an accomplished fact.

NEW PATROL JACKET.

If the new autumn cloaks, with waists just under the armpits, be any evidence.

The models of autumn wraps are short round capes or cloaks, which, as the season advances, will be changed for longer capes of velvet or jackets over which falls in some cases a single cape, in others a triple one. In connection with jackets may be described the new patrol jacket, depicted in the cut. It may be made of any plain or diagonal cloth, but in this instance the material was blue serge, to match the wearer's dress, and the braid trimmings black.

The Watteau plait, which disfigures most women, appears on some of the new jackets and mantles. Long round cloaks for receptions fall in a broad Watteau plait. Coats for autumn are of three-quarter length and have large sleeves. Mink, if one may judge from the fur models displayed, will again be the fashionable fur this winter. It appears on some of the cloth coats, not only as a trimming for the collar and sleeves, but in the form of a deep border round the bottom. There is a tendency noted to the use of two kinds of fur on one garment. Large diamond covers of velvet are features of some of the new coats.

Both Legs Cut Off.

CONSUL RUIZ SWINDLED

Duped by a Shrewd Female Sharp and Her Confederates.

HE WAS HYPNOTIZED BY THE FRAUD.

She Induced the Old Gentleman to Adopt Her as His Daughter and Then Had Him for Over $20,000—A Forgery at Last Exposed the Villains' Scheme.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—Tottering and grey haired Consul General Domingo L. Ruiz, of the republic of Ecuador, was arrested on two charges of forgery and taken to the Jefferson Market police court by Detective Sergeant Thomas Hickey, of the central office.

During the brief proceedings before Justice Ryan the fact leaked out that Senor Ruiz, who is in his dotage, has been for some time in the hands of a band of conspirators, who have fleeced him out of $20,000. In their greed for more money these rascals induced him to indorse two $1,000 notes bearing the forged signature of Consul Gustavo Preston, Ruiz's superior, who represents Ecuador in Boston.

The principal in the conspiracy which has led to the downfall of the venerable consul general is said to be Mrs. Bertha Laws, his adopted daughter, who lives in great style at No. 228 West End avenue. A warrant was issued for her arrest, and she was apprehended and locked up in the Mercer street station.

The friends of Consul General Ruiz say that the old man was hypnotized by the designing woman, and that her own affairs, for the past few years. It is also asserted that Mrs. Laws is a shrewd sharper, who has lived in luxury at the old gentleman's expense.

A Shrewd Sharper.

This woman first became acquainted with Senor Ruiz through an advertisement, at the time his wife was in this country, while his daughter was traveling in Europe.

He advertised for a housekeeper, and Mrs. Laws, who was then plain Bertha Krundstat, of Stockholm, Sweden, answered the notice, and was soon installed as housekeeper. She quickly ingratiated herself with the old man, and kindly South American, and in a few weeks made him believe that she was his daughter by a woman other than his wife.

The senor, to widen at the discovery of her long lost father. She acted most affectionately toward the consul general, who is in his second childhood—the senor having turned his seventy-second year. She so worked on Ruiz that he finally believed her story, and to settle matters and avoid scandal in his family adopted the woman as his daughter.

This led to a sort of an estrangement with his wife and children, and the consul general took up his residence with the housekeeper. Next Bertha introduced the old man to her husband, William Laws, a handsome, gentlemanly appearing man, who is said to be at present in St. Louis.

Senor Ruiz was delighted to find out that his adopted daughter had married so well, and he lavished his money upon Mrs. Laws until $30,000 of his good money had vanished with surprising quickness. The old gentleman felt that it would never do for him to appear before the secretary of state and so last July, accompanied by Mrs. Laws, he went to Boston, where at 27 Grand street he met Consul Preston. He told the latter that he was hard pressed for $10,000, and as he had $7,000 he was anxious to raise a loan of $3,000 to make up the amount. Preston was only too happy to give him his note for $10,000, as Senor Ruiz was a friend of his and had given him the appointment of Ecuador's representative at the port of Boston.

The pair returned to this city, and Mrs. Laws introduced the old man to Simon Epstein, of 83 East One Hundred and Seventh street, known to the police as a person who had been engaged in shady transactions. He cashed the draft and Mrs. Laws pocketed the money.

But $3,000 was a mere bagatelle, and in a few weeks the funds gave out. More money was needed, and as Ruiz did not know where to get any the conspirators hit upon the plan of suspecting that if the truth came out the consul general's friends would pay the forged notes to avoid the disgrace. But in this they made a serious mistake, for the consul general's son and lawyer declare that they are cognizant of the conspiracy and know all concerned in it, and propose to have them punished.

Consul Ruiz's Story.

Senor Ruiz denies that he forged Consul Preston's name to the two $1,000 notes which form the basis of the prosecution, and asserts that last August his adopted daughter, in a happy mood, showed him the $1,000 notes and said "that Mr. Preston must be a real nice man." Knowing the consul general was financially embarrassed, he had sent them on from Boston. She had found them, she said, in an envelope which had come by mail. Ruiz was only too happy to get money, and believing the checks to be genuine indorsed them. One of these was negotiated by Epstein, who protected himself by a chattel mortgage on the furniture in Mrs. Laws' costly residence on West End avenue. The second one was negotiated with a man named R. Milo, who died on last Friday and was buried yesterday.

Before making their way to Mr. Preston the forged checks passed through the hands of Heyman Israel, owner of the burned Hotel Royal; Henry Polalsk, of 29 West One Hundred and Nineteenth street and the Misses Daniel Richter and Caroline Ruiz. When the check was pronounced a forgery Epstein transferred the mortgage and stock a scheme to the West End avenue house. Again the woman Laws, it is alleged, appealed to "Papa" Ruiz to save her from disaster. He was unable to obtain any more funds, so only saw criminal prosecution, which led to the consul general's arrest was begun.

Owing to Milo's death and the absence of important witnesses at the funeral the hearing was adjourned until Wednesday. Lawyer Price admitted that Consul Preston's signatures on the checks were forgeries. Ruiz was held in $2,000 bail. His son offered that sum in cash, but Justice Ryan refused to accept it. The money will be deposited with Police Commissioners and then Senor Ruiz will be released.

ENGLAND GETTING BOLD

A Reign of Brutality Inaugurated in Gilbert Islands.

INSULTS HEAPED ON AMERICANS.

A Studied Effort to Drive Our Merchants from the Islands—The Ill Used King Was on the Point of Sending a Letter to President Harrison.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 17.—Private letters received from the Gilbert islands dated Aug. 5 show that the British, who recently established a protectorate over the group in defiance of the king's wishes, are determined to drive out American merchants and to discriminate in favor of the Germans.

By this mail a strong protest has gone to Washington from Captain A. J. Kustel, who represents Wightman Brothers, of San Francisco, the leading American merchants of the Gilberts. Kustel was shamefully abused by Commander Davis, of the Royalist, who took occasion to express his contempt for Americans and Americans. King Tebureman drafted a letter to President Harrison, but at the last moment decided not to send it until further developments occurred. The letter says:

The King's Letter to Harrison.

"I have written you two letters before, telling you and your cabinet at Washington I would like my land to have the American flag. I have not had any answer from you whether I will get it, but I would like to know why we cannot get it. Now, an English man-of-war has come here and hoisted his flag on my land. I said to the captain, 'I have already given my land to the United States,' but he replied, 'Well, we have come first.' I told him I was waiting for an answer to my appeal for the American flag.

"I would like you now to finally answer whether you are going to let me have your flag or not."

The king was treated very shabbily by Captain Davis, who did not mince his words. The letter on appeal particularly angry over the articles in San Francisco newspapers which praised the king's conduct on his recent visit and commended his desire to bring the islands under the American flag. He said:

"The king's head is swelled. We will have to fetch him down a peg, —— him. I will show him who is master now. If he does not look sharp he will be out of his fat job. He has got to look after business more closely, and deal square, or I will put an agent in his place, and the king can live on taro as he used to do."

Captain Davis just before sailing away received a petition from three merchants, English, German and Chinese, asking him to compel the king to reduce taxes and to place some competent agent in charge. Heretofore most of the business of the islands has been done by United States Consular Agent Rick, as the two big American firms of Crawford & Co, and Wightman Brothers have controlled the copra trade on the island for twenty years. Now, however, Captain Davis has issued an order that the natives shall pay no attention to Rick, but shall deal directly with merchants.

A Most Arbitrary Briton.

The case of Captain Kustel is an aggravated one, as the British commander, without giving him a hearing, decided against Kustel in a case of alleged assault upon a native. What made this procedure the more galling was that he cursed Kustel in the most blackguardly way, and roundly cursed all Americans who were trading on the islands. Kustel represented a big American firm and also owns an important trading station of his own. The assault simply consisted in the capture of a native who had deserted from his schooner after signing articles. The native was a hard character, who had been driven out of his own island for crime.

It is common report at Butaritari that the British do not care for the Gilbert Islands, but will trade them to Germany for a slice of East Africa.

What lends color to this gossip is the great exertions made by German merchants on the islands to secure the native trade and the evident purpose of the British to drive out Americans.

Captain Davis is the most arbitrary Briton who has been known in the South seas. He swears like a pirate, and even in public assemblage every other word is an oath. He cursed the king roundly, and his abuse of Captain Kustel was fresh. All American prestige, which had been built up by enforcement of order and square trading, will soon be lost, as Davis openly insulted all Americans and advised the native chiefs to have nothing to do with them.

France and Germany at Odds.

LONDON, Oct. 17.—The Chronicle's Paris correspondent says that the French government suppressed a portion of a recent dispatch from Colonel Dodds, the French commander in Dahomey, in which the colonel accused Germans of supplying King Behanzin with ammunition and helping the Dahomeyans to raise earthworks of a European style. The alleged interference of Germans in Dahomey will, it is said, form the subject of a serious diplomatic controversy.

The Life Guards Exiled.

LONDON, Oct. 17.—The First Dragoon Guards regiment, Colonel Sayer, stationed in Shorncliffe, has suddenly been ordered to Windsor to take the place of the mutinous Life Guards. The Life Guards have been in turn sent to Shorncliffe. This action is unprecedented. The Life Guards have always been stationed in London or Windsor, and their transfer to the bleak cliff on the Kentish coast is about as severe a punishment as could be devised.

Moonshiner Short Caught.

LITTLE ROCK, Oct. 17.—An officer arrived in Little Rock today with Drew Short, a Columbia county (Ark.) moonshiner. Short is seventy-five years old and has been a terror to his community for several years. His distillery was in the mountains of Columbia county and was in full operation when the old man was captured.

General Dent Ill.

DENVER, Oct. 17.—General F. T. Dent has for several weeks past been very ill at the hospital at Fort Logan. He has, however, so far improved during the past week that yesterday he was removed to his residence in this city. General Dent is a veteran of the Mexican war and was a brother-in-law of General Grant.

Hamburg Nearly Free.

HAMBURG, Oct. 17.—There were nineteen fresh cases of cholera and five deaths. In the hospitals 399 patients are under treatment. The city probably will be declared free at the end of this month.

WEDDED FOR REVENUE ONLY.

White Married Widow Negle for $100,000 and Consolidated Exon.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—Charles A. White, representative of the London Illustrated News, was arrested in this city charged with the embezzlement of $50,000 from his wife, formerly Mrs. Negle, who resides in Cheyenne, Wy.

Mrs. White was a widow in Cheyenne, Wy., and had inherited a large fortune upon the death of her husband, a prominent merchant and politician of that city. His name was Negle. She went to Hot Springs last summer and there met White. She is forty years old, and when White offered to marry her for $100,000 she closed the bargain. White's idea was that the transaction was on the basis of spot cash, and because it was not conducted on those lines he is now in retirement.

Sheriff Kelly, of Cheyenne, who is here to extradite White, said that after White married Mrs. Negle he beat her and abused her, and compelled her to sign mortgages on real estate, and also got her to secure a note for $75,000, payable ninety days after date. Having accomplished this, says the sheriff, White left Cheyenne and took with him about $80,000 in bonds and stocks, which he disposed of in New York, the proceeds of which he kept.

White, the young benedict for seventeen only, is 5 feet 11 inches in height, of slight build, blond hair and mustache and dresses correctly. He is thirty-five, and even looks younger. He had 'the following to say for himself:

"I met the woman in Hot Springs. After a talk I made her a plain business proposition and offered to marry her for $100,000. It was purely a business arrangement. In the course of my conversation with her I said, 'I will give you time to consider well while I go to Europe.' During three months' correspondence she decided to marry me. She went to Cheyenne and had her attorney draw up an agreement to settle $100,000 on me. She made a payment of $25,000 in cash, but owed me $75,000, and on that debt I took bonds to secure myself. I like her and she is a nice woman."

WILL STAND BY DR. BRIGGS.

The Union Theological Seminary Cuts Loose from the General Assembly.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—At the meeting of the directors of the Union Theological Seminary it was decided by a vote of 19 to 1 to dissolve the relationship between the college and the general assembly of the Presbyterian church. By the decision the seminary again becomes the independent institution that it was before the compact of 1870, by which the general assembly obtained the power of vetoing appointments to professorships in the seminary.

By the vote the directors announce their approval of Dr. Briggs' views and their determination to stand by him. It is expected that the resignation of Rev. Dr. Booth, of the college, who cast the one negative vote, will be forthcoming, but as yet he has not stated whether or not he will resign.

This action on the part of the seminary is a direct outcome of the general assembly's refusal to indorse its transfer of Dr. Charles A. Briggs to the chair of Biblical theology.

Shot His Friend.

BROOKLYN, Oct. 17.—William A. Walsh got drunk last night and went into his friend Donovan's saloon. Donovan took him by the arm and led him into the hall, intending to take him home. In the hall Walsh drew a revolver and fatally shot Donovan just above the heart. Walsh, who is foreman of the blacksmith shop in the navy yard, was arrested.

The Brunswick Succession.

VIENNA, Oct. 17.—While Emperor William was at Schoenbrun the Duke of Cumberland tried to arrange a meeting in order that they might discuss the Brunswick succession. The court officials informed the duke, however, that the emperor was traveling entirely in his private capacity, and could not concern himself with political affairs.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 17.—Mr. J. A. Youngbusband, of Detroit, heretofore reported as indicted for complicity in the Iron Hall swindles, was not among the number indicted. He seems rather to have been the victim of than a participator in the Iron Hall swindles.

ANOTHER SKY SCRAPER.

A New Seventeen Story Hotel to be Built in New York.

This is the era of big hotels in New York. Within the past two or three years a number of magnificent hostelries have been erected in the vicinity of Central Park, and each successive one has tried to reach a little farther toward Heaven than the last.

The latest sky scraper projected is the Hotel Chamberlain, which is to rise on the site of the ill-fated Hotel Royal, burned last winter with a number of lives, on the corner of Sixth avenue and Forty-fifth street. The new house is designed to be one of the most complete hotel structures in the world.

The ground has a frontage of 100 feet on Fortieth street and sixty on Sixth avenue, and the hotel will be seventeen stories high, the distance from the curb to the ridge of the roof being 215 feet. The first four floors will be of Indiana limestone, neatly ornamented, the portion above that will be of buff brick with terra cotta trimmings.

The main entrance will be in the centre of the Fortieth street front, and will be a grand arch, appropriately ornamented, besides the office, with its various departments, the porters' rooms, etc., the first floor will contain on the Sixth avenue side the European dining-room coat-room and reception-room.

HOTEL CHAMBERLAIN.

There will be 218 guest rooms in the building, and in connection with each will be a toilet-box and a room in the big safe-deposit vault, one key to unlock all three.

On the floor there will be servants' room from which the guest can obtain anything from the hotel at a moment's notice. Each room will contain a telephone and a clock regulated by electricity. The telephone wire will run to a central apartment in the building where connection can be made with local or out-of-town 'phones as required by the inquirer. The proprietors say that there will be an ample supply of hot water in the entire building and every one will be supplied with steam heat.

The rooms will be finished and furnished in the most elaborate manner, and the cost of the building will be about $600,000.

NOT TOO LATE.

She Would Not Let Him Have a Caramel, but—

They sat on the shady side of a Lake George steamer, and though it was only a half-pound box of caramels, it settled the question of domestic authority. He was a thin young man with a nervous air. He wore a mustache that was even more bashful than himself, and his face was sprinkled that if there were any more freckles to come they ought to have been told to walk—standing room only." The entire suit of clothing was new, from his new and squeaky shoes to his thirty cent necktie, equally new, though not squeaky, and he showed himself on a steamer camp stool with all a country bridegroom's bashful fondness. As for his companion, it would have taken a 200-horse power imagination working under forced draft to think her pretty. She had large blue eyes and a prominently open mouth, from which projected several large and snaggy teeth, like rocks at low tide. After the fourth or fifth landing he went into the cabin and soon returned with a box of caramels. She seemed much pleased at this attention, and began the opening process immediately. When finally the caramel stratum was reached she extracted one, handed it to her husband, reserved another for herself, and then carefully tied up the box again.

"If we are careful of these, Charles, dear," she said brightly, "they'll last our whole trip. You know we must be very economical, sweetheart."

No answering gleam of oneness and pride played about those pink freckles. Charles ate his meager allowance of caramel in silence, watched hers disappear within her capacious mouth, and then he said, "Nice, wasn't it?"

"Delicious, dear."

There was a moment's silence.

"Wouldn't you kinder like another, Maria?" he suggested.

"I think we ought to save them, Charles, dear."

He looked longingly at the box with its white paper and gilt cord, and nervously twirled the bit of oiled paper, sole remainder of his caramel.

"Maria."

"Yes, darling."

"What was yours?"

"Strawberry, sweetheart," she said lovingly. "What was yours?"

"Fact is," he said slowly, "I don't know. Mebbe one caramel may be enough for your little rosebud mouth, but for me to ketch the taste it takes two. Give me another, Maria."

She did not move. She looked off dreamily over the lake and said quietly, "We musn't eat another till we get on the train, Charles, dear, but mebbe 'tain't too late to ketch the flavor now, sweetheart, if you taste hard."—New York Tribune.

A Middle Age Story.

Some time since the Middle Ages there was a village in Germany that had a gallows of its own. It, however, not having been used in many years, became unglued, so to speak, and fell into such a state of decay that it could not be repaired with out making a fresh gibbet.

Finally a highwayman was caught taking up a collection for the campaign fund or some similar purpose, and without any of the delay peculiar to modern justice the wicked man was condemned to be hung. All the accessories to a hanging were on hand except the legal gallows.

In the midst of this dilemma it occurred to the proprietors of the rickety old gallows that a neighboring village had a perfectly new gallows which the inhabitants of said burg had erected.

What does the party of the first part do but take their misdoer over to the town with the new gallows and suspend him therefrom until he showed all the indications of having reformed completely.

The affair was managed so quietly that the law carried into effect before the proprietors of the gibbet had time to apply to the country court for an injunction.

The next day the indignation meeting which appointed a committee to draw up a petition to the grand duke to whom the country belonged setting forth their grievances. The petition was clinched by the following irrefutable argument:

"Your royal highness will more readily perceive the injustice done us when we assure your royal highness that the aforesaid gallows was built by us for the exclusive accommodation of ourselves, our children and our children's children."—Texas Siftings.

Splitting the Difference.

"I'll sell you that cow for $30," said Farmer Meddergrass.

"I'll give you only $20," replied Pulsifer Weathervane.

"Well, I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll split the difference and take that."

"Good enough! Here's your $5. I'll drive the cow home right now."

"What are you talking about?" exclaimed Meddergrass. "I want $30 more."

"Why do you want $30 more? Didn't you agree to split the difference?"

"That's what I did; and that would make the price of the cow $25."

"Exactly; and when that $10 is split into two equal parts there are two $5es. Isn't that right?"

"Yes; but"—

"There's no but about it. You agreed to split the difference and take that for the cow; but if you want to go back on your bargain I suppose you can, as there were no witnesses. But don't you try to trade with me again, Meddergrass."—Harper's Bazar.

A Decided Refusal.

CORBETT AND MITCHELL.

President Nosi Says That Is the Next Fight the Olympic Club Wants.

A close friend of President Nosi, of the Olympic Club, New Orleans, relates this conversation with the President:

"With Jackson out of the question, who will be the next man to meet Corbett?"

"If money will bring around the meeting, Charley Mitchell will be Corbett's next antagonist. A meeting with Jackson is next to impossible. But I would gather up every dollar in my life and several thousand dollars to see Corbett punch Mitchell."

"Do you think it can be arranged?"

"I don't see why not. Mitchell has issued his challenge, and I know Corbett does not fear him."

"Would you offer a good purse for such a meeting?"

"Well, I should say we would. The Olympic Club will offer a $25,000 purse to begin with, and I think that this is a few thousands if necessary. In fact, if the man consent to a meeting the club will see that a few thousand dollars will not stand in the way.

"Have any overtures been made?"

"Not yet. Corbett's theatrical season is on now, and I don't think he will care to talk business until after that. When he does, though, we will see what can be done about it."

Wonderful Jay-Eye-See.

Perhaps the most remarkable event of this ultra-sensational period is the record made by Jay-Eye-See as a pacer. When the famous little black gelding was at the height of his career as a trotter, some eight years ago, his peculiar shuffling gait as he started away was always the subject of comment. This was simply the natural tendency to the lateral gait asserting itself, and now that Jay-Eye-See has been allowed to use his legs in his own way, the result is a mile very close to the best one ever seen in harness. If the gelding that trotted in 2.10 at six years, and then had to be retired apparently crippled for life, can come out at fourteen and pace in 2.05½ after a few trials, there is no telling what he might have done if his natural way of going had been indulged to the full when the Bye Era was in his prime. Jay-Eye-See is by no means the only champion trotter that inclined to the other gait. Mount Holly, Allerton, Nelson and Axtell had a similar tendency, which in the mare's case was only effectually stopped by the use of toe-weights.

Waistcoats of Leather.

Leather is much used for waistcoats and as a trimming for tailor-made dresses. A very fine gown, made on one of the newest models and admired greatly, was of gendarme blue serge, with open jacket to match, and double-breasted waistcoat of antelope skin. And the dress for travelling or country wear on sporting purposes was of russet brown cheek homespun, with a light blue cloth waistcoat.

Soft Towels Recommended.

Somebody says the great art of keeping your hands white and soft is never to use a rough towel upon them. Instead, handle them as gently as if they were glass, and use upon them just such a smooth cloth, soft and sympathetic, as might be applied to your finest glass cobjects.

A VERSATILE BEGGAR.

He was standing, bowed and broken, in the wailing wind and rain.
White his baby, his own wife widowed, furrowed, too, by years and pain.
With his stricken eyes turned upward to the silken lined mansion set on—
"Sir," I muttered, "is a symbol of all human fate.
There is naught for him but darkness; all the world's a world behind."
On his bosom was the legend:

Please to Help Me!
I Am Blind.

Later in the week I saw him in another distant town.
He was looking with mute pathos from his gentle eyes of brown;
He could see as well as I could, but affection's iron hand
Had tied up his vocal organs with a word from fiend or friend.
And I placed a silver quarter in his pallid hand and smiled,
Having read the sign he carried—

Help me!
I Am Deaf and Dumb.

When again I saw the beggar weary days and weeks had flown;
He was sitting, crushed and lonely, on a piece of curbing stone.
He could see and hear and gabble, and I said, "I have been sold."
And I passed on with the impostor with a William Muldoon bold:
And when I mailed him over till the natives were corrupted
Truthful words composed the placard—

Help!
I Have Been Paralyzed!

—Walt Mason in Fremont (Neb.) Tribune.

He Loved Children.

After she had seated herself in the ferryboat little Willie broke away from her and began rolling around in the dust and dirt before the ash.

"Ah, madam," whispered the old gentleman, "do not try to stop little Willie. I love to see the child have fun."

"Yes, indeed!"

"It does my old heart good," he went on as Willie turned a double somersault; "it carries me back to the early days. I tell you, ma'am, there's nothing like youth."

"That is true, sir," she said sweetly.

"It recalls to me, madam, the old farm, where I once romped, a care free mortal all the livelong day."

"Willie is such a good boy," she ventured as William yelled "Rats!" three times and threw up his hat.

The old gentleman suddenly let out a roar that echoed over the river.

"Wow-w!" he gasped, howling with pain.

"Mercy, me!" exclaimed the woman, starting.

"Why don't you teach your boy some manners? He has just stuck a pin in my leg!"

"But he is only a harmless child, sir,"

"Wow-w!"

"And his conduct carries you back to the early days."

"Wow-w!"

"And youth fades so quickly, sir."

"Wow-w, ma'am—wow-w, I say!"

"And it reminds you of the days down on the old farm."

"That will do, ma'am," he gasped, rising and glaring at us all. "I see, ma'am, that I am in the presence of a spoiled child—your sweet William. You spoiled we should all sing and dance, but you are mistaken, ma'am—mistaken to the utmost. I predict, ma'am, that your boy will grow up a burglar and a horse thief, and if he doesn't break his mother's heart before he is twenty-one my name is mud, ma'am, mud, I say!"

And he flung himself out the door. Then mamma took little Willie to her arms and did exactly what all mothers would under the circumstances.

She called William her darling boy and kissed him on the dirty nose.—New York Herald.

How Salty Was Out.

Used to think that luck was luck and nothin else but luck—

It made no diff'rence how or when or where or why it struck;

But several years ago I changed my mind, an now proclaim

That luck's a kind av science—same as any other game!

It happened out in Denver in the spring of eighty, when

Salty techned a humpback at win out ten.

Salty was a printer in the good ole Tribune days,

An natural-like he fell into the good ole Tribune ways;

So every Sunday evenin he would sit into the game,

Which in this crowd of thoroughbreds I think I need not name.

Bill Bird allowed the like av how he win was never seen!

An how he done it was revealed to all as follows, I ween:

He said he techned a humpback to win out ten

There must be somethin in it, for he never was alone,

An when he told the crowd about the humpback, how they swore!

For every sport allows it is a leetle game to box!

Agin the science of a man who's techned a hump I'm luck;

An there's no denyin luck was nowhere in it when

Salty techned a humpback an win out ten.

I've had queer dreams, an seen queer things, An alms taled to do

The thing that luck apparently intended I'd me lot:

Cats, fanatics, cripples, beggars have I treated with regard,

An charity subscriptions have hit me powerful hard;

But what's the use av talkin? I say as me again,

You've got to tech a humpback to win out ten

So, though I used to think that luck was lucky, I'll allow

That luck, for luck, agin a hump ain't nowhere in it now!

An, though I can't explain the why an wherefore, I maintain

There must be somethin in it when the tip's so straight an plain,

For I was there an seen it, an got full with Salty when

Salty techned a humpback an win out ten!

Mutual Advice.

The benevolent old gentleman was plainly from the suburbs—plentily farther out. He was equally plain that he was horror struck at the sight of a street urchin pelting away valiantly at a big, rank looking cigar.

"My dear child," he oxclaimed, "don't you know that will make you sick?"

"Not in per nacheral life" was the confident reply. "How's yer own?"

"Whsh! used to it, and at your age!" he moaned.

"Smoked ever since I was weaned," ejaculated the latter, inhaling copiously to emphasize his independence.

"And your parents allow it?"

"What's them?"

"Why, your mother."

"Ain't got no mudder."

"Poor boy! And your father?"

"Ain't got no feddier."

"No father! Well, let me give you some good advice, my boy; smoking as your age stunts the growth and produces deadly disease. It will kill you. Do throw away that wretched cigar."

"Not emy! Yer off yer nut, Whiskers. Smokin's good, prevents p'reis. Yeougiter 'a' tried it."—Detroit Tribune.

A Wise Girl.

She was a girl of wisdom. He said to her:

"Yes," she answered.

"Why?"

"Because it saves gas."

CITY COMMON COUNCIL

A SPECIAL MEETING HELD LAST EVENING.

For the Purpose of Apportioning the Taxes of Certain Estates, etc.—Fire Department Drivers to Have New Overcoats—Plainfield Water Supply Bill Ordered Paid—Mayor and Council to Inspect and Review the Firemen's Parade.

The city Common Council met in special session in the Council chamber on Park avenue last evening. President Glass. Councilmen Bird, Pink, Frazee, Marsh and See were present and Councilmen Cline, Erickson, Gallup, Johnson and Weber were absent.

The meeting was called to order at 8.35 o'clock.

Upon motion of Mr. Marsh, the reading of the minutes of the previous meeting and the regular order of business were suspended.

Mr. Marsh submitted a bill for the lots on East Second street which was, upon motion, referred to the Fire, Water and Building Committee.

Mr. Marsh said that Mr. George H. Babcock had paid $8,500 to the city treasurer and offered a resolution that the money be used to pay the bill for the school when properly audited. The resolution was accepted, all voting aye. Mr. Marsh then asked that the bill be referred to the Auditing Committee and that member be allowed to report. So ordered. The bill was referred and Mr. Frazee, who reported it correct. The bill was upon motion ordered paid.

Mr. Marsh said that Mr. Babcock preferred to have the deed to the No. 2 engine house property drawn without reference to the first mortgage, and offered a resolution to that effect, subject to the wishes of the mortgagee. The resolution was adopted.

Mr. Marsh said that arrangements had been made for the inspection and review, by the Mayor and Council, of the Plainfield Fire Department, this evening. The parade will form at seven o'clock on East Fourth street near the Crescent Rink. Coaches will be furnished by the firemen for the Mayor and Council, and they will lead the parade through the city, and then proceed to the Union County Country Club house on West Seventh street to review the department. The Fire Board and Fire Commissioner desired that all be present.

The bill of the Plainfield Water Supply Co., which had been referred back at the last meeting, was presented in its corrected form, and referred to the Auditing Committee. It amounted to $792.55 and was later ordered paid.

Mr. Marsh read the report reports regarding the apportionment of the taxes of portions of the estates of Daniel Martine and Josephine W. Pike, which had been made by a committee appointed for the purpose, at the request of the heirs, in order that certain of the property might transfer or otherwise dispose of their individual share of the estates. The reports, with the recommendations of the committee, were upon motion adopted.

In connection with each report a resolution was offered that the maps of the designated portions be received and filed with the reports. So ordered.

Mr. Fisk said that there was a large tree in the middle of Arlington avenue which should be removed. Before it could be done, however, the curb line must be established and the curb ordered laid. He offered a resolution to that effect which was adopted.

Mr. See reported back the city clerk's report, and requested of Mrs. Sarah A. MacDonald, Charles S. Guion and Frederick Hughes regarding the assessments for benefits and damages in the matter of widening Peace street, and offered a resolution appointing Councilmen Bird, Case and Fisk as special commissioners to consider and settle the damages in those particular cases.

A resolution to appropriate $60 for the improper purchase of overcoats for the drivers of the Fire Department was adopted.

The meeting adjourned at 9.05 o'clock.

Where is the Young Canadian?

Chief of Police Grant received a telegram yesterday from Superintendent Byrnes of New York, asking for information about a young man named Henry Sperling who was detained by the police of that city. He had been acting very queerly, and had said he was employed by Mr. P. O. Herring, who lives in this city. The telegram also asked if he was related in this city on any criminal charge. Mr. Herring said he knew no such person. Chief Grant was very much interested in the case, because his nephew, Jacob Sperling, who lived for a year in this city, had just returned from Canada in company with a young Canadian. The young men reached New York during the Columbus celebration and remained to see the sights. Somehow the young Canadian became lost, and although Mr. Sperling remained two days in the city looking for him, he could find no trace of his whereabouts, and so went to his destination in Ohio alone. The young man was a clever, industrious fellow, about twenty-three years of age, and had about one hundred dollars. The person referred to is Supt. Byrnes' telegram is not the missing Canadian, and his whereabouts are still unknown.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. Obitz of Somerset street started yesterday for a few days' trip to Niagara Falls.

The following is the result: Chairman, Charles Place; Secretary, Justus H. Cooley; Delegates, Newton D. Smalley, Justus H. Cooley, Chas. P. Sebring,, B. A. Hegeman, Jr., William C. Smith.

BREVITIES

—Owing to the fire parade this evening there will be no meeting of the Republican Association as previously announced. It will be called again for an early date.

—A regular meeting of the Plainfield Camera Club will be held this evening at eight o'clock. The proposed amendment to the constitution and by-laws is to be acted on.

—"Dr. Bill" proved to be the laughprovoking play expected at Music Hall last evening, and the large audience present seemed to greatly enjoy it. Mrs. Blake received two bouquets from admirers in the audience.

—There were seven bonfires left burning in the neighborhood of First place after sundown last evening against the city ordinance. Special Officer Cadwallader Jones put them out. These burning piles of leaves are very apt to blaze up during the night and cause the fire department to be called out.

—The entertainment at the Boys' Club last night was excellent. Rev. Father Smith addressed the boys. The music and recitations were good, and from the face of there being 181 boys present showed they appreciated the entertainment. Miss Slevin and Miss Leary played a duet on the piano, Miss Schaefer sang, Miss Moore recited and Mr. Colliman made melody with a banjo.

—Leal's School foot ball team had a practice game yesterday afternoon on the Crescent Rink foot ball grounds. On Wednesday afternoon at 3.30 they will play the Piggry School team of Elizabeth and on Saturday afternoon they will play with the Latin School team of Brooklyn, which last Saturday defeated the crack Polytechnic team of that city by a score of 16 to 0.

—A slight change has been made in the route to be taken by the firemen in their big parade this evening. On account of Peace street being torn up for the laying of the street railway tracks, the line, instead of moving from Seventh street along Peace to Front, will go along Peace street from Seventh to Fifth, thence to Park avenue and from there to Front street, where they will bedismissed.

—Young men and boys with a good common school education who want to better their condition in life ought seriously to consider the evening classes offered by the Young Men's Christian Association in the short-hand class that will meet at the Y. M. C. A. rooms this evening at eight o'clock. All interested are requested to be at the rooms to-night when there will be told of the success in business that has come to former members of this class through their knowledge of this useful art.

CORRESPONDENCE.

HENRY GEORGE IDEAS RESPECTING METHODS OF TAXATION.

A Reply to W. B. S. T.'s Criticisms—Prof. Andrew D. White's Opinion.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—Your correspondent "W. B. S. T." is particularly unfortunate in his attack, made in your issue of the 5th, on "Somers's" letter concerning the Single Tax published a few day before. You probably have noticed, however, nor, if you had, would it be worth while to set it aside to consider extensively all the errors he falls into. Principally the correction of our parent error involves that of all the others.

Speaking of the difference between a tax on land and a tax on the value of land, "he says by implication that it is just the difference between twenty-five and five dollars," etc. Evidently "W. B. S. T." so regards it. Now, let us see. A speculator holds an acre of land just as the city is growing to it, and in about three miles out holds fifty acres. Now impose a 1 per cent. tax for instance, or 1 per cent. average. The farmer would in that case pay fifty times the tax of the speculator; in other words, the farmer would be taxed out of existence.

Now change the method of taxation; impose a tax on the value of the land. The speculator's acre would then pay a heavier tax than the farmer's fifty. Does "W. B. S. T." see the difference? If not, can he say why a tax, as far as land is concerned, should not be levied in the latter way? Is the proposition in any form of wealth? And does not our tax law purport to levy upon every man in proportion to the amount of his wealth? Could the speculator, if he holds valuable land, be justly assessed at the same proportion of its actual value as the farmer's is? What the speculator usually does is this: He goes to the assessor and says to him, "You ought not to tax me so much on my unused land, as I am getting no income from it." The obliging assessor assents and reduces the amount of the assessment. The consequence is that the rest of the community pays a part of the speculator's tax, and this it does for every piece of unused land in the town. Is this in accordance with the principle of justice? Is the assessor so discriminate in favor of a class? The speculator's claim, moreover —that his land is yielding him no income—is conspicuously untrue. Every house put up in the town, every store or factory opened, every increase in population, adds to the value of the speculator's land, and he is sure to in twenty years he will sell his acre and appropriate all that added value—a value conferred upon him by the whole community.

If a stranger, coming to settle in North Plainfield, should fasten up an iron box just up in the tree, every store or factory through and request every resident to drop into it five or ten cents every time he passed it, he would be a sorry owner of the box might get rich more quickly, they would probably knock over his box completely and scramble it into the brook. Yet these same inhabitants are doing for the land speculator what they would so vehemently refused to do for the box owner.

It is this value which accrues to land is conferred by the community, this clearly is the fund which the community should appropriate for public purposes. And, if it should take one dollar of it, the logic of the situation requires that it should take no more. To tax it is to be deprived from this source would in that case be so large as nominally to free the land speculator from all taxation. Just here "W. B. S. T." will probably say: "Yes, but if you do that, by your own admission some one of the factors of other form of wealth so free. That, surely, is not just." If he will consider he will see a little more closely, he will see that if we tax into the public treasury the entire rental value of land, we have taxed every form of wealth without exception and taxed it, too, exactly at its value.

First, let us settle what wealth is. It is not money. To prove this, give a man a million dollars and shut him up with it where he cannot spend it. He would die of starvation as the veriest pauper would. He has a million dollars, nevertheless.

Wealth, therefore, is not money, but what money buys. It is food, clothing, houses—all the thousand and one things that minister to men's needs and desires. Where do all these things come from? To determine this, let a thousand men shown without money, or any thing in a new country and watch the process or mechanism of industry from the beginning. They will apply their labor first to the surface of the globe to satisfy their physical needs. They will cultivate the land, dig in the mines, fish in the rivers, hunt in its forests, etc. The surplus which the bounty of nature thus yields above their physical needs, their artificial needs, they will exchange with each other, through subdivision of labor, for higher forms of wealth, and so in time will come to have food, clothing, houses, books, pictures, etc.—all the multitudinous forms of wealth that characterize the civilized state. And these all come from the original application of man's labor to the surface of the earth. That surface, in other words, is the source of all this wealth.

The crowding together of people in towns and cities in order that the process of exchange which results in wealth as the civilized state may be most economically effected, gives value to land. A tax laid on the value of land therefore is a tax laid on wealth at its very source and would take toll from every form of wealth produced, and this tax would rest in the elemental state—before it had become differentiated into the thousand forms under which it now appears.

Perhaps "W. B. S. T." will say: That may be true, and might be just if the tax had been laid on in the beginning; but now wealth has been separated into so many forms and so distributed that the value of land would not find all the various forms of wealth to make its levy on them.

But it is precisely this ridiculous thing that we now require our assessors to do. They are supposed to find out and list for taxation every kind of wealth a man possesses. This is manifestly an impossibility and a farce. Could we but have a small army of assessors and unlimited power to do it, and should we begin with the slightest settlement, the average town or village has does not even attempt to do it, but simply assesses himself with putting down personal property on his list at a mere nothing and levying taxes upon it according to law to any rate. This is so well understood by those who have given any attention to the matter that it is hardly possible to frame a form of words—real estate pays all the taxes, in the State of New York alone the amount thus assessed and collected under this system escapes taxation altogether is set down by the State Board of Assessors at the enormous total of $5,500,000,000, while the State Comptroller estimates it at a still higher figure, $6,000,000,000. Now, if it had been remembered that all wealth comes originally from the land, from the earth, by the application of man's labor to the way described and the tax had been laid there, at headquarters, the injustice in the matter of the incidence of taxation could never have occurred. Yet the injustice is continued from year to year and not only in the State of New York but in every other.

An interesting fact in this connection may be noted. Personal property in the State of New York, notwithstanding the increase in the population and the vast increase in the value of real estate, fell off in value, according to the assessor's books, in twenty years—from 1869 to 1889—$40,000,000. It is safe to say that it will continue to fall off so long as each man continues to be under the present system be virtually "a his own assessor of this particular kind of property.

What answer would be given to the query regarding the Single Tax? Land being liable to have it its full annual value taxed into the public treasury, would not be taken up by any man unless he intended to use it. The farmer now living in existence or three miles out, in the solitude of the country, deprived of the society and of the many parts of the advantages of civilization—those which come of social contact—would move close in to the towns, and communities would be more compactly built up without the ever-increasing crowding which now obtains, an element somewhat to be dreaded. Made in all matters of paving, sewering, lighting, police and transportation. But a few years would be sufficient to correct these. As the largest number of laborers in any community are, naturally, to devote themselves to agriculture, those of the class who are now crowded into cities and towns would, after though lack of remunerative employment, would return to their original occupation, filling the country with a healthy abundance, lowering thereby the cost of living for all, and creating through the spending of the latter way a steady, increasing demand for the product of factories and all the other instruments of secondary labor. Prodoes of society would not only tend increasingly to eliminate pauperism and its concomitant evils and crimes, by providing steady employment for all, more important still, it would unerringly eliminate the professional idler—the man—in exact proportion to the amount of labor each had contributed.

Indeed "W. B. S. T." knowledge of Mr. George's motives may be discussed as irrelevant, while his attempt to depreciate his work in the line of his record. Andrew D. White, ex-President of Cornell University and at present Minister to Russia, a writer of high scientific attainments, probably "W. B. S. T." will not question, introduced Mr. George a few weeks ago to an assemblage of representative citizens of New York as the author of "the most pronounced literary success of the century."

Now, if "W. B. S. T." will reflect that such a characterization necessarily implies in "Progress and Poverty" a combination of the elements that constitute literary excellence of subject, ability of treatment and literary excellence—that it places it also in a competition for pre-eminence with the other book published during the last ninety-two years and confidently invites a similar test, he will see that he will be disposed during the remaining eight, he will begin to suspect, perhaps, not only that his "Progress and Poverty" is a trifle misplaced but that a careful re-reading by him of these pages would not be lost by his awakened apprehension certain important truths which thus far he has overlooked.

A RECEIVER FOR THE COAL COMBINE

Chancellor McGill Wants the Court Obeyed.

TRENTON, N. J., Oct. 18, (Special.)—Chancellor McGill of New Jersey, has just made an order which is giving the coal barons of the Reading combine a good deal of anxiety. He issued an injunction last May restraining the Reading Railroad from advancing the price of coal, but McLeod paid no attention to the mandate of Court. The combine went right on putting up the price of coal, in defiance of the Chancellor's order.

Now Attorney-General Stockton has come forward with an application for the appointment of a receiver for the Reading road to enforce the former decree of the court, and to restrain the combination from carrying any more coal in the State of New Jersey until the former rates have been restored.

EDITORIAL NOTES

A Chance for the Colored Girl.

Wages for domestic service are good at all times for good service. There is a prospect now that they will be higher than ever, for a time at least. The stopping of immigration during the cholera quarantine will cut off the vast supply of Irish, German and Scandinavian hired girls. There is a scarcity of satisfactory domestic help, and there are at the labor agencies of the immigrant ports always orders ahead for new girls on their arrival. These have almost supplanted the colored domestic servants of the old time. There is an easily understandable feud between Irish and negro.

If now the colored girl is wise she can step in and regain the lost ground and fully occupy it. Then, when immigration starts in again, these, our own American citizens, will be the ins, and the outs cannot displace them. It is a fact that colored servants are more attached to those whom they work for than the foreign girls are. They are also more polite and respectful in their manners. On the other hand, the colored girl is apt to be lazier and less cleanly than her white rival, though in both respects some of the creatures who cross the ocean in the steerage are hard to beat.

Perhaps freedom has made the colored woman more industrious and taught her something of the mysteries of Yankee neatness. Naturally she is a good cook. At any rate there is a great opportunity now before her, if she has the shrewdness to see it.

The Right Kind of Church Union.

There is a growing conviction among thoughtful church members that Christianity means nothing less than that Christians should take hold of the present sociological problems which disturb the world and solve them. They believe that the application of true Christian principles to the questions of labor, of pauperism, crime, etc., will settle them once for all. To this end members of all denominations they believe should unite in one grand Christian brotherhood for work.

The nucleus of such a noble organization is already formed and is called the Christian Unity brotherhood. This society asks that in all the church congregations of America the last Sunday in October, the 30th, be devoted by the pastors to a sermon on the brotherhood and co-operation of all Christian people for one grand, farreaching effort to make the world better. W. T. Stead, editor of The Review of Reviews, and his grandniece, Dr. Albert Shaw, of the American edition of The Review of Reviews, have taken the work earnestly in hand. In Great Britain Mr. Stead has given many addresses to the members and ministers of various denominations on the furtherance of this work of the brotherhood.

The idea is not that any member of a Christian church should swerve a hair's breadth from his allegiance to his own denomination, but that all church members should unite in a society for general and reformatory work on the basis of the universally recognized principles of ethics. They are to join hands till, in the words of the eloquent Bible saying "The hearts of all the people were moved as the heart of one man." Thus joined they will attack rotten municipal government, drunkenness, gambling and other evils.

In several cities of Great Britain "civic centers" have been formed for work; also in our own country—in Washington and Philadelphia. This brotherhood of Christian unity will work valiantly till it turns the slums of a city into clean, decent, well lighted streets. It will establish public bathhouses and gymnasiums, as well as large playgrounds for children, with more parks for both young and old. It will start free newsrooms and move in the interests of better homes for poor working people, and also for shorter hours of work for the overburdened. One of its aims will be the election of better public officers. If all this is not Christianity, what is?

The tragic ending of the career of the Dalton gang shows anew that crime does not pay. They were all three young—the eldest only thirty—strong, bright, capable men. The world had never used them ill, consequently they could have had no grudge against it. They might, with their opportunities, have become wealthy and respected men—leaders in their community. But one thing prevented all this, and that was the devilry born in them. Pure cussedness, and nothing else, drove them to rob and murder. It is the only way of accounting for them. Coffeyville, Kan., is to be congratulated on putting them out of the way. The three brave men who gave up their lives to rid the earth of those monsters will be remembered and honored as martyrs to the cause of public safety and order.

THE MINER LAW IS VALID

A Unanimous Decision Given by the Supreme Court.

MICHIGAN'S VOTE WILL BE DIVIDED

The Republicans Claim They Will Be Able to Elect Ten of the Fourteen Electors, but the Democrats Do Not Concede This—Status of the Campaign.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—The United States supreme court has affirmed the ruling of the state court of Michigan in the case involving the constitutionality of the Miner election law. This decision is in favor of the Democrats. By the Miner law, which this decision upholds, presidential electors are chosen by districts.

The supreme court holds that the law of Michigan dividing the state into districts for the election of presidential electors is invalid only so far as it conflicts with the act of congress of 1871, relating to time of meeting of the electors. The act is not obnoxious to the provisions of the constitution conferring upon the state legislature the power to fix the manner of choosing electors. The view of the court will be stated at length later by Chief Justice Fuller.

The following is the full text of the preliminary opinion rendered by Chief Justice Fuller in the Michigan case:

The Preliminary Opinion.

No. 1,179.—McPherson et al. versus Blacker, secretary of state. In error to the supreme court of Michigan. We are of opinion that the objections to act No. 26 of the public laws of Michigan of 1891, and those matters of local law, having been ruled by the supreme court of Michigan adversely to plaintiffs in error, those conclusions in that regard we are not authorized to reverse, the decision of the federal questions involved was necessary, and the validity of the law so repugnant to the constitution and laws of the United States having been drawn in question and decided, and the decision being in favor of its validity, this court has jurisdiction under section 709 of the revised statutes. The judicial power of the United States extends to all cases of law and equity arising under the constitution and laws of the United States, and this is a case so arising for the reason first stated

We concur with the supreme court of Michigan that so far as act No. 3 conflicts with the act of congress of Feb. 3, 1887, in the particulars pointed out, and in respect of which congress possesses the power to legislate, it is inoperative only to that extent, but that the act is not for that reason void and may stand as so modified.

We also hold with that court that in view of the language of the second clause of the first section of article 2 of the constitution, and the contemporaneous and subsequent construction of that language in practice, this act cannot now be held invalid for want of power in the state legislature to provide for the appointment of electors of president and vice president of the United States as therein provided, and we are clear that that clause of the first section of article II has not been changed by the fourteenth amendment to the constitution, and that this act is not obnoxious to objection on the ground of conflict with that amendment.

We make this announcement at this time because of an exigency suggested as apparently requiring immediate action under the state statutes, and will hereafter file an opinion stating fully the grounds of this decision. The judgment of the supreme court of Michigan is affirmed and the mandate will issue at once.

The Result of the Decision.

The decision means that Michigan will cast in all probability four of her fourteen votes for Cleveland and Stevenson. Some of the Democrats claim that they will get seven votes. Each congressional district will choose an elector and each party will have as many of the district electors as it carries congressional districts. The two electors at large are also to be chosen by districts, but by great districts taking in half the state instead of congressional districts. The Republicans insist that they will carry both of these greater districts and no fewer than eight of the congressional districts.

Blaine on the Campaign.

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—Ex-Secretary James G. Blaine's visit at Ophir farm, the residence of Whitelaw Reid at White Plains, is at an end. He is now at the Fifth Avenue hotel, where he will remain until the end of the week and possibly longer.

"In the campaign of argument and discussion such as this has been," said the Maine statesman to a reporter, "everything is in our favor, for we have far better sides of the great questions before the people."

"Besides this President Harrison has given the country an able administration and one that appeals to the people by whatever standard it may be tested.

"The administration here, in itself one of the greatest arguments for Mr. Harrison's re-election. All that is now needed to insure a Republican victory and the continuation of prosperity throughout the country is for the Republican voters to cast their ballots. With our full strength out I regard our success as almost certain."

Carter Had Been at Work.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 18.—When the convention of the Colored Tariff Reform league —supposed to be a Democratic organization—was called to order at Masonic hall the delegates present were seen to be prominent colored men from various parts of the country who have always acted with the Republican party. Chairman Carter had been at work. They went ahead and organized by electing A. N. Sweeney, of this city, chairman; Perry Carson, of Washington, vice chairman, and Horace Morris, of Louisville, and C. J. Perry, of Philadelphia, secretaries. The usual committees were appointed, and resolutions indorsing President Harrison and the Republican platform were adopted. The Democrats split off and had a meeting of their own.

Magee Fails in Alabama.

BIRMINGHAM, Oct. 18.—Mr. Magee failed to unite the Republican factions and will leave for the north. Today's meeting of the Stevens' faction resulted only in the withdrawal of Waugh from the congressional race and three members of the committee. Another congressional candidate will be named and the contest fought to a finish.

Reed to Speak in New York.

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—It is announced at Republican headquarters that ex-Speaker Reed has telegraphed his willingness to speak on Oct. 22 and 24 in New York, Chairman of Speakers Rahn assigned him to Albany on Oct. 22 and Syracuse on Oct. 24.

Carrol Will Fight Page.

PROVIDENCE, Oct. 18.—Mayor Carrol, who was forced out of the congressional fight, now intends to run for mayor of Pawtucket in order to defeat Congressman Page, who beat him in the convention.

Judge Caldhas Denies It.

SEATTLE, Wash., Oct. 18.—Judge Calhhas says the report that he got a letter from Gresham saying he would vote for Harrison is totally without foundation.

jurisdiction of the United States elected officers, and the result of the election was as follows: Grand commander, J. C. Batchelor, of New Orleans; lieutenant grand commander, Phillip C. Tucker, of Galveston; grand prior, Thomas Hubbard Caswell, of San Francisco; grand chancellor, Theo. Erasmus Car, of Leavenworth; grand minister of state, Chief Equlez Long, of Wheeling, W. Va.

Dr. Batchelor, who was promoted to the highest position in the gift of the organization, is a Canadian by birth, but early in life moved with his parents to New York state and subsequently went south. After graduating in medicine he entered the army and was a surgeon in the Indian war in Florida and also in the war with Mexico.

During the civil war he entered the Confederate service and held the position of surgeon general of the forces of Louisiana. At the close of the war he settled in New Orleans, where he has since resided. His present position in the order of the Scottish Rite has come after many promotions during a long membership, as he is now more than seventy-four years of age.

FASHIONS

THE WORLD OF FASHION.

MATTERS WHICH WILL INTEREST OUR FAIR READERS.

Styles for Autumn and Winter—Shorter Skirts Coming—A New Walking Dress—Fashions in Fine—Hints for the Boudoir—New Dress Materials.

The welcome announcement is made in all the best shops that skirts of street dress will be short enough to clear the ground. Those seen on the newly imported gowns are close-fitting and very simply trimmed. Some are fitted by narrow gored breadths, and others retain the bell shape, with darts at the top and sloping back-seam, precisely as it is now worn. The same modes are given the new French skirts, as the trumpet, the umbrella, the corset; but the motive remains the same for all, the top smoothly fitted in front and on the sides, with slight fullness massed in the back and the whole flaring gracefully towards the foot. The accordion-plaited skirt reappears on cloth dresses and on light silk mousseline designed for evening wear.

New Walking Dress.

The illustration shows a pretty walking dress of striped Russian velvet. This model has a dark blue woolen ground, with pale blue silk stripes and a pale silk lining. The bodice is close fitting and is entered in the skirt, under a sash of pale blue silk it is trimmed with a pleated collar which forms a draped jabot in front.

Fashions in Fine.

For the corsage fancy pins that simulate flowers are quite as popular as ever, and the kinds chosen are chrysanthemums, violets, pansies or chrysanthemums, though some elegant examples are circular in shape and adorned by carvings, enamelling or gems set in quaint fashion. Feathers or swords are now and give a change. More novel than simulated flowers are the enamelled roseties that replace the bowknot designs that have become somewhat too common to please exclusives, and in compliance to the prevalence of changeable or moire ribbons these new ornaments sometimes show enamelling that imitates either or both. Much attention has been given by manufacturers to shirt bosoms of late days, and a touch of the feminine appears in slender links of gold that connect them together. Enamel is a marked factor in producing desirable colors, and much piquancy results from a design in white set on a color or a colored design on white.

CLEVELAND WILL NOT BE PRESENT.

The Ex-President Says That as President Harrison Cannot Attend the Exercises on Account of His Domestic Affliction He Has Decided to Remain Away Also.

CHICAGO, Oct. 18.—Thousands of flags began today to proclaim to the welcome they are meant to flutter to all the good people who are coming to celebrate the dedication for the big fair. The myriads of bright little banners dancing in the sunlight this morning had been put in position during the night. The bangers represented every spot under the sky.

The State and Stripes were everywhere and particularly on the highest flagstaffs. In the decorations compliments are paid to all the nations of the earth, and to some lands that once were nations and have a notion of being nations again. The yellow of Spain was a good second to the red, white and blue, with the Italian colors a good third. Startling copies of every portrait of Columbus that was ever painted snapped in the breeze.

The city hall is gay with great banners representing epochs in the life of Columbus. Mammoth portraits of Washington, Lincoln and Grant surround the navigator's dramatic landing. The county building is a trifle more gay. Spain and Ireland seem to share the honors. Italy, too, is taken care of, and the great granite pillars are swathed in terra cotta.

A Great Transformation.

The transformation from the day before was extraordinary. The dismal buildings that looked dull and gloomy were turned as if by magic into bright beauty spots, resplendent with rainbow coloring. This is particularly true for the route to be covered by the great parade.

Still the decorations are by no means confined to the line of march. The less favored thoroughfares are vying with each other in producing happy effects. The decorations are almost wholly confined to the South Side, with sporadic attempts at gayety in the other divisions of the city.

Many complaints are pouring into army headquarters regarding the exclusion of the foot soldiery from the down town portion of Friday's military parade. Thousands have been duped into paying high prices for windows on the line, under the impression that they would see the regulars. It was not until yesterday that the public realized that the military spectacle is confined to Washington and Jackson parks. There is much excitement over the affair, and the managers are denounced on all sides. Major General Miles listened to his critics at length, and toward evening said to a reporter:

General Miles' Views.

"The dedication ceremonies proper are the principal feature for Friday. It seems almost an insult for the local government officials who will be here—the vice president, justices of the supreme court, diplomatic corps, senators, representatives, governors and lady managers—to say that the people of Chicago care nothing for seeing them. In this procession there will be more high government officials than were ever convoked before for any purpose. It is a physical impossibility to bring the infantry into this parade for its whole length. To do so it would be necessary for the men to march nine miles up town and nine miles back again, a full day's work.

"As the dedication ceremonies begin early in the afternoon the infantry cannot cover the whole distance, but the parade will not be without military escort at any point. The cavalry and artillery will come down to the Auditorium, receive the procession and escort it for six miles.

"Then the infantry will take up the escort for the rest of the distance to Jackson park. Over 800,000 people ranged along curbs and on doorsteps for the entire distance will see the parade at its best. If the weather is fine the mounted staffs of the various governors will be in full uniform. Besides the mounted escorts there will be two mounted cavalry bands and three batteries of artillery.

"There will be evolutions of the troops in the field at Washington park on Wednesday and Saturday, which so many of the public as care to attend can see. It was never intended to make this a great military celebration. Next year, when there are 100,000 troops here, the people of Chicago will see a military spectacle that is worth while."

Cleveland Will Not Participate.

CHICAGO, Oct. 18.—Ex-President Cleveland will not participate in the Columbian exposition dedicatory exercises this week. In a letter received by the committee on ceremonies from him Mr. Cleveland declined the invitation which the exposition officials had sent him to take part in the festivities, giving as a reason that he did not wish to gain any political advantage over an opponent who is detained by so sad a circumstance as that which keeps President Harrison from attending the exercises. "I may be oversensitive or even morbid on the subject," read the letter, "but I cannot allow myself to take political advantage of the opportunity afforded in the sad sickness that keeps President Harrison away from Chicago."

CAPRIVI'S BILL SIGNED.

The Kaiser Says It Must Pass or the Reichstag Must Go.

WRECKED IN A CHINESE TYPHOON.

The Steamship Bokhara Goes Down and 170 Out of the 200 Persons Comprising the Crew and Passengers of the Ill Starred Vessel Find Watery Graves.

BERLIN, Oct. 18.—The emperor has signed Count von Caprivi's military bill and has empowered the chancellor to dissolve the reichstag in case it refuses to approve the measure. This step he took after having learned a long report on the bill from the chancellor. The additional annual expenditure required will be 57,500,000 marks.

Heretofore the unofficial estimates of the probable expense attendant upon the introduction of the two-year-service term have varied between 80,000,000 and 150,000,000 marks. A few exceedingly conservative men have estimated the expense at 80,000,000 marks, but this figure was generally regarded as ridiculously low. The Radicals, who are trying to precipitate a cabinet crisis and a dissolution on the issue of the bill, will be seriously embarrassed by the smallness of the increase, as they have been the loudest shouters for the two year term, and could never have had reasonable expectations of obtaining it at less cost than 55,000,000 or 60,000,000 marks.

When Count Caprivi was appointed imperial chancellor he found ready to his hand a detailed plan for increasing the armed forces of the empire while retaining the system of three years' service. This scheme, which had been worked out by General von Verdy, the war minister, and General von Waldersee, then at the head of the general staff, was to be carried out by degrees. Prince Bismarck also had given his assent. But Count Caprivi discovered that many difficulties presented themselves to the carrying through of this plan after thoroughly satisfactory experiments had been made with various infantry regiments on the two years' system, the present bill was drawn.

Today the imperial chancellor, the minister of war and the chief of the general staff are as fully agreed upon their object and the means of obtaining it as Prince Bismarck, General von Verdy and Count Waldersee formerly were. They do not consider the two years' system as the end, but as the means to the end. The chief ends in view are the enforcement of universal liability to service and the enrollment of a younger class of men than are at present, as a rule, with the colors.

The contents of the bill were made known to the Prussian council of ministers some months ago. The president of the Prussian ministry thoroughly agrees with the chancellor in the political necessity of the bill, and none of the ministers, not excluding the minister of finance, has raised any objections.

THE LOSS OF THE BOKHARA.

Of the 200 Souls on Board the Ill Fated Vessel 170 Were Drowned.

HONG KONG, Oct. 18.—The peninsular and oriental steamship Bokhara has been totally wrecked. The steamship struck on a sand island of the group known as the Pescadores, or Fishers' Islands, called Pheng Hoo by the Chinese, in the channel of Fokien, between Formosa and the mainland, in the China sea. The sea quenched the fires on the steamer, which became unmanageable.

There were 200 persons aboard the steamship. Of these 170 were drowned. Twenty passengers, five officers and three sergeants of the Hong Kong garrison were among the lost. Among the saved are Dr. Lowson and Lieutenant Markham.

The Bokhara was a three masted iron screw steamer of 2,995 tons. She was 361 feet long, 39 feet beam, 29 feet deep; was built at Greenock in 1873 by Caird & Co., and hailed from that port. She had compound inverted engines of 300 horsepower. Her cargo included specie and a large consignment of silk and was very valuable.

Gilbert, also a prisoner, claims that the United States government should interfere to free him.

THE CATHOLIC ARCHBISHOPS.

Education, Cahenslyism and Secret Societies to Be Items of Discussion.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 18.—Interest in the annual meeting of the archbishops of the Catholic church in America, which will be held in New York city next month, has received a new impetus since it became known that Archbishop Satolli will attend the gathering. In a long article reviewing the work of the conference The American today says:

It can be stated beyond all doubt that there is not the remotest likelihood of the Faribault and Stillwater schools coming up for discussion. This particular question having been disposed of in Rome cannot now come before the archbishops for review. The broad question of education, however, will be taken up in the meeting. Cardinal Ledochowski, prefect of the propaganda, invites the archbishops to consider the best and most effective means of educating and instructing in their religion the 1,000,000 Catholic children in the United States who do not attend the parochial schools.

Another question that will come up for discussion is no more nor less than Cahenslyism. It has been published that Cahenslyism is dead. It comes from one of the highest sources in the church that Cahenslyism is not dead; that on the contrary it is more active than ever it was, and that its promoters and workers are working harder than ever, covertly and otherwise, for its advancement. The gentlemen with whom this conversation was had said:

"When the names of candidates are sent to Rome from America for a vacant bishopric and one of them is a German the combined German influence is brought to bear upon the pope in behalf of the German candidate. The influence of the German embassy at Rome is invoked, and is pressed upon the pope and those who are near to him. If they succeed it means much—another stride in the spread of the power of the German throne. Their agents are forever on the alert—they are always on the go. It is a power for America to fear. They work covertly. Cahenslyism dead! Well, it's a lively corpse, and its shadow instead of diminishing is getting larger every year. It was never killed—only scorched."

Archbishop Katzer, of Milwaukee, is the recognized front of the lun on this side of the water.

Still another question, it is said, that will bob up is that relating to secret societies. The secret society has ever been one of the great bugbears in Catholic circles, but since the last plenary council, and more especially since the last Catholic congress, which was held in Baltimore in 1889, there has been a very material and decided chance in this respect. There are a few of the seventy odd bishops and a couple of archbishops in America still opposed to secret societies.

The progressive school, the thoroughly American party in the church, embracing the large majority of the hierarchy, are opposed to narrow Seventeenth century methods. Right here it may be stated that the only society before which the line is drawn in the Masons, and it is likely that the day is not far distant when even this line will be obliterated. The same authority spoke most kindly of the Masons here.

HORSE THIEVES LYNCHED.

Nine of Them Shot Down and Then Strung Up by Ranchmen.

BOISE CITY, Oct. 18.—Nine horse thieves were lynched by a posse of ranchmen in the Sammamish county on Aug. 14. The story of the battle has just been brought in by Wilson Marwin from Deer Flat, in the northern part of the state.

The outlaws killed several horses, making a breastwork of their carcasses, and an hour's fight at long range failed to result in a death on either side. The ranchmen then laid down a ruse by sending down six of the outlaws who broke through the flames, and hanging the bodies beside the three wounded men, badly burned, who had been left in the outlaw camp.

The Chilian Indemnity.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

THE IBIS.

The Sacred Ibis Worshiped by Ancient Egyptians—The Beautiful Scarlet Ibis.

You have all read about Egypt, that ancient country which has its great pyramids and monuments thousands of years old, and dates back beyond the times of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

Many of the old Egyptian monuments have hieroglyphics on them, in which the figure of this bird is frequently found. Their mummies, or preserved remains, are also found in the old Egyptian tombs; hence it is called the sacred ibis, as it must have been an object of worship to the ancient Egyptians, who, as your Bible tells you, were idolaters. It seems indeed strange that human beings should worship a mere bird like the ibis, which is only the size of an ordinary fowl.

Besides the sacred ibis there is another species of this bird which is found only in South America and the West India islands. This is called the scarlet ibis, and is of a beautiful red color. The flight of this bird is lofty and strong, and as it passes through the air it utters a loud and peculiar cry. You have heard or read of people changing in color as they grow older. It is so with the scarlet ibis. When just hatched the young are black, soon changing to gray, but are nearly white before they are able to fly. They do not attain their red plumage until their third year. In the months of July and August they migrate into Florida, Alabama, Georgia and South Carolina, but retire into Mexico and the Caribbean islands when cool weather approaches.

A Fable with a Moral.

A spruce young shoot of a vine once made the acquaintance of a bramble of about its own age. They vowed eternal friendship and agreed to stand by each other in time of need. The old vine admired the young one to let the bramble alone, and choose out a suitable companion from among the other shoots. But the young vine would not agree to this. So the two plants grew up together near each other, till one day the husbandman, coming in the vineyard to inspect the growth of the young vine, happened to spy the noxious bramble.

"Out of my sight!" he cried as he aimed a blow at the rank weed with a sharp mattock. But alas! The blow not only went right through the bramble, it cut down also the young vine. "Alas!" said the bramble, man where by now what he had done, "this comes of their being so close together."

Moral—Avoid bad companions.

Cat and Mouse.

In this game the players stand round in a circle, holding each other's hands, excepting one who sets the "mouse," and who, standing in the centre of the circle, touches one of the players and then runs under the arms of the others. The player thus touched becomes "cat," and must pursue the "mouse" until he catches him; but in doing this he must be careful to pass in and out of the circle under the arms of the same persons passed by the "mouse," who is then enabled to lead his pursuer a pretty chase. When the "cat" is agile and the mouse cunning the game can be made to yield a good deal of fun. A "mouse" who has been caught becomes "cat," while the "cat" who has caught him takes his place in the circle.

A Girl's Composition on Boys.

Boys are men that have not got as big as their papas, and girls are young women that will be young ladies by and by. Man was made before woman. When God looked at Adam he said to himself, "Well, I guess I can do better if I try again," and then he made Eve. God liked Eve so much better than Adam that there have been more women than men ever since. Boys are a trouble. They are wearing on everything but soap. If I had my way half the boys in the world would be little girls, and the rest would be dolls. My papa is so nice that I guess he must have been a little girl when he was a little boy.

Story for Very Little People.

Three little kittens lapping milk,
As happy as possible can be,
With bright blue eyes and coats of silk—
The fourth is the mother, you see.

A patter is heard of hurrying feet,
A patter that cats cannot bear,
And in there comes from the open street
With bark and frisk and eager stare—

ONE TOO MANY.

What? Why, see, the terrier Jack,
Who puts in his impudent nose;
He has, if you look, a coat on his back,
Because it is cold, I suppose.

He asks may he sit down beside.
He says he won't bark, neither bite;
But such an idea the kittens deride!
They know he will come and will fight.

No! Master Jack, be pleased to go;
There's not any room for you here;
You're one too many, don't you know?
And that business you're on isn't clear.

Yes! one too many. Child, beware:
Be not an intruder, like Jack,
And very unwisely venture where
The looks you receive will be black.

GOOD HEALTH

THE COLOR OF THE BLOOD IN MAN.

How It Differs at Different Ages and Under Varying Conditions of Life.

Having recently examined a large number of specimens of human blood from persons of different ages ranging from four to seventy-six years, some being those in robust health, others being tuberculous, a correspondent of Science was struck with the great difference in the shade of color presented, some being of a very rich tint, others very pale. He says: "The richest color was in the blood of a girl twenty-six years of age, a graduate of Vassar college, who had the highest anthropometric measurement for respiratory capacity in a class of about 300 girls. Her health was excellent, she consumed rather more flesh food than is usual. The next highest tint was found in the blood of a woman about seventy years old, with a somewhat unusual chest measurement, having also excellent respiratory capacity and being in fine health. This woman, on the contrary, does not eat flesh at all. I expected in her case to find a more than ordinary number of white blood corpuscles, but there were far less than usual, it being difficult to find them where were so few. The paled blood was from a chlorotic Irish servant girl of twenty-five years and in a tubercular way of knox. There was not much perceptible difference in their cases. The girl had naturally good respiratory power, but she had lessened it by tight clothing and an almost constant indoor life for a long time. After spending a month at the seaside I examined her blood again and found the tint somewhat deeper than before. As we know, the color of the blood is caused by the hæmoglobin in the red blood corpuscles, and if this is greater when the respiratory capacity is greatest, may not the color of the blood be heightened by enlarging the chest and increasing the lung power? From some observations I have made I believe it can."

Disease at the Back Door.

It is the habit of pitching out of the back door a pailful and dipperful now and then of greasy water and a handful of parings and the general waste of the kitchen that breeds fevers and bilious diseases, says Farm Life. The waste disappears for the most part in the soil, but that is the key to the mischief. The soil gets full after a time and ferments, and the hot sun breeds gases which surround and enter the house. This is true not only of the cheaper, poorer houses and careless families, but well to do, intelligent people have spots behind their houses saturated with slops. In populous towns so a mound of supervision can prevent a great deal of filthy evil. But in the country towns slops should be carried out to fields and poured in small quantities here and there as fertiliser. Trees will take up a large quantity of water and be grateful for it. There must be simply constant intelligence in the disposal of waste.

Acid Prevention of Cholera.

In previous epidemics the value of sulphuric and sulphurous acids as preventives was demonstrated, and when Koch discovered his comma bacillus he also noted that its cultivation was possible only in alkaline media, and that acids destroyed it. In corroboration of these findings, Hayo Bruns, Nimeguen, who wrote that before anything of this nature was known, records that the "foam, or lower small intestine, is the main seat of the pathological changes caused by cholera. This lower small intestine is the most alkaline and the farthest from the normally acid stomach. The large intestine, being acid, does not suffer.

Negroes and Malaria.

A number of physicians in malarial tropical countries have long entertained evidences against the traditional theory that the members of the black race are comparatively immune from malaria. Dr. Jenkins, at Belize, Honduras, writes that his experience of nine years in that colony has brought him that the negroes are very subject to intermittent fever, which, however, very amenable to small doses of quinine, but that they also suffer occasionally from a bad type of remittent fever.

Cancer Arrested.

A report is going the rounds among the medical exchanges to the effect that a Vienna doctor has declared that the so called incurable and distressing disease known as cancer can be arrested by an injection of one of the coal tar derivitives—methyl violet.

ETIQUETTE

AT THE TABLE.

The Correct Way of Serving and Eating Various Dishes.

It is not my purpose to eat an orange gracefully. The Ladies' Home Journal affirms that the daintiest way to eat an orange is from a fork—that is, the skin and the coarse inner lining are removed with a sharp fruit knife, the orange is stuck on a fork and is eaten exactly as one would eat an apple. Cheese, says the same authority, may be taken between the fingers, or it may be put on a bit of bread with a knife and eaten on that, but a fork is not used with it. Artichokes are of course eaten with the fingers, each leaf being dipped in the dressing.

All pastry is eaten from a fork, and it is an insult to the cook to touch it with a knife. In fact, your knife has no use except for cutting or buttering something, and when it is resting it should be laid sideways on your plate. Every vegetable can be eaten with a fork, the uses of a spoon being limited to a few desserts and for your coffee or teacup, and there its place is to repose in the saucer. Bouillon is drunk from the cups in which it is served; when it is jellied it is eaten with a dessert spoon. Nothing excuses the clashing of a small particle of something to set around your plate to polish it up. The old idea that one must eat everything that is given to one on a dinner card is a small insult to the hostess, and parents who teach children are not made gluttons. In drinking, remember to hold your goblet or wineglass by the stem, and not by the bowl. While watermelon is eaten with a fork, cantaloupe has served with it a dessert spoon. As it is customary nowadays to have the salt served in open salt-cellars, it may be noted that in this case no one's self the salt should be put near the outer edge of one's plate in leaving the table it is not necessary to fold your napkin; instead, just as you rise lay it on the table.

SHE WEARIED HIM.

And There Was Another Little Boy Out of a Job.

The grocer's new boy threw his delivery basket down in the corner with an injured air and remarked that the woman who had just moved into the street, around the corner, was a regular crank.

"How do you mean?" asked the grocer.

"First thing she asked me," said the boy, "was whether we had any nice fresh eggs. They must be very, very fresh, she said, because she wanted 'em to put in cake.

"I told her eggs was doubtful this hot weather, but we had some very, very fresh eggplants, and how would they do?

"She said they wouldn't do at all, and then she asked me if we had any corn that was as green as I was and the ears as well developed as mine.

"I said 'Yes'm.'

"'Well,' she says, 'I want some for dinner, so bring half a dozen as soon as you can.'

"'As soon as we can?' says I. 'Do you want it canned?'

"She said she did not want it canned. Then she began to ask about watermelons. Did we have some that was ripe? I told her 'Yes'm.'

"Was they on ice?

"Was they way on the sidewalk.

"Would we put half of one on ice and bring it around at 6 o'clock?

"We would.

"Would we have the seeds taken out?

"With pleasure.

"All right. Did we keep vichy water in siphons?

"Yes'm.

"Was that on ice?

"No. But I told her we'd put half a siphon on ice and bring it around at 6 o'clock with the bubbles taken out if she'd say the word.

"Then she said she guessed everything we had around here was nice and fresh, but there was such a thing as being too fresh, and she believed she'd try the other store, so I needn't bother. Yes, sir, that woman's a crank."

"Eddie," said the grocery man as he slowly rolled the white paper around a pound of cheese, "my nephew will be here next week from Germany and I am going to give him your job. Meanwhile I'll try to get along without any little boy."

"You'll have to," said Eddie, "'cause I'm goin to leave."—Detroit Free Press.

A Difference in Prices.

One morning an unusually fine display of furs in one of the windows of a prominent furrier down town attracted many an admiring glance from passers by. Two stout colored women paused to admire the display.

"Dere," said the larger of the two, "am de very coat for me. I tell you dat's a beauty," and she pointed to a handsome wrap marked, "Just reduced to $250."

"Let's go in an look at 'em."

Her friend followed her into the store. The proprietor, Mr. L., was in the front part of the store and went forward with his best smile.

"Ladies, what can I do for you this morning?"

"We wants to see dem coats like what's in de winder," was the response.

"If you will walk back in the store I will show you our entire line. What price coat did you want?"

"Bout de same as dat one is," pointing to the one in the window.

They walked back to the coat department and Mr. L. took down coat after coat with sinking soul. At length one was found that just suited the would-be purchaser.

"I guess I'll take dis ef you's sure it's de style and will wear, 'cause de price certainly is reasonable," she declared.

"Shall I send it for you," asked Mr. L.

"No, I'll jes' pay you and take it along," she said as she drew from her pocket and flounced on the counter two one dollar bills, one quarter, two tens and a five.

"Why," said Mr. L. in consternation, as he looked at the money; "this is only $25.00!"

"Well, ain't dis coat de same price as dat one in de winder?"

"Yes, but that in the window is worth $250."

"What! Two hundred and fifty dollars for one coat! I never heard of such a thing!" she indignantly exclaimed, tossing the precious bundle on the counter.

"He made 'e thought I was a Vanderbilt," were her last words as she slammed the door behind her.

Mr. L. rehung the $250 coats.—New York Recorder.

An Extra T.

Major Johnston is very particular about the spelling of his name. He is a very proud man on general principles. Nothing exasperates him more than to be mixed up typographically or otherwise with the common herd of Johnsons without a "t." He was about leaving a hotel in Dallas. He had asked for his bill, and when it was handed him by the clerk he scowled fiercely.

"Is there any mistake in the bill?" asked the clerk.

"There is, sir. You have spelled my name without the 't.'"

"Ah, I see," replied the clerk. "You should be charged with an extra tea. Fifty cents more, if you please."—Texas Siftings.

Better Still.

"Nothing can make a woman so superlatively happy as to have a baby of her own to kiss," exclaimed Mrs. McBride rapturously as she fondled her firstborn.

An Unlucky Tabletat.

Several men were talking of superstitions so common among all classes of people. As a matter of course one of the things touched upon was the supposedly fatal number thirteen. An old colored man who happened to be within hearing distance felt moved to remark: "I want to tell you, gem'men, not to make fun o' dat thirteen business. I ain't superstitious, but I tell you, don't you eat at no table whar dar's thirteen. I dun do dat, and I hope to die if prottey nearly every one of dem ain't dead and buried."

His hearers expressed surprise at his remarkable statement and asked for particulars.

"Well, some of dem got killed and one thing an another, and some jest nachelly died. But dey is pretty nearly all gone today."

"How long ago did this thirteen-at-table incident occur?"

Proclamation by the Governor.

Whereas, by a joint resolution, approved June 26th, 1886, it was resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

"That the President of the United States be authorized and directed to issue a proclamation recommending to the people the observance by all the citizens of the United States on the fourth day of October next, being the four hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America by Christopher Columbus, and the appropriate exercises by the people in their schools and other places of assembly;"

And whereas, the President of the United States has complied with the requirements of said joint resolution, and issued his proclamation; dated the first day of July, 1892, setting forth the recommendation of the Executive Committee of the National Columbian Public School Celebration and the Journals of proclamations by the governors of the several States, recommending the people to observe such day for the purposes set forth in said joint resolution of Congress;

Now, therefore, I, Leon Abbett, Governor of the State of New Jersey, in order to carry out the purposes of said resolution, do hereby recommend the observance of the day named, by the people of the State of New Jersey, in order to carry out the purposes of said resolution, do hereby recommend that October first, 1892, be observed by the people of this State as a general holiday, and day of thanksgiving, that our citizens cease from their labor of that day, so far as possible, and devote themselves on that day so far as practicable in their schools and churches and other places of assembly as will properly celebrate the day and carry out the purposes of said resolution.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the great seal of the State to be hereunto affixed, at Trenton, this twentieth day of August, eighteen hundred and ninety-two.

[L. S.] LEON ABBETT.

By the Governor,
HENRY C. KELSEY,
Secretary of State.

BREVITIES

—There will be an adjourned business meeting in the W. C. T. U. rooms to-morrow afternoon at 3.30 o'clock.

—Workmen are engaged to-day erecting a neat iron fence in front of the Park place chapel, in North Plainfield.

—A $2,500 Methodist church is to be erected at Aldine and be ready for use by January 1. The trustees are Messrs. Wm. Wood, Robert Stryker and Wm. W. Dodson.

—The bowling match which was to have been played on the alleys of the Catholic Young Men's Lyceum last night, in deference to the Firemen's parade, was postponed until this evening.

—Rev. C. B. Mitchell has been keeping a record of the weather for the past forty days, and says that in that period there were only three or four days which were not in his opinion perfect.

—Golden October has been, so far, a success in of glorious days. To-day, however, the weather-man evidently let something slip, for it is as cold and disagreeable as a day in March this morning.

—Frank Irwin, a farmer living near Woodbury, N. J., is the latest victim of the silver brick swindle. He was neatly bamboozled out of $900 in cash on Thursday and got several dollars worth of old metal in return for his good money.

—About one thousand people attended the free Organ Recital given by Mr. Wm. McClyment at the First Baptist church last evening. Mr. McClyment was assisted by Mrs. Genevieve W. Boyt, soprano, of Brooklyn. After the passing of the firemen's parade, the church quickly filled.

—"A Trip to Chinatown" at Hoyt's Madison Square Theatre, New York, continues to draw the usual large audiences in spite of the fact that all the other metropolitan play houses are now opened. On Friday, the 200th representation was celebrated and each lady visitor was presented with a pretty souvenir. On Nov. 9th, the anniversary of this phenomenally successful play will take place at Hoyt's Madison Square Theatre, and the event will be duly commemorated. Never before in the history of the stage, either in this country, or in the old world, has a farce comedy been able to run for so long a time.

PERSONAL.

General Eli Long and family are still at Blue Point, N. Y.

Mrs. Cornelia Mitchell has returned to her home on Grove street, after spending a week in New York city.

Mr. Fred'k. Wm. Crouch, one of the enterprising grocers of Westfield, will soon lead to the altar Miss Martin Morton Demint, a son of Westfield. Miss Dalzell is a sister of Mrs. Douglass of Westfield. The wedding is to take place Wednesday, Oct. 26th. Mr. Crouch is well-known in Plainfield.

Mr. Oscar S. Teale, the president of the Plainfield Camera Club, was last Friday elected President of the New Jersey Division of the National League of Amateur Photographers, which, in a similar manner to that of the League of American Wheelmen, endeavors by concerted action to secure many advantages of its members which they would not be likely to receive as individuals. The league promises to further the interests of Amateur photography greatly.

Postmaster Pope and Editor Morrison were the recipients, a few days ago, of special cards of invitation to be present as guests of the Columbian Committee of Chicago, on the occasion of the Columbian celebration to take place there on Oct. 21st. The tickets entitled them to reserved seats in the auditorium. About 10,000 invitations were issued, but, though the cards to the Plainfielders secured reserved seats, the Auditorium will seat but 4,300. Mr. Pope started for Chicago this morning. Other engagements made necessary for Mr. Morrison to remain at home.

Miss Mary Elizabeth Many, daughter of Mrs. Edward F. Many of 103 West Seventh street, was married at 7.30 o'clock last evening to George Beekman Schoonmaker, also of this city, at the home of Mrs. Eugene H. Hatch, 14 West Fifth street. The Rev. William R. Richards, pastor of the Central Avenue Presbyterian church officiated. The bride wore a white satin gown, trimmed with point lace, and a full tulle veil, and carried a bouquet of white roses. Miss Many was the maid of honor and the Rev. G. Kennedy Newell, best man. The bride was given away by her brother, Edward F. Many, Jr. After the ceremony a reception was held from eight to ten o'clock, and an elaborate supper served. Nearly three hundred guests were present. The parlor was handsomely decorated with pink and white cosmos, chrysanthemums and palms, arranged in pyramidal form, and the reception room had been prettily and handsomely decorated with pink and white cosmos. The newly-married couple will live at No. 103 Seventh street, on their return from their wedding trip.

THE FIREMEN'S OUTING.

A MOONLIGHT PARADE, WITH THE MOON LEFT OUT.

Plenty of Pleasure for the Laddies Just the Same, to which their Guests, and the People Generally, Joyously Contribute.—Two Mayors and Others Make Remarks.

MEN of Plainfield and North Plainfield, in fact, the whole department, were out last night. They were out on their usual mission—trying to protect property from fire. In fact fire was made to help enliven the event, red fire, green, white and blue fire, being burned all along the line of march. The most lavish display of fire was perhaps at the Union County Country Club house, and the residences of Councilman Fisk and Mr. John W. Murray.

The line was formed on Peace street about 7.30 o'clock, in the following order:

Policemen.
Mayors of Plainfield and North Plainfield.
City and Borough Councilmen.
Exempt Firemen.
Warren Engine Company, No. 1.
Zephyr Hook and Ladder Company.
Alert Hose Company.
Gazelle Engine Company, No. 1.
Plainfield Engine Company, No. 2.

This was the line of march:

Peace street to North avenue, to Park avenue, to Front street, to Central avenue, to Eighth street, to Madison avenue, to Seventh street, to Broadway, to Fifth street, to Park avenue and dismiss.

It was an impromptu affair, intended to show the firemen's appreciation of the new hose wagons purchased for the Plainfield Fire Department, and to show the people what beauties the wagons are in point of utility, as well as in appearance.

There was what was called "an inspection" in front of the Union County Club house, by the Mayor and Common Council of Plainfield, and the Mayor and Council of North Plainfield. The distinction in the two cities is according to law, but in the minds of the city of Plainfield should be common and the Council of the borough of North Plainfield otherwise is for the lawmakers to explain. We only know that to be legally correct this distinction must be made.

Chief McGill, who is in command of the Trenton Fire Department, accompanied by the manufacturer of the wagons as the guests of our Department, and Fire Department notables from other cities were also present at the inspection.

The Mayors, Councils, and other local officials referred to, the visitors, and the editors of the local newspapers were provided with carriages and taken over the line of march as guests of the department.

The firemen were applauded along the line, and complimented on their fine appearance.

The old-fashioned reel hose carriage formed part of the procession, a transparency over it saying, "Gone, but not Forgotten."

Alert's exceedingly artistic $10,000 silver hose carriage—the property of the members—and the finest in the country, was also a conspicuous object in the line, among the members marching in uniform being banker Livingston, notwithstanding that he is, according to his brother firemen, nearly seventy years of age. They desired us to mention this fact to show his vigor after so many years of service, and also to show their pride at having him still with them.

The engines in line, Nos. 1, 2 and 3, were all highly polished, everything about them showing the firemen's devotion to their machines.

The exempt firemen had many men among them who had grown old in the service, men who proved themselves not only good firemen, but also good citizens. Perhaps the most notable among these was ex-Chief T. J. Gillies, with white locks and beard, still tall and erect. Besides being a sturdy fireman in the good old times, he was Plainfield's first Chief of Police, after the city was incorporated in 1869.

After the parade the firemen, with their guests, were led by Chief Doane, and Assistant Chiefs Martin and Murray, into the Crescent Rink, where tables, presided over by numerous charming young ladies, and loaded with palatable edibles, were spread, and nearly 300 hearty men sat down and feasted, and when the feasting was done, listened to speeches by the following gentlemen, whom Chief Doane introduced: Mayor Gilbert of Plainfield, Mayor Saunders of North Plainfield, Councilman Frank Marsh of the Committee on Fire and Police Buildings, Chief McGill of the Trenton Fire Department, and Mr. Fitzgibbons, the manufacturers of the hose wagons.

The two Mayors made a good team, though a little contrary on a few things—politics for instance.

After which the band played, not "Auld Lang Syne," but some lively music, and thus ended a memorable event in the history of Plainfield, since it marks the introduction in this section of new and greatly improved apparatus for facilitating the work of extinguishing fires.

—Master Edward Kieley, who had his leg broken, a few weeks ago, while learning to ride a bicycle, is now able to walk.

POLITICAL PICKLES.

Gov. McKinley's Views on U. S. Money.

Here is a paragraph from Gov. McKinley's speech. It should be carefully read by every voter:

If there is any one thing that the working people and the laboring people and the poor people of the country—yes, every! interest of the country, cannot afford to have any tinkering or trifling with, it is the standard that measures the exchange of their labor and their products. When the workingmen give ten hours, full ten hours of labor, to his employer he is entitled to be paid in a dollar worth full 100 cents everywhere within the jurisdiction of the flag. The business of this country should be as national as its flag.

The Democratic party favors schemes that tend to lower the standard of the U. S. currency.

There is more than a suspicion that the New Jersey prison parole law had the Hudson county ballot box stuffers in view when it was passed. It would be dangerous to let them out before election, but in the event of Democratic success they would probably not stay there long afterward.

If all honest men would throw away partisanship and vote as they feel prompted on the issues involved New Jersey would elect a Republican Governor by 50,000 majority, and this district would choose a Republican Congressman by 5,000.

The Democratic city of Birmingham, Alabama, has raised a fund of $100,000 to induce a great cotton mill to establish itself in that place. They want the business of these big manufacturers, even if they do oppose them politically.

PREPARING FOR OCT. 21.

Columbian Day Celebrations in the Schools.

The pupils of St. Mary's school will duly honor Columbus on Oct. 21. A special programme has been prepared. It will consist of readings and recitations, saluting flag, declamations and music.

The exercises in all the Plainfield public schools will commence at nine o'clock in the morning. The friends of the scholars will be welcomed.

The programmes in full will be published to-morrow.

Literary Notes.

We have received, for review, a copy of Miss Harriet Mathews' English Grammar, a book just out from the publishers are Messrs. D. C. Heath & Co.. of New York. Miss Mathews is the teacher of English grammar and psychology in the State Normal school at Trenton, N. J., a position that she has occupied for a good many years. Her pupils are counted by the thousands, and they have done valiant service for the public schools of New Jersey. The plan of the book, as outlined in author's preface, is sensible, pedagogical, scientific. The mechanical execution of the book is nearly perfect as the book-maker can make it. In typography, binding, paper, etc., it is an excellent specimen of the bookmaker's art.

The leading up to a conception of the literature of the "Mother Tongue" through an excellent course in thought-analysis, is scientifically done. The skeleton of English grammar has been formed skillfully. The order of topics is thoroughly well arranged, and the whole plan of the book good—from the schoolmaster's point of view.

Elizabeth to Have a Big Parade.

There will be a big Columbus celebration at Elizabeth on Friday night Mayor Rankin will act as Grand Marshal, and the demonstration will taken part in by the military, fire and post office departments, civic societies, Grand Army Posts, political clubs, lodges, and industrial establishments. The latter will furnish a number of handsome emblematic floats.

Cavalry troops from Roselle, Linden, and Elmora will also help to swell the parade.

The city will be illuminated and decorated. The Ancient Order of Foresters of Elizabeth have engaged the Plainfield Cornet Band to enliven their line of march.

Dogs Poisoned in North Plainfield.

Half-a-dozen owners of fine dogs on Jackson and Manning avenues, North Plainfield, found the dead bodies of their pets this morning. Examination showed that they had been poisoned by some miscreant whose identity is anxiously desired by the police and the owners.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Censuring the Dog Catcher.

To the Editor of The News:—Would it not be possible for our worthy City Fathers to so amend the "Dog Law" that the dog-catchers might not be enabled to reap their richest and surest harvests by waging war against women and children.

I witnessed this morning one of these so-called legal captures.

The dog was a gentle, handsome animal, belonging to a family who had but recently moved into town. He was not in the habit of going into the street, but spent his time in the large yard, romping with the children.

A few minutes after I had noticed him thus occupied, I was attracted by the screams of a child in great distress, and upon hurrying to the window, saw a four year old boy struggling with a colored man, for the possession of his pet, directly outside his own gate.

Finding his efforts at rescue unavailing, he rushed into the house for help, but his mother could do nothing when the city's badge was exhibited, but pay the dollar and a half that was demanded to save the animal from the pound.

I can recall similar complaints through the medium of your paper, and it seems as if a little more care in defining the words "roaming at large" might prevent such extortion.

Our ordinance as at present interpreted may be law, but it can scarcely be called justice. EYE WITNESS.

ILLUSTRATED PLAINFIELD.

What the Plainfield Camera Club Has Done to that End.

Two years ago THE NEWS began publishing weekly views of some of the beautiful spots about Plainfield. The cuts were in half-tone—the finest class of engravings known. They were, however, found to be too fine to show advantageously on paper of so coarse a fibre as is necessarily used for daily newspapers. Special ink and special paper were required. The publication in THE NEWS was, therefore, dropped, and arrangements were made to do the work on an elaborate scale. In fact it was considered that Plainfield was beautiful enough and had enough appreciation to justify the production of a work in parts to cost about $10,000. While we were quietly proceeding with this work, and had made about one hundred choice views, and some exceedingly fine engravings, it came to our knowledge that the Plainfield Camera Club members were at work in the same line, though on a much less elaborate scale, but their efforts were actuated more with the object of showing up the beauties of Plainfield, rather than for what money might be made out of the work.

Not wishing to hamper the club in its laudable efforts, any more than we would care to have our efforts hampered by being brought in conflict in such an enterprise, we, to help them, by giving a free field, knowing they would do nothing discreditable, went to the fountain head for work, and informed the President, through whom we learned of what the club had done.

Since then, as before, the club has gone steadily ahead with the work in a thoroughly systematic manner. They deserve, and we believe they will receive, hearty support from the public. It is intended to place the work at a price that will be within the reach of all, and, as the club includes among its members about fifty of our leading men, having both the means and artistic taste, to do the subject justice, it is safe to say that the work will be one to be highly-treasured by all lovers of our favored locality.

It is announced that a Mr. Hooker, of New Haven, in connection with another local paper, proposes to get out something entitled "Illustrated Plainfield," as an advertising scheme, in which it is understood that the fellow who wants to pay the most for the privilege will be given the greatest prominence regardless of the truth. That is, if one wants to pay $10, he can have his house or place of business inserted. The club have been invited to co-operate, but will have nothing to do with such a scheme.

It is utterly impracticable to properly illustrate Plainfield in this way.

The Camera Club members know and we know that it cannot be done. Both speak from experience.

Even if it was attempted on the merits of the views to be given, regardless of such mercenary motives, it can not be done. The reason is that certain portions of Plainfield appear to best advantage in views taken in spring-time, others appear best when in their grandest in the summer, in the Fall, or in Winter. In some seasons the atmosphere for some views is too hazy, the foliage, in some cases, being too dense for Summer photographing, while Winter would appear for a good picture too barren to faithfully represent some subjects.

The Camera Club has worked steadily for a year to catch views at the best seasons. That has been the object of the weekly afternoon outings.

We trust our people will remember our own club's efforts to advance the interests of the locality.

We should be sorry to see them injured by the advertising scheme of a stranger that on its face appears to be a fraud.

—New Jersey has $71 building and loan associations, whose shares are worth $25,000,000.

God's ways seem dark; but soon or late,
They touch the bright goal of day;
The evil cannot break today,
The good can wait and afford to wait.

A few minutes after I had noticed him thus occupied, I was attracted by the screams of a child in great distress, and upon hurrying to the window, saw a four year old boy struggling with a colored man, for the possession of his pet, directly outside his own gate.

Finding his efforts at rescue unavailing, he rushed into the house for help, but his mother could do nothing when the city's badge was exhibited, but pay the dollar and a half that was demanded to save the animal from the pound.

I can recall similar complaints through the medium of your paper, and it seems as if a little more care in defining the words "roaming at large" might prevent such extortion.

Our ordinance as at present interpreted may be law, but it can scarcely be called justice. EYE WITNESS.

ILLUSTRATED PLAINFIELD.

What the Plainfield Camera Club Has Done to that End.

Two years ago THE NEWS began publishing weekly views of some of the beautiful spots about Plainfield. The cuts were in half-tone—the finest class of engravings known. They were, however, found to be too fine to show advantageously on paper of so coarse a fibre as is necessarily used for daily newspapers. Special ink and special paper were required. The publication in THE NEWS was, therefore, dropped, and arrangements were made to do the work on an elaborate scale. In fact it was considered that Plainfield was beautiful enough and had enough appreciation to justify the production of a work in parts to cost about $10,000. While we were quietly proceeding with this work, and had made about one hundred choice views, and some exceedingly fine engravings, it came to our knowledge that the Plainfield Camera Club members were at work in the same line, though on a much less elaborate scale, but their efforts were actuated more with the object of showing up the beauties of Plainfield, rather than for what money might be made out of the work.

Not wishing to hamper the club in its laudable efforts, any more than we would care to have our efforts hampered by being brought in conflict in such an enterprise, we, to help them, by giving a free field, knowing they would do nothing discreditable, went to the fountain head for work, and informed the President, through whom we learned of what the club had done.

Since then, as before, the club has gone steadily ahead with the work in a thoroughly systematic manner. They deserve, and we believe they will receive, hearty support from the public. It is intended to place the work at a price that will be within the reach of all, and, as the club includes among its members about fifty of our leading men, having both the means and artistic taste, to do the subject justice, it is safe to say that the work will be one to be highly-treasured by all lovers of our favored locality.

It is announced that a Mr. Hooker, of New Haven, in connection with another local paper, proposes to get out something entitled "Illustrated Plainfield," as an advertising scheme, in which it is understood that the fellow who wants to pay the most for the privilege will be given the greatest prominence regardless of the truth. That is, if one wants to pay $10, he can have his house or place of business inserted. The club have been invited to co-operate, but will have nothing to do with such a scheme.

It is utterly impracticable to properly illustrate Plainfield in this way.

The Camera Club members know and we know that it cannot be done. Both speak from experience.

Even if it was attempted on the merits of the views to be given, regardless of such mercenary motives, it can not be done. The reason is that certain portions of Plainfield appear to best advantage in views taken in spring-time, others appear best when in their grandest in the summer, in the Fall, or in Winter. In some seasons the atmosphere for some views is too hazy, the foliage, in some cases, being too dense for Summer photographing, while Winter would appear for a good picture too barren to faithfully represent some subjects.

The Camera Club has worked steadily for a year to catch views at the best seasons. That has been the object of the weekly afternoon outings.

We trust our people will remember our own club's efforts to advance the interests of the locality.

We should be sorry to see them injured by the advertising scheme of a stranger that on its face appears to be a fraud.

Money-Making Ink.

James Eddy of Troy makes all the ink with which the Government prints its paper money. Mr. Eddy's father invented the ink, but he never told anybody how he did it until just before he died, when he let his son into the secret. Had an untimely accident gathered the inventor to his fathers before he told his son about the ink, the Government Printer would have been in a bad way, for Mr. Eddy's invention is the only kind of ink that will print on the peculiar surface of the fibre of which Government note paper is made.

The present Mr. Eddy employs only six men in the manufacture of his ink, and none of them is in the secret. None of them has yet seen Mr. Eddy in the interesting act of mixing the ingredients of which the ink is composed. Mr. Eddy locks himself up in his own room two weeks in every year, and it is there and then that he mixes stuff enough to supply the Government with ink twelve months.

This process of locking himself up surrounds Mr. Eddy's work with as air of romance something like that of a man whom Balzac made to search for the alkahest, the only difference being that the alkahest fellow shut himself up for a life time and got nothing, besides disenjoying the affections of his wife, while Mr. Eddy locks himself up for two weeks and gets $50,000 a year.

EDITORIAL NOTES

A Chicago Social Settlement.

Four years ago in September some college bred women established Hull house settlement in the heart of the poorest, most villainous and crowded locality of Chicago. Between shipyards and stockyards the residents of the ward lived—people of every nation and kindred and tongue. There are 10,000 Italians in the district and so many Bohemians that Chicago ranks as the third largest Bohemian city in the world. It out-Bohemians Bohemia itself in some respects. Here the villainous sweating clothing houses got their work done by the filthiest of the filthy, in cellars, basements and garrets, amid disease and foulness that scares the one who stops to think of it.

There is to the ward in which Hull house is situated one saloon to every twenty-eight voters. There were 6,674 school children, with public school accommodations for only 2,976. The poor people who lived there did not know enough to make their educational wants known to the school board, and when the citizens of a ward do not make a row about their civic needs nobody else will supply these needs. That is one of the things which American citizens know which poor foreign citizens do not.

Hull house has succeeded in teaching the poor people their civic rights to some extent, so that now the board of education is energetically making provisions for the young Americans who were growing up in ignorance and crime. Other things, too, that Hull house has accomplished are related by Miss Jane Addams in The Forum. They read like story improbabilities nevertheless that here is the true road to the millennium. Hull house was established pure; and simply to practically carry out the doctrine of the American republic that all men are equal, and that larger, sweeter doctrine still—that all mankind are brethren. This is to be taken literally and truly. There is no detestable suggestion of charity about the thing.

Miss Addams calls it "an effort to weave social democracy." She repudiates root and branch the idea that it is a philanthropy in the ordinary sense. A number of refined, devoted women fix their residence in the poorest, lowest part of a city. They assume no airs of superiority or patronage. They take their refined surroundings and dainty housekeeping with them. Then they establish a social center for all the people of the neighborhood. Every need of human nature which will give it help to lift it higher an attempt is made to meet. A gymnasium, manual training classes, classes in literary and scientific study, musical clubs, debating societies, cooking and housekeeping classes are among some of the ideas that have taken practical shape.

There are social evenings as well, and these are an oasis in the desert to honest and struggling foreigners who live in the midst of squalor and dirt.

A steady effort has been made to teach on the one hand better modes of housekeeping and on the other a knowledge of the citizen's rights and duties. Once the poor immigrant or native has this knowledge firmly fixed, he will be as good a citizen as the millionaire.

An important feature of Hull house is a social science club, in which the wildest anarchists come and spout alongside the wealthy capitalist, who in some cases has been induced to be present and state his side of the case. It must necessarily follow that the prejudices of both are modified, and both come nearer to that feat almost impossible to the average human mind—seeing both sides of a question. Miss Addams is free to say that in her judgment, if the quaint up violent of the anarchists had been allowed to vent itself thus harmlessly in air, the lamentable Haymarket tragedy would have been avoided.

Finally the writer thinks that the residents at Hull house learn quite as much from the people about them as the people do from them. No doubt they do. Here stretches out a glorious field for strong, kindly souls that are longing for a mission.

Christ Episcopal church, Philadelphia, has settled the choir question in a manner satisfactory to its congregation. After a variety of experiments in choirs the musical directors at length decided on a surpliced choir of both boys and girls. In order to maintain such a selection of singers is known as a "cock and hen choir." The uniform adopted consists of a black cassock, white surplice and the "mortar board" hat so familiar to English eyes at Oxford. The girls range in age from twelve upward. This mixed choir drew throngs to the church service.

The first registration under Mississippi's new constitution caused some flutter of excitement. Persons who have failed to pay a poll tax and are unable to read and write are not to be permitted to vote. There is one exception to this requirement. It is that until 1896 the citizen who cannot read and write may vote if he shows that he understands the constitution when it is read to him.

It is appalling to think that in the small state of Rhode Island alone more than 5,000 children are working in factories—that, too, for a dollar a week.

REID STATES HIS VIEWS.

Campaign Issues Discussed in His Letter of Acceptance.

THE FEDERAL ELECTIONS MEASURE.

He Says It Scarcely Calls for Notice and Is Only Used by the Democrats to Divert Attention from the Questions of Protective Tariff and the Currency.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—Hon. Whitelaw Reid's letter accepting the Republican nomination for vice president has been made public. It is addressed to Hon. W. T. Durbin, Anderson, Ind., and is dated Ophir Farm, N. Y., Oct. 18. In it Mr. Reid says:

The party platforms so called—are more important this year than usual. Both the leading candidates have unreservedly the approval of the American people in its highest form of expression. Attention is thereby concentrated less on the men themselves and more on the principles each is put forward to represent, and would, in case of election, be required to carry out.

The declarations of our opponents demand still closer examination, since their victory now would give them the first opportunity they have had since 1856 to put in practice their party policy. Never since that date have they had control at once both in the executive and the legislative departments of the government. This year the election of a president clearly carries with it majorities in both houses of congress.

It is obvious that, in the common judgment of the people in all parts of the country, the really vital issues which divide the two parties and demand a popular decision are those relating to the tariff and the currency. Fortunately both sides have ample time for discussion of these subjects with direct aim, simplicity and frankness. The issue lies made between the rival candidates for the popular suffrage are especially sharp and distinct.

The Elections Bill.

Mr. Reid then goes into an extended argument of the protective tariff, its constitutionality and its effect on wages, and devotes considerable space to a discussion of the financial question. Mr. Reid, speaking of the alleged force bill, says it scarcely calls for notice, and continues:

The very title of the bill referred to proclaimed its object to be to prevent the use of force at elections. It failed anyway, and the southern white men who were lately its chief as they were its most interested opponents now begin to wish it revived, to protect them from being themselves counted out of elections they have fairly won—as they did in Alabama by their own white fellow Democrats.

It is well, however, to say that the demunciation in the Democratic platform of the principle that the federal government may supervise the election of federal officers is grotesque. That principle has been long recognized and it has been sustained by the courts. It now stands unaffected as the statute law of 1871 was enforced at recent elections by Grover Cleveland, then president of the United States, through his order of Oct. 5, 1888, and Garland, his attorney general.

But it is not to be disguised that the real clamor against the principle, if it means anything, means a purpose to nullify the twenty-fifth and twenty-fifth articles of the constitution of the United States.

Mr. Reid next refers to the revival of American shipping, and repeats his address to the same effect of the Republican national convention as a whole. In closing he pays a high tribute to the administration of President Harrison. He says:

Harrison's Administration.

The administration of President Harrison has been generally recognized as honest, able and safe. Considering the number of important subjects of both foreign and domestic policy it has been compelled to deal with and the satisfactions that has attended the results, it may indeed be pronounced brilliantly successful.

Abroad it has adjusted difficult questions with consideration for weak nations, and with courteous but resolute firmness to the most powerful. It has protected the honor of the flag and the rights of our citizens; has preserved the peace, and secured the further appointment of its principle of international arbitration; has removed long standing prohibitions on unjust charges of unhealthfulness against our food products, and secured new markets with our neighbors and promoted a closer intercourse.

At home it has refunded a portion of the remaining debt at the lowest rate ever commanded by any nation in the civilized world; has largely strengthened and improved our navy; has greatly enlarged the free lists of our common wants, and reduced over $148,000,000 of duties on a single article in admitting sugar free.

Not to enumerate further, it may be fairly said that the present condition of the country and the general public confidence in the administration promise to form the strongest protest against subjecting the people to the shock and business uncertainties which would follow a sudden reversal of policy is not what either the suggestions of ordinary business prudence or the obvious and general contentment of the people call for.

I believe your declaration of principles and your renomination of a pure, patriotic and successful president will command the popular approval at the polls, and will render God more than ever the continued benefit of country.

Very respectfully yours,
WHITELAW REID.

Forsaker in New York.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—Hon. Joseph B. Forsaker addressed a large and enthusiastic meeting of Republicans at Cooper Union last night. He spoke for an hour and a half, chiefly on the tariff question and the declaration of the Democrats on state issues of finance. His remarks were applauded throughout, and when he finally resumed his seat the audience would not have it. Cries of "Encore!" "Encore!" "Give us the force bill!" were raised, and the cries did not cease until ex-Governor Forsaker got up and complied with the imperious demand of his audience. He then spoke for half an hour longer on the force bill and some of the minor issues of the campaign.

When asked by a reporter what he thought of the outlook in the political campaign Mr. Forsaker said: "The indications point to the re-election of President Harrison. I have just returned from a tour of some of the western states. I do not think there is any doubt about Republican success in Nebraska, Kansas, Iowa, Wisconsin or Indiana. The Democrats who may be reckoning on some of these states going for Cleveland will be mistaken."

Fusion in South Dakota.

MITCHELL, Oct. 19. — South Dakota political circles were given a distinct shock when it was announced that the executive committee of the Democratic state committee would withdraw two electors and substitute Populist electors therefore. In return for this the Populists will withdraw two of their state candidates in favor of the Democratic candidates.

Proctor Succeeds Edmunds.

MONTPELIER, Vt., Oct. 19.—The house and senate elected Redfield Proctor United States senator to fill out the unexpired term of Senator Edmunds, also for six years from March 1, 1893.

Booth Very Feeble.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., Oct. 19.—Edwin Booth is in very feeble health and likely to drop off at any moment.

BOSTON GETS FIRST BLOOD.

The Base for the Baseball Pennant Fortunate to Be Interesting.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 19.—Two errors by two of the Cleveland players and Duffy's long hits won the second game in the championship series for Boston. Cleveland batted better than the Bostons, although it secured no more hits. The local team was very unlucky in sending the ball time and again into some fielder's waiting hands. Clarkson was his hard in two innings only and pitched splendid ball. He made one of the greatest stops ever seen on any ball field, but Virtue let the ball get away from him on Clarkson's throw, and subsequently the latter was put to the benefit of the error brought his run in. The game in no way demonstrated the superiority of either team over the other. If it did anything at all it confirmed the impression that the clubs are two of the most evenly matched that ever came together. The attendance was 7,300 and the day perfect for ball playing.

Boston got its first run in the first inning on singles by Long and McCarty and Duffy's long fly to left field. In the third inning Long got to first on Virtue's muff of a thrown ball and reached home after Duffy's three base hit. Zimmer's single, Clarkson's sacrifice and Burkett's fly to Lowe gave Cleveland its first run. In the next inning the local team scored again on Mc-Kean's single, Virtue's sacrifice and a home hit to left field by McAleer. The score was now a tie, but in the fifth Boston forged ahead again on Tebeau's fumble of McCarty's hot ground hit and a two base hit by Duffy that banged up against the left field fence. One more run was added to the Boston score in the eighth inning on a three base hit to right field by Duffy and Nash's line single in the same direction.

In the ninth it looked at one time as though Cleveland would surely tie the score. The first put out was made at first by Duffy of Virtue's line hit. Then Duffy muffed McAleer's fly and threw the batter out at second on a close decision. O'Connor hit safely to right field by Duffy and Zimmer followed with a tremendous drive to the left field fence for three bases that scored O'Connor. Stolen fields at Clarkson's hit, but Long got the ball and threw the batter out.

Score:

Cleveland.....	0	0	1	0	0	0	1	0	1—3
Boston.....	0	1	0	0	0	0	1	0	1—3

Clarkson and Zimmer, Staley and Kelly.

FASHIONS

New Styles in Millinery.

Here are two sketches of recently imported Paris hats. The one with the tall crown is made of velvet of two shades—pink and green. The crown is pink, with a band of oriental embroidery round it, and the lining of the brim is of the same shade. The rest of the hat is green, and on the left side is a large bow, 6 or 7 inches, of mental gold pins and an ostrich feather. Most of the new hats seem, by the bye, have the crown high, or big, or both, and lavishly trimmed with feathers. The second hat is distinctly novel as regards the arrangement of the feathers at the side. It is felt, of a lovely shade of brown, with a black band of velvet round the crown, covered with bead embroidery and long black feathers.

Feathers are tremendously fashionable, and these hats, sketched in profile, show what will probably be the favorite manner of wearing them. Among close fitting straw hats is a variation on the Bolero, with a Tam O'Shanter crown of velvet in a contrasting color and quills at the side. Some of the crowns are, to express it mildly, very eccentric. For instance, one new model consists of a black straw plateau and a pink pyramid, "rising to an altitude," as the geography books say, of six or seven inches, its only ornament being a bow at the side. Another hat has a domecrown, surrounded by a steep wall, above the top of which the roof is just visible. Velvet is expected to be more popular than felt for picture hats, and massive gold buckles are taking the place of paste ornaments.

The most successful bonnets seen were composed of velvet of two shades. There are two new shades of lilac. One of the colors rather to the fore just now is the exact shade of a cardinal's robe.

Latest Styles in Lingerie.

The narrow tuckings appear on almost everything and are a great addition to the many pretty frills now introduced on nightgowns. The newest make in these is the wide cape frill with a sash at the waist formed of narrow ribbon carried through straps. Some of these frillings are edged with color which are hemstitched on to the material. They mostly have frills at the hem. The chemises have turned down flaps, generally scalloped and interlaced with lace, which are intended to fall over the straps—an overblown idea. White muslin petticoats for full dress are also spoke for half an hour longer on the force bill and some of the minor issues of the campaign.

The Rio Grande Strike Ended.

DENVER, Oct. 19.—The strike on the Denver and Rio Grande railroad is ended, pending an investigation by the board of adjustment and the Rio Grande management.

The Facing Record Broken.

NASHVILLE, Oct. 19.—Hal Pointer was in great form here, and came within half a second of the 2:00 mark which Nancy Hanks and Mascot both rounded at Terre Haute.

The Plague in Hamburg.

HAMBURG, Oct. 19.—There have been twelve fresh cases of cholera here and four deaths. In Altona there have been four fresh cases and three deaths.

His Skull Crushed.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 19.—The dead body of George Hently was found lying in a creek with the skull crushed. Indications point to a murder.

Dr. Tuefel Insane.

STUTTGART, Oct. 19.—Dr. Tuefel, body physician of the king of Wurtemberg, became suddenly insane and was taken to an asylum.

Chicago Wanted the Blarneystone.

CORK, Oct. 19.—The owner of Blarney castle has refused to allow the Blarneystone to be taken to the Chicago World's fair.

TO BE CLOSED SUNDAYS

The World's Fair Vexed Question Practically Settled.

VISITORS CROWDING TO CHICAGO.

Vice President Morton and Ex-President Hayes Arrive in the Exposition City, as Does Also Governor Flower and Many Other Distinguished Dedication Guests.

CHICAGO, Oct. 19.—The hum of conversation, the footsteps of arriving delegations, the glitter of military uniforms lent to the hotel lobbies a brightness, bustle and activity which strongly contrasted with the dismal downpour of dripping rain which greeted what is practically the first day's prominent arrivals for the World's fair dedication. It is questionable if ever on the occasion of any congress, commercial, political, social and religious—the chief hotels experienced such a steady influx of guests.

To the Grand Pacific must be assigned the honor of receiving the first of the distinguished visitors. They were ex-Vice President Hayes and his daughter.

Mr. Hayes had arrived with Vice President Morton, who was accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. Redmond, a friend of the family and Private Secretary Chilton. Mr. Morton and party were driven to the home of President Higginbotham, of the local directory.

Colonel Elliott F. Shepard, of the New York Mail and Express and of Sunday closing fame, was also accompanied by his daughter, who came on the same train. Governor Hoard and staff, of Colorado; Governor H. H. Markham and staff, of California, and Governor Allen Wray and staff, of Washington, also arrived and are quartered at the Grand Pacific. Governor Burleigh, of Maine, and staff are quartered at the Victoria.

Governor Flower and staff arrived over the Michigan Central. The party was met at the depot by the reception committee and escorted to the Auditorium. Mrs. W. R. Halsey, niece of Governor Flower, was a member of the party. Governor B. J. Reynolds and staff, of Delaware, are at the Leland. The members of the council of the city of Philadelphia are at the Leland. Governor Frank L. Brown and staff, of Maryland, are at the Palmer House.

Four companies of marines, accompanied by their celebrated band, arrived from Washington and New York. Three hundred and five boys from the Carlisle Indian school are also here to take part in the grand pageant.

The Sunday Question.

There was a large attendance of national commissioners when President T. W. Palmer called that body to order in the city council chamber. The present session of the commission is to be one of considerable importance. The session was opened with prayer by Rev. Dr. McPherson, after which reports were made by President Palmer and Secretary Dickinson.

The first subject of the day's session came up, and the most important action of the commission at the session was a decision to hear no argument for or against the opening of the fair on Sunday. This ended the action of congress as a final settlement of the controversy. Tomorrow had been set as Sunday closing arguments, and numerous pleaders on both sides of the question will be disappointed in not having an opportunity to air their views.

General Weller, of the local directory was then placed under fire. Ex-Governor Waller, of Connecticut, led the malcontents in an attack on the arrangements for a military parade. The troops, he said, were brought here to parade the streets of Chicago, not to be kept locked up in the World's fair grounds. Resolutions were introduced ordering that arrangements be made for a military parade through the principal streets of Chicago, but after a long discussion the whole matter was finally laid on the table.

The Lady Managers.

The regular meeting of the board of lady managers of the World's Columbian commission was held. After Mrs. Mary C. Bell, of Florida, had offered prayer Mrs. Bedford Fenwick, president of the British royal commission, made an address upon her mission to this country in the interests of training schools for nurses.

President Mrs. Palmer then submitted her report, which showed very favorable progress in the work of the board. Speaking of the appointment of foreign committees to co-operate with the board, Mrs. Palmer said that they were now possessed of the most powerful organization that ever existed among women, having official committees in twenty-two countries and favorable responses from seven others.

DUNRAVEN'S CHALLENGE.

He Wants Another Yacht Race for the America's Cup.

THE NEW YORK CLUB IS WILLING.

It Practically Accepts the Invitation and Appoints a Committee to Make Arrangements for the Match—Anxious for the Meeting if the Terms Can Be Made.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—A special meeting of the New York Yacht club was held last evening at the clubhouse, corner of Madison avenue and Twenty-seventh street, to consider Lord Dunraven's informal challenge for the America cup.

Commodore Elbridge T. Gerry was in the chair, and surrounding him on all sides sat representative yachtsmen from all sections of the country. General Charles Paine, who has thrice successfully defended the America cup, had come on from Boston to interpret the clauses in the new deed of gift, and he was made chairman of the committee of five which was appointed by the chair to try and arrange satisfactory and equitable terms with Lord Dunraven.

Among the other well known yachtsmen present were ex-Commodores James D. Fish and S. Nicholson Kane, J. V. S. Oddie, F. and S. Nicholson Kane, J. V. S. Oddie, F. W. J. Hurst, L. V. Clark, W. H. Forbes, of Boston, and hosts of others equally well known. In fact, as one of the members said afterward, it was one of the most representative gatherings of yachtsmen ever in the clubhouse in years.

The general feeling seemed to be that if a race could be brought about it should be, but whether it will or not is another question. At any rate, from the action of the members of the club at last evening's meeting it will not be their fault if a race does not take place.

Dunraven's Challenge.

Lord Dunraven in his letter says:

I will sail a series of matches according to the rules of the new deed of gift, with the following exceptions and additions:

First—The length up on the load water line of my vessel to be the only dimension required; this to be sent with the formal notice of challenge, and her custom house register to follow as soon as practicable.

Second—Any excess over the estimated length on the load water line of my vessel to count double in calculating time allowance; but my vessel not, in any case to exceed such estimated length by more than 2 per cent. The yacht that sails against me not to exceed the estimated length on the load water line of my vessel by more than 2 per cent., and any excess in length beyond the estimated length of my vessel on the load water line to count double in estimating the time allowance.

It is to be understood and agreed that should I win the cup the club obtaining the custody of it shall hold it open to a challenge on the same conditions as those under which I challenge.

After the reading of the letter General Thomas J. Payne offered this resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

The Resolution.

Whereas, The communication has been received by this club from Lord Dunraven, indicating that a challenge for the America cup may be sent upon the terms of the deed of trust with certain exceptions and additions; and

Whereas, Said terms are permitted by the mutual agreement clause of the trust deed controlling said cup and are acceptable to the club provided that a vessel of the specified grade either now existing or under construction and known to be available for the use of this club in defending the cup shall be named or presented:

Voted, That a committee of five be appointed with full power to arrange such a match with any qualified yacht club, specifying what yachts, if any, are excepted by the above proviso.

The chairman appointed the following committee of five: General Thomas J. Payne, ex-Commodore James D. Smith, A. Cass Canfield, ex-Vice Commodore Lathon A. Fish and Archibald Rogers.

The Terms of the Challenge.

Secretary Liddle, at the conclusion of the meeting, sent a cable dispatch to Lord Dunraven, telling him that the matter had been referred to a special committee, and that he would be promptly advised of their action.

Some of the more sanguine members seemed to think there would be a race sure, but one of the letter informed men said after the meeting that it was certainly a little doubtful yet.

"You see," he continued, "according to Lord Dunraven's letter, if he should challenge us for the cup with a 70-footer we would have to race him with a vessel of that size. We could not, for instance, put in the Volunteer against her. It would also bar out the 84-foot Herreshoff centerboard boat which Royal Phelps Carroll is having built.

"I don't think that it would be right to accept any such terms, and I think that the club has shown conclusively to every one that it is anxious to concede everything within reason to bring about a race, and that if there is no race this time it is not our fault."

LE CARON'S REMINISCENCES.

The British Spy Tells the Story of His Life.

LONDON, Oct. 19.—The reminiscences of Major Le Caron, or Thomas Philip Beech, the British spy, who gained notoriety, in 1889 by his disclosures on behalf of The Times before the Parnell commission, have been made public.

Le Caron recounts his early life as already known, and describes how a Tennessee girl, whom he afterward married, rescued him from Confederate marauders during the civil war in the United States. He says:

"Carrying the secret of my life locked in her courageous heart, she proved as faithful an ally and as perfect a foil as ever a man placed like me could have been given by heaven. A look, a grasp or an impulsive movement might ever have wrecked my life, but brave, affectionate, fearless, often beseeching me to end my terribly dangerous career, she faced the world with a countenance which gave no sign of a caution which never slumbered."

He calls himself a fatalist and says, "I never sought Feinianism; Feinianism, rather, came to me."

Writing to his father in regard to the projected Fenian invasion of Canada, he says he never supposed that one result of his father's imparting his letters to the British government would be that he should receive a commission as an official spy.

He declares that when he and General O'Neill were received at the White House by President Johnson the president told General O'Neill that he sympathized with the Fenians and was willing to do all in his power to assist the Fenian movement.

"You must remember," said President Johnson, "that I gave you full five days before issuing the proclamation stopping you.

"In God's name what more did you want? If you could not get them in five days, — you could never get them. And then, as president, I was compelled to enforce the neutrality laws or be denounced on every side."

Le Caron describes to the utmost detail the whole Fenian movement against Canada, showing how he became acquainted with every man of any importance connected with the movement. He says that only twice was he in danger of discovery.

NEW YORK TALKS TO CHICAGO.

The Long Distance Telephone Is Now in Successful Operation.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—The long distance telephone line between this city and Chicago was formally opened at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The line operated in the most perfect and satisfactory manner. The line was opened by a conversation between Mayor Grant in New York and Mayor Washburne in Chicago. Mayor Grant offered his congratulations to Mayor Washburne upon the approaching celebration, and also upon the opening of a telephone communication which brings the two cities so close together. Chicago's representative returned the congratulations.

Professor Bell then took possession of the telephone, and held a conversation with William H. Hubbard, of Chicago, who assisted Professor Bell with his first public exhibition of the telephone in 1876, at the centennial, when the emperor of Brazil and Sir William Thompson first heard the telephone. Professor Bell sent his congratulations to the officers of the company in Chicago on the completion of the line. While talking a photograph of Professor Bell was taken by flash light.

The ladies were then given an opportunity of talking to Chicago, and pronounced it "just too lovely for anything." A man in Chicago recited "The Charge of the Six Hundred," and every word was distinctly heard at this end; in fact, much better than it could be heard over the average local telephone.

After the exhibition the guests were invited to lunch, and then shown the big switchboard of the Metropolitan Telephone company and the other wonders of the building. They were presented with souvenirs in the shape of coils of telephone wire, with miniature telephones attached.

The line to Chicago will be opened to the public today. It runs through Easton, Harrisburg, Pittsburg and Newcastle, Pa.; Cuyahoga Falls and Maumee, O., and South Bend, Ind., to Chicago, and is what is known as a "metallic circuit," or two wires, there being no ground connection. The wire is copper and considerably heavier than the ordinary telephone wire.

Corbett Tells What He Will Do.

CHICAGO, Oct. 19.—Corbett publishes the following: "My theatrical engagements prevent me from fighting for a year. When I am ready I will fight Mr. Jackson in the club offering the largest purse and for as much money over $10,000 as he wants on the side, providing it is impossible for me to force Charles Mitchell to fight. I am of the opinion that I can get more money from the Olympic club, of New Orleans, to fight Mitchell than any other man in the world."

TO HELP HOUSEKEEPERS.

NEW THINGS TO AID IN MAKING HOME MORE PLEASANT.

Some Excellent Recipes That Have Been Tried—Useful Suggestions That Will Be Read With Interest—Kitchen and Parlor Hints.

When buying meat it is well to remember that beef contains the most nutriment to the pound of any meat. The expensive cuts are not more nutritious than the cheaper ones, and a pound of boiling meat at eight cents answers as well the purpose of nutrition as a porterhouse at eighteen, and when properly prepared will be relished as much by the growing members of the family. Chicken, veal and lamb are luxuries which are better avoided, unless your children are well fed and you do not live up to every cent of your income. Fish is agreeable, but it should be like eggs and lard—above suspicion.

Window Gardening.

One who has occasion to travel in winter through the bleak New England villages and to visit some of its homes cannot but be struck with the prevalence of window flower culture, says the New York Tribune. These tiny house-gardens often show masses of bloom that would not discredit a first-class greenhouse. Doubtless the pressure and hurry of life are not so great in these quiet homes that these is time enough and to spare for full attention to this particular branch of floriculture; and the exposed and isolated position of such house gives all the advantage of light and sensible that it is possible to have in an ordinary dwelling. Still, it is possible for every one to devote a little time and space to window-gardening; and all flower-lovers who have never tried it should fit up some sunny casement and give a little time and attention this winter to this delightful occupation. The best arrangement for such a purpose is to have a wooden bench made just the height and width of the window itself. On the two sides of the window are ranged brackets, such as they sell in shops for lamps; these are large enough to hold good-sized pots. The sketch we give is taken from a window garden in a Long Island house, which was brilliant in color and verdure all winter long. One rather noticeable plant, by the way, that seems to succeed admirably in the farm-house (one is seldom seen in town) is the cactus. The foliage of the numerous varieties is so odd and picturesque that the plant is a delectation in itself, while the flowers are magnificent in color and size, and they appear in every way of cultivation, and several of them bloom freely from October to February. They are very easily propagated from cuttings, which will grow though, if left to expand to the sun after cutting until the sap is dried; they may then be started in dry sand, which, after a day or two, should be kept moderately wet until the roots are formed. For winter blooming the epiphyllum is one of the best varieties.

Suggestions to be Remembered.

A bit-or-miss rag carpet, with striped warp, is much less trouble to make than when the rags are stripped, looks well, and is much cheaper than to five cents a yard loss for weaving.

A rather thin piece of unbleached cotton flannel makes the best of dish wipers. Its first wetting should be in a thorough one in boiling water, and all lint particles will be "laid."

Shaker flannel—that is, a part cotton material—is the best for children, especially infants. The admixture of cotton prevents much shrinking, and makes its lasting qualities greater. It may be had in very fine and soft, or in coarser and heavier varieties, and at a cost of from twenty cents to one dollar per yard.—Good Housekeeping.

To Clean Lace.

An old lacemaker who has woven many a goossmer web for that connoisseur of laces, Mme. Modjeska, and who was also the fair actress to fashion some of the daintiest patterns her deft fingers delight in doing, gives this simple recipe for lace-cleaning: Spread the lace out carefully on wrapping paper, then sprinkle it carefully with calcined magnesia; place another paper over it and put it away between the leaves of a book for two or three days. All it needs is a skilful shake to scatter the white powder, and then it is ready for wear, with slender threads intact and as fresh as when new.

Pineapple Juice.

"Pineapple juice," says a physician, "has medical properties of the highest order. In throat diseases, and even in diphtheria, it has seldom failed to give relief, and as an anti-dyspeptic it is invaluable. The unpleasant taste victims of indigestion experience on rising in the morning can be got rid of by the persistent use of this remedy, and so it goes at once to the root of the trouble and removes the cause, the cure is a permanent one. Any dyspeptic who has not tried the pineapple should lose no time in taking the advice of one who has."

Egg Salad.

Boil six eggs fifteen minutes. While they are boiling make a French dressing and to it add one tablespoonful of tarragon vinegar, the same quantity of onion juice and a little chopped parsley. When the eggs are done cut in slices and place in a salad dish. Pour the dressing over while the eggs are still hot. Stand in a cold place two hours then serve.

A Good Cup of Chocolate.

Let the milk come to a boil. For every two cups mix a heaping teaspoonful of grated chocolate with enough cold milk to form a paste. Pour this into the milk when it has come to a boil. Let it boil three minutes. Serve with whipped cream.

DISHES FOR INVALIDS.

Dainty Dishes and Delicacies Must Please of Attractive Appearance.

Housewives should remember that the appetite is a most capricious sense, and that nothing stimulates it to such activity as being tempted a little.

Prepare your invalid's food in such small quantities—even if the meal must be often repeated—that when his tray appears he is not disheartened by having eaten just a little more than is there to eat.

Another thing to be remembered in the sick-room is, that if no one else in the house is troubled with poor digestion, at least the invalid must be. His meals must come to him in the most enticing manner possible. Wine jelly, served in a deep, thin glass, with whipped cream frothing over the top, is a dainty article of diet, and broth in a small, clear glass finger bowl is more palatable than in heavier dinner-ware. Even poached eggs, served upon a dark blue or a pale gray plate, and also a section of broiled chicken, embedded in fresh green parsley leaves, are alluring morsels for delicate appetites.

Ironing Day.

As the ironing must be hot, regardless of the weather, it will for the honor to study how the proper degree of heat may be obtained without converting the entire apartment into an oven during the summer season. One plan which is commended by those who have tried it, is the use of an old-fashioned cake griddle, which is laid into the trivet of the stove, and being quite thin brings the irons near the fire where they heat quickly. Another plan is the employment of an oil stove, which is often found to be a great advantage, as it can be placed in any convenient corner, and one of moderate size, with a relay of three irons, will be found to work to a charm. If the irons should become too hot, do not plunge it into cold water, as this will soon spoil its temper and finish. Let it stand upon the stove for a little while, with the smoothing side exposed to the air for a few minutes, and it will be ready for service. Before being used, the iron should always be tested upon cloths kept for the purpose, and not, as is too often the practice, by a touch with a wet finger. This will reveal both the degree of heat and whether the surface is entirely clean, so that the goods shall not be soiled or injured.—Good Housekeeping.

A Home-Made Couch

An exceedingly comfortable addition to the furniture of a bedroom is a couch or lounge where a five minutes' level stretch can be enjoyed. A very simple foundation will answer on which to make a really handsome and enjoyable article of furniture.

The couch of which a sketch is given and which will be described, is a cot, padded, covered with cretonne and provided with a generous supply of pillows.

The cot is twelve inches high, two feet and four inches wide and six feet long. It has a woven wire mattress. It is perfectly firm, durable and comfortable and costs at a general furnishing store $1.50.

A mat the exact size of the top of the cot is made of prints and the cotton from two comfortables, the covers of which were worn out. This is covered with cretonne. A flounce reaching to the floor Turkish fashion and headed with a puff the depth of the mat is added.

Two large pillows are covered with the same kind of cretonne. They haves ruffle of the same all around, the edge of which is worked in buttonhole stitch with dark red linen rope twist.

The smaller pillow is covered with smooth gray linen and furnished with a ruffle of the material made double. It is ornamented by a vine embroidered in shades of red and brown crossing diagonally from corner to corner.

Twelve yards of cretonne were used and one yard of linen. The pillows were filled with feathers from a discarded bed. The whole cost of materials was $1.65, and the work did not take more than two hours, except the button-holeing of the ruffles and the embroidering of the linen pillow, which was done as "pick up" work in odd minutes of leisure.—Margaret Ryder, in Country Gentleman.

Cement for Glass and China.

An excellent cement for mending china or glass, and one that shows little trace is made as follows: Soak some isinglass in water until it is soft, and then dissolve it in as small a quantity of proof alcohol as possible; gentle heat will aid the dissolving. In two ounces of this mixture dissolve ten grains of gum ammoniac; while still in liquid add half a teaspoon of mastic previously dissolved in rectified alcohol. Mix well. To liquefy place the bottle in warm water apply it to the fracture with a camel's hair brush, and set the mended vessel a few hours in some undisturbed place.

Good Bread.

Make a sponge at night of one pint of warm water, two cupfuls of white flour, half a cupful of yeast and a half a teaspoonful of salt. In the morning, while light, add half a cupful of Indian meal, the same of nice brown or white sugar and an even spoonful of saleratus dissolved in a spoonful or two of boiling water. Scatter in gradually as much Graham flour as you can stir and then, put the dough into the pan. Let it rise until very light. This will make one good-sized loaf.

Raised Muffins.

Into a bowl put one and one-half pints of Graham flour, half a cupful of sugar and a teaspoonful of salt. Into a sieve put half a pint of white flour, a teaspoonful of saleratus and two of cream of tarter; mix thoroughly with this flour and sift on to the material in the bowl. Mix all thoroughly while dry, and add two nicely beaten eggs and a pint of milk. Fill muffin cups about two-thirds to the top, and bake in a quick oven.

To Remove a Cork Stopper.

To remove a glass stopper that has become fast put a few drops of sweet oil or glycerine on the ever one about the stopper. In an hour or so the stopper may be easily removed.

A bottle of flexible celloid on is very useful for cracks in the bowls, pitchers, cups, etc. Care must be taken to keep it well protected from the air.—Good H[illegible]

NO TIME TO WRITE.

A Brief Note from the "Household Dredge."

Indeed the lot of woman is hard. Has it not been ordained into our ears since we were young?

She is the slave and serf of selfish man. Here is the work that never ends. She is the cause of it. Her husband comes to her worse half, the brute! and let him dally in the lap of ease and luxury, must sacrifice her young life, her beautiful hands, her everything else and carry one on the altar of work.

At the very hottest curl of the 106 wave I picked up a letter in the street which, from appearances, I judged to be from a fair face. I hate to print it because it bears so heavily upon the laziness of paterfamilias and the ease and luxury with which he surrounds himself at the expense of his family. I do not like to give my own sex away, as it were, but a stern sense of duty nerves me on. So here goes:

MY OWN DEARER, DARLING HUSBY.—You do not know how lonely we all are without you. Why don't you just drop your hateful business and come up here for a week or two? I am sure the old store would keep right on running if you were away for a time.

Did you send the check for fifty dollars for the board last week? It has not put in an appearance.

It seems dreadfully stupid here. There are only three or four nice young men in the place. One is a regular fright, and the rest are the property of the hands of the young girls, for they know I have no designs upon them and feel correspondingly grateful to me. Besides, I rather think they like me.

Those children will be the death of me yet. Harry is trying to accumulate and they all the time making trouble and expense. I have just paid a sewing woman two dollars for mending their stockings and putting new seats in their pants. Last night Raphael knocked over one of the Etruscan ewers in my bedchamber. The landlord says he repents exceedingly the accident, as the set was a very rare one, and he shall let me off to put down ten dollars in my bill for the broken pitcher.

It has been awfully hot here and we have suffered dreadfully. If Mother Eve had been here last night I verily believe she would have slept without the fig leaf. I envy you the big, cool breezes in the hall at home.

Calipso broke my bottle of hair bleacher last night. Wish you would go to Mme. Ibrahem Sophia, the wonder hair dresser, for a few more. While you are about it you might as well have her put up the usual set of toilet necessities, the $15.00 size, and send them to me. I will understand.

We had a delightful excursion yesterday to Horsenogle mountain, and picnicked in the glen. A mosquito bit me just between the shoulders, where I could not possibly reach it to scratch, and I suffered excruciating agonies all night. I was just able to reach it with my fingers and that was all. The man charged sixteen dollars for the wagon, and as I had so many children I had to pay half. Isn't the price rather high? By the way, I am all out of money, and if you want me to do what is right and proper by the collection plate you must send me some right away.

There is going to be a grand hop here next Saturday night and I have positively nothing fit to wear. I will not go with my last pair of colored slippers out of the second drawer in the back room bureau. Take them to Hank's and ask him to match the color with some of their grosgrain $3.50 silk and send to me at once. There is a very nice and blithely obliging dressmaker here, and I guess with prompt work on your part that we will pull through.

I have signed a subscription paper for five dollars to put a new coat of paint on the Episcopal church here. Please send check for the amount. It looks more respectable to give in that shape, and there is no mistake about the donor. Make check payable to me so I can indorse it.

Poor, poor boy! I wish I had the time to write you a nice long letter, but I have been invited by Jack Ansford to take a ride in Stanham somewhere, and as for today you must put up with this hurried little scrawl. You must be dreadfully forlorn keeping bachelor's hall without any servant. And yet I suppose we must economize until you get a rise of salary. I wonder if you are laughing at your description of how you sleep in an unmade bed and try to cook over that horrid little gas stove.

Well, I am surrounded, and the gentleman that she wanted to go back to the city. She second me to the matinee and I had to write him with an offer of five dollars more a month in order to keep her. It would be impossible to get a girl for less.

Well, goodby. There are several little commissions I would you to do for me, but Mr. Ansford is calling now and I have not the time to think of them. Your lonely little wife, EVANGELINE.

—New York Herald.

An Object of Suspicion.

The rain descended in sheets.

A man with stooping figure crept stealthily from the back door and stood irresolute. In another moment a lady of middle age appeared at his side.

Both of them looked very much dismayed.

"Can't you hide it under your coat, dearr" asked the woman anxiously.

The man shook his head, and the lines of care in his honest despened perceptibly.

"No, my love, I must carry it in plain sight of the whole world."

The woman shuddered.

The rain descended in sheets.

"You'll take care, dear," she faltered sadly, "to avoid any large concourse of citizens for fear of exciting their anger and becoming lynched?"

The man gasped.

"Yes, love, Oh, dearr, how I wish I were safely through this!"

"And, dear, you'll not go near an officer of the law lest you be arrested as a criminal?"

The man fairly writhed in agony.

The rain descended in sheets.

"No, love. How long, O Lord, how long!"

"And you'll keep in the back streets, dear?"

"Yes, love."

Silently and with tearful eyes they embraced.

"Farewell, love. Don't forget me if I never return."

The woman could only sob and cling to him convulsively.

"My daughter is great, love. Pray for my deliverance."

With a mighty effort the man rushed into the storm.

The woman sank to the floor in a faint.

"Heaven protect him!"

The man was carrying an extra umbrella. The rain descended in sheets.—Detroit Tribune.

Disqualified.

A strapping young fellow appeared before the committee of inspection.

"You claim exemption from military service?" inquired the presiding officer.

"Yes, sir."

"On what grounds?"

"I am subject to a most serious affliction."

"Step into the next room!"

"But, sir—"

"Step into the next room!"

"Why, it isn't"——

"Step into the next room!"

Our man entered the adjoining apartment, where he was made to undress from head to foot, after which he presented himself again before the committee, this time sans coat, sans vest, sans everything."

"Now, will you now tell us what is your infirmity?

"Ecruit—I am shortsighted!—Figaro.

Our Language.

To show the anomalies of English spelling The New Western Magazine tells the following story:

A right suite little buoy, the son of a kernel, with a rough round his neck, flue up the road as quick as a dear. After a thyme he stopped at a horse and wrung the bells. His tow hurt him and he kneaded rest. He was two tired to rase his feet, push or two, and a feint mown of pain rose from his lips.

The made who herd the belle was about to pair a pare, but she threw it down and ran with all her might to fear her ground would not weight; but when she saw the little won there stood in her eyes at the site. "Ewe poor dear! Why do you lye hear? Are you dying?" she sade. "I know," he said; "I am feint." She bore him in her arms, as she aught, to a room where he might be quiet, gave him brod and sweet, held a cool bottle make his knows, untide his choler, rapped him up warmly, gave him a suite thrachm from a vial, till at lash he went fourth as hail as a young hourse.

INTERESTING ITEMS OF ATHLETICS.

The Elizabeth Team Defeats the Plainfield Team at Foot-Ball.—The P. H. A. A. to Have a Field Day To-Morrow.

The Pingry school foot-ball team of Elizabeth played the Leal's foot-ball team of this city yesterday afternoon on the Crescent's base-ball grounds and defeated them by a score of 5 to 0.

The team play on both sides was "ragged."

The tackling of Abbott, Simmonds and McGee of the Leal men was noticeably good.

Alexander, of the Pingry team was also a clever player.

In the second half Alexander had the ball and was running with good interference, toward the side line in an endeavor to break through.

Simmonds, of Leal's, caught him on the line in a terrific tackle and both young men fell with such force that they were stunned and the teams had several minutes of breathing spell while they recovered.

The Plainfield High School Athletic Association will have a Field Day to-morrow. Everyone is invited, by the association, to be at the Gentlemen's Driving Park at ten o'clock, Friday afternoon. A stage will leave the corner of Park avenue and Front street at 1.30 o'clock for the grounds.

The Judges will be: Mr. E. S. Hunt and Mr. F. S. Smith. Clerk of the Course, Mr. C. B. Morse. Starter, Mr. C. H. Augleman.

The sports will consist of 100 yards dash, putting the shot, two mile bicycle race, running high jump, one mile run, running broad jump, half-mile run, standing broad jump, three-legged race, throwing hammer, tug-of-war.

The entries are: T. B. Blair, R. Campbell, R. M. Clark, W. Cornwall, A. B. Crane, S. C. Crane, H. B. Fernald, F. K. Fish, Jr., F. W. Goddard, V. Green, J. L. Hulburt, Jr., W. F. Hyde, J. W. The bowling match which was to have been played at the Catholic Young Men's Lyceum alleys to-night will be has been postponed indefinitely. The young men devoted their time last night, instead, at beautifying the hall, to do their share toward honoring the anniversary of Columbus' discovery of America. A sociable will be held by the members some evening this week.

At the last bi-annual convention of the Sigma nu Fraternity which met at St. Louis in August, wine was not served at the banquet. This is something new in Greek Letter fraternity circles, being the first instance on record of such a banquet without wine. This was also the first convention held west of the Mississippi.

Mississippi, under its revised local option law, has recently called elections in a number of counties, which have resulted in prohibition sometimes carrying a county that had always largely favored license, so that within a few months it is probable that three-fourths of the State will be under prohibition.

A DEMOCRATIC MEETING.

HON. CHAS. WINFIELD AND MR. VINTON AT MUSIC HALL.

National Issues Explained from a Democratic Standpoint.—State Issues Dodged.—The Boasts of a Renegade.—Some Unpleasant Facts.

The Democrats held a mass meeting at Stillman Music Hall last evening.

Although there was about 500 people present, there were many vacant seats, quite a number preferring to stand. Two lawyers, professional pleasure-seekers, tried to show that the Republican principle of Protection to Home Industries, Honest Money, Fair Ballot, and Reciprocity, was all wrong, and the Democratic policy of Wild Cat Currency, Coercion, Free Trade, and War upon Home Industries generally, was all right.

In the audience there were about 50 of the fair sex, and a sprinkling of Republicans.

Mr. James Clark, who presided, introduced as the first speaker, Mr. Vinton of New York.

In the course of Mr. Vinton's remarks, it transpired that he was a renegade Republican, and, like renegades generally, was extremely rabid and irrational.

He declared that Harrison had failed to make a success as a lawyer. Just as he had failed to make a success as a Republican, he said he was now a manufacturer.

He claimed that he left the Republican party when it nominated Blaine. But, evidently, he was a rotten Republican at heart, for he had no such excuse in 1888.

It transpired further that, rather than help along home industries and American labor, he sent his wife and children every year to buy her clothes there, because the product of the pauper labor of England would be cheaper and of a trifle cheaper than the product of the better paid labor in America.

He said this had been difficulty to come before an American audience, largely composed of laboring men, who are depending on the success of these very same home industries for a living, and not only boast that he was a free trader rather than help them, but, also, had the gall to ask that these laboring men vote to cut down the duty ruinously low for the very articles which wants to thus help foreign enterprises to injure our own. Undoubtedly Vinton belongs in the Democratic ranks and did not get out of the Republican ranks any too soon. True Republicans don't build that way.

He reasoned suavely enough, but invariably on wrong premises, there not being a single instance that he can recall wherein he stated facts truthfully.

For instance, he said the McKinley bill exacted a 60 per cent. tariff. This was scarcely within 300 per cent of the truth! The average duty is only a fraction over 20 per cent., which is less than it has been since the war, and notwithstanding the fact that 85% of free per cent., or, more than one-half, of the goods imported are on the free list, because it has been found that these goods do not compete with, or in any wise injure, home industries. If Mr. Vinton had stated the facts he would not have had that the Republican policy has managed to do all this, and yet protect home industries, and encourage new enterprises to help along our own people; and that this 55 per cent. on the free list has been the reduction of the average duty to only 20 per cent. and a fraction, is more than the most blatant Democratic free trader in Congress ever asked for, if he even dreamed such a thing possible, and, last but not least, that this was all done by the New York Sunday Press. There is absolutely no question of its authenticity. The name only is withheld here:

Sir:—I am a fallen woman. For three years I dwelt in a house on Thirty-third street. I knew all on the life of the poor unfortunates in it. When I first entered that house I was given an envelope containing a certain amount, which I, as Miss Charles in the sum of $150, three times what the room cost. That sum has never been paid back. I never could get $15 together, let alone $150. In the three years $9,000 passed through my hands. It sounds like a lie, but it is absolutely true.

Who has got the money? In the first place, the landlord. I have known madame not to have for rent in a week, and then she would be awful cross charged for the house. Then the landlord would get it. What they would have elsewhere. The gas company also played it on madame. Then the police! Then a hundred dollars the first day of every month as regular as clockwork 2500 to special detective from Headquarters, after this article.

Mr. Winfield claims all the credit for himself and other Democratic officials for not molesting the ballot box thieves until the Republicans got after them.

It was the Republican district attorney Gardner who introduced, and a Republican Senate which passed, the bill to investigate these frauds, and, notwithstanding that a succeeding Democratic Legislature tried to prevent the investigation, and refused to pay the expenses, and managed at their own expense to get the evidence, and place it before the Grand Jury—made up, as it was, of suffering citizens regardless of party. That Grand Jury indicted these scoundrels, and the Republicans then brought the overwhelming evidence before the court so that Judge Depue could charge upon you!

No one knows better than Mr. Winfield that New Jersey is a Republican State on an honest vote and an honest count, and that it is only because the Democratic party has been defeated year after year, not only by the frauds in Hudson county, but also the frauds in Middlesex, Mercer, Camden counties, strongholds of Democratic bosses, which will some day be shown only too plainly, that it is in power.

Mr. Winfield claimed that under a Democratic administration the people had no State to tax.

That is another Democratic trick to mislead.

The people not only pay a State tax, but an exceeding heavy one, compared to what they used to pay but for Democratic corruption and extravagance, as they who pay taxes can tell.

True, it is not put in the tax bill as "State" tax, but under other names.

Mr. Winfield wanted it to appear that the State tax was abolished, but is because the Democratic party makes corporations pay for the support of the State.

The Legislative records show that this is also an error.

The bill compelling corporations to pay for taxes was introduced by Senator Gray, of Passaic, a Republican, and passed by Republican votes. Gov. Abbett had only to sign the bill, but, like the only politician that he is, he did not, but began to have it told among those who know no better, that it was he who did it, and the Democratic party which deserved the credit.

It was a Republican senator (Gardner) to whom we are indebted for the bill to have the Delaware and Lackawanna Canal Company pay its back taxes or forfeit its charter, and for the bill submitting the question of the amount due to arbitration, which resulted in favor of the State, and brought to it some $600,000, while with the money received from this, the tax on other corporations, and $500,000 or thereabouts from the United States, reimbursing the State for its share of disbursements for the civil war, the State is in receipt of an amount estimated at $1,000,000, for all which small credit is due indeed to the Democracy. Had this money been properly used, and had not wasteful measures been enacted to provide offices for Democratic heelers, making an increase in this item alone according to published accounts, of $60,000 per year, taxes need not be, we venture to say, one-half of what they are now.

Yes, Mr. Winfield does well to deal in glittering generalities, and even in those very briefly, as he did, when touching on on State matters.

He devoted most of his speech to the tariff, blundering along purposely or otherwise in the same way as the speaker who preceded him.

For instance, he spoke of 1856 to 1860 as a comparitive Free Trade era, and of extraordinary prosperity for the masses, when that time was a period of extravagantly hard times under Free Trade. He did not say what was the truth, that it was due to the effect of the discovery of gold in California in 1848, the increase of territory due to the war of 1845, and the prosperity helped along by previous protective tariffs for the good times in which had not yet passed away.

There are men living in Plainfield who remember that the times were exceedingly hard after the country had undergone the Free Trade era of 1846 to 1857, during the very period Mr. Winfield referred to. Blimm's hotel on Somerset street was crowded at all hours, and carpenters who worked on it say that instead of the high wages and cheap living Mr. Winfield says that they existed on, first-class carpenters, were glad enough to get one dollar a day building the hotel, and even that sum they had to take in store orders, and pay what ever the store keepers pleased to charge.

The State banks were most of them rotten, and no one could tell whether the money he had to-day would be worth anything at all to-morrow. No corkscrew could be compelled to charge 100 per cent, paid to protected theories.

That is just the kind of a time that was brought about by the Democrats when they controlled before the war, and just the kind of a time their openly declared policy, as truly expressed by Lawyer Winfield, would lead to, if they were to get control again. But they won't get control.

Mr. Winfield spoke of the corruption at the ballot box in New York and elsewhere, and charged it all against the Republicans of course.

Well, the Republicans are compelled to spend some money. They must employ men to watch the enemy's ballot box stuffers, and efforts to corrupt generally. The enemy has got its great power by means of such fraud, and not only does she collect blood money from her victims, but she corrupts every man, woman and child who comes in contact with her; Every saloon keeper in New York has to pay from $500 to Tammany at large as that he pays into the city treasury. Every keeper of a disorderly house has to pay, and the ill gotten gains into the capacious maw of the tiger. At the time of the famous Dr. Parkhurst exposure, it was found that $5 gotten

EDITORIAL NOTES

Hold up your chest.

"I believe that important truths are found on the surface of thought," says ex-Pres. Jas. Cleveland.

A man in Springfield, O., claims to have found a combination of chemicals that will generate an electric current lasting three to five years without recharge of batteries. Is this true?

Elections and Business.

Charles Stewart Smith, president of the New York chamber of commerce, is tired of so many presidential elections. He would put off the evil day to only once in eight years. His reason, as given in The North American Review, is that the presidential campaign upsets business all over the country. He says this has become so apparent in Europe that Great Britain fixes the duration of a parliament at seven years. He did not add, however, that only a few times in history have the independent British voters allowed a parliament to "stay put" for the full term, but overturned it with their demands for a change. The late Tory government would have served its seven years if it had lasted till 1898.

France elects a president once in eight years. Smith wants the eight years' presidential term, with a president ineligible for re-election. He bases the principal argument on the upsetting financial policy of the different political parties. They advocate each with vociferousness measures diametrically opposed, and the business man does not know which will whip and cannot trim his sails accordingly. Capital is timid in the face of such divergent possibilities. There, too, is the expense attending the presidential election every four years. He says it will cost the two leading political parties $1,500,000 in New York state to run the campaign this fall. He does not seem to see, though, this will at least make business for somebody.

Prehistoric Arizona.

A fascinating interest will cling about one part of the exhibit of Arizona at the World's fair. This is a map of prehistoric Arizona, as the fragments science has picked up show it to have been. The preparation of the map is under the direction of Professor F. W. Putnam, of Harvard.

It will be the largest relief map ever made in any country. It will give a birdseye view of a district embracing nearly a thousand square miles, covering the valleys of the Salt and Gila rivers. Enough remains to reveal that in those days once dwelt a mighty and prosperous people, numbering not less than 2,000,000 certainly, and probably reaching 3,000,000. Yet this vast multitude of human souls has vanished like the baseless fabric of a dream. Who they were, of what race and what their progress in civilization, not the most learned scholars of our time have been able even to conjecture. We do not know so very much after all in our time.

Some traces show a great system of irrigating canals which no modern engineering can excel or find any fault with. There were cities with 100,000 inhabitants at least, but the names of those cities will be hardly known unless souls should come back from the silent realm to reveal them. There are indeed remains of a gigantic volcanic eruption, with ashes and lava deposits still in the bed of the canals, but this is only a hint of how the civilization was destroyed—not of how it was built up.

What Tom Did.

A writer in The Rural New Yorker believes that nowhere in the Union can a young agriculturist with little or no money succeed so well as in southwestern Georgia, where, with fair good luck, with industry and economy to back it, he can pay for a farm in half a dozen years. The young man should hire himself out to a farmer already on the ground for a year or two at first to learn the soil, climate and productions. The writer says there are possibilities for peach crops in Georgia that seem incredible—peaches of the most luscious kind.

Then he gives incidentally the story of an old negro who began soon after the war. He could give white men some points on raising a family, could old Tom. Here is his story:

In 1866 old Cameron, a white, colored, were given by their master 100 pounds of meat and ten bushels of corn, and he and his wife worked for $12.50 per month and their rations. In 1867 he and his wife, with his father and mother-in-law, worked hard for half the crop, growing sixty acres in cotton and "corn enough." They cleared $400 outside of corn "to run them." In 1868 he bought 100 acres of land, paying $600 cash. In 1869 he sold 40 and paid for the 100 acres and had bought fifty head of stock. From that time he simply made a good living, running right on there and never finding them to submit until 1889. In October that year he bought 123 acres of land, we believe, for $1,800, to pay for it, taking a mortgage on the new land bought, and also on the 160 acres and two mules. We also advanced what little he needed for supplies.

By December, 1890, he had paid for supplies and $700 on the land. In February, 1891, we paid $138.10 for another mule for him. In December, 1891, he paid for his supplies as well as $1,000 on land and $202.50 on the land, and would have paid for the whole of the latter if it had not rained so as to prevent his picking his cotton in good condition. He now has five mules paid for, 270 acres of land on which he owes $800, with this year's crops to pay for it, and if the price of cotton were eight cents he could pay up his entire indebtedness. He owned no land (or wife), but is honest, industrious and a trustworthy, and has, while educating his children, compelled them to work too.

CHICAGO IN HER GLORY.

Beauty and Brilliancy Crown the Windy City by the Lake.

THE BANQUET AT THE AUDITORIUM

Vice President Morton the Guest of Honor at a Grand Reception—The Civic Parade a Big Success—Even Chicago's River Turned Into a Gorgeous Spectacle.

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—All of the distinguished guests invited to attend the ceremonies of dedicating the World's fair buildings are now in this city, the galaxy having been completed by the arrival this afternoon from New York of Chauncey M. Depew and Mr. Whitelaw Reid. When the three trains from Washington bearing the cabinet officers, the supreme court justices and the diplomatic corps arrived the distinguished visitors were escorted by the reception committee to the Lexington hotel.

The train bearing the diplomatic party was the most magnificent of all the trains that came in on the schedule of the famous Pennsylvania limited. Before the committee of escort left Chicago Mr. Pullman said that he desired to make that the finest train ever run in the world, and it was the consensus of opinion among the fortunate passengers that Mr. Pullman had not been disappointed. Its luxurious furnishing are almost beyond description.

Cardinal Gibbons, Mgr. Satolli, the papal delegate to the exposition, and party are the guests of Archbishop Feehan.

The rising of this morning's sun ushered in the first day of the celebration proper. From early in the street were alive with people hurrying to secure a position to view the pageant of the day. The city looked extremely pretty in its profuse display of flags and bunting, and the scene along the river was one never before surpassed.

The River Scene.

Every kind of craft, from the smallest rowboat to the largest vessel in the stream, displayed colors and decorations of some kind, with the result that the usually ill favored and shunned river was for the nonce transformed into a panorama of excessive beauty. All the excursion boats were there, crowded with an anxious mass throng, pushing and crowding for the best view of the rapidly changing events in the streets of the city.

The Civic Parade.

The great event of today was the grand civic demonstration which symbolized the peace, prosperity and patriotism of our country. The monster pageant was under the direction of General Joseph Stockton, of this city, and was a grand success. The line of march was packed by a crowd so dense that it was almost impossible to get out when once wedged in, and many women fainted from the fierce crowding.

Mounted police led the way for the parade, and then came a detachment of United States troops and the militia. Then followed the civic and fraternal organizations, nearly 50,000 strong, and a magnificent showing they made with handsome floats and brilliant regalias. At every step cheer after cheer went up from the massed humanity on the walks and in the windows exposed on the line of march.

The parade was reviewed by Vice President Morton, who formed the central figure in the brilliant array of distinguished invited guests.

The School Children's Celebration.

It was a great day for the children, and very few seats were empty in any of the school houses. They wore their Sunday-go-to-meeting clothes in honor of the occasion, and while they were proudly sporting a button bearing the stars and stripes, the girls, not to be behind hand in a demonstration of love for the flag, had the American flags fastened to the bosom of their dresses. The programme of one school was that of all.

As an overture the principal read the patriotic proclamation of President Harrison declaring Friday next a general holiday, an announcement that was heartedly received with enthusiasm. Intensified when the principal supplemented it with the statement that the board of education has decided to go a step further than the chief executive and lock up the school houses until Monday next. After this the schoolars, four abreast, marched out on the playground, where they stood in solid battalions, heads uncovered, while the stars and stripes were hoisted and unfurled. A word of command from the teachers and every hand touched the forehead in military salute, while every tongue repeated a solemn pledge of allegiance to the flag and the republic, "One nation, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all."

As a finale the strains of "The Flag of the Free" echoed through the school houses, and at the word of dismissal the scholars made a wild break for the street, with cheers for Christopher Columbus and a three days' holiday.

The Morton Banquet.

The scene last night at the banquet and reception to Vice President Morton in Chicago's Auditorium, the greatest assembly hall of the continent, was sublime. It was a blaze of light and beauty. Lovely women were there—women whose presence would create a furore in a dancing room at Buckingham palace, presided over by the venerable Victoria Regina; women in toilets that would put to shame the greatest creations of a Worth.

And there were men—men who have made their imprint on the history of this and other nations, statesmen and diplomats, warriors that have faced the dusky foe in the jungles and tried conclusions with the enemy on the bring deep; men of letter and of law, of science and of arts, merchant princes, whose early days tell stories of toil and poverty, and who stand today as gigantic monuments of the opportunities afforded to energy and independence under the flag of a free republic.

Patriotism was the animative motive of the occasion and the guest, love and emulation for native land, the

THE CHURCH AND STATE

Episcopalians Protest Against Sectarian Appropriations.

ARRAYED AGAINST THE CATHOLICS.

A New Amendment to the Constitution of the United States Proposed—The Convention Decides to Hold Its Next Session in San Francisco Instead of Denver.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 20.—The Protestant Episcopal church, through its general convention, sitting as a board of missions, entered its formal protest against the policy and custom of the United States government of making appropriations for the support of Indian schools under denominational control. It also indorsed the effort to secure an amendment to the United States constitution.

This action was taken at the request of the National Indian association, and was intended as a rebuke to what was stated to be a treacherous toward governmental partnership in ecclesiastical affairs. In doing this the Protestant Episcopal church ranged itself in line with the Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian and other churches, and placed itself in opposition to the Roman Catholic church.

The matter was brought up by Rev. Dr. Huntington, of New York, who presented the report of the board of missions, and followed by two resolutions. The first of these stated that in the judgment of the board subsidies from the treasury of the United States in aid of Indian education ought neither to be sought nor accepted, and that the board of managers are requested to act from this time forth in accordance with this judgment.

The second resolution stated that the effort now making to secure a statutory amendment to the constitution of the United States, which will forever forbid for any state to pledge its credit or to appropriate money raised by taxation for the purpose of founding or maintaining any institution, society or undertaking which may be wholly or in part under ecclesiastical control, has the cordial sympathy and approval of this board.

The Resolutions Adopted.

Dr. Huntington supported the resolution in a brief speech. Mr. G. R. Fairbanks, of Florida, moved to lay the matter on the table. He said that the Protestant Episcopal church had made it a rule never to introduce political affairs into its conventions and church councils, and he deprecated the attempt to do so. Dr. Huntington replied that every question of church and state had a church side as well as a political side. The resolution was passed with scarcely a dissenting voice.

The memorial which accompanied the resolution says: "We seek the amendment of the constitutions of the various states in conformity with the fundamental principle that in this country the functions of the church and state are and should be kept and remain forever distinct. We believe that it was unquestionably the intention of the founders of the republic to secure the free and untrammeled development of religious belief without the influence from state control or help from state appropriations.

"On various pleas, however, this principle has been departed from in the national and state legislatures by grants of public money, which was collected from the whole people for aiding charitable or educational institutions in which are under sectarian control, the principle being virtually allowed that if one denomination received such aid another might claim and receive the same, the united claims of all to such aid amounting not only on the facilities of each denomination for doing such work, but also on the aggressiveness and political influence of the petitioning bodies."

The Appropriations.

A table was inserted showing the amounts appropriated by congress to various religious bodies for the support of Indian schools.

The amounts appropriated show that the Catholics have in the past eight years received $2,208,416; Presbyterians, $218,000; Congregational, $208,819; Martinsburg, Pa., $28,310; Alaska training school, $8,333; Episcopal, $107,146; Friends, $130,537; Dakotas, $23,360; Middletown, Cal., $1,000; Unitarian, $32,780; Lutheran, $32,400; Methodist, $31,345; Mrs. L. H. Daggett, $6,480; Miss Howard, $6,270, and appropriations for Lincoln institution, $267,366; appropriation for Hampton institute, $160,391. Total, $3,767,961. The appropriation for 1893 shows that the Catholics will receive $269,855 out of a total of $625,891 appropriated.

"It will be seen," says the memorial, "that nearly three-fourths of the money appropriated by congress to denominational schools among the Indians is given to one denomination, and this a denomination which has not yet reached one-seventh over one-sixth of the population. We believe all such grants are utterly subversive to the letter and spirit of the first amendment to the constitution. The national government, violating as we believe it does its own constitution by these sectarian grants, casts its influence in favor of denominational schools, and imperils thereby the integrity of the whole common school system of the United States."

Col. Tatlock Resigns.

The convention, on the recommendation of a conference committee of the house of deputies, reconsidered its action in choosing Denver as the meeting place for the next general convention and voted for San Francisco. A compromise resolution in regard to the missionary work of the church in Mexico was passed after a long and serious debate. The resolution provides for the official recognition of the work, which will be carried on only by means of funds especially contributed for that purpose.

Rev. Dr. Tatlock, for twenty-five years secretary of the house of bishops, presented his resignation, which was referred to a special committee.

THE NEWS OF THE DAY.

Depew, Reid and Lincoln on a Tour of Speechmaking.

REPUBLICAN LEADERS HUSTLING.

Activity at Headquarters at the End of the Campaign Approaches—Wayne MacVeagh Addresses a Big Democratic Meeting in New York—McMahon and Sickles.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—The closing days of the campaign at national Republican headquarters are characterized by great activity. Mr. Hahn, in charge of the speakers' bureau, had many callers today, and they all brought encouraging reports. Chauncey M. Depew, who, accompanied by Whitelaw Reid, has gone to Chicago, will address a meeting at Indianapolis on the 28th inst. Hon. Robert T. Lincoln called at headquarters and was assigned for three speeches in Indiana for next week, the dates of which are to be arranged by the state committee. Whitelaw Reid will speak once or twice in New Jersey and two or three times in Connecticut, and will fill several engagements in New York before the close of the campaign.

Patrick Egan, minister to Chili, who was one of Chairman Carter's visitors, said that, as an Irishman he could not understand why or how an Irishman can vote for free trade in this campaign. The famine, immigration and other ills of Ireland can be traced back to the destruction of her protective tariff at the hands of the British parliament. With regard to the Irish-American vote, Mr. Egan said all the indications are that the Republican party will this year receive double the proportion it received four years ago.

Hon. Simon Wolf, of Washington, ex-minister to Egypt, said at headquarters: "I think the nomination of Edward Einstein as the Republican candidate for mayor of New York will strengthen the Republican party in the city and state by 10,000 votes. In my judgment the manifesto signed by William Steinway and Oswald Ottendorfer and others has had no effect in alienating Germans from the Republican ticket."

Mr. Wolf has been speaking in New Jersey and reports good prospects for Republican success in that state.

"The Democrats that have been counting on Minnesota will be disappointed," said ex-Governor L. F. Hubbard, of that state. "They have about as much of a chance there as they have in Pennsylvania. The People's party may poll quite a large vote, but the Republican majority will be at least 25,000. Every state in the northwest will go Republican."

Congressman Quackenbush, of the Troy (N. Y.) district, reported that lively interest in the campaign is manifested on the part of the Republicans of his section of the state.

Wayne MacVeagh in New York.

Cooper Union last night was crowded to a greater extent than it was last night on the occasion of the Democratic mass meeting. Six thousand persons were within hearing of the speakers' voices. Mr. Wayne MacVeagh, formerly attorney general of the United States in the cabinet of President Garfield, was the speaker of the evening.

Hon. John H. V. Arnold was announced as chairman of the meeting. Mr. Arnold spoke briefly, after which a long list of vice presidents of the meeting was read. President Arnold then introduced the Hon. Wayne MacVeagh. As Mr. MacVeagh stepped forward on the platform the vast audience rose in unison and greeted the speaker with rousing cheers that lasted for forty five minutes. Mr. MacVeagh was in splendid voice and was frequently applauded, and at the close of his speech received an ovation such as is seldom given a public speaker. Mr. MacVeagh began by saying:

Mr. Whitelaw Reid has been my friend these many years, and yet the New York Tribune, a newspaper I have been reading all my life, cannot honor me enough to speak to me kindly as I would wish either of Mr. Reid or of it, for it arraigns me for objecting to the appointment of Mr. Egan as our minister to Chili, and dishonestly attempts to pervert what I said into an attack on Mr. Egan because of his nationality. Now Mr. Reid and The Tribune both know very well that I objected to such an appointment, not because Mr. Egan was an Irishman, but because Mr. Reid and The Tribune had persuaded me that he was a dishonest and unworthy man. I desire, therefore, upon the express authority of Mr. Reid and The Tribune, not only to reassert my statement that his appointment was an insult to Chili, but I desire now to add that it was also an insult to every self respecting Irishman in the United States.

Mr. MacVeagh then referred to the fact that men like Judge Gresham and General Jacob D. Cox, of Ohio, both ex-cabinet officers, had left the Republican party, and said they were conscientious in asserting that their duty to their country compelled them to vote for Grover Cleveland. The speaker next denounced the force bill, and charged the Republican party with being responsible for the coinage of short weight dollars, and said that the Democratic party was the only party that favored an honest dollar. He reviewed the tariff question and discussed the Mills bill. In conclusion Mr. MacVeagh predicted great financial disasters in the event of Republican success.

McMahon Will Fight Sickles.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—General Martin T. McMahon, who was defeated for the Democratic congressional nomination in the Tenth district by General Daniel E. Sickles, announced that the latter was ineligible for the place, as he is an officer in the United States army. General Sickles, however, does not consider himself an officeholder within the meaning of the constitution and intends to make the race for congress. General McMahon is much wrought up over the matter, and declares that he will run on an independent ticket if General Sickles does not withdraw.

Foster in Ohio.

DAYTON, Oct. 20.—The Republicans held their first rally of the campaign at the Grand Opera house, which was packed. The principal speaker was the Hon. Charles Foster, secretary of the treasury. Mr. Foster said the McKinley bill is the nearest approach to a perfect protective system that has yet been presented. He dealt at some length on the silver question and reciprocity, and concluded by paying a tribute to President Harrison and his administration.

Aldrich in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 20.—United States Senator Nelson W. Aldrich, of Rhode Island, addressed a largely attended Republican meeting at the Academy of Music. He was introduced by ex-Minister to Russia Charles Emory Smith. The senator's speech was a tariff one and was liberally applauded.

SCOTCH WILL WIN AGAIN.

Cleveland Lost the Game Through Harbert Misjudging an Easy Fly.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 20.—The last of the three games to be played in this city to decide the national championship was won by the Boston Beaneaters today on nine timely batting. There were plenty of opportunities for the local men to win, but their bad base running interfered with their chances for success. Duryea was unable to play, owing to an injured heel, and probably will not appear again in the championship series. This will to some extent weaken the Clevelands. He batted once this afternoon in the ninth inning in place of Young, but did not fill any regular position.

As in the first game the Clevelands bore off the fielding honors. Many of their plays were of a sensational nature, and Childs and McKean particularly excelled in brilliant work. Had they done as well on the bases they might have won with ease.

In the first inning Cleveland batted Staffordite furiously, and after that his hits were well scattered. Childs began with a hot drive past Nash for a base, and Burkett followed it with a two base hit almost in the same place. Tebeau went out at first, but McKean sent both base runners home with a hard, clean drive to center field for a base. In Boston's half Long hit safely, but was forced out at second. McCarthy finally managed to reach second and scored on Gannel's fine hit to right field.

The second run that Boston got never should have been scored, as Long was with a single to left, and was advanced to second on a sacrifice. Quinn hit to left field and Burkett misjudged the ball. He should have caught it with ease, and his failure to make the play turned it into a two base hit and gave Lowe a run. In the eighth Stivetts' two bagger and McCarthy's line single scored the winning run for the Bostons. The Clevelands made a desperate effort to tie the game in the ninth, but just failed. McAleer getting to third. The entire party have left for Boston in two special cars. The score;

SCHOOL CHILDREN MANGLED.

Three Hundred Tots Dashed Down from an Insecure Platform.

WEST WINSTED, Conn., Oct. 20.—Eight hundred pupils of the public schools, with principals and teachers, had marched the streets with a drum corps for a marching drill, and went to the rink to practice chorus singing of national airs for the big Columbian celebration. Temporary seats were erected in tiers to the height of fifteen feet to hold 1,000 children.

They were being seated on the upper seats, and the first 400 had been seated, when the five top rows collapsed. Three hundred children fell to the floor in a heap, and the wreck and their screams caused a panic among the others who escaped, while several women fainted.

A crowd was quickly on the spot to rescue the children, some of whom were pulled out with broken arms, legs and collar bones, or otherwise hurt, some bein; unconscious.

All the town doctors were summoned and many teams were pressed into service to take the children home. None was fatally hurt. The smallest children, those from five to twelve years of age, occupied the top seats, which had evidently been carelessly constructed. The community is excited and indignant, and there have been threats of lynching Carpenter Curtis, while there are said to be many lawsuits in store for him.

The Order of Tonti Sound.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 20.—Since the attack against the Order of Tonti an accountant has examined the order's accounts. In his report he places the assets at $2,562,884.94, and says the supreme officers have managed the affairs honestly and that the expenses of management are small in comparison with the magnitude of the business. The report shows the order to be sound.

President Holmes' Prediction.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 20.—At the American Street Railroad association convention John G. Holmes, of Pittsburg, president of the association, predicted that Cleveland, Buffalo and Pittsburg will before the close of the Nineteenth century be connected by a triangular electric railway system operated by power obtained from Niagara Falls.

PRESCOTT, A. T., Oct. 20.—The notorious Apache "Kid" is in the mountains again. He killed two men last week. A party of soldiers of the Third cavalry are on his trail with orders to shoot him on sight. The "Kid" has been a renegade on the warpath since the Geronimo trouble in 1885.

Pennsylvania $12,000 Richer.

Chief O'Mara Indicted.

FREEHOLD, N. J., Oct. 20.—The Monmouth county grand jury found bills today for kidnaping against Chief of Police O'Mara, of Pittsburg, for arresting Frank Mollick, who was charged with being an accomplice of Herrmann the alleged embezzler and bunko of Manager Frick of the Carnegie company. O'Mara took Mollick out of New Jersey without a requisition.

The Triple Alliance Ejected.

ROME, Oct. 20.—The government is trying to get Austria's consent to the publication of the triple alliance treaty. The treaty is understood to guarantee the possession of Rome to the national government. Austria fears on this account to have the text of the treaty made known, as she fears her large Catholic population and is averse to prejudicing the Vatican still further against her.

Oct. 21 Not a Legal Holiday.

ALBANY, Oct. 20.—The court of appeals coincides with Attorney General Rosendale that Friday, Oct. 21, is not a legal holiday in this state, and the judges have decided to hold court on that day. The bulk of the legal opinion about the court is that it is not a legal holiday, and that the banks will have to keep open on that day or take their chances on maturing financial papers.

SPRINGFIELD, O., Oct. 20.—At the meeting of the Grand Lodge of Ohio, F. and A. M., Grand Master Goodale made General A. S. Gresham, who subscribed $50,000 to the Masonic home fund, a Mason on sight. It is the second time in the history of the order that such a thing has been done.

OUTLINES OF THE CHANGES WHICH DAME FASHION DICTATES.

Some of the New Things in the Way of Dress—A New Traveling Costume—Frills of Fashion—The Fichu Blouse. New Styles in Skirts.

There is no preparation which will keep natural wavy hair in curl, but the following will keep the hair in curl for a short time: Two ounces of borax, one drachm of gum arabic and one quart of best, but not boiling water. Stir them together and as soon as all the ingredients are dissolved add three tablespoonfuls of strong spirits of camphor. On retiring to rest wet the hair with the above liquid and roll in twists of paper. Do not disturb until morning, when untwist and form in ringlets.

Traveling Costume.

The illustration shows a handsome traveling costume of nut brown cheviot. There is a pocket on the left side with brown bone border and button ornaments. Same border around the corsage and decollette, which, keeping the shoulders free, they say, encourages a fantastic German style of brown velvet with three buttons. The skirt has a border, near the hem, of brown velvet, having a feather galoon of same color on both sides.

A CHILD'S SICKROOM.

THE VALUE AND IMPORTANCE OF INTELLIGENT NURSING.

The Little Details Make the Sum of Successful Attention to the Little Invalids. When the Mother Brings Health and Happiness.

When a child is really ill the doctor should be sent for. But the doctor does not take care of the child. He merely prescribes for it, and it behooves the mother that she know well what to do outside of the medical treatment.

The first thing is to make the little sufferer comfortable. See that his pillow is not too high and is often shaken smooth; that the sheets are not crumpled and are tucked in at the foot of the bed. Every little health no one can be comfortable with the bedclothes untucked and working up about his ankles.

Let there be no strong light in the child's eyes. The room should be moderately light (except in maladies and other disorders where the eyes are liable to weaken) and airy. Good ventilation is one of the chief factors in health, and in sickness it is absolutely necessary. Let the sickroom, therefore, be one that can be easily aired. See to it that no taint of foul air be suffered in it for a moment.

In infectious diseases a sheet should be hung before the door and kept saturated with some disinfectant. There are various prepared chlorides that can be freely used to this purpose and about the room. An atomizer is a good thing to have on hand to any sickness. The air is freshened and purgated by sprinkling the chlorides in a fine spray, or if lifted with some cologne or light and refreshes the patient.

There should be no medicine bottles standing about in the sickroom. What be more disconcerting to a child than to see perpetually staring him in the face the reminder of the next dose he must take.

Ornaments should be removed from the room, and there should be no heavy hangings to keep out air and keep in disease germs. The ideal sickroom should contain a bed, chairs, no woolen carpets, no thick case or willow furniture and no lounges, which can be frequently taken out and shaken. There should be pictures on the walls—cheerful pictures—such as the eyes rests upon with calmness and refreshment.

There should be nothing that creaks or rattles or squeaks in the sick child's room. If the windows rattle, put a bit of cotton wool between sash and casing to such a manner that it can be removed when the windows are to be opened. If the doors creak on their hinges—is there no oil in the shops of the household? A drop of oil and attention may make the difference between misery and comparative comfort. Where have I heard the delightful story of the mother that cured the nervous family of the door creaked and creaked and the delicate wife shivered and was miserable, and the tired, overworked husband fidgeted and then growled and then snarled and finally swore, while the children whined and fretted and quarreled, and all the while no one knew what was the matter. One day the husband, half in a half defined temper, took a feather and a drop of oil and oiled the hinges of the door. When the wife saw him do it she thought, "How kind and considerate he is William!" and, her nerves no longer rasped by the odious creaking, she greeted him with a smile that made him feel like ceiling doors all day, whereupon he smiled, too, and said something pleasant and was answered cheerfully, and the children cried that, too, and straightway found their temper pleasanter than they had thought, and agreed to go out and play together instead of flying at each other's throats.

Few visitors should be allowed, and those few should be people who know how to conduct themselves in the place. Let there be no loud talking, no giggling—nothing that will excite the patient, pleasurably or the reverse. Let no one bring in into the room bringing some piece of news which he thinks the patient will be glad to hear. The nervous fatigue will do more harm than the best of nerves can counteract. Whispering is an abomination in a sickroom.

Above all, lunish society seek persons as would be likely to comment unfavorably on the patient's appearance. It is astonishing to see how little some many people have in this regard.

If his mother is an excitable person she is not the one to take care of him. A competent nurse should be employed—not an ignorant woman with "a gift for nursing," but a trained sick nurse. The mother's very intensity of desire to help her suffering child may prevent doing so. Sick, with her feelings she will, there is distress in the air. The child feels a sense of disquiet. she cannot give him that feeling of absolute repose which is necessary for his well being. The nurse, accustomed to the sight of suffering, can endure it without flinching. Her calmness, which does not imply lack of sympathy, soothes the harassed nerves; her practiced hand carries conviction of her power and will for good. She child rests upon her, and is relieved by the sound of her voice.

It is only to serious illnesses that these remarks apply. In all the minor troubles of childhood the mother is the natural caretaker, and I should be the last to wish to deprive her of the privilege of nursing and tending her sick child. What happy days may be passed in the sickroom in their companionship! The mother's heart swells with emotion when she sees the pale face light up at sight of her; she feels she is nearer to her child than anything or any body in the world. They two are together in heart and mind and body, with no one to come between them—no playfellows for her child, no callers or other interruptions for her.

The time of convalescence is a golden time indeed! Shut up together, the two play at paper dolls; they read stories; do all manner of pleasant things. How long it is since this busy woman has had time for a fairy tale! She plays with real children and finds it delightful to dress and undress them, and to ransack the piece bag for bright scraps to make new frocks for the waxen and china babies.

Then the pleasure of bringing the slender, dainty meals and seeing them eaten with ever increasing relish! How pleased the child is when his toast is brought on the pretty plate he could never have when he was well! How he enjoys the jelly molded in some quaint or pretty form, the delicious prunes in the "best china saucer;" the lemonade in a dainty glass, shining and clear, and set on a neat little tray. Let no one think for a moment that the child does not notice these things. If the lemonade were brought in a stone china mug or in a battered and dingy goblet, with the marks of fingers on it, he will think he would like it half so much? Would you like it half as much yourself? Multiply your fastidiousness by ten and you have that of a convalescent child.—Laura E. Richards in Chicago News.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

FLOWERS OF THE FAIRIES.

Strange Tales in Which Elves and Fairies Plants Play Conspicuous Parts.

In the accompanying cut are shown the familiar foxglove and the fern. It may be news to some youthful readers that the foxglove blossoms are the flowers of the fairies—"the little folks" gloves they are termed in England, while in Ireland they are known as "fairy caps." Inside these flowers the elves are said to hide themselves from mortal eyes when they are surprised during their evening revels.

FOXGLOVE AND FERN.

Who has not heard that if you can gather fern seed on midsummer eve "on can walk invisible when you please? Beware, lest in your haste to gather it you tread carelessly on a herb called St. John's wort. If you do a fairy horse will rise up from beneath your feet, and bearing you away on its back, whether you will or not, it will gallop off with you toward the place where most you wish to be; but if the way is long, even the fairy horse may fail to reach the goal before sunrise, and with the first sunbeam he vanishes, leaving his rider just anywhere that they might happen to be at the moment, fortunate for you if it is not in the middle of the sea. If you listen during your ride you will hear Puck's bird, the great churn owl, singing his weird song all the time. At least these strange tales used to be told long ago. Puck, you know, is only another name for a sprite—and a merry one—some of whose antics Shakespeare has depicted in the "Midsummer Night's Dream."

Finding Out the Rogue—A Fable.

A shepherd who kept a large flock of sheep in a mountainous country was greatly distressed with the ravages made among his sheep and lambs, by the wild animals living in the adjacent forest. To prevent in a degree these attacks he purchased a huge dog, and he fastened a spiked collar around his neck. This animal caused the ravages to cease by his terrible growls and watchfulness. But the shepherd noticed that whenever he was forced to absent himself from his flock, owing to business or illness, that very night a fat lamb would be missing. Noticing this many times he mentioned the matter to the dog, who replied: "Well, I dare say it is one of those terrible panthers that I often see prowling about in the daytime. I do all I can to guard the flock and you cannot blame me that I manage pretty well to scare the enemies away."

"Oh, yes; I know your worth perfectly well," replied the shepherd.

A few days after this conversation the shepherd informed the watchdog that he was going to be absent for a couple of nights and days. "All right, master dog," "I will try to catch that rascally panther if I can while you are away."

But the shepherd only pretended to go away. He climbed up into a large tree which overlooked the flock. In the middle of the first night, by the clear light of the moon, he plainly saw his watchdog go in among the flock and choose a fat young lamb and begin to devour it.

"So you are the thief, are you?" said the shepherd to himself; "you think now you are going to have a mushroom supper, lady fair."

Then he slipped down the tree, fetched a club, and creeping quietly up behind the dog, with one blow he stunned his animal. He then got a rope and flung him up to a tree as a warning to all thieves.

Moral—We may learn from this fable that we ought to prove the worth of our servants before we trust them too much.

The Father of Arithmetic.

Euclid was the father of geometry, but the father of the common school arithmetic, such as boys and girls study today, was a Bavarian, who for more than 300 years has been detested by German school children, according to Golden Days, which says:

Annaberg, in Saxony, feels that it is sure of a place in the world's history, if for no other reason than that it was the home of Adam Riese, the "father of arithmetic," and the town council is preparing to raise an elaborate monument to his memory. Riese was born in Bavaria, but became a miner in the Saxon erzgebirge, and afterward set up a school. There he published the first manual of arithmetic in German for training the young in the art of reckoning and the mysteries of weights and measures. He had four sons, and they all took naturally to figures, and continued their father's work after his death in 1559.

The Gothic Arch.

The architecture of western Europe between the Twelfth and Sixteenth centuries was mostly gothic. The churches, cathedrals and castles were marked in their construction with pointed arches called gothic. It is said that the old architects copied these graceful arches from nature, imitating in wood and stone the overarching branches of grand and wide spreading trees.

Wake Up!

I wonder, says Dicky, how any one can go to Oh, wake up, be quick, please, and give me a crumb,
Or with one tiny hop I think down I shall come,
And help myself, dear little mine.

This Date in History—Oct. 20.

1520—Columbus and his crew were the second, and signs of land almost, from fresh weeds, such as grew in rivers, floated by; they saw a green fish, of the kind that keeps about rocks; a stick, carved with thorn with berries on it; finally they picked up a reed, a small board also artificially carved, whereat there was a general cheer of exultation; at night the mariners sang the "Salve Regina;" Columbus addressed a fervent religious address; late in the night Columbus and Pedro Gutierrez saw a distant light, rising and falling with the waves, and judged it to be in a fisherman's boat.

Cheerful Prospect.

A young graduate in the law visited a successful lawyer, and asked his advice as to the best general course to pursue in building up a practice.

"Above all," said the old lawyer, "keep up your hopes. Don't work cheap. If you do, people will think you're good for nothing."

"But, sir, nobody will pay my fees, and I shall die of starvation."

"Oh, well, you must expect to die for awhile, but after that you'll be all right."—Youth's Companion.

"Yes," said the man who was picking his teeth in front of the Michigan avenue hotel, "it takes all kinds of people to make a place like Chicago. Taking the whole town over, I don't suppose it has less than 25,000 liars."

PERSONAL.

A stage load of young people from New Brunswick, New York and Plainfield, started from this city about nine o'clock last evening for Middlebush, intent upon surprising Mr. Charles Thompson at his home in the Embury Crescent. The surprise was complete and very enjoyable. The party returned about five o'clock this morning.

In the Westfield Club House last evening the play of "Patience" was given by talented amateurs of Westfield to a large audience was present and greeted the good points as good acting enthusiastically. Mr. P. L. Conde of this city played first violin and W. B. Bartow of Bound Brook second violin. The balance of the orchestra of fourteen pieces was from New York.

A very enjoyable "Dance in the Barn" was given last evening in the barn of Mrs. Augusta Salmon at 124 Central avenue, by Misses H. Burr, Mr. Saltzman, A. Crane, Foster Abbott, A. Cook and F. Honeyzer. About eighteen couples were present. The upper floor of the barn was tastefully decorated. Dancing, gay and lively, to the music of a string orchestra, was continued until about half-past two o'clock. An elaborate supper was served on the lower floor of the barn.

A REPUBLICAN MEETING

A LARGE AND ENTHUSIASTIC ASSEMBLAGE AT THE RINK.

Addressed by Hon. Victor B. Dolliver of Iowa, and by the Republican Candidate of this District, Mr. W. S. Chamberlain of Bayonne.

Another big and enthusiastic Republican mass meeting was held in the Crescent Rink last evening. The attendance was much larger than at any of the preceding meetings.

At eight o'clock the street in front of the rink was brightly illuminated with red fire and Roman candles, and a salute of cannons fired in the field opposite, the sound echoing and reverberating among the mountains so far away, announcing to everybody that the Republicans were holding the fort and making merry.

After playing a few pieces outside the building the Plainfield Cornet Band entered the building.

The meeting was opened by a short speech from Hon. John Ulrich. He then nominated Mr. John W. Murray as chairman, and he in a short speech introduced the speaker of the evening, Hon. Victor B. Dolliver of Iowa.

Mr. Dolliver, who is a full, fine looking young man, with light brown hair, and a smooth face except for a light mustache, began his speech and continued it throughout in a pleasing manner. His pronunciation was clear and distinct and was of a dashing and original character. He said that this was a campaign of intelligence, that voters were not influenced by torch-light parades, but by the free interchange of thoughts and acts. Horace Greeley, a long time ago, said that the utility of stump speeches, a cherished relic of our forefathers like that they bring office-seekers and office-holders face to face with the voters.

The speaker said that this was an opportunity by entertaining malice. Put aside the personal character of candidates and the platforms of any party itself is a recommendation of respectability.

From 1860 to 1884 every Republican President carried not only the cares of office, but was also compelled to stand personal abuse of the most shameful character from the Democratic press.

The real tragedy of Abraham Lincoln's career was not so much the bullet of the miserable assassin that struck him as it was the storm of malice and detraction falling year after year from the Democratic press and platform, the blind stroke of ignorance and treason against the loftiest human character that ever lived in the tides of time. And it was so with Grant, and so with us to-day, not even sparing the great statesman who to-day in his retirement at Augusta, under the shadow of his grievous losses, still has in his keeping the love and admiration of the Republican millions of the United States.

He compared the two candidates, Harrison and Cleveland, greatly to the disadvantage of the latter, the speaker being too familiar to our readers to require any extended reference here.

The Democrats don't want it in the campaign any comparison of the records of the candidates or the parties. They move upon the tissues of strange phrases, and said that in his keeping the love and admiration of the Republican millions of the United States.

He said still has in his keeping the love and admiration of the Republican millions of the United States.

He compared the two candidates, Harrison and Cleveland, greatly to the disadvantage of the latter, the speaker being too familiar to our readers to require any extended reference here.

The Democrats don't want it in the campaign any comparison of the records of the candidates or the parties. They move upon the tissues of strange phrases, and said it was the financial creed of the old slave power offered in good faith to the business world to-day. Mr. Dolliver then said it was the financial creed of the old slave power offered in good faith to the business world to-day. He referred to the resurrection of the dead body of plantation politics to which the Democratic party invites us. He referred to the wild cat era as a time when the value of man's money frequently disappeared while he was paying for his breakfast.

He explained the attitude of the Republican party on the silver question, and pointed out the party's service in the resumption of specie money, attributing to it much of the prosperity of the country, first to the Providence of God, and next to the legislation of the Republican party, but not a nickel of it to the Democratic party.

After showing the fallacy of the Democratic position on the Force bill, the speaker treated in an elaborate and forcible manner the Federal election bill, going up in order the question of the "Unconstitutionality" of Protection. The Democratic claim of the Fathers and later the bearing of the Homestead on the Democratic platform of Free Trade, on the great industries of England, mostly by the silk industries, and the unprecedented prosperity of Germany.

When Mr. Dolliver had spoken for about one hour he was about to stop when there was a unanimous shout from the audience to "go on!" "go on!" And then he resumed in just as forcible and entertaining a strain for half an hour more, and ended amid a storm of applause.

He was followed by the Republican candidate for Congress from this District, Mr. Winfield Scott Chamberlain of Bayonne, who made a ringing speech and followed with a lively air from the band, as the audience dispersed.

McKinley Bill Facts.

Fifty-five per cent. of all imported goods passing through the custom houses of this country are free or duty.

The average rate of dutiable goods passing through the U. S. Custom Houses is only 30 and 65-hundredths per cent.

The imports have increased from $328,000,000 to $669,000,000, and more new articles are coming in than ever before started, and the capacity of more factories increased, than ever before in the history of this or any other country.

The American factories have brought the price of steel rails from $250 per ton to $28 per ton, and pay the steel workers the very highest wages.

The McKinley bill in punctuation in drawing up the law, coated tin was permitted to come into this country cheaper than black plate, which is the article it is coated. The McKinley bill raised the duty and made American tin plate industries possible, which has a changed industries possibility, which has a changed which states that if by Oct. 1, 1897, the tin plate of the American factories is not equal to one-third of that imported in quantity, then the duty shall be removed and tin plate shall be free to come into this country absolutely free.

The spectacle America presents this day is without precedent in history. From ocean to ocean—in city, village and countryside—the children of the states are marshaled and marching under the banner of the nation, and with them the people are gathering around the school house.

Men are recognizing today the most impressive anniversary since Rome celebrated her thousandth year—the 400th anniversary of the stepping of a hemisphere into the world's life; four completed centuries of a new social order; the celebration of liberty and enlightenment organized into a civilization.

And while during these hours the federal government of these United States strikes the keynote of this great American day that gives honor to the common American institution which unites us all, we assemble here that we, too, may exalt the free school that embodies the American principle of universal enlightenment and equality, the most characteristic product of the four centuries of American life.

Four hundred years ago this morning the Pinta's gun broke the silence and announced the discovery of this hemisphere.

It was a virgin world. Human life hitherto upon it had been without significance. In the Old World for thousands of years civilized men had been trying experiments in social order. They had been found wanting. But here was an untouched soil that lay ready for a new experiment in civilization. All things were ready. New forces had come to light full of overturning power in the Old World. In the New World they were to work together with a mighty harmony.

It was for Columbus, propelled by this fresh life, to reveal the land where these new forces were to be given space for development, and where the awaited trial of the new civilization was to be made.

Today we reach our most memorable milestone. We look backward and we look forward.

Backward we see the first mustering of modern ideas; their long conflict with Old World theories, which were also transported hither. We see stalwart men and brave women one moment on the shore, then disappearing in dim forests. We hear the ax. We see the flame of burning cabins and hear the cry of the savage. We see the never ceasing wagon trains always toiling westward. We behold legislative bodies, villages, then cities. We watch the growth of institutions out of little beginnings—schools becoming an educational system; meeting houses leading into organic Christianity; town meetings growing to political conventions; county discussions developing federal governments.

We see hardy men with intense convictions grappling, struggling, often amid battle smoke, and some idea characteristic of the New World always triumphing. We see settlements always uniting together into a nation with singleness of purpose. We note the birth of the modern system of industry and commerce and its striking forth into unbounded activity, making the millions members one of another as sentiment could never bind. And under it all, and through it all, we fasten on certain principles ever operating and regnant—the leadership of manhood; equal rights and equal opportunity; enlightenment as the source of progress. These last are the principles that have shaped America; these principles are the true Americanism.

We look forward. We are conscious we are in a period of transition. Ideas in education, in political economy, in social science are undergoing revisions. There is a large uncertainty about the outcome. But faith in the underlying principles of Americanism and in God's destiny for the republic makes a firm ground of hope. The coming century promises to be more than ever the age of the people—an age that shall develop a greater care for the rights of the humblest and make a more solid provision for the development of each individual by the education that meets his need.

As no prophet among our fathers on the 300th anniversary of America could have pictured what the next century would do, so no man can this day reach out and grasp the 100 years upon which the nation is now entering. On the victorious results of the completed centuries the principles of Americanism will build our fifth century. Its material progress is beyond our conception, but we may be sure that in the social relations of men with men the most triumphant gains are to be expected. America's fourth century has been glorious; America's fifth century must be made happy.

One fact is more certain than another: wrought out the achievement of the past, and is today most trusted for the future. Our fathers in their wisdom knew that the foundations of liberty, prosperity and equality must be universal education. The free school therefore was conceived the cornerstone of the republic. Washington and Jefferson recognized that the education of citizens is not the prerogative of church or of other private interest; that while religious training belongs to the church, and while technical and higher culture may be given by private institutions, the training of citizens, in the common knowledge and the common duties of citizenship belongs irrevocably to the state.

We therefore on this anniversary of America present the public school as the proudest expression of the principle of enlightenment which Columbus grasped by faith. We uplift the system of free and universal education as the master force which under God has been informing each of our generations with the peculiar truths of Americanism. America therefore gathers her sons around the school house today as the institution closest to the people, most characteristic of the people and fullest of hope for the people.

Today America's fifth century begins. The world's twentieth century will soon be born. To the thirteen millions now in the American schools the command of the coming years belongs. We, the youth of America, who today unite to march as one army under the sacred flag, understand our duty. We pledge ourselves that the flag shall not be stained, and that America shall mean equal opportunity and justice for every citizen and brotherhood for the world.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Scoring "Somers" and "Nassau" and Their Henry George Ideas.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—It is amusing to hear how offended the George-ite is when any one doubts the truth of his latest fad. But when it comes to others, how they can call names! Hear Somers on the Socialist—"He poses as a reformer, and whereas he has nothing more than a blatant, unthinking zeal." Now this hurts, for like George Wm. Curtis, the late Nathaniel Hawthorn, and others, I was once a kind of socialist myself. But when I got over it when we understood more of human nature. And "Somers," as he gets older, will drop all such fool reformers like him as otherwise good and great men. For, while I do not think he is a "blatant" or any other kind of a fool, I take him to be young and inexperienced. We all know, Somers, that slothful, dishonest human nature stands in the way of socialism; but then honest, industrious human nature is what stands in the way of Georgeism. But the latter kind of a man views a piece of land to which the labor of others has given almost all its value without dreaming that it belongs to him; then he goes where land is dirt cheap, (there is plenty of it yet for all who are willing to dig) adds his labor, and gives value to that; and, when the Georgeite comes tramping along and wants to rob him of that value under pretence of "single tax," is very apt to greet him with "thick bucolic skull," or, more truthfully, hard headed sense.

Yes, truth will prevail alsit, as Tennyson Somers informs us in Latin, but "single tax" never will. It is unjust, impracticable, and false, even in theory. Let land, or "mother earth" remain head of value, and not there, but at the over-flow, should all internal taxes be collected. Then the incendiaries' fortunes which begin to threaten our commonwealth would be kept within safe bounds, and none in this land, who would work, need feel the grip of poverty. But this never will be until the rich experience a change of heart, and do it of their own free will. You and I will never live to see it, friend Somers. As for "single tax" it has soured or injured all who believed in it except its promulgator. That is why all are ready to oppose the spread of such a pernicious doctrine. The quickest test of truth is absurdity without examination, and its is most too short to treat such things seriously. But we will do so for a moment.

Suppose the "single tax" prevails, the first thing is "no custom houses." Therefore you turn the same here as in pauper-swarming Europe.

"But we should have free raw material."

Dear me! If that is such a blessing, why don't immigrants stay where it is free? Then it can be here on account of transportation and two profits? And are there not thousands here, pre-dating raw material, who would be thrown out of work?

"Then capital would be free and give them other employment."

How then about a glut of production? And don't most of us think that capital makes rather too free already?

It is just to confiscate the widows little garden spot? For, in spite of Henry George's dodging of that word, it would be exactly the same thing to evict her from it as to take it from her by force. A stranger would be required to, as much as if her husband never earned the money from which he paid for it. It is just to make a poor man pay as much on his one acre lot and thousand dollar cottage as the millionaire does for his palace, or on his factory—which may return a princely income—because they occupy no more ground? Is it just to free all the millionaire speculators in the country and all the land, and make the small land holders who make our country a nation of independent homes?

Is it just to tax a man more because he improves his land more than his neighbor?

Dodging again! The answer is not even honest, but is only one of the many I could point to that are designed with equal skill to deceive; and it would crush the poor holder entirely. Each has a right to make any improvement as he can afford; and the present system, which compels each to pay according to the assessed valuation of his land, he enjoys the protection of the State is in the main most just; and if it does not always work perfectly, it is on account of the venality of lawmakers and officials. Would it be more impracticable under the George system? I trow not. And taking into account the average amount of receipts by the State under the latter, I studied this scheme deeply and found, that it would require just about twenty years of such receipts to purchase every small owner off of his land, and, under tax sales, to transfer them and all improvements to rich speculators. Then what is to prevent legislators having bought up nearly all land, McKinley bills?

I intended to wait until "Somers" got through and then in two letters to show the injustice and the worse than impracticability of this Georgian humbug. But, if your readers, who are supposed to be interested in such matters, approve on these suggestions it may not be required.

Now "Nassau" attacks me! One at a time, gentlemen, if you please. But you scramble when they come in swarms.

And if an opponent makes false suppositions, must then builds upon them who can follow him in argument? Nassau must known that assessors are not so delightful as he represents, and in circumstances—town lots the same as distant farm land unless they are bribed; and why people can see that bribery would obtain easier under the George system than any other.

Nassau says: "First let us settle what wealth is. It is not money." And then proceeds to prove that it is the product of land, but (truth being too mighty) only succeeds in proving that it is the fruit of labor, whether exerted on land, or iron, or on wood or any legitimate art, or merely on human credulity. Should labor be taxed or wealth?

In the name of God, wealth! Where is wealth? With him who has more than he needs to preserve him and his dependents all the reasonable comforts and refinements of the highest kind of human life. In our day no and needs a million for this.

And close observation has convinced me that no man ever made a million by his own efforts. Had his helpers had their just share of it, each of our millionairies would have reached the first one? Were taxation so adjusted as to keep the little fish down a bit, competition would be freer, reward would be sure, and even the wealthy, overburdened now with cares of property, and cricked by conscience because of great power for good unused, would be happier. But a great millionaire is a sort of king among his fellow men, and it is expecting too much of fallen human nature to suppose he will ever lay his crown down until his fellow kings are compelled, or more likely, agree to do the same.

The tax on personal property could be made as easily collectable as that on land, if our Legislatures had any personal interest in making it otherwise, as I could easily show if it would do any good. But enough! I only aimed to solve the problems of just taxation, of which Somers and Nassau have evidently only studied the single-tax question. As for Mr. White's remarks in introducing Henry George, they don't even prove that he ever read the book, would prove nothing if he had; were probably made out of mere politeness, and were unjustifiable and unkind. Mere abuse—only so far as profit is a criterion of success.

Good for Mr. Reese.

Mr. Reese of Westfield is making a stir, as may be seen from the following:

Resolved, That the Republican voters of Mansfield Township are under great obligations to Mr. S. W. Resolved, That this club, on behalf of the Republican party of this Township, convey to Mr. Reese its highest appreciation of his efforts at our public meeting held on the evening of October 12th, 1892, and tender to him a unanimous vote of thanks for the good work accomplished by him.

Resolved, That the secretary be instructed to forward a copy of the forgoing resolutions to the Township Executive Committee of the Republican party.

Mr. Powers at Crescent Ave Chapel.

A large and appreciative audience greeted Mr. Leland T. Powers in the Crescent avenue chapel last evening. This unique entertainer first made himself known to Plainfield people a year ago, when he gave a thoroughly well-gotten interpretation of David Copperfield. Last night he gave a condensation of Dickens' "Christmas Carol," with its over-running with wit, drollery and ridiculous situations which kept the audience in constant laughter. Characters as he passed in a flash from one to another of the seven characters which he impersonated. In an instant, the changes from the irresistibly funny Mrs. Malaprop to the bombastic, inflated Sir Geoffrey Hagstone, the valiant Sir Acres. On the whole it was one of the best entertainments ever given here, and the Mr. Powers was assured that Mr. Powers will have a hearty welcome, if they ever again secure him.

Amusements for Saturday Evening.

The "Smoker" of the Hillside Tennis Club at the Casino Saturday evening is exciting interest. Also the fact that it is to be a "ladies' night" and that there will be some lively boxing, sprightly music, etc., is the cause of considerable excitement. Much fun is had because selfish man has excluded them.

That laugh provoker, "Pat Rooney," in "Lord Rooney," at the Opera House so thick that it takes all the pace in his capacious mouth will be at Music Hall Saturday evening, October 22nd. Manager Fyfe of the Music Hall manager says has been strengthened and the play promises to be more amusing even than when first presented here.

Cole Declared Not Guilty.

The Somerville jury before which was tried Simon B. Cole, a young farmer of Bedminster, for murdering Miss Josephine Haver of North Branch, last night brought in a verdict of "not guilty." When the jury was discharging Jacob Van Nest, the old herb doctor who, it is alleged, sold Cole the drug which it was charged he administered to Miss Haver, was put on trial for complicity in the girl's death. The case was adjourned until Nov. 4.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Military Drill.

At a parade in which some regiments of the national guard had place a number of cadets from West Point joined the procession and brought up the rear. If the militia boys had been wise they would never have permitted the West Point boys to appear with them, for the contrast was not flattering to the home drilled soldier. By comparison with the cadets the militia looked round shouldered, loose jointed and shambling in their gait. Their knee joints bent and tumbled about awkwardly; they did not even walk erect. On the other hand, the slim, lithe cadets, straight as arrows, stepping out from the hip joint, advancing with firm, even tread, excited universal admiration.

Yet naturally the militia boys were just as graceful, good looking and gentlemanly as any of the West Point youths. Before the cadets had been licked into shape by constant drill and athletic exercises they were fully as shambling and stoop shouldered as the national guard boys. The whole difference was in the attention to military drill. A famous English actress, noted for grace and dignity of bodily movement, tells us in her autobiography that in her childhood she lived in a garrison town. Her mother was determined on making the daughter graceful and erect, and therefore the drillmaster from the garrison was employed to come and give the girl regular lessons. For several years exactly the same drill exercises employed with the soldiers were practiced by the young lady, and to the day of her death she maintained that all girls should be trained by military drill as they grow to womanhood.

It is of course not possible for young men who work on farms and in offices daily to spend the time that West Point cadets do in drill, but it is possible for them to do much better than they do at it. For their own credit and good looks they ought to take themselves seriously in hand.

A Columbus Shirt Collar.

It is a good time to immortalize the Columbus year by adopting some new fashion in dress suggestive of Christopher when he raised his eyes to heaven, a cross in one hand, the Spanish flag encircled by the other, and took possession of the New World in the name of their majesties Ferdinand and Isabella. The possession did not stay put, but that does not signify now.

It will be observed in most of the portraits of the discoverer that he wears a low necked collar. A loose, soft shoe white garment of fine material is simply gathered into a band at the base of the neck, leaving the massive head room to draw from the heart all the blood needed to nourish it. Why should not men adopt the Columbus neckwear? A firm neck rising like a column from the body is a feature of manly beauty unsurpassed. The picturesque and imposing appearance of the great discoverer is added to not a little by the fact that his collar ceases where the modern one begins. Of course we do not refer here to the portrait in which he is represented with the stiff and heavy neck ruff.

A handsome neck is far more agreeable to the eye than the stiffest, whitest collar ever starched by a Chinese laundryman. Besides, when the throat is thus open to the air and sun the man is not nearly so apt to take cold or suffer from bronchitis. Who will start the fashion of the Columbus collar? If some man with a handsome neck will do so it will be a go, and the scraggy necked fellows will be the first to follow in. With the new circulation of anybody's old Columbus collar would permit, moreover, many a scraggy neck would disappear.

One more step has been taken toward the extermination of the kingdom of Dahomey. In the last reported battle that took place Behanzin measured his ferocious amazons against the strength of a modern civilized nation, and got considerable information when it was too late to be of use to him. The next fight will probably wipe out Behanzin and his kingdom, and Dahomey will become a conquest of the white man. It was just so that the red Indians were dislodged from America, step by step, fighting every foot of ground. At the end of the Twentieth century it is quite possible that there will be as few native negro tribes in Africa as there are Indians now left in America. The great question will be as to how the nations of Europe shall parcel out Africa among them. Really for us we have no direct interest in the matter. Our interests at present are in the direction of acquiring naval stations in the Pacific ocean and looking out for the future on that side of the world.

Beginning Dec. 1, the New York and Brazil Mail Steamship company will make regular trips between New York and South American ports. The ships will skirt around South America, touching at several points in the West Indies on the way, and at Barbadoes, Para, Maranhao, Fernambuco, Bahia, Rio Janeiro, etc., and bringing up at Buenos Ayres. From Jan. 1 the service will be bimonthly. This will do to start. But there ought to be mail communication more than twice a month between the United States and the great, rich continent south of us.

CHICAGO EXULTS.

The Fair Buildings Dedicated with Pomp and Pageant.

FUTURE SUCCESS ASSURED.

Today's Proceedings an Index of What the Exposition Will Be.

Still Greater Crowds Witness the Military Parade, While the Manufactures Building Could Not Hold the Immense Throng That Gathered to Witness the Dedication Ceremonies—Miss Monroe's Brilliant Ode and Chauncey M. Depew's Patriotic Oration—A Splendid Chorus and a Sympathetic Audience. The Loving Cup at the Fellowship Club Banquet — "The Button Has Been Pressed and Chicago Will Do the Rest."

CHICAGO, Oct. 21.—The World's fair buildings are dedicated, and Chicago—boisterous, hustling, hurrying Chicago—is happy. Chicago is going to have a World's Columbian exposition, and if sunlight and cheerlings are an indication, it is going to be a howling success. Chicago is crowing, too, over the Columbus celebration through which she has just passed.

It cannot be exactly said that Columbus is not in it, but the general impression seems to prevail that Chicago discovered Columbus, and it is celebrating the fact incidentally to the one great and well deserved crow of triumph that will go up when the fair will have passed into history as one of the grand successes of the century.

If Chicago had ever had any doubts of her ability to get up a World's fair on the shortest notice known to history, perhaps the crow might be louder and greater. As it is she is a whirl of delight over the success of her operations thus far, and is busy predicting greater things for the future.

The Military Parade.

The first event of today was the grand military parade and procession of invited guests to Manufactureres hall, where the dedication ceremonies took place. The same crowds of people, only it seemed more of them, massed themselves in the streets to see the glittering pageant, which moved almost without a hitch according to the programme published elsewhere in the paper.

Twenty-seven governors aided the vice president of the United States in reviewing the parade as it approached Jackson park, where the military disbanded and the invited guests were escorted to the spacious and beautifully decorated Manufactures building.

The Manufactures building on the fair grounds, besides being the objective point of at least 125,000 people who were fortunate holders of invitations and capital admission, was a Mecca for multitudes whose only hope was to catch a chance glimpse through some unhooked for combination of circumstances in their favor.

After the grand military review the indoor exercises—the real dedication—took place. When Director General Davis rose to speak to the platform for the ceremonies there were spread before him such a vast sea of human faces as has probably never before been seen under a single roof.

In front of him, massed before the great bulk of the audience, 15,000 distinguished guests occupied reserved seats. To the left, upon a special platform, 5,000 singers were seated, and a large orchestra helped the majestic gathering make the iron arches ring again, while to the left and center sat in state many of the greatest dignitaries of which a republican government can boast.

The Dedication Exercises.

The dedication exercises commenced with the "Columbian March," a spirited air, composed by John K. Paine, of Cambridge. It was rendered by the orchestra with feeling and effect and was heartily applauded. When the last strains of music died away Bishop Charles H. Fowler, of California, arose and advanced to the front of the platform to deliver the prayer. As he did so the vast audience rose, and with bowed heads and reverential pose listened amid a deep silence to the fervid words of the gifted clergyman. When the rustling and the bustling of reseating had stilled Director General Davis came forward with a flush of pride on his broad visage, and was received with round after round of applause which made the slight flush deepen into a rich crimson glow. For a second he hesitated as he looked into the sea of upturned faces, and reassured by the kindly look of expectation from every eye, with graceful gesture and still modulated voice delivered the introductory address. His words were well chosen and elicited generous applause.

When he had finished Mayor Hempstead Washburne in a neatly appropriate way gave a warm welcome to the guests and visitors to the dedication ceremonies, and advised such criticism as might be made on the city and their work should be tempered with charity. This sentiment was greeted with cheers.

Then came a craning of necks and a whispering and comment, for the next number on the programme was the "Dedicatory Ode." written by Miss Harriet Monroe, of Chicago. The ode was partly recited by Mrs. Sarah C. Le Moyne, of New York, and partly sung by a chorus of 5,000 voices, accompanied by the full orchestra. Miss Le Moyne received an inspiring welcome when she came forward, and the manner in which she read the lines of the beautiful poem showed that she appreciated the cordial reception given by the assemblage.

The ode is allegorical, and begins with a description of Columbus waiting for the coming of day on earth to witness the fulfillment of her greatness as represented in the completed fair buildings. The birth of Columbus and the enterprise of Isabella are told thus:

Until a woman fair
As morning lilies are
Brings him a jewelled key—
And lo! a world is free

Wide swings the portal never touched before;
Strange lurging winds blow from an unseen shore;
Toward dreams that cannot fall.
He bids the ships be gone to cut the seas;
While man's new song of hope rings out against the gale.

Then the chorus, acting in perfect unison with the reader, sang a signal from the leader glided into song, describing the voyage of Columbus in these words:

Over the wide unknown
Far to the shores of Ind,
On through the dark alone,
Like a feather blown by the wind.
Into the west away,
Sped by the breath of God.

Seeing the clearer day
Where only rumors lie before you!
From the past to the future we sail,
We ship from the land of kings
Hail, spirit of the West, hail!
Unfurl thine inexplicable wings;
Receive us, protect us, and bless
Thy leaping waves, for all for thee.
Though death be thy soft caress
By that touch shall our souls be free.
Onward and ever on.
Till the voice of despair is stilled.
Till the haven of peace is won
And the world's heart is thrilled.

As the voices of the singers softened into silence Mrs. Le Moyne again took up the theme of the ode, and the meeting of Columbus and Columbia was described. Columbia was depicted as "so goddess-pure is she," and the goddess bids man to shake off his shackles and build anew temples in her domain. "Knights who had warred at love's command" take up the ax and oar, mallet and spade. The Indian wars and the wars struggling about the world, ending with this stirring chant by the chorus:

Lo! Clan on clan
The enslaved nations gather to be one,
Clasp hands as brothers 'neath Columbia's shield,
Upraise her banner to the shining sun;
Along her blessed shore
One heart, one song, one dream—
Man shall be free forevermore,
And love shall be supreme.

A tribute to the deceased architect, John W. Root. Then comes a shadowy cavalcade of heroes moving through the World's fair temples, led by "one who held a warring nation in his heart." The heroes of the republic, led by Lincoln, are in the van. Columbia is apostrophized, and the development of man beneath her sway told in splendid lyric. The ode concluded with a splendid lyric, as follows, which was superbly given by the chorus:

Columbia! men behold thee rise,
A goddess from the misty sea.
Lady of joy, next to the skies,
The nations worshiped thee!

Thy brows were flushed with dawn's first light;
By flying waves with stars bedight
Thy bare robe floated free.
Now let the sun ride high o'erhead,
Driving his chariot of fire across the sky;
His burning tread we do not dread,
For thou art evermore.

Lady of love, whose smile shall bless,
Whom tyrants shall learn to tenderness,
Whose tears the lost restore.

Lady of hope thou art, we wait
With courage thy serene command.
Through unknown seas, toward undreamed fate,
We ask thy guiding hand.
On, thou fleet Ruler in the gale!
Thou at the helm, we command fail.
On to God's time veiled strand!

Lady of beauty, thou shalt win
Glory and power through length of days!
The soul must shoal shall be thy kin,
The stars shall sing thy praise.
All hail! whose coming was most sweet—
We strew before thy winged feet.
Now, onward be thy ways!

The Presentations.

The effect on the audience was magical and the house rose en masse, with cries of "bravo!" and "encore!" and had the management allowed it the ode would have been given again and again. But other choice numbers were to come and an encore was impossible.

The next event was the presentation by the director of works of the master artists of the exposition to the World's Columbian exposition, and award to them of special commissions. Director Davis while the chorus again endeared itself to the audience by its fine and flowing interpretation of Haydn's "The Heavens Are Telling."

Mrs. Potter Palmer, the woman to whom too much credit cannot be given for her work as president of the board of lady managers, then came forward and received an ovation that was richly deserved. Her part in the programme consisted of an address to the board of lady managers, and when she had finished no one who heard her had the slightest fear that the Columbian exposition would be a failure if the sense of responsibility which pervaded her assistants obtained throughout the other departments.

Next came the tender of the buildings on behalf of the World's Columbian exposition by the president thereof to the president of the World's Columbian commission, and the presentation of the buildings by the president of the World's Columbian commission to the vice president of the United States for dedication.

The Dedication Formula.

After these ceremonies had been concluded Vice President Morton, who officiated in the official absence of President Harrison, arose and, with a few words of advance, was greeted with great enthusiasm. His function was to dedicate the buildings, and he did it in a masterly address, in the course of which due credit was paid to President Harrison and expressed his own regret, and said he knew he voiced that regret, that he was not present in the country's greeting over the cause which kept the chief executive away from an occasion in which so much interest in the world's welfare all should have desired to attend. When the applause which greeted the vice president's allusion to President Harrison's absence had subsided Handel's "Hallelujah" chorus from the "Messiah" arose.

Now a cheer ripples over the vast building, which becomes louder and louder as the chorus progresses and the audience, the Hon. Henry Watterson, of Kentucky, comes forward to deliver the dedicatory oration. Mr. Watterson smiled, waited till quiet had been restored, and then with the vehemence and vigor characteristic of the man from the blue grass region kept the audience spellbound while he spoke out the eloquent words that fairly bubbled over his lips. His address was a gem of oratory worthy of the occasion and his hearers, and was cheered and applauded to the echo.

As Mr. Watterson retired the stirring strains of the "Star Spangled Banner" broke upon the ears of the audience, and among the words of the patriotic hymn with a vim that ensured a large part of the audience to join in. When that was completed "Hail Columbia" was given in the same spirit, and when the last verse was reached it seemed as though the spirit of patriotism would shout the roof, and nearly the whole house joined in the swelling chorus. The scene at the finish was simply sublime.

There had been enthusiasm enough up to this point, it seemed, to fire almost any ordinary assemblage, but when the laughing face of Chauncey M. Depew smiled into the sea of upturned faces a gleam of his appearances to deliver the Columbian oration the cheers that broke out made those gone before sound as mere whistles in comparison. It was pandemonium. Depew's stock of patience was good, and when his audience tired of applauding he spoke as follows:

Chauncey M. Depew's Oration.

This day dawns not to America, but to the world. The results of the event it commemorates are the heritage of the people of every race and clime. We celebrate the emancipation of man. Ancient history is a dreary record of unending struggles of the people for the rights of material splendor and perished. The divine right of kings stamped out the talents glimmer of liberty which had existed in the primitive democracies, whether of the skies or of the earth, whether autocracy or geography, were active instrumentalities in the work. The dungeon was ready for the philosopher who proclaimed the truths of the solar system, or the navigator who would prove the sphericity of the earth.

Fifty years before Columbus sailed from Palos Gutenberg and Faust had forged the hammer which was to break the bonds of superstition and open the prison doors of the mind. They had invented the printing press and movable types. The general adoption of cheap process for the manufacture of paper at once utilized the new art. The first service, like all the succeeding efforts, was for the people. The firstborn of the marvelous creation of these printing presses of the press was the printed Bible. The time had come for the emancipation of the mind and soul of humanity. The factors necessary for its fulfillment were the new world and its discoverer.

God has always in training some commanding figure for the world of great crises in the affairs of nations and peoples. The number of those leaders are less than the centuries, but their brows are the history of human progress. Though Cæsar and Charlemagne and Hildebrand and Luther and William the Conqueror and Oliver Cromwell and all the epoch makers prepared Europe for the event and contributed to the result, the lights which illumine our firmament today are Columbus the discoverer, Washington the founder and Lincoln the savior.

Neither realism nor romance furnishes a more striking and picturesque figure than that of Christopher Columbus. The mystery about his origin heightens the charm of his story. That he came from among the toilers of his times is in harmony with the struggles of our period. Forty-four authentic portraits of him have descended to us, and two of them are the counterfeit of the same person.

Each represents a character as distinct as its canvas. Strength and weakness, intellectuality and stupidity, high moral purpose and brutal ferocity, purity and licentiousness, the dreamer and the schemer, the prince and the pariah are the types from which we may select our hero. We dismiss the painter, and pierced with the shafts of doubt we look upon the eye of the Twentieth century the veil of four hundred years we construct our Columbus.

The period in which he lived was upon the rich argosies of Genoa, or in the service of the licensed rovers who made them their prey. He had developed skillful navigation in the Portuguese marines. They had given him a glimpse of the possibilities of the unknown, beyond the highways of travel, which roused an unquenchable thirst for adventure and research.

The study of the narratives of previous explorers, and diligent questionings of the daring spirits who had ventured far toward the fabled seas, gradually evolved a theory which became in his mind so fixed a fact that he could inspire others with his own passionate beliefs. The words, "that is he," written by him on the margin of nearly every page of a volume of the travels of Marco Polo, which is still to be found in a Genoese library, illustrate the skepticism of his beginning, and the first vision of the New World the fulfillment of his faith.

The Struggles of Columbus.

To secure the means to test the truth of his speculations the poor and unknown dreamer must win the support of kings and overcome the hostility of the church. He never doubted his ability to do both, though for nine years which he called the brightest fear that he never would

FADS OF FASHION.

Belt ribbons are worn tied in front with bows and long ends.

The Russian blouse cloak is shown in the new fall garments.

Pink and black are to be worn in combination in evening dress.

Bridal dresses are made this season with more than three yards in length.

White kid boots are worn with dull white gaiters on the street.

Toques of black velvet with cream lace aigrettes are worn for early fall.

White gloves with broad bands of black kid on the wrists and black stitching, are much affected for shopping and street wear.

The feather ornaments are numerous and very beautiful. They are all suggestive of the Alsacian bow, the wings being arranged in this manner or the feathers pasted and sewn to make the effect.

Velvet to be Much Used.

Velvet is to be in great service, more than it has been for a long time. For handsome visiting dresses a heavy corded poplin or gros grain silk is brought in the loveliest shades of light colors, combined with dark velvet embroidered in dainty sprigs of blossoms in colors. The velvet is to form panels and sleeves and large pieces of trimming.

Velvet sleeves will be seen in many dresses and always of a contrasting color. The dress may be elaborately trimmed with passementeries and the many other fancy trimmings which are shown, but the skirt and bodice will have a resemblance and similarity in trimming and then until we reach the sleeves, and there fancy revels. A light colored velvet sleeve is inserted in a dark bodice and vice versa.

THE SHIPS OF COLUMBUS.

A Description of the Great Discoverer's Little Squadron.

The approach of the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America cannot fail to awaken a reverence for the Genoese mariner whose intrepid daring and enthusiasm changed the destiny of mankind.

Columbus was by profession a sailor, and his great maritime knowledge won for him the command of many ships. During his numerous voyages he formed his purpose of sailing westward to find a nearer way to India. It was at the little Spanish port of Palos that Columbus prepared the expedition for which Ferdinand and Isabella had supplied the means.

Of his three ships the Santa Maria, the flagship of the little squadron, was the largest, the Pinta and Nina being of about equal size. Columbus chose three small ships rather than one large vessel, with the hope that out of the three one at least would weather the stormy passage and live to return.

They were designed and constructed upon a model of the old type of craft known as the caravel, which included in its class all vessels from 50 to 100 tons, with or without decks.

The Santa Maria was no larger than the little schooners engaged in fishing on the Great Banks, or about equal in tonnage to the stanch pilot boats which cruise along our coast in all weathers. This vessel upon which Columbus sailed was eighty-five feet long, twenty-four feet wide and drew eight feet of water. Her bottom was made very flat, in order that she might be run upon the shore or sandy beach without undue strain to her timbers. Her extreme width was at the water line where the hull bulges out several feet beyond the upper structure at the deck. This form of "rumbling home," as it is termed in the vernacular of the sailor, is rarely seen in ships of modern design and construction, although this build can be seen in a modified degree in many of the old frigates now relegated to "ordinary" in our navy yards. Ancient shipbuilders held that bulging out the sides of a vessel prevented her rolling in a heavy sea, and accordingly her decks would not be exposed to to the sweep of heavy surges breaking close aboard.

The Santa Maria had but one deck. At the bow was a house called the forecastle, in which the petty officers slept and also a part of the crew. Across the stern of the ship was a second house called the after castle, above which ran a deck called the poop deck or quarter deck. A small watch tower was erected on the poop deck as the post of duty for the officer of the watch. The admiral of the fleet occupied the after cabin, the officers of high rank being permitted to share it with him, while the rest of the crew was quartered in the hold and in such parts of the ship as were not utilized for stowing provisions and ballast.

The after part of these ships towered many feet above the crest of the wave, and when running before heavy following seas the deckhouses were rarely swept by them, no matter how severe the gale before which the ship was driven.

The Pinta and Nina, sister ships of the squadron, were about seventy feet in length, the Nina, however, being a little smaller in tonnage than the Pinta. These vessels were not decked fore and aft like the Santa Maria, although each had deckhouses, or castles, at the bow and stern.

Today it would be a foolhardy venture to despatch vessels without decks on a mission across a boisterous sea. Yet these ships were constructed so solidly of well seasoned oak timber, planked with fir and secured by heavy iron bolts, as to withstand the battle of the elements during that long and weary journey over the trackless Atlantic.

On account of these ships being built high at the ends and low amidships, high seas would often be taken upon the decks when sailing with a side wind, and to prevent this high stanchions or posts were inserted in the upper plank of the rails, to which screens of heavy canvas were laced, making a temporary bulwark, which proved to be very effective in keeping out the water. In the case of the two smaller ships heavy mats and large tarpaulins were stretched across one seams to keep the water from running into the holds and swamping them; the vessels of four centuries ago were not supplied with pumps.

The Santa Maria was rigged with four masts—the three foremost ones being fitted with yards or squares rigged, while the after mast was supplied with lateen sails. A long bowsprit projected from her bow, but carried no jibs or head sails. No sails were carried aloft above the topsails.

During favorable winds a sail was set under the bowsprit reaching to the water, and known as the watersail or spritsail. This sail fell into disuse over two centuries ago.

The Pinta and Nina were caravels, but rigged exclusively with lateen sails. The former, however, was partially square rigged prior to sailing, and the latter was similarly changed before the fleet left the Canaries from Palos. Ships in the days of Columbus were supposed to make headway through the water only when the wind blew in a favorable direction. The idea of tacking against a head wind was entirely unknown to the mariners of the past, notwithstanding the fact that ships have been propelled by sail power alone for thousands of years. Yet in spite of all these obstacles and disadvantages we find in the logbook of the Santa Maria that a speed of seven knots an hour was not an unusual occurrence.

As it was customary to employ oars against contrary winds, the crews of the ships were necessarily larger in proportion to their size than in modern ships. No less than 120 men were employed to sail the ships of Columbus.

The officers were known as the patron or captain, watchman or first mate, a counselor or navigator, the master of the deck, a scribe or secretary who wrote the ship's log, a steward and a surgeon.

The rigging consisted entirely of hemp. Their anchor cables were hemp hawsers, each following the old rule of four times the mainmast in length. Each ship was supplied with a boat called a launch, which was always towed astern. Refractory sailors were punished by being placed in the launch for many days upon short allowances and exposed to the heat of the sun and heavy drenching of the waves.

Although the compass was known to the Arabs long before Columbus and by the Chinese as far back as the beginning of the Christian era, yet this instrument was in itself not sufficient to navigate a vessel over an unknown sea. The quadrant, an instrument known to Columbus as the astrolabe, was supplied to each ship; by its use in astronomical observations the ship's position upon the high seas with respect to the equator could be readily ascertained, and also errors existing in the compasses causing the ships to deviate from their true courses were found and the proper adjustments accordingly made.

Thus Columbus was able to embark and sail away with that feeling of self reliance which had won him success on all his previous expeditions. The little town of Palos, then the greatest seaport on the Mediterranean, never sent out a grander marine spectacle than when Columbus embarked and weighed anchor and stood boldly down the Rio Tinto to sea, followed closely in his wake by the Pinta and Nina. The lavish golden carvings which decorated these ships, the red and yellow standards of Spain, the gay streamers floating in the breeze from every mast and spar, these altogether presented to the cheering crowds gathered on the wharves, housetops and neighboring hills a picturesque sight. It was indeed the crowning spectacle of the reign of Ferdinand and Isabella.

LIEUT. R. H. UBERROTH, U. S. R. M.

Too Previous.

He stood way up on the bow of a Champlain steamer. He had a completion like a tomato, and he carried a guidebook in one hand, three railroad time tables and a map in the other, and he was bursting with information. Finally, unable to stand it longer, he approached a small man who was leaning thoughtfully over the rail.

"My friend," he said impressively, "I suppose you know that those gray and fallen walls over there on the west shore are all that remain of world famous Fort Ticonderoga?"

"I didn't know it, sir," said the small man simply.

"Well, sir, they are. It was on that spot that the English commander was called from his bed to surrender in the name of Jehovah and the Continental congress. It was along these shores," added the man with the tomato complexion, waving the fluttering time tables oratorically, "that the French and Indians fought the English. Every stone, sir, is crowded with history."

"Ticonderoga, hey?" said the other reflectively; "do you live up here?"

"No, I live in New York."

"Born here, perhaps."

"No, sir."

"Travel up and down the lake pretty often, I suppose?"

"Well, no," reluctantly admitted the owner of the guidebook; "this is my first trip."

"Tis, hey? Well, I was purser of this boat for nine years, and I know every foot of that shore. The ruin over there is Sampson's dock, and Ticonderoga is nine teen miles south of here. Anything else to tell?"—New York Tribune.

POETICAL THOUGHT ABOUT WOMEN.

Woman may err, woman may give her mind
To evil thoughts and lose her pure estate;
But for one woman who affronts her kind
By wicked action and renounced fame,
A thousand make amends in age and youth
By heavenly pity, by sweet sympathy,
By patient kindness, by enduring truth,
By love, supremest in adversity.
—Charles Mackay.

The Kabyle Woman.

Notwithstanding many barbarous customs the Kabyle woman, not being, like the Arab woman, shut up in her home, going about with uncovered face, enjoying besides a certain activity, comes to exercise a real influence. It is she who gives warriors to the tribe. Maternity surrounds her with a halo. A jewel on her forehead is a mark of the birth of each of her sons. Her dignity increases with their number. She is seated at table between them and her husband, takes part in the conversation and is nearly always consulted in the administration of affairs.

Associated with public life as well as with private life, in case of war she energizes from her retirement to appear at the front and arouse by her songs the courage of the warriors. When old she appears freely in the markets, buys and sells the products of the earth, and often presides at transactions. Her words are listened to, her advice is heeded. Even when a widow she can take part in the djemaah, the assembly in the tribe of all the men of full age. In this case the manners are superior to the law.

It is not the kanoun which draws the Kabyle to us; it is the value of his individuality. More active than the Arab, more enterprising, more hardy, more capable of reflection, he is also more capable of initiating enterprises and of voluntary efforts.—Revue Bleue.

Mothers, Get More Sunshine.

"Basking in the sun" is in itself of real and considerable benefit, and it is no compliment to our human intelligence to find that cats and dogs understand that fact much better than we do. Even the "blue glass" craze had a truth underlying it, and owed such success as it achieved to the proportion of sunlight which penetrated its colored medium. The love of sunshine is naturally one of our strongest instincts, and we should be far healthier and happier if we followed and developed it instead of practically ignoring and repressing it. How a sparkling, sunny morning exhilarates us and makes us feel that "it's no fun a day to spend indoors," and yet how few holidays are taken for that reason.

The wealth of the sunbeams is poured out lavishly all around us, and we turn from it to wander for a few pitiful handfuls of something else that is yellow and shining, but not half so likely to bring us happiness, and often has strange, red spots upon it. Give nature a chance, and we shall find that there is more than a mere fanciful connection between natural sunlight and that "sunny" disposition, which after all is the true philosopher's stone."—North American Review.

1492—Columbus immortalized the great day of modern history; at 2 o'clock in the morning of land! the signal gun was fired and all rushed on deck to see the land, now clear to view. A mistaken, about two leagues distant, westward. They took in sail and waited impatiently for the dawn. The thoughts and feeling of Columbus in this little space of time must have been tumultuous and intense; at length, in spite of every difficulty and danger, he had accomplished his object; the great mystery of the ocean was revealed; his theory, which had been the scoff of sages, was triumphantly established; he had escaped to himself a glory durable as the world itself."

DEAD AND MANGLED.

A YOUNG MAN'S BODY FOUND ON THE RAILROAD TRACKS NEAR WESFIELD.

An Engineer on a Train Discovers it this Morning.—Both Legs and one Hand cut off.—Nothing in the Pockets to Identify Him.—The Body Now Lying in the Morgue.

The engineer of the 6.04 a. m. train from Plainfield to New York discovered this morning, a dead body lying between the tracks near the Westfield station. He notified the people at the station when it was reached.

The body was found to be that of a young man of perhaps 20 or 22 years of age. The face was smooth-shaven, and mashed legs had been cut off below, and mashed above, the knees. One hand also was missing. In the pockets were found a penknife, 17 cents, some matches and half a paper of tobacco.

On the paper was written in good business hand, "Jas. Kenny—due 85."

The body was clothed in a brown, small checked, plaid sack coat, striped trousers and white cotton shirt.

In life the young man must have been about five feet six inches in height.

Morgue-keeper Patrick Casey of this city, was notified and secured the body.

It will be kept awaiting identification, until Monday afternoon, when, if no one claims the body, it will be buried at the County's expense.

BREVITIES

—A feast of hilarity is promised in tonight's visit of the laughing festival, "Lord Rooney."

—If Plainfield stags would enjoy an evening of refined fun, rendered by clever people, it can be had at the Casino to-night. The Hillside Tennis Club "smoker" promises to be very delightful.

—New Brunswick celebrated Columbus Day yesterday with the largest parade ever held in that city. Over three thousand men were in line. Five hundred dollars worth of fireworks were exhibited in the evening.

—The Catholic Young Men's Lyceum entertained a large number of visitors yesterday and the bowling alleys and billiard and pool tables were kept busy during both the afternoon and evening. There was dancing until about eleven o'clock.

—The New York Herald, referring to the Fowler Concert Co., advertised elsewhere, says: "The entertainment given in the Opera House Hall last Sunday afternoon by the Fowler Concert Co. was the finest we ever heard. Their selections was delightful and the voice blended in good harmony."

—There was quite a Columbian celebration given by the scholars of the Washingtonville school in the Memorial chapel last evening. An interesting program, consisting of singing, recitations and addresses was rendered, and the school flag raised in honor of the day. During the evening refreshments were served.

—The firemen's parade in Bound Brook yesterday was a grand and creditable demonstration, and was witnessed by several thousand people. The streamthrowing contest between the Somerville Engine Co. No. 1 and Warren Engine Co. No. 3 did not take place, however, because the Somerville people withdrew.

—Attempts to further Christianize the heathens of Sung Pan might as well be abandoned. Believing that the missionaries were responsible for a long drought, the Chinese drove them out and immediately the rain fell in torrents. All the preachers on the planet could not now convince the Sung Pan people that the Lord is not on the side of the heathen.

—In 1892 fourteen Plainfielders joined Co. C. of the 14th N. J. Regiment at Elizabeth. At the re-union of the regiment held Wednesday, the following veterans from this city were present: Marshal Wm. N. Pangborn, E. P. Thorn, A. C. Townley, Abram King, Wm. H. Ayres and Jacob Nallor. They were entertained by the William C. Sperry Post, No. 85 G. A. R. and had a glorious time. Woodbridge was gayly decorated for the occasion.

—That stranger's new advertising scheme, into which a local paper has been enticed for a share in the supposed great profits, appears to be about like this: The merchant is desired to pay $6 for fifty pamphlets in which his store is illustrated. The pamphlet is called for effect "A souvenir, Plainfield Illustrated." Several of our merchants have been offered the bait, but have declined to bite. The feature of interesting Plainfield dwellings at $10 each is another part of the same scheme, which we think Plainfielders will not be very much inclined to.

A Triple Birthday Anniversary Party.

Mr. H. Wedemeir, and Mr. and Mrs. H. Klinsman, prominent Germans of this city were all born during the same week, and the triple anniversaries were combined in one grand gala time, which was held in the building at the corner of Somerset street and Greenbrook road, formerly used as Blatz's Hotel. About one hundred and eighty persons were present. The singing section of the Saengerrund rendered several songs, as did also the Glee club quartet, and Mr. Kersting and Mr. Wedemeir recited. An address was made by Vice President Seidler of the German Society, after which supper was served. Dancing was continued until the early morning hours.

HIGH SCHOOL GAMES.

WELL CONTESTED YESTERDAY AT THE DRIVING PARK GROUNDS.

There Was a Large Attendance and the Events Passed Off Successfully —Many Prizes Donated by Plainfield Merchants.

'T WAS a beautiful day yesterday. About 300 persons attended the field day sports of the Plainfield High School Athletic Assoc., which were held in the Gentlemen's Driving Park, near the city line, beginning at two o'clock.

The following gentlemen acted as officials: Judges—E. S. Hunt, F. S. Smith and George Mahon. Clerk of the Course—C. B. Morse. Starter—C. H. Angleman. Time keepers—A. H. Serrell, W. E. C. Leonard, F. W. Goddard.

The following are the details of the day's games:

100 yards dash—Won by E. I. Serrel, Whiting second, Pfender third. Time, 11½ sec. 6 starters.

Serrell easily ran away from the rest. But Whiting only beat Pfender for second prize by about a foot.

Putting the shot—Won by Fish. Whiting second, Smith third. Distance, 28 ft. 6 in. 3 competitors.

Two-mile bicycle race.—Won by E. I. Serrell, Crane second. Time 6.15. 4 starters.

Only two of the four riders who entered finished. Serrell won by fully 75 yards.

This was the best event of the day.

Running high jump—Won by Campbell, Pfender second, Fish third. Fish and Campbell, 4 ft. 8 in. Pfender, 4 ft. 6 in. Distance 17 ft. 10 in. 3 competitors.

Half-mile run—Won by Fish, Serrell second, Pfender third. Time 2.25. 7 starters.

The finish was exciting, Fish winning by but two feet, with Serrell second. Shaen made a good fight for third prize but was beaten by Pfender by only a few feet.

Standing broad jump—Won by Whiting, Fish second. Distance 7 ft. 8 in 4 competitors.

Only two handles that were provided were broken at the beginning of the contest.

Fish won the largest number of points, 21½; Whiting second, 16. Serrell third, 14½.

The following prizes were donated:

Special prizes—Cloth for trousers, by Sebring, for 100 yards dash. Bicycle lantern, by Martin, for 2-mile bicycle race.

Fifty for mile run—By Mrs. Rand, Morocco pocket book. By Crane, white silk handkerchief. By Bullock & Davis, leather belt. By Neuman Bros. basket of apples. By Doane, a gold pin. By Laing, pair of cuff links. By Mrs. Foote, a box of candy. By Harper, pair dumb-bells. By Estil, book, "Ian Away from the Dutch." By Dickson & Pope, basket of grapes. By Estsell & Doane, pair of gymnasium shoes. By Collier, pair of cuff-buttons. By Griffin & Pope, chain. By Miss Lincoln, a wreath of flowers for the winner of most points.

The egg-of-wa was omitted as the necessary articles were not to be had.

PERSONAL.

Miss Ella J. Roome of Butler, N. J., is visiting Miss May Hudson of Somerset street.

Mr. Arthur Barrett of Brooklyn is visiting his sister, Mrs. Carl Kaerth of East Second street.

Walter Kettenring of Harmony street, North Plainfield, was tendered a surprise party last evening by a number of his young friends.

Mr. David Bodine of Grandview avenue, North Plainfield, a member of Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., was elected Warden of the State Council at its session at Bridgeton, Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. John McNally celebrated the anniversary of their wedding at their home on Kensington avenue on Thursday evening. The house was prettily decorated with Autumn leaves and flowers. Dancing and vocal and instrumental music were features of the occasion. At midnight a tempting supper was served. Guests were present from this city, Newark, New York and Brooklyn. The couple received many handsome presents.

Miss Eva Josepha Pugh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. Pugh, of West Fourth street, was married to Henry W. Fralsigh of Bound Brook, last evening, at the residence of the bride's parents. The marriage was a private one, only the immediate friends and relatives of the bride and groom being present. Rev. W. W. Jordan of Bound Brook, assisted by the Rev. C. L. Goodrich, officiated. The ushers were James Dunham of Bound Brook and Eugene D. Nash of Utica, N. Y. The bridesmaid was Miss Lizzie L. Pugh, a sister of the bride, and R. R. DeMott of Bound Brook was the best man.

—In their advertisement elsewhere the United Tea and Coffee Growers' Association call attention to the spot cash special sale of groceries now going on at their store.

—Dorflinger's American Cut Glass is shown in every requisite for tea table and in beautiful pieces for wedding and holiday gifts. Genuine pieces have trade mark label. C. Dorflinger & Sons, 36 Murray street.

POLITICAL PICKLES.

Editor John Gibson of Newark is to speak at the Rink next Thursday night.

The Executive Committee of the Republican Association is talking of a big reception to be given soon to honor of Winfield S. Chamberlain, the Republican candidate for Congress from the Eighth District.

The U. S. Grant Republican Club of North Plainfield will hold an important meeting in Spencer's Hall, Monday evening at which Samuel W. Reese, the well-known and popular Westfield orator will deliver one of his strong speeches which he will illustrate with stereopticon views. All Democrats are invited.

The Republican State Committee has placed the name of John W. Murray, of Plainfield, upon the electoral ticket to succeed W. S. Chamberlain, who has been nominated for Congress, and the name of John I. Blair in the place of Frederick Frelinghuysen, who is a national bank director.

Gov. Abbett and the attorney-general are making the appearance of trying as hard now to break up the coal combine as they tried last Spring to legitimatize the whole monstrous infamy. But they can't put $300,000 paid extra for coal, back into the pockets of the people of Union county. Their action now is confessedly only a bluff to blind the voters, who must now pay $1.00 per ton more for placing the Democrats in full control of the State last year.

Neither side is doing much boasting in this State this campaign, but we do not think more earnest work has been done in any campaign before. The Democracy by fraud has fastened like a huge octopus on all the sources of power in the State, but the one that no man can control when once aroused—the reserved power of the people. But by these frauds the Democrats are strongly intrenched. We believe—yes, we feel sure—that they will be dislodged. We believe the people fully realize their danger.

We ought to win, and though we are the underdog in this State, we fight with confidence that we will win, for we have our adversary by the throat, though it will never be done by boasting, but by steady, intelligent work. That is what the Republicans are doing all over the State. The Democrats, even though so strongly intrenched, feel by no means secure. They are working rather on party prejudices among the ignorant and easily persuaded, but they are working desperately. It is a good fight, and for the Republicans a glorious one. But when was the Republican cause ever anything else than a glorious one.

The Winning Ticket.

That the Bound Brook Chronicle knows a good thing when it sees it is shown by the following editorial:

The Republican ticket now standing at the head of this column is complete, and it is a splendid array of nominations, from President to Coroner.

The county nominees, named at Somerville on Tuesday, are all good men, and deserve the hearty support of their friends of Frank W. Somers, in this vicinity, both Democrats and Republicans, as they pointed it out in having an opportunity to vote for him this Fall, but he made a good showing in the contest, and may rest assured that his turn will yet come.

George A. Ditts, the nominee for Sheriff, is not a stranger to the people of Somerset. He made a gallant fight for Assembly, last Fall, and greatly reduced Hon. J. J. Berger's majority of the previous year. He will now be elected if the Republicans work earnestly for his success.

In R. N. Spencer, for Surrogate, the Republicans have a nominee of whom they may well be proud, and the same can truthfully be said of Dr. VanDerveer, for Assemblyman. Last but not least, is Dr. Fisher for Coroner. This office is one which can be secured by patient work.

Let the Republicans now go to work with a vim and elect the whole ticket.

For John Kean, Jr.

Der Somerset Bote, the only German newspaper in this county, comes out this week in favor of the election of John Kean, Jr. The editor, Walter Reis, is a well-known Democrat, a member of the German Democratic Club, of Raritan, and has hitherto conducted his newspaper in the interests of the Democratic party. He charges Governor Abbett with appointing corrupt men to office, and that the Senate approved these appointments. He argues that it is time for the self-respecting Germans to vote for a change, and as George T. Werts is the nominee of the Abbett machine, the only way to rid the State of bossism is to vote with the Republicans, this year, for John Kean, Jr.

The Crescents Did'nt Play in Their Usual Form.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Wants All Dogs Destroyed.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—The little articles in Tuesday's issue of THE NEWS touch on a subject in which many of us Plainfielders have more than passing interest. I refer to the articles, one of which was addressed to you and published under the caption, "Censuring the Dog Catcher," and the other, "Dogs Poisoned in North Plainfield." In regard to the former "Eye Witness" seems to think that the words "roaming at large" admit of different meanings. I think anyone will readily admit that a dog at large just as soon as he is off his owner's premises, and that he is liable when so off the premises of his owner to commit an injury or nuisance against the public. Furthermore, dogs are a nuisance when confined in their owner's yards, and when allowed the liberty of the street even but for a few moments, their are an abomination to their owner's neighbors. Dogs are always dangerous and a menace to man, no matter how gentle. I was bitten severely by my father's dog a month ago, although the dog had seen me almost daily for eight years. And why? Just because he saw me running in the front door of my father's house, and yet I was playing with him but a moment before.

In regard to the second article, to some people the idea of poisoning a dog is abhorent, but for myself I heartily approve of their destruction, by any means, if off the premises of their owners when destroyed.

I think that if the dogs poisoned in North Plainfield were "roaming at large," the person or persons so poisoning them should be called public benefactors, and not miscreants.

Many Plainfield property-owners are obliged to build costly, and as they always prove to be, unsightly fences around their property merely as a protection against dogs.

West Front street is over run with dogs at almost any hour of the day, but more particularly in the early morning and again at evening. I have not seen the dog catcher there once in the past six months, much as I desired to do so.

I says keep dogs confined strictly upon the property of their owners. When found elsewhere, destroy them.

A RESIDENT OF WEST FRONT STREET.

An Evening With Tennyson.

Last evening the Epworth League of the Methodist church held their first sociable for this season in Vincent chapel. The entertainment was in charge of Miss Minnie J. French, Miss Gertrude Trenham and Mr. James Haddock.

The committee decided upon having an evening with Tennyson and the following interesting program was most successfully rendered:

PART I.

Quotations from Tennyson in which all present were invited to join.
Biographical sketch.....Miss Shafer
Reading, "Extracts from In Memoriam".Tennyson
Mr. James R. Joy
Reading, "Tennyson's Death Bed Scene"
Miss Rose Horn
Talk, "The Poets' Corner in Westminster Abbey"
Dr. J. L. Hurlbut
Piano Solo.....Miss Morrison
Recitation, "In the Children's Hospital" Tennyson
Miss Raybert
Vocal Solo, "The Brook".....Tennyson
Miss Filmer
Reading, selected from "Maud".....Tennyson
Miss Morrison

PART II.

Scenes from "Enoch Arden".....Tennyson
Reading.....Miss Gertrude Trenham
Pantomime.....Miss Trenham, Warner Smith, George Rome and Master Edwin Loomis, Misses Allie Loomis, Della Voehl, Etta Pond, Edith Lockwood and Miss Filmer

After the program was completed the ladies served refreshments.

The chapel was well filled and everyone went away feeling better acquainted with Tennyson and thanking the committee for arranging such a delightful program for their benefit.

Amount of Space Allotted by the World's Fair for Art.

The following is a table showing the amount of space allotted at the World's Fair, to the countries named, for art exhibits:

	Lineal Feet.	Hanging Space Square Feet.
United States	8,475	34,286
Great Britain	1,467	30,000
Belgium	193	3,965
France	2,082	35,393
Germany	1,500	34,400
Austria	588	11,264
Belgium	1,000	13,216
Italy	810	12,410
Norway	400	5,498
Sweden	697	7,000
Denmark	574	6,250
Russia	974	7,728
Spain	550	7,387
Holland	1,000	9,887
Japan	926	2,819
Mexico	200	2,000

The space applied for had to be cut down in almost every case, because the aggregate amount asked for exceeded the total available space. The space allotted to Great Britain, Germany, etc., includes, as a rule, that for their colonies. The picture line is thirty inches above the floor.

A Cigar.

[Contributed.]

When ends the toil and strife of our daily life
At even's gentle hour;
When rest is king supreme, and every sense do smile,
Give me a good cigar.

When we would cast off care, and seek the fresher air
That so vexatious mar;
Give me the bliss that lies—that only those can prize,
That love a good cigar.

When memories haunt the mind, and Fancy silver lined
Seeks vent in speeches fair;
Give me that friend whose wreaths of smoke ascend,
And kind the lighter air.

When sorrow's sable shade our spirits low hath laid
In Lethean depths;
Try soothing power to raise—a boon to him alone
Who knows thy cloudy steps.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

400 Women Prisoners Released.

BERLIN, Oct. 22—(Special.)—To mark the christening day of the infant Princess 400 women who were imprisoned for various offences have been released, and there is consequently much rejoicing among the erstwhile prisoners and their families.

Five Persons Killed by a Bomb.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 22. (Special.)—At a pyrotechnic display last night, concluding the Columbus celebration, in the presence of 10,000 people, an explosion occurred which killed five persons and seriously wounded ten more.

130 Typhoid Fever Victims.

EAGLE PASS, TEX., Oct. 22. (Special.)—Owing to the lack of a sewerage system in Zaratecas, 130 people died of typhoid fever within a week, and it shows no sign of abatement.

Columbian Celebration at St. Mary's School.

Among those who were expected to take part in the Columbian exercises at St. Mary's school, yesterday, was the Rev. John A. Stafford, formerly of this city. He was, however, unavoidably delayed, and much to his regret, came late for the ceremony.

Some friends, taking advantage of his visit, presented him with a beautiful and costly set of Breviaries, and other works relating to the rubrics of the R. C. Church.

Father Smythe of St. Mary's church was the spokesman on the occasion, and Mrs. Murphy, and Miss Mary Maguire, represented the donors. It is needless to say that the reverend gentleman was surprised and gratified by such a practical evidence of esteem and affection.

—You will find White & Van Arsdale's advertisement to day spicy reading. This firm is offering great inducements for the trade of Plainfield. They say that every department is overflowing with good bargains. They received today fifty cases of granite iron ware, which they say they will offer this week at tinware prices.

—An amusingly ridiculous feature of the game laws is the warning they contain against killing birds, fishes, and quadrupeds in certain States when the subjects have been extinct for half a hundred years. For instance you are not allowed to kill moose and caribou in New Jersey, and salmon must not be creeled in Ohio. The fact that there never were any salmon in Ohio and that New Jersey only sees moose and caribou when Forepaugh's circus pays it a visit has no effect on the game law compiler. He takes no chances.

Paris will greet the opening of the Twentieth century with a world's fair. Thus far Paris has made international expositions pay better than any other city. People like to go to Paris.

The Columbus family still lives and has name and place in Italy. The Italian minister of finance, who resigned from the cabinet because he disapproved of taxing the country still heavier for military purposes, was named Colombo. He showed his good sense and patriotism by his course. It is better for Italian soldiers to patch and darn their uniforms still more than they do now rather than Italy shall be further taxed for war.

SICKLES ON HIS TALKS.

He Explains His Remarks at Chicago and Washington.

BLAINE WILL SURELY SPEAK ONCE.

If His Health Remains Good He Will Make at Least One More Address During the Campaign—Minister Egan to Start on a Tour of Speechmaking.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—At a largely attended mass meeting of the Democratic clubs in Harlem last night General Daniel E. Sickles discussed national issues and explained his much talked about speech at the G. A. R. encampment at Washington. "I have been very tenderly embraced and seductively beckoned by the Republicans," said General Sickles, "on account of a campfire speech I made at Washington. They thought, adding what I said there to what I said in Chicago, that I might be lured into the Republican fold. Now about Chicago. I had my preference in Chicago for a presidential candidate, and I expressed that preference as every Democrat has a right to do. I have not recalled and do not recall a single word I said at Chicago. [Applause.] But that is ancient history now. It took me a little while to get in a good humor again, but I have come to the conclusion that 850 men know more than 72. [Great applause.]

"As to the Washington speech, I was talking to a thousand comrades who had that day been disappointed in their expectation of being received at the White House by the president. The president had arranged for a reception to them, but was obliged to forego it on account of Mrs. Harrison's serious illness. This is what I said: 'Comrades, you have been disappointed. I am sorry for you. You expected to be received by the head of the nation, who is your comrade, but he is restrained by a solemn duty today. He has not forgotten you and you must not forget him. He is a brave soldier. I saw him lead his battalion at Resaca.' That is what I said. I felt it to be manly, and only a tribute one soldier might properly pay to another.

Cleveland and the Veterans.

"But Harrison as a comrade is one thing. Harrison as a leader of a political party is another. Harrison at Resaca leading a battalion of soldiers to victory and glory is one thing. Harrison at Washington leading a battalion of officeholders in an effort to perpetuate himself is a thing I abhor." [Loud and continuous applause.]

General Sickles, in speaking of Mr. Cleveland's interest in the veterans, said, "He gives his unqualified adherence to the United States policy of caring for her veteran soldiers."

A voice: "Why did he not give himself?" There were hisses and shouts of "Put him out!" and confusion prevailed all over the theater for a moment.

"Some one had to stay and keep the house in order," was the general's quick reply. "It is an ungracious censure carelessly to fling at any man, unless you know the whole circumstances. There may have been good reasons for any man not going to the war. Because a man did not take up arms he may not show that he was any the less patriotic and devoted to his country."

General Sickles closed by saying: "Grover Cleveland will take care of the old soldiers. Should he need any help from me in carrying up the pension system or establishing it on a wider basis he will get it, for I'm going to organize for that very purpose. [Loud cheering and applause.]

BLAINE IN THE CAMPAIGN.

He Assures Platt That He Will Make at Least One More Speech.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22—James G. Blaine took a long drive with Mrs. Blaine and Mrs. Damrosch, and upon his return to the Fifth Avenue hotel met Mr. Thomas C. Platt, and they were closeted together for nearly two hours. During the conversation Mr. Blaine assured Mr. Platt that he would gladly make a speech during the last week of the campaign if his health continued to improve as it had during the last few weeks. In any event the speech that Mr. Blaine will make will not be a long one. There has as yet been no definite time fixed for the departure of Mr. Blaine to Washington.

At national Republican headquarters several prominent visitors, including Congressman Seligman, Minister Egan, Hon. Richard Guenther, of Wisconsin, and Hon. Samuel Fessenden, of Connecticut, had conferences with Chairman Carter and other members of the committee.

Chairman Halin, of the speakers' bureau, made several important assignments, including four speeches for Senator Aldrich in Connecticut and three in New York. Thomas Fitch, the renowned California orator, has been booked for one speech in New Jersey, one in Connecticut and four in New York; Hon. Richard Guenther will speak in New York every night next week; General George A. Sheridan has been sent to New Hampshire, and ex-Lieutenant Governor R. T. Kennedy, of Ohio, to Michigan.

Patrick Egan, United States minister to Chili, will take the stump in the interest of the Republican party next week. He will make his first appearance at Indianapolis on Oct. 28 and will preside at the following mass meetings, at which he will also make addresses: Dunkirk, Oct. 31; Buffalo, Nov. 1; Rochester, Nov. 2; Glens Falls, Nov. 3. On Nov. 4 the will preside at a mass meeting in Cooper Union and the following night at the Clermont rink, Brooklyn.

SENATOR QUAY EVASIVE.

He Won't Speak About His Plans or the Result of the Election.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 22.—Senator Matthew S. Quay and his family arrived here on their way to Washington. The senator complains of his head, and said vertigo again attacked him after he had returned to his home in Beaver. When asked if he would go to New York to look into affairs in the doubtful states the senator said it will depend upon what the doctor says. "He tells me I must remain quiet and rest to get over the vertigo," the senator continued, "and if I take part in the political turmoil I cannot do this."

Regarding a report that he was going to New York to give the last two weeks to the campaign, Senator Quay said: "They are getting along very well over there. They don't want me. As I have said, I am going to Washington."

He further said he had never seen a campaign so quiet, but when asked if Harrison would be elected replied: "How do I know? I have nothing but what I learn from surface indications and from what I see in the newspapers."

"Do you think Mr. Harrison will be elected?"

"I have not been able to go over the situation. I have not been in consultation with our people to know what is going on." As the reporter was leaving the senator said, "I want to get rid of this trouble with my head. The longer I am actively engaged in politics the longer will it be for me to recover my health."

A Victory for Mahone.

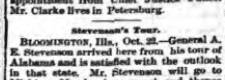
RICHMOND, Oct. 22.—Mr. Charles Clarke, formerly business manager of the Richmond Whig will in a few days enter upon the duties of United States marshal. His appointment is a victory for Mahone over Brady, as the latter was backing ex-Judge Thomas S. Atkins, who held the temporary appointment from Chief Justice Fuller. Mr. Clarke lives in Petersburg.

Stevenson's Tour.

BLOOMINGTON, Ills., Oct. 22.—General A. E. Stevenson arrived here from his tour of Alabama and is satisfied with the outlook in that state. Mr. Stevenson will go to Michigan Monday for a speech and thence to New York to attend a Tammany meeting. After two or three speeches in West Virginia he will close the campaign in Illinois. He will address a meeting in Brooklyn on the 30th.

Fusion in Louisiana.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 22.—The Republican and People's party have agreed upon a fusion in this state.



TAILOR MADE DRESSES.

Costumes That Illustrate the Perfection of Sartorial Art.

The tailors are first in the field with the autumn costumes, experience having taught them that at the approach of cold weather women appreciate the manifold advantages of their well fitting tweed and cloth gowns. Generally speaking, the tailor gown, while simple, is well cut and stylish.

An attractive gown seen recently was made in fine black cloth. The bodice resembled in shape a mess jacket, and was edged with a tiny ball fringe, and just from the top to the waist it opened to give a peep at a scarlet silk vest and broad band. Another costume, also with a suggestion of the military in its details, was made of an indescribably patterned brown and tan tweed irregularly flecked with black. The bodice of this had a broad plastron of tan colored cloth, and was braided across hussar fashion in black braid. The hem of the skirt was trimmed with a band of the tan cloth, striped with lines of the black braid; the sleeves had cuffs appropriately braided to match the front, and around the waist, buckling in the front, was a belt of tan leather. Crown this costume with a black hat, trimmed with the feathers from a pheasant's breast, and I fancy you would arrive within measurable distance of sartorial perfection for this time of year. See cut for illustration of this costume.

CHICAGO'S FINAL BLAZE.

The Grandest Display of Fireworks the World Ever Saw.

THE CLIMAX TO THE DEDICATION.

Old Glory, Picked Out in Flaming Device, Floated Up Against the Starry Heavens. A Columbian Bouquet of Fifteen Thousand Sky Vaulting Rockets.

CHICAGO, Oct. 22.—Last night the World's fair buildings' dedicatory exercises closed with the most brilliant and gorgeous display of fireworks ever given in the world. To avoid the concentration of a mass of people this display was divided into three parts and given in as many parts of the World's fair city. A display was given on Washington park on the south, Jackson park on the north and Garfield park at the west. The largest crowd congregated at Washington park, which was the most accessible from the heart of the city, but it is estimated that no less than 300,000 people saw each of these displays.

At 8 o'clock the display was commenced to assume the fiery canopy that crowned the city with the most magnificent blaze of glory that the world ever saw. The display opened with a salute of 100 35-inch aerial maroons, which exploded at an altitude of 800 feet and sent a shower of fire back to the earth. As this died away each park suddenly blazed forth in a magnificent illumination from 500 prismatic lights fired by electricity, changing colors five times and throwing over the scene the tints of the national colors and the newly adopted municipal terra cotta.

Then 500 5-pound rockets rushed into the skies from each of the three parks, blending with their various tints in the autumn evening sky, and the parks were brilliantly illuminated with colored fires in generous quantities.

The Columbian Bouquet.

One of the crowning features of the marvelous display was the magnificent Columbian bouquet made by the flight of 15,000 rockets, 5,000 at the command from each of the three parks. This is the largest flight of rockets known in the history of the world, and its beauty cannot be fully described in words. For two minutes the effect was seen in every part of the city and for miles around it. The heavens were turned into a sea of fire in every color of the rainbow, and forming the most gorgeous canopy that ever clothed any city on either continent.

In each of the parks five bombshells sixty inches in circumference and weighing 710 pounds were thrown from mortars to an altitude of 700 feet, where they exploded, forming a picture of marvelous grandeur. These were the largest bombshells ever made of the kind.

One of the most novel of the many features on the programme was the star spangled banner in fireworks floating in the sky at an altitude of 2,000 feet. The flags were 300 feet in length, and presented a design never before attempted in aerial work. They were attached to balloons under the direction of Baldwin, of Quincy, Ills., the famous aeronaut, who took one of them into the heavens himself. When at the proper altitude the flash fuse was ignited from the balloon, and upon reaching the suspended flag "Old Glory" spread forth in all its glory, a wonder in pyrotechnics without a precedent. The flag burned for five minutes, and it is safe to say that the American flag never appeared before in a position of such exalted grandeur.

Nothing Like It Ever Before.

The set pieces were of a character that brought out a wealth of enthusiasm from the great assembled host. Upon these the best pyrotechnical artists in the world have been working for six months, and their efforts were rewarded in the magnificent display last night.

The first of these occupied 2,000 square feet of space and bore the inscription in fire "Chicago welcomes the nations of the earth, 1492-1892," supported by two American eagles, above which were brought out the outlines of the various World's fair buildings.

Then a set piece with an area of 2,500 square feet represented in fire the sailing of Columbus from Palos and illustrating his fleet—the Pinta, Santa Maria and Nina. Every few minutes the colors of the fire changed, and as it burned the enthusiasm of the spectators was almost wild. This was the largest set piece ever burned in the history of fireworks. As a companion piece the landing of the great discoverer at San Salvador was given.

Niagara Falls was also given in fire, presenting a cataract 600 feet in length of golden spray, and forming an effect never before produced. There were also many other devices and designs, and when 10 o'clock had passed the most elaborate fireworks display that the world has ever burned closed with the great Columbian bouquet of 15,000 rockets.

The World's Congress Auxiliary.

Another event of the evening was the inaugural at the Auditorium of the World's congress auxiliary—the intellectual branch—whose achievements are expected to be grand and lasting. The enterprise has enlisted in its support the most brilliant minds in the intellectual world; has been recognized by the national government as the proper agency to conduct great international conventions to be held during the World's fair; to provide places where the leaders of thought may consider the living questions of the various departments; for popular meetings, and to secure the publication of the proceedings of such congresses as a valuable and enduring memorial of the fair.

The opening invocation was delivered by the Rev. Dr. J. H. Barrows, chairman of the general committee of auxiliary on religious congresses. After the welcome on behalf of the World's congress auxiliary by the president, Charles C. Bonney, the honorable banking gentleman was extended by Mrs. Potter Palmer, president. Mrs. Charles Henrotin, vice president of the woman's auxiliary, followed with a salutation in honor of Queen Isabella, and then the noted prelate, Rev. John Ireland, Catholic archbishop of St. Paul, delivered the oration, after which the meeting closed with an invocation by Dr. William R. Harper, president of the University of Chicago.

Everybody Celebrated.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—Advices from United Press correspondents in all towns throughout the middle Atlantic and New England states say that Columbus Day was celebrated greater than any event since the centennial celebration of 1876. The beautiful feature of the celebration was the part taken by the children of the various towns.

DEATH CLOUDS DARKEN.

The Grim Specter's Shadow Is Cast O'er the White House.

NO MORE HOPE FOR MRS. HARRISON.

Her Physician Says There Is Absolutely No Chance for Her Life and the End May Come at Any Moment, Though It May Be Deferred for Weeks.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—"Mrs. Harrison's case is utterly and absolutely hopeless." It was Dr. Frank S. Gardner who made this statement almost immediately after leaving the bedside of the distinguished patient in the White House. Dr. Gardner appreciates the fact that the public are not only in full sympathy with Mrs. Harrison, but that they have a right to be informed of her true condition, and he says that the end may come at any time. Mrs. Harrison's vitality is remarkable. A patient son's vitality is remarkable. A patient son's vitality is remarkable. A patient with less reserve power would long ago have reached the end. It is all that sustains her in her last struggles with death.

"I cannot say how far off the end is. Complications may arise at almost any time which would necessitate 'tapping.' An operation of this kind in Mrs. Harrison's weak condition would probably prove fatal. She may live for a few days and her life may be prolonged for several weeks."

The White House was wrapped in gloomy silence today. Those who approached it instinctively felt the hovering presence of a great shadow and trod with a lighter step.

Immediately after breakfast the president returned to the bedside and there remained several hours. Up to 10:30 there were no callers.

After that hour several ladies called to pay their respects to the sufferer. Among these were Mrs. Harris, Mrs. Parker of the Soldiers' home, and Mrs. John R. McLean. Mrs. Miller, wife of the attorney general, called at an early hour, and was at once admitted to the sick chamber.

Mrs. Russell Harrison left the White House at an early hour for a stroll in the open air. She was absent several hours, returning much refreshed. Mrs. Parker, wife of Lieutenant Parker, soon after Mrs. Russell Harrison's return, left the bedside to seek the morning call sit.

Steadily Growing Worse.

There was a feeling of hope after the terrible anxiety of the night, owing to the patient's apparent comfort and restfulness in the afternoon. There was no recurrence of the wasting cough. Still it was an unnatural slumber that gave no permanent encouragement.

Dr. Gardiner decided not to make an afternoon call, as the patient was sleeping then and no good could be served by arousing her. His examination early this morning showed that the temperature of the invalid was much higher than it has been for some time.

Her respiration had also increased to a considerable extent, and all the signs indicated that Mrs. Harrison was steadily growing worse. The progress toward the critical point had been gradual, but it had been sure, and each step nearer the end once taken had not been retraced.

It is by the narrowest thread that the poor sufferer clings to life. She is obliged to recline all the time on her back or partly on her right side, for, with the right lung gone and the left lung seriously affected rapidly by the disease, great danger would attend lying in any other position.

The physician this morning gave instructions to nurses not absent no longer. She is now totally unable to raise her head from the pillow, though at times she can and does slightly raise her shoulders. The paroxysm of coughing are very frequent and painful. Her respiration now varies between forty and fifty, which is more than double the normal.

The Nourishment She Takes.

She is still taking nourishment, and in the same quantity that she has been able to latterly—about three beaten raw eggs in each twenty-four hours.

This she is able to retain unless a fit of coughing sweeps soon after taking it, in which case the violent exertion of coughing prevents retention of the nourishment up in the stomach. The spread of the disease over the left lung is rapid and alarming.

Several nervous prostration has attended the terrible disease all along, complicated by the danger of an accumulation of watery matter in the cavity of the pleura, which would necessitate the early dissection. Such operations were necessary during the week before the removal of Mrs. Harrison from Dixon. It served to prevent a fatal termination from the reproduction of the fluid, but since her return to Washington the accumulation has not thus far been sufficient to cause great alarm.

In response to a hasty summons James R. McKee, the president's son-in-law, came on from Boston and arrived at the sorrow stricken house shortly after midnight. Judge Scott, or Washington state, Mrs. Harrison's brother, is now the only one of her relatives absent from the city, and he is so far away that he will hardly be sent for, as it is doubtful if he could reach here in time for her to see him.

Irish Political Prisoners.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—John Redmond returned to the city from Portland prison, where he has seen the Irish political prisoners, John Daly and James Egan. Since last year ago, he says, Daly seems to have aged ten years. Egan, imprisoned on the ground that he was Daly's accomplice in the dynamite plot, probably will be released shortly, as the only decision in favor of Gavan [illegible] may been made. Insufficient [illegible] reason given for his [illegible] Both men are convicted upon [illegible] given by the black mailing police informers, James Brack, of Manchester, since retired.

Captain Lawlor Given Up as Lost.

BOSTON, Oct. 22.—Captain J. M. Lawlor, who sailed from Boston June 5, last in a fast boat on a transatlantic voyage, since he was last heard from at North Sydney, N. S., about three months ago, has been practically given up by his friends as lost.

DISS DEBAR BOSS UP AGAIN.

Ann O'Delia Arrested in Quincy for Stealing a Thousand Dollars.

QUINCY, Ills., Oct. 22.—Ann O'Delia Diss Debar, the noted spiritualist, was arrested here on complaint of a woman at Elgin, Ills., for defrauding her out of $1,000.

Diss Debar, who is now called Vera Ava, went to Elgin last winter with a man who claimed to be her agent. She won the confidence of Mrs. John Mitchell, whose husband had committed suicide a few months before.

Vera Ava reappeared there a month ago and stopped with Mrs. Mitchell, giving seances. On the morning of the alleged theft Mrs. Mitchell had drawn $1,000 from the bank and was counting it in her room, in which she was assisted by Vera Ava. Mrs. Mitchell was called to the door, and when she returned to the room Vera and the money were gone.

The notorious Ann Odelia Diss Debar, after a last effort to win a reputation as a theatrical freak, disappeared from New York city on April 13 last year. She wrote to the district attorney and to the newspapers, stating that she would drown herself by jumping from a Staten Island ferryboat. She had attracted attention immediately previous to that time by appearing in nun's attire on the streets. Rumors of her appearance in the west and as a "persecuted philanthropist" in Chicago were afterward printed.

Her first jump into notoriety as the spook priestess who swindled Luther P. Smith out of his property, for which she served a term on Blackwell's island, is well known. There was a warrant for her arrest when she disappeared from Taylor's hotel in Jersey City.

LINCOLN'S EARLY TUTOR DEAD.

Dennis F. Hanks the Victim of a Recent Runaway Accident.

PARIS, Ills., Oct. 22.—Dennis F. Hanks, the early tutor and friend of Lincoln, died at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Nancy Shoaff, in this city, aged ninety-three years, four months and 23 days. He was born near Hodgensville, Harding county, Ky., May 15, 1799. Abraham Lincoln was a native of the same county, and he and Mr. Hanks were boys together.

Subsequently Thomas Lincoln, the father of the martyred president, and Mr. Hanks moved to Spencer county, Ind. While living in the latter county Mr. Hanks taught Abraham Lincoln to read and write. After the two families removed to Illinois Mr. Hanks continued to be the valued adviser of Mr. Lincoln, and this friendship continued to the time of the president's death.

Mr. Hanks received injuries on Sept. 22 by being run over by a buggy. But for these injuries Mr. Hanks might have rounded out the century.

BOSTON MEANS BUSINESS.

The Cleveland Club Whitewashed in the Fourth Game of the Series.

BOSTON, Oct. 22.—The battle for the baseball championship of the world has been transferred here, and the Beaneaters on their home grounds, in the presence of a big crowd, gave the Clevelands the worst drubbing of the series so far.

Boston's magnificent fielding and Nichol's superb pitching at critical points kept Cleveland from scoring. Boston earned but one run on Duffy's home run in the third. McCarthy scoring at the same time after reaching first on balls. Virtue's error in the sixth gave the other two runs, Lowe and Quinn following with clean hits. The score:

Miraculous Cures Alleged.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 22.—There is great excitement in the Roman Catholic circles here over two remarkable cures that have just been made of persons who have been worshipping at the altar recently set up here with a relic of St. Ann. Annie Higgins, fourteen years old, crippled since youth, has thrown away her crutches and walks as well as any one. A Miss Kent, of this city, for years a rheumatic sufferer, has been cured after all the doctors gave her up.

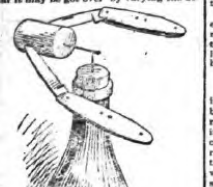
A RECREATION IN MAGIC.

How to Drill a Hole with a Needle Through a Pin.

Here is a bit of magic with which to entertain a small party at home. See the accompanying cut.

The pin is stuck in the head of a cork, into which are thrust, one on either side, two penknives of equal weight. Should there be a trifling difference in this particular it may be got over by varying the depths of insertion. The head of the pin on the end of your finger, and open or close the blades of the knives till by bit until the pin rests exactly horizontal; then transfer it to the point of the needle, stuck head downward in the end of a bottle. By blowing upon the cork that holds the penknives you may get the combination in movement, revolving on the point of the needle.



DRILLING THROUGH A PIN WITH A NEEDLE.

The needle, being made of harder metal than is the pin, will speedily begin to work a hole in the latter, and if the experiment is continued long enough will in due time make its way completely through it.

The Burrowing Owl.

Captain Bendire, curator of ology, tells in a special bulletin of the United States National museum of some popular errors about the burrowing owl, as follows:

A good deal of nonsense has found its way into print about the life history of this owl, and the sentimental story of its living in perfect harmony with prairie dogs and rattlesnakes, both of which inhabit a considerable portion of the range occupied by these owls, was for years accepted as true and furnished the groundwork for many an interesting tale. From an extended acquaintance with the habits of the burrowing owl, lasting through a number of years' service in the west, I can most positively assert from personal experience and investigation that there is no foundation based on actual fact for these stories, and that no such happy families exist in reality. I am fully convinced that the burrowing owl, small as it is, is more than a match for the average prairie dog and the rattlesnake as well. It is by no means the peaceful and spiritless bird that it is generally believed to be, and it subsists, to some extent at least, on the young dogs, if not also on the old ones.

These birds are diurnal in their habits, and may be seen sitting in front of their burrows at any hour of the day. When not unduly molested they are not at all shy, and usually allow one to approach them near enough to observe their curious antics. Their long, slender legs give them rather a comical look, a sort of top heavy appearance, and they are proverbially polite, being sure to bow to you as you pass by. Should you circle around them they will keep you constantly in view, and if this is kept up it sometimes seems as if they were in danger of twisting their heads off in attempting to keep you in sight. If you venture too close they will rise and fly a short distance and generally settle down near the mouth of another burrow close by, standing on their long slender legs and actively and especially so during the breeding season.

Improvements in Belting.

One of the most striking improvements in belt manufacture at present, as noted by The Manufacturers' Gazette, is the rarity with which riveting is resorted to, it being found that a double belt, well cemented, is good for all ordinary purposes, rendering rivets superfluous; at the same time fastenings, such as endless copper wire screws, which do not obstruct the surface or unnecessarily stiffen the belt, are an advantage, this being especially so when the belt comes in contact with water or too much oil, as with fastenings every stitch in the belt from coming apart and holds the leather firmly together. All main driving belts are forty inches in width have to be made in sections, consisting of two or more pieces of leather cemented together—that is, the average hide for belting does not contain more than forty inches in which a solid belt or called for belting, very rarely exceeding this, and therefore wide main belts are necessarily made in sections, or diagonally, too, the pieces are not lapped parallel, but simply butted. According to this, a 60-inch double belt receives two 30 inch pieces for the first layer, laid side by side, and a 30-inch piece over the center of the two lower pieces to break the joint, and two 15-inch pieces on top of each edge of the lower layer to complete the width, and thus the leather is cemented together.

How to Keep from Drowning.

If you cannot swim and should fall over board, stand in an erect position and "tread water." To do this The Industrial World advises as follows:

Use your legs precisely as though you were walking upstairs. You should put pedal slowly up and down alternately with your hands. In case it should be necessary to remain in the water a long time this operation may become tiresome, in which case you may rest yourself by lying flat upon your back, with your legs close together and arms extended at full length backward until your hands touch. This position can be maintained almost indefinitely without appreciable effort. Above all keep your mouth shut and preserve your presence of mind.

Cement That Will Stand Heat.

An English formula for a cement that will stand heat is to mix a handful of quicklime in four ounces of linseed oil and boil to a good thickness. Next spread on thin plates in the shade and it will become exceedingly hard, but may be dissolved over the fire and used as ordinary glue.

THE HOUSEHOLD

ABOUT FRYING FOOD.

Two Methods Expressed by the French Terms Sauter and Frire.

There are two methods of frying, known in English as "wet frying" and "dry frying," or in French by the terms sauter and frire.

To sauter, or dry fry, is to cook food in a small quantity of hot fat and in a shallow pan. Omelets, pancakes, liver and bacon and chopped vegetables are samples of the sort of food which may be correctly cooked thus. When sauté, articles should be in constant motion, owing to the pan being jerked to keep them from sticking, and they should be turned so that they may be equally cooked on both sides.

To wet fry is to immerse in hot fat, and this method constitutes real frying. The first necessity for it is to have fat sufficient to cover the food all over, so that the heat shall be conveyed to every part alike. Nor need this method be supposed extravagant. It is economical, as the fat can be used again and again. Fat properly cared for need never be thrown out; it is strained free from any little pieces of bread or batter that may have gotten into it; is washed when dirty, and can be constantly renewed, little pieces of fat being melted and drained into it, thus keeping up its bulk and its quality; it is never allowed to burn, because it is never left on the hot plate a moment after it has done its work.

One reason why fried food is supposed to be greasy is because lard is so much used for it. Lard is the very worst fat that can be chosen for this purpose, and it is the poorest. The best for general use in kitchen fat—the skimmings of saucepans; the product of the fat trimmings of joints melted, etc. Theoretically, kitchen fat is not the best; medium fat frying. Oil is the best, and there are many clever cooks who, using kitchen fat in a general way, if they have any special dish to fry, take oil for the purpose. The finest olive oil, however, is expensive, and although cheaper oils (pure cottonseed oil, for instance) may be obtained there are disadvantages associated with the use of oil. Besides this, in the majority of kitchens it is unnecessary. If every little piece of fat of all kinds is rendered down as it should be, and if the fat from roast joints is taken care of, there will be abundance of frying material.

Much more important than one kind of fat is it to have fat for frying dry. The best way when it needs washing is to put it in a large saucepan with a little water; let it heat slowly till the fat is melted; stir it with a wooden spoon; then strain it through a cloth or hair sieve into a earthenware jar. When the fat is cold the impurities at the bottom should be scraped away and the water underneath drained off. The cleaned fat should then be replaced in the oven to melt a second time, in order that the moisture may be effectually expelled. Fat that is to be strained should be allowed to cool a little before pouring it through the strainer. Fat for frying should be hot, not bubbling, but still with a blue fume rising from the center.

Dining Room Decoration.

An exceedingly pretty dining room has shelves made at the side of each one of the doors, for the display of pretty dishes which are not in everyday use. Many of them are Dutchroom and represent the flowing mulberry, the blue Canton and other popular favorites of the olden time.

The arrangement is original, says Orchard and Garden, which illustrates it, but may well be copied by those who have a good deal of china or bric-a-brac and limited quarters.

Candied Tomatoes—Tomato Jam.

Scald and skin small tomatoes as nearly of a size as possible; to every eight pounds add three pounds of brown sugar; cook them without water till the sugar penetrates and they have a clear appearance; take them out, spread and dry in the sun, sprinkling over a little of the syrup each time you turn them in drying; pack in jars or boxes, in layers, with powdered sugar between the layers. These candied tomatoes will keep (if let alone) and are nearly equal to figs for eating. For sauce, soak them in a very little water and cook them as you do any dried fruit.

For tomato jam peel and slice very fine very ripe tomatoes; boil them down till quite thick, without sugar; then weigh, and add three-quarters the weight of granulated sugar; season with lemon and vanillia or spice to taste, and boil ten or fifteen minutes; stirring constantly. Very nice.—Ohio Farmer.

Glass and China.

Colored glass vases for a few single flowers, with pansies and similar flowers applied outside, are new.

Gold dishes, either ornamental or for the table, will have a good run this coming season. Women find no gift more desirable.

New glass vases for flowers are bulbous and look like lamp globes. They are in colored glass lavishly adorned with gold, and have large lips like the calyx of a flower.

The French preference for white and gold in decoration shows in every sort of porcelain from the cream bordered brass mounted vases with designs after Watteau, Boucher and Fragonard to the dinner service complete with raised shell edges and gold markings.

Broken edged china with a rough finish in dead gold takes precedence over all other styles. Doulton, Royal Worcester, Crown Derby and all the varieties of French porcelains show this style of ornamentation in one way or another.—Jewelers' Circular.

GOOD HEALTH

POPULAR MISUSE OF QUININE.

This Drug Can Produce Very Serious Disturbance in Nerves and Temper.

Few if any medicines enter so largely and generally into popular use as quinine. Throughout the world we find it almost everywhere for sale; it can be purchased by any quantity by anybody and used as the purchaser may think best, in larger or smaller doses, at intervals or continually. Few seem to understand its poisonous action, or even suspect that its continual use can result in any special injury to the system. It is prescribed for all sorts and conditions of men, women and children. The state of affairs alluded to in the foregoing words prompts Dr. W. T. Parker to the following timely remarks in a recent number of Science:

The action of the malarial poison upon the system is of such a nature that many would claim that any abnormal nervous impression would be more likely to have its origin in the malarial poison than in the quinine, which is given with a view to neutralize that poison. Ringer states that, "large doses produce severe frontal headache, with dull, heavy, dive and sometimes agonizing pains. While these symptoms last, and indeed generally before they appear, the face is flushed, the eyes suffused, and the expression is dull and stupid. Even small doses in persons very susceptible to the action of this medicine will produce some of the foregoing symptoms, especially the headache and mental disturbance. Many of these symptoms are no doubt due to the action of quinia on the system."

Then, Bartholow states that "in full medicinal doses, as the quinia accumulates in the brain, a sense of fullness in the head, constriction of the forehead, tinnitus aurium, more or less giddiness, and occasionally vertigo, may be produced. In actually toxic doses all of the above symptoms have been intensified. There are intense headache with convulsion of the forehead, dimness of vision or complete blindness, deafness, delirium or coma, dilated pupils, weak, fluttering pulse, irregular and shallow respiration, convulsions, and finally collapse and death." Dr. Wood states that "the minimum fatal dose of quinine is not known, but it must be large and probably varies very much."

In our own practice we have known of four cases where moderate doses continued for two or three days would produce serious cerebral disturbance amounting to almost homicidal mania. There are very many cases in every community where the use of quinine will affect the nervous system of patients in a serious manner. One patient, after using ten grains, did not know whether it was morning or evening, and was bewildered in finding his way home. Another complained to me that he could not take quinine without feeling cross and out of sorts for a week afterward. Still another, a very peaceable man naturally, stated that the use of quinine for a day or so made him quarrelsome and pugilistic, and he feared that under its influence he might commit some act which might bring him into serious trouble.

That quinine is a dangerous drug with many there can be no doubt; that it is universally dangerous there may be some question.

Aromatic Spirits of Ammonia.

This drug is of great utility in reviving a fainting person. A physician states that its action on the circulation is quicker and its use as a stimulant is therefore better than that of either whisky or brandy. Ten drops in a small wineglass of water is a dose, which may be repeated in fifteen or twenty minutes if the faintness continue. Persons subject to nervous depression, nervous headaches and a feeling of faintness and exhaustion should always have this economical but efficient remedy at hand.

Soap for the Complexion.

Some people have a prejudice against soap as an application for the face. The Pharmacist asserts that this is a great fallacy. Good soap is a great purifier and a great preventive of the unpleasant looking blackheads, which are such a disfigurement and are so hard to get rid of.

ETIQUETTE

THE CHARM OF COURTESY.

Alleged Well Bred Reserve—The Woman Who Dares to Be Affable.

If women could ever learn that it is quite possible to combine affability with dignity in commonplace, daily intercourse with their fellow creatures, this would be a far brighter and more agreeable world. Nine-tenths of the gentlewomen one knows, says The Illustrated American, would no more address an unintroduced female than bite off a bit of their own tongues. Not once in a blue moon do they dare converse with their servants, the clerks behind the counter, the chance companion of a railway journey, or even the lady who has dropped in to call on a mutual friend.

A weakness and timidity, with a sense of alleged well bred reserve, seal their lips to every form of communication. In their shyness and stupid fear of furnishing an opportunity for undue familiarity they go through life like oysters, as far as these outside their narrow circle are concerned. But, thank Heaven, there is a woman, and her tribe is increasing, who realizes all of the beautiful opportunities and rights the gift of speech gives her. She can afford to talk to her domestics about anything and every thing, and cement their affectionate respect with every word uttered.

Her kindly recognition of the shopgirl and fragment of pleasant gossip across the yardstick is a wholesome break in a clerk's dull day. To sit beside a respectable female for an hour's train travel, and not exchange greeting as two human beings touching in their journey of life, would confound her kindly nature. She is sure of her dignity, and, strong in its integrity affords to do what is to her fine grained nature shrinks to essay. Her friendly, well chosen words are as far removed from solubility as her cordial manners are from gush.

Recognizing the power of speech as the most potent factor in removing dull, unlovely discontent, embarrassment and loneliness, she is free with worthy thoughts graciously expressed. It is noticeable that such women never leave a drawing room, kitchen, shop or coach that every other creature of her kind present does not acknowledge to herself the supreme excellence of courtesy above all other feminine charms.

This Date in History—Oct. 22.

1469—Columbus after a day on shore and another night on his ship awoke to see the shore covered with natives; they soon swamped about the vessels in canoes, bringing cakes of cassava and other articles of food; a few of them wore small ornaments of gold, which excited the cupidity of the Spaniards, and in answer to Columbus as to where they got it they pointed to the south.

1618—Aurangzeb, last of the great mogals, died Feb. 21, 1707.

1821—Collis Potter Huntington, railroad builder and capitalist, born in Harwinton, Conn.

1838—Leopold Damrosch, eminent musician, born in Posen, Prussia; died 1885.

1871—Sir Roderick Murchison, traveler and scientist, died in London, aged 86.

1886—Vicar General Maurice A. Walsh died in Philadelphia; born 1833.

IT WAS THERE.

They stopped on the steps as they went to the play,
And the suddenly started and cried, "Oh, say!
"The key of the house, my dear, is above,
Go up and fetch it, now there is a love.
"Go look in the closet, just off from the stair,
It lies in my grenadine pocket up there."
And so with step that was joyous and light,
He bounded up stairs in the gathering night.
And the door of the closet he opened quite wide,
And he smiled to himself as he stepped inside.
And he clutched with a chuckle the gold grenadine,
And he felt for the place where a pocket he'd seen.
Then he thought that the garment was inside
So with teeth set together he turned it about,
And felt with a feverish hand in vain
For a slit, and he swore with his might and main
Then he turned the thing up, and he turned it down,
And jumped on the cursed old grenadine gown.
Until, as he lay with the dress on the floor,
His better half came up and opened the door.
And she took up the gown and she put in her
And she pulled out the key with a smile that was bland.
And she said as she stamped on the floor "I declare,
That is just like a man. Why, the key was right there!"

After the vote had been purchased Abbett qualified before an outraged people and brought the bill he had forced through. The people of New Jersey resented of millions of dollars by the Democratic manipulation.

Why the Whistle Blew.

The frequent blowing of the fire gong both Friday and yesterday, led to an investigation by Chief Doane and Mr. Charles Runyon. They started from the corner of Somerset and Front streets determined to examine the entire line if necessary. The cause of the trouble was found to be by the old Laing Hotel dock. In tearing down the hotel building a cross wire had been broken and was hanging across the fire-signal wire and down the trolley wire. Every time the wind blew strongly the hanging wire would be blown against the trolley wire causing a circuit of the current and ringing the whistle to blow. Every time the car passed on the West bound track the hanging wire also touched the hanging wire, thus the whistle was kept blowing intermyals all day long until remedied.

ENTERTAINING STAGS.

THE HILLSIDE TENNIS CLUB AND FRIENDS AT THE CASINO.

The "Smoker" Proves Most Enjoyable. An Evening of Mirth, Music and Wit—"The Spirits of Darkness" Have Fun with a Plainfielder.

HE "Stag" entertainment given by the Hillside Tennis Club, at the Casino, Saturday evening, was novel and thoroughly enjoyable. That the audience of "stags" enjoyed it was evident by the frequent and hearty applause.

The programme is here given:

PART FIRST.

Overture.....Lambert's Orchestra
Banjo Solo—"Banjo Jingles".....Will Lyle
Musical Melange.....The Brothers Perry
Selections from Popular Songs...Charles Noe Daly
Mysterious Cabinet Trick,
H. A. Knudson, Prestidigitateur

Mr. Knudson was elaborately handcuffed and tape-tied, by a committee of three, to a "solid block of wood," and the cabinet curtains drawn. Then a miscellaneous collection of musical instruments were heard and later thrown over the curtains.

Of course, when the curtains were drawn, the clever operator was found as before, chained and tied. One of the committee was Mr. Frank L. C. Martin. He was, apparently, mystified at the proceedings, and expressed a desire to be inside the cabinet. After much joking on the part of Mr. Knudson, who wanted to know if Mr. Martin's life was insured, etc., and a suggestion from the audience for F. L. C. to "sell him a bicycle," Mr. Martin was blindfolded. He then entered the cabinet.

The mischief generally seemed then to be let loose. There was great stamping of feet. The cabinet swayed and shook, and, finally, after a great report, Mr. Martin stumbled out with a tambourine jammed over his head and minus his coat. The prestidigitateur had on the missing coat.

The audience applauded vociferously, and when Mr. Martin took his seat, ruefully feeling the part of his head that forced an opening in the tambourine, he was presented, amid great fun, to the audience remarked, "Nothing at all slow about Frank. How is that for an advertisement? But I guess that tambourine was a little joke of the magicians."

Part second of the programme was opened by the orchestra playing some popular airs.

Messrs. Lyle, Perry Bros. and Daly then amused by their performances.

The final event was a glove contest between Lou Madden and J. Wood of the Brighton Athletic Club.

The young men belied three two minute rounds and one three minute round. They were both scientific, but as the contest was friendly, not much force was put in the blows.

At the end of this event the audience, which had, in the species of "stags" do, been smoking all evening, departed. Many favorable comments were heard both for the committee of the Hillside Tennis Club and for the evening's entertainment. It had been, as advertised, a evening of "Music, Mirth, and Wit," by stags.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. John Rickert of North avenue, returned yesterday from a two weeks visit at New York.

Mr. J. Howard Wright, who has been summering on Central avenue returned to his home on Lexington avenue, New York, yesterday.

Mr. Alfred Streuli of Prospect and Hillside avenues is expected home next week from Europe where he has been for about two years.

Mr. John Cameron, a contractor of Highlands, N. Y., was in this city yesterday. He formerly lived here and, it is said, amassed a fortune of $75,000.

Mr. William Teller is expected home on Harrison street this evening, with his wife, to whom he was married within three months ago in Bridgeport, Conn., which for the past year has been his home.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Emerson Howard of East Ninth street are arranging a reception to-day on on Wednesday November 16 in honor of Mr. and Mrs. G. Harry Squires, whose marriage on October 5 is well remembered for its grandeur.

Miss Magaret Hickey and Mr. Patrick Green, both of this city, were married at St. Mary's church by the Rev. Father Hughes at 9 o'clock this afternoon. They will spend their honeymoon in New York and afterwards reside in this city.

The Rev. John M. Richardson yesterday morning resigned his pastorate of the Centennial Baptist church in Adelphi street, Brooklyn, of which he has had charge but a few months, to accept the pastorate of the Park Avenue Baptist Church of this city.

Mr. Warren R. Marsh, a member of the firm of Robert Walker & Co., of Hartford, Conn., with his wife and two sisters, Mrs. Toomey, and Miss Florence, arrived here this forenoon at the father, Mr. Randolph Marsh of Plainfield where they will remain until after an absence of fifteen years.

"Ye Earlie Trouble" has proven a great popular success at Proctor's Theatre, Twenty-third street. The story of the play deals with incidents in the early turbulent days of the American Revolution, and in the most interesting scene a war play, but a charming drama, containing a strong love story, and introduces its development a lively comedy vein. Mr. Harry Woodruff, who will be remembered by many Plainfielders as the clever leading man of the Lyceum stock under proprietor of Hotel Netherwood, takes one of the principal parts, and has succeeded admirably in winning the applause of the many audiences which have seen him. He takes the part of Tory, who is a very patriotic youth.

POLITICAL PICKLES.

HON. GEORGE KYTE.

Nominated this Afternoon for Assemblyman from the Third Assembly District.

Hon. George Kyte of Fanwood was unanimously nominated by the Third Assembly Convention held in the Republican Association rooms on East Front street this afternoon. C. M. Codding of Westfield was chairman and C. O. Ward of Rahway was secretary.

Delegates were present from Rahway, Clark, Fanwood, Westfield and this city.

By some mistake, owing to the Democratic gerrymander, the township of Linden was not notified and had no representatives present.

Messrs. Ulrich, Moore and Drake notified Mr. Kyte, and at 3.25 he was brought and presented to the convention amid great applause, and made a short speech.

The next Assembly Convention will be held in Linden township.

Editor John S. Gibson will address a mass meeting in Bound Brook Hall to-night under the auspices of the Republican Club of that place. The celebrated Plainfield Glee Club will render popular campaign songs. A large attendance is expected. Mr. Gibson will speak at the mass meeting to be held in the Crescent Rink this week. Do not fail to hear him.

Judge William T. Hoffman has been nominated for Congress in the old Third District, of which Union county was formerly a part. There is little doubt that Mr. Getzenhainer will endeavor to become a third-termer. Judge Hoffman ought to be elected. He is a man of high character and pronounced ability, and as an orator and statesman he stands head and shoulders above his opponent. If the voters of the Third district do their duty to themselves, their district and their country, they will elect Judge Hoffman by a handsome majority.—Elizabeth Journal.

English Views on the McKinley Bill.

"Free Trade" England levies a larger amount of customs taxation, both in amount and rate[sic] per head of population, than any country in Europe. But she does so only on non-competing imports, whilst admitting free every commodity which competes with, undersells, or extinguishes home production. Was there ever apparently such an absurd policy? And yet British Free Traders (save the mark!), and especially the Golden Calf Press to-day, extol such a policy to be the essence of wisdom.—Sir Thomas B. Farrer, formerly secretary of the English Board of Trade.

Even England knows the folly of the policy of the Democratic party.

Of Interest to Baptists.

The 59th Anniversary and Convention of the North New Jersey Baptist Association, will be held in the Bloomfield Baptist church Wednesday, about 300 delegates being present.

While the association session was in progress, the Women's Missionary Society of the Baptist Association met in the Sunday-school room in the Bloomfield church. Mrs. Chamberlain, of Orange presided, Mrs. Mary H. Pike, of Plainfield, after speaking of the good work already accomplished, stated that the amount of $1,000, which had been given yearly for foreign missions, be doubled this year for the reason that it was the quatennial anniversary of the establishing of the first Society of Foreign Missions by the Baptist Society.

She then spoke of the good work of Miss Ida Fay, of Plainfield, who is a missionary in India. She was sent there by the Young Ladies' Society of New Jersey. It intended to send her sister to that country next December as an assistant in teaching the heathen. Mrs. Reinhardt, of Jersey City, followed with an address on the general State work of "Home Missions." She was followed by Mrs. Pettit, of Elizabeth, and Miss Hill of Paterson, on the young women's work in the State.

Trains Collide at Langhorne.

By the breaking of an axle an overloaded freight car on the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad at Langhorne on Saturday morning the car was thrown from the track. Several cars following were also derailed. An engine going west struck one of the cars and knocked out the end of it, the splintered woodwork strewing the track in every direction. The colliding engine was badly wrecked, but the engineer and fireman, who stuck to their posts, were uninjured.

NEARBY FOREST FIRES.

THE PEOPLE OF WESTFIELD GREATLY ALARMED.

Fighting the Flames all Yesterday Afternoon to Save their Homes from Destruction—Victory at Last—Supposed to Have Been Started by Boys.

BROWN'S, Bigley's, and Jackman's woods, covering about eighty acres at the west end of Westfield, were burning for five hours yesterday. The fire was supposed to have been started by boys while out gathering chestnuts.

It was discovered shortly after midday, when it had spread to such an alarming extent that several barns and houses were endangered. About a hundred men and women desperately fought the flames, beating them with sticks, brooms and every available weapon. A bucket brigade was formed by some, while others started to fight the fire with an opposing fire, thus clearing a space in advance of the fierce and fast advancing huge seething sheets of forest flames.

The long dry spell had caused the trees and leaves to burn so quickly, it was only by continued and desperate efforts that they were kept in check and properly saved.

Several persons were painfully burned about the hands and face.

The woods were composed mostly of young trees, and were almost entirely destroyed.

All through the afternoon frightened rabbits, some of which had been singed by the fire, were running about and could have been easily caught with the hands.

DER METZEL FEST.

And the Trouble Caused by a Big Sow.

Some amusement was occasioned Saturday evening on Somerset street by a sow, bought of a farmer on the mountain, and which three men were trying to bring to turn into Harmony street. She preferred to stay in Somerset street and resisted all efforts to coax her in the direction the men desired her to go.

There was a rope tied to her hind leg, but one end of the rope to prevent her getting away.

Finding coaxing of no use the men became desperate. One sleezd one of the sow's ears, and another the other ear, while the man with the rope steered. All tried to force the sow into the side street, but she steadfastly resisted. She also squealed so that she could be heard blocks away, while the crowd which had been attracted stood and laughed at the men's dilemma.

By hard work they got her beyond the crosswalk. There she squatted on her haunches and braced her fore feet so the men could not budge her.

Then the men rested and counseled together. No one thought of lifting the sow's two hind feet and forcing her along as if she was a wheel barrow.

They managed, however, after much noise and trouble to get her into a barn on Harmony street. She will be killed to-night, and roasted later, to be served up in Saengerbund Hall one moonlight night when the Germans and their friends who are to have Yon Motzel'est, or Meat Feast, to devour they do as they did in the days of Belshazzar, "eat, drink and be merry."

THOSE BUFFALO (?) BONES.

This Vicinity Abounds in Old Indian Relics.

For the past year Mr. George H. Fountain has been digging up the ground along the banks of Greenbrook. Last week he found the complete skeleton of a large animal. He took parts of it to Columbia College, where Prof. Dean compared the bones with those of a buffalo, and found them to be very similar though they resemble far more closely those of an ordinary cow. The New York papers this morning say that, "Mr. Fountain's find is looked upon as a very important one, inasmuch as this is the first time the bones of the buffalo have been found east of Erie, Pa." Yesterday Mr. Fountain received an offer of a large sum of money for the skeleton and a commission from the college to prosecute further searches." Mr. Fountain says he was not offered any money.

Near the mountain the peculiar landscape formation lead him to believe that it was at one time the home of the mound builders. He has found the peculiar formation characteristic of these old mound builders, and also the stone carefully laid pavements. He has taken from the mound skulls and other human bones and many peculiar instruments of war.

His discoveries have brought forth many reports of other interesting relics that have been and may be found in this locality.

It appears that there is a large tree growing on a farm near the southeast boundary of Scotch Plains, owned by J. B. Brown, of Park avenue, believes there is a mound of ancient Indian build and possibly a skeleton or two.

Mr. Rutger V. Cadmus of Greenbrook road has also some interesting relics that he has found on his farm. Among them are relics of the big Indian council meetings which were held in the neighborhood of Spooky Nook in 1776.

It is said that many relics lie buried along the banks of the Greenbrook from Spooky to Scotch Plains.

Mr. Fountain may also find some evidence of snakes described in the following:

The Rev. Dr. Gordon of Boston has recently made a study of the gigantic fossil bones of serpents which have been the ancestors of modern snakes and lizards. One species, the Clidastes, was of enormous size, attaining a length of 45 feet. Another, the Mosasaurus mackenzii, was not quite so big, measuring when full grown not less than 30 feet. Yet larger was the Lioden, hugest of all the strange varieties of that varied race, which had a long muzzle that is surmised so have been used as a ram in fighting. Some of these monsters, with a body resembling eels, ploughed the waters with four paddles and propeller-like tail, in pursuit of the fishes which were their food.

Their heads were large and flat, and they had short thick bodies, which, while able to take in animals of greater girth than themselves, owing to the arrangement of the ribs which were provided midway in their length with hinges. When duly fed they accommodated to more than it is now. New Jersey and Delaware, as well as most of the Southern States, under the influence of the Rocky Mountains, in places 10,000 feet less elevated than at present, appeared as a range separated by a vast arm of the sea from Mississippi by a broad expanse of salt water that was, in fact, an inland sea becoming gradually fresh.

In those days real sea serpents not only existed, but their numbers were almost incalculable. Not a year passes but bones left behind in the rock of subsequent formation, and in many cases so perfectly preserved that entire skeletons have been found and mounted in the museums. Prof. O. C. Marsh of New Haven, speaks of having seen as many as six of these fossil monsters in view at the same time in one lonely valley out West. After all the question is merely one of size, inasmuch as marine snakes are very plentiful at present in the parts of the world.

They swarm in the Indian Ocean, and Capt. Cook once was telling me the other day that he has seen them in shoals of thousands together in the Gulf of Siam. The numbers of them which were necessary to thread the cables, while stanchion through which the cable passed, were detailed from climbing up the ropes and coming aboard while the ship was at anchor. Nor was such a precaution by any means superfluous, owing to the fact, as any one may learn by turning to the "Encyclopedia Britannica," that these serpents are most dangerously poisonous. They evidently travelled in great numbers in those days.

The seas from Madagascar to Panama and Japan to New Zeland are thickly inhabited by snakes. Dr. Gunther, of the reptilian expert of the Smithsonian Institution, says that there are about 1,000 species of all known serpents, their venom being not less deadly than that of the rattlesnake or cobra. Furthermore, they are very fierce and will commonly attack human beings if they get a chance. They do not frequent the shallows, unless possibly for breeding, but live in the open ocean. When dying they are from six to eight feet long.

Fishermen in the waters where they live fancy that they can tell them by their bodies. Their bodies are flat, and the inside of them is dotted over with red dots or lines, which are large, in order that they may be enabled to stay beneath the surface for a long time without coming up for breathing. They have eyes modified for seeing in the water, so that when they rise to the surface of their native element they seem blinded and strike wildly. These fangs, like those of the cobra, are always erect.

EDITORIAL NOTES

What would fill the great Columbus with most admiration and enthusiasm if he could behold the achievements of the Nineteenth century would undoubtedly be the great ocean steamships, over 500 feet long, carrying 2,000 people and rushing over the water like a whirlwind. His own flagship, the Santa Maria, was only ninety feet long.

The Canadians of Three Rivers have adopted a version of the dead cat argument to United States Consul Smith, who was appointed to their town. Consul Smith reported to his government the filthy sanitary condition of Three Rivers, the natives there being not at all in the habit of utilizing the advantages indicated by the name of their town. They could not answer Consul Smith's arguments or deny his facts, so they took a simpler way to get even with him by assembling in a body and stoning his house.

We always said so. A gentleman who has just been making the tour of a considerable portion of the United States says the American national vice is spitting. The habit is wholly unnecessary —as unnecessary as it is revolting to every refined person. It is injurious besides. The constant drain made on the system by the forced and unnatural action of the salivary glands cannot in other wise than weakening. If the great American spitter knew the sulphurous, silent anathemas that are heaped upon him by the antispitters whenever his loathsome presence crosses their sight and hearing, he would be absolutely scared. Stop it!

Chief Justice Paxson, of Pennsylvania, in his charge to the grand jury in the case of the Homestead rioters, defined clearly what constitutes treason against a state of the Union, not against the United States. He began first by declaring that the Homestead strikers were guilty of unlawful violence when they refused to permit the men to land whom the Carnegie company had hired to protect their property. "It cannot be tolerated for a moment that one laborer shall say to another laborer, 'You shall not work for this man for that wage without my consent,' and then enforce such command by brutal violence upon his person." Following is the definition of what treason against a state is: "When a large number of men arm and organize themselves by divisions and companies, appoint officers and engage in a common purpose to defy the law, to resist its officers and to deprive any portion of their fellow citizens of the rights to which they are entitled under the constitution and laws, it is a levying of war against the state, and the offense is treason."

The World's Debt to America.

We regret to say that one of the things the world has received from America is tobacco chewing. But there are other gifts, in view of which the vile tobacco chewing habit can be forgiven to us, in the Columbus celebrations of this October it will be well to remind Europe of some of her debt to the United States.

The canned fruit industry is worth many millions of dollars a year. Wherever the foot of man treads—from the poles to equatorial Africa—there the tin fruit and meat can goes with him. It is an American invention. So is its twin brother—the condensed milk can. The condensing of milk in vacuum was first made possible by the inventive brain of Gail Borden, a citizen of this republic. Into this industry two millions of money flow annually from all parts of the earth. The steam harvester and nearly ever kind of labor saving agricultural machinery—not to mention that little item of the sewing machine—we gave to our less fortunate relatives in the rest of the world.

The monitor—the pattern of the modern warship—was the invention of a Swede, who had first to come and breathe our free air and become a citizen of the United States before he could materialize his idea. But the most important discovery of all was the adaptation of steam for propelling vessels. Robert Fulton showed mankind how steam could drive a ship through the water at a rate that would have made the people of a hundred years ago spin around in their heads. A physician in the United States showed doctors how they might deaden consciousness temporarily by ether or other anæsthetics and perform the most terrible surgical operations without a patient's knowing it. The application of anæsthetics alone has saved already many thousand lives and is saving that much the gratitude of this and coming generations must flow out to the American Dr. Morton.

Let us see. Americans have practically created the science and art of dentistry. America—and by America is meant of course the United States—gave to mankind the telegraph, the telephone and the electric light.

Here are only a few of the gifts for which the Old World must thank the United States. But most glorious and inspiring of all is the gift of this republic itself proclaiming to the ages that a nation can govern itself and become the richest and most powerful on the earth without either king, czar, shah, emperor or titled nobility.

CLEVELAND CRITICIZED.

Blaine Reviews the Issues in the Pending Campaign

AND COMPLIMENTS EDITOR DANA.

The Ex-Secretary Says the Most Remarkable Thing in This Canvass Is the Way the "Force" Bill Has Been Pushed to the Front by the New York Sun.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—Mr. Blaine's long promised utterance on the presidential election of 1892 appears in the November number of The North American Review, which is published today. It occupies thirteen pages of The Review.

Mr. Blaine notes the lack of excitement attending the present elections, contrasting with the turmoil of interest that characterized the campaign of the elder Harrison. This change of the public interest in such contests, he suggests, may be accounted for by the growth in population and the consequent absorption in vast commercial and financial operations, and it may possibly indicate a subsidence in the future of extreme partisanship.

Mr. Blaine gives special attention to the letters of the presidential candidates. Of President Harrison's letter he says, among other things, that perhaps none of his predecessors has made so exhaustive and lucid a more clear presentation of the questions involved." Mr. Cleveland's letter is subjected to searching criticism. Mr. Blaine finds that in a greater measure than Mr. Harrison's it departs from the platform of his party; in fact, that "Mr. Cleveland has made the platform upon which he is now before the people," and that "Mr. Cleveland's departures from the positions of his party in the discussion of the question of free trade confirms the impression which has been general—that a large proportion of the Democratic party believes in protection in some form."

Mr. Blaine makes caustic comment upon Mr. Cleveland's utterances on the currency and the state banks. He upholds the Republican policy of granting liberal pensions to the veterans of the war. On this point he says: "The amount we contribute toward pensions is larger than the amount paid by any of the European nations for a standing army. Surely the binding up of the wounds of a past war is more merciful and honorable work than preparing the country for a new one."

The "Force" Bill.

The most remarkable thing in the presidential canvass of 1892 Mr. Blaine regards as "the manner in which in some sections of the country all other issues have been put out of sight and the force bill alone brought into prominence." He compliments Mr. Dana, of the New York Sun, the author of this policy, on his zeal and ability in achieving this result. The representations made as to the purposes and effect of the force bill, however, he declares to be inconsistent with the spirit of President Harrison's letter.

Mr. Blaine's full and explicit in his treatment of the subject of reciprocity, claiming that a material increase has been caused in United States trade by reciprocal treaties with the islands and countries of America, and particularly by the treaties made with European countries. Mr. Blaine quotes interesting figures in relation to the increase of trade with the Leeward and Windward islands and Cuba, and he predicts in relation to Cuba that "we shall conquer by commerce far better than by force of armies, and inevitably establish such mutual interests between Cuba and this country that commercially the two countries will be one."

Mr. Blaine, dealing with the claim of the Democratic party to be the Jeffersonian party, says:

"It would surprise Jefferson, if he could once more appear in the flesh, to learn that he is held as sponsor of all the principles and measures advocated by the Democratic party today. It is perhaps not worth while to enter into any elaborate argument on the subject, but the Democracy owes no little of its success to the persistence with which its adherents have made their disciples believe this pretension through all the mutations of their party.

"It was equally true, it must be supposed, when Mr. Buchanan, a confirmed Federalist, was the president-elect of the Democracy, though it is well known that the object of Mr. Jefferson's most intense dislike was the Federal party. In vain it is pointed out that the position of Jefferson on any subject was directly the reverse of the Democratic position. It is duly quoted at the next convention and a new oath of allegiance is taken to his principles.

Jefferson a Republican.

"In 1801, after a severe contest, Jefferson came to the presidency as the founder and head of the Republican party. The prefix Democratic was sometimes though seldom used. The tenacity with which Jefferson held to the protective principle was only proportioned to the necessities of the country. His action in 1807, when he declined to recommend the repeal or alteration of the revenue law, after a surplus of fourteen millions had been accumulated, puts him in the sharpest contrast to Mr. Cleveland, who in the term of office treated the surplus accumulated as the sum of all evils.

"In conclusion Mr. Blaine calls attention to the essential agreement of the two parties on the great majority of issues. "It is interesting and suggestive," he says, "to look over the platform of the two parties, and see how much alike they are in several vital measures after the real and divisive issues have been stated. If parties would aim to discover and define those subjects on which there is a vital difference of opinion and would confine discussion to these issues, it would not only simplify the contest and be a welcome relief to the candidates, but would also generally help in clearing the air of much that is the ultimate object of popular discussion and popular election.

To Supplement Peck's Report.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—A circular recently published by the Manufacturers' National league, of the executive committee of which T. C. Platt is chairman, and which was designed to supply the missing data of Commissioner Peck's report, requested business men to furnish statistical information regarding their commercial progress under the McKinley tariff law, and also asked for the percentage of increase in wages in the nine months of 1892 ending Sept. 30 over the corresponding period in 1890 and 1891. The replies to the circular cover all branches of trade in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut, and show a varying increase of both wages and business in most instances. The figures obtained have been tabulated and arranged and handed over the national committee.

PERRY'S LATEST ESCAPADE.

He Breaks Jail, Is Recaptured and Perhaps Fatally Injured.

AURORA, N. Y., Oct. 24.—Oliver Curtis Perry, the famous bank robber and desperado, escaped from his cell in the prison here Saturday night, but his term of liberty was short. He was captured inside the prison walls at 2 o'clock on Sunday morning, and the only result of his desperate attempt to escape was to make his condition more miserable.

After escaping from the wing in which his cell was located Perry boldly crossed the prison yard and hid in the basement of the broom shop, where Convict Johnson was killed by a fellow prisoner only a few weeks ago.

When the night had sufficiently advanced for the darkness to shield his movements Perry tried to gain access to the broom shop. It was closely guarded, however, and he next proceeded to the marble shop. Here again he was frustrated in his attempt to gain admittance, as the guards were on the alert and his efforts attracted their attention.

Perry started to run as soon as he found that he had been discovered. He went directly to the collar shop, where there was a large number of knives, his idea seeming to be to secure a weapon.

As he neared the collar shop he was seen by Keeper Tunis, who stood in the shadow of the building. When within ten feet of the guard Perry was challenged and ordered to halt. He did not obey, and the guard fired a shot from his rifle over the convict's head.

This had no effect upon Perry other than to change the course in which he was running and to increase his speed. His change of direction was fatal, however, as he passed within reach of Keeper Smith, who, without waiting to challenge, struck him over the head with his heavy night stick, breaking the stick.

Perry was stretched unconscious at the keeper's feet, the blood flowing freely from a deep wound. He was taken to a dungeon, where he will be confined some time without even a board to rest upon.

It is reported that after the captain Perry told Warden Durston that it was not liberty he sought, but an opportunity to stick a knife into him. He has conceived a deep hatred for the warden during his long confinement in the screen cell.

To dig through the wall of his cell Perry used the iron leg of his bedstead, which he had managed to loosen from its fastening. After the desperado had been safely locked in a dungeon the extra guards were relieved, and Warden Durston assembled them in the keepers' hall. He then warned them not to discuss the matter of Perry's escape and capture in public.

It is reported that Perry was very seriously hurt by Keeper Smith's blow and that death may result.

FASHIONS

Autumn Wedding Gowns.

The novel fabrics for bridal dresses this season are soft white silks, with thick spiral cords or reps of irregular size, extending from selvage to selvage. A beautiful dress, preparing for a bride at a fashionable wedding in October, is of ivelle (gimlet) silk, so called from the gimlet-like twist of its very thick cords. Taffeta yet supple silk comes in the clear pearl white now preferred for wedding gowns, and also in ivory and cream white for evening and dinner dresses. It is double faced and costs $2.50 a yard. Fourteen to sixteen yards are required for a trained dress. Palmyre silk has larger medium ing cords of silk covering wool wool in the way familiar in bengalines; it is very effective, and is also $2.50 a yard.

Plain white satin remains the ideal fabric for bridal gowns in many families, while others choose satin that is flecked or dotted with silver. Polka dots of silver appear in a freesie of waving ribbon design, and there are silver tipped blossoms on long stemmed flowers and in clusters of geraniums, the leaves are those of ruged faille sunken in a lustrous satin surface.

Brocaded satins for princess trains of bridal gowns have designs of large leaves of tropical plants, a single vine, or else three vines forming the stripes of each breadth of the rich fabric. These are nine dollars a yard. Silver palm leaves, both large and small, are brocaded on white satins with beautiful effect.

Dotted tulle will be used for veils this season, but not to the exclusion of the becoming veil of plain tulle.—Harper's Bazar.

Children's Fashions.

In the Accompanying cut is presented a pleasing model for a girl's indoor frock. The short skirt and low, plaited blouse are in gray alpaca, with trimmings of ribbon bands and bows in pink moire silk.

The shirt sleeves and cross folded gimp may be made in either soft white silk or chiffon muslin.

A new style of hat for children is the cone, made of fine ly shirred silk, or velvet. This is small, and stores from the peak to the edge, which just touches the hair above the brow. Generally a single or double ruffle ribbon is set beneath the edge. Narrow ribbon is used for these ruches. The hat is intended for the little tots, and may be tied down with ear rosettes of the ribbon. An attractive hat for a little girl is of white felt, with a wide, INDOOR FROCK big crown of white satin ribbon. The ribbon is loopered on one side by three rows of velvet, like baby ribbon. The colors are pink, green and fawn, and there are three rosettes of velvet baby ribbon, one of each color. Large felt hats have a Tam crown of velvet and a velvet ruffle around the brim edge.

The New Colors.

Recent importations from Paris make it appear that the most popular color is purple, and the preferred shades are known as mignonette, or bishop's purple, with a decided reddish tinge, and a lighter shade named pensée purple. To the old blue shades has been added a dark gray blue called Iceland. Steel greys are largely represented in the new millinery and dress goods. Tan or apricot, a new pale green shade, new dahlia shades and the light browns of last season are all represented in this season's importations.

DEATH A LITTLE NEARER

Mrs. Harrison Barely Conscious and Sinking Rapidly.

SHE HAS NOT STRENGTH TO COUGH

A Bad Turn Comes on, from Which It Is Believed She Has Not Sufficient Vitality to Rally—Her Lungs Filling Up and No Relief Can Be Afforded.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—Another change for the worse in Mrs. Harrison's condition, and a more serious one than any that has yet occurred, set in yesterday morning about 10 o'clock. As the church bells began to ring the watchers by the bedside became aware of the approach of one of those sinking spells which have once or twice previously brought the patient to the verge of dissolution. From this relapse there was no rally as on previous occasions, but the decline of the vital force has perceptibly though gradually continued. The president, who never left her bedside all day, was joined in his sad watch by other members of the family. None ventured outside the White House doors, either for church or any other purpose.

The sufferer lies all the time on her right side, too weak even to cough, one of many indications that the end cannot be far away. She lies motionless, except for a slight nervous twitching consequent upon the extreme nervous prostration, which in her case has been more pronounced than is customary in tubercular diseases. Meantime it is apparent to the physicians that the cavity of the lungs is again filling with water, which in time will stop the action of the heart, and that an operation such as that twice performed at Loon Lake will relieve the watery pressure is utterly out of the question because of the enfeebled condition of the patient.

Barely Conscious.

All that could be done to alleviate the sufferings of the invalid was done by the physicians and nurse, but that was very little. Worn out by sleeplessness, unable to replenish her wasting strength by even the limited amount of liquid nourishment —one or two beaten eggs—which she had heretofore been able to take, the patient lay barely conscious, except at brief intervals through the day.

Dr. Gardner, the attending physician, said the end might occur at any moment. The probability was that death would come painlessly by the stoppage of the heart's action, but a paroxysm of coughing might precipitate the crisis at any time. Nothing but the wonderful vitality which Mrs. Harrison shared with other members of the Scott family—her father, ninety-four years old, watched at her bedside—could have enabled her to survive so long as she has done.

Mrs. Harrison's chamber is in the southwest portion of the building, separated only by a small room, which in health she used as a painting studio, from the corner of the building nearest the greenhouses. It is immediately over the state dining room, and as far removed as possible from the noises of the city and of the presidential mansion. It is lighted by two windows, which given an uninterrupted and beautiful view of the Potomac, across Grand Army place, the scene of the late encampment. The mountaining view is on the east is the president's room, which is the same room that was occupied by Garfield and all recent presidents, except Cleveland and Arthur, who slept in the front of the building.

All the Family to Waiting.

The president's daughter, Mrs. McKee, her husband and their two children; his son Russell and wife; the daughter of ex-Senator Saunders and her child; Mrs. Dimmick, Mrs. Harrison's venerable niece; Mrs. Newton, Mr. Harrison's aunt, and Dr. Scott, Mrs. Harrison's venerable father, occupy the remaining rooms in the presidential part of the mansion, and all were at times in the sickroom. In the course of the day, except the children, who only in part appreciating the impending sorrow amused themselves with the baby, the main nurse in their spacious playroom in the basement.

The inquiries are incessant, but no one, not even the wife of Attorney General Miller, who is perhaps Mrs. Harrison's most intimate friend in Washington, is admitted to the sickroom.

None passed that portal but her immediate family, who act as nurse in the day-time, relieving the trained nurse from the Baltimore Homeopathic hospital, who remains on duty at night, and the attending physician, Lieutenant and Mrs. Parker, the latter Mrs. Harrison's niece, who were with her all the time. A certain part of the day in the mansion attending to necessary details which the grief stricken family were incapable of looking after.

The Misses Halford, sisters of Mrs. Noble, and the wife of the attorney general rendered similar service, and Major and Mrs. Parker, of Soldiers' Home, who have been accustomed to drive every day with their fresh eggs which have formed the invalid's sole sustenance for some weeks past, performed this kind office for, as they feared, the last time.

CHICAGO, Oct. 24.—John Wanamaker got lost on his way to the Second Presbyterian church last night. He was down for an address in the church and the congregation waited impatiently for an hour. When he finally appeared he said, "I got lost on my way."

CAPTURED THE CHURCH

A Madman Fortifies Himself in a Pulpit to Preach.

FOOD, BULLETS AND FIREWORKS.

He Was Stocked for a Long Stay, Defied the Authorities and Drove the Congregation Away with a Revolver. Captured After He Had Fallen Asleep.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Oct. 24.—Gospel truth was presented at the point of the sword, with accompaniment of red fire and revolvers, at the Olivet Congregational church yesterday morning.

Charles M. Emmons, a gunmaker, employed at the United States armory, whose mind has long been unsound upon religious matters, entered the church at midnight and barricading the pulpit kept the police force at bay until yesterday afternoon. Having provided himself with an abundance of ammunition and provisions for a week's stay, Emmons might have been holding the fort yet had he not fallen asleep from sheer exhaustion. Seven bullet holes in the wall and ceiling remain to recall a most remarkable Sunday.

Emmons bought a large supply of rockets, red fire, Roman candles, pin wheels and powder Saturday afternoon, and taking them home worked until midnight in the preparation of apparatus to discharge the fireworks, arousing the neighbors by his pounding. He then gathered them all in a sack, with several oil and alcohol lamps, and taking a crowbar with which to affect an entrance started for the church which he has attended fifteen years.

An Arsenal in the Pulpit.

Arriving at the church Emmons found a side door carelessly unlocked, and making his way to the pulpit lighted his lamps, locked the doors at either side of the platform, loaded his arsenal and began his long meditation by eating supper. To try one of his pistols he fired a shot, startling the neighbors.

Then the madman arrayed himself in the dust cloth, covering his face and hanging the big red bookmark of the pulpit Bible from a string around his belt. He also brought up flowers from the vestry and set them on the stand.

When Sexton Dickinson arrived to start his morning fires he was confronted by the unshrouded apparition in the pulpit. Brandishing a revolver, Emmons bade the sexton listen to the truth without interfering. Recognizing Emmons' voice, Dickinson hastily retreated, but not before the lunatic had fired three shots into the air.

The officers of the church and the police were speedily summoned, but for more than three hours Emmons stood his ground with crazy cunning, firing three times through a side door when it was rattled, wheeling each time instantly to cover the rear, whence the officers were hoping to pounce upon him.

Despairing of ousting the lunatic the plans of drowning him out with a hose or filling the church with smoke were considered among a dozen others. The crowd several times tried to force an entrance to the church, and had not the doors opened outward some one would undoubtedly have been shot. Several surreptitiously got the roof of the chapel annex at one side, and aroused the ire of the madman by tapping upon the stained glass windows.

Just as the hose method was about to be tried it was noticed that Emmons had dropped into a chair and was nodding. In a moment more he was asleep and four of doors had pounced upon him.

Emmons struggled fiercely, but the revolver was caught in his robe and handcuffs were handy. Before he was overpowered, however, he grabbed a little pistol from his pocket and fired it into the air with a yell. Then he gave up the struggle and was hustled into a hack, which the great crowd outside nearly upset in its eagerness to catch a glimpse of him.

During this time the madman read from the Psalms and Revelations, taking off his shoes after reading the verse which says, "Take off thy shoes, for the spot where thou standest is holy ground."

Meantime the news had traveled to the other thirty churches in town, and for miles around the street railways were bringing thousands to the spot. All the Sunday schools were deserted.

Planks were fastened against the vestibule doors of the church from the outside to prevent a charge by the madman. Four deacons and four policemen stood guard.

Powder and Incense.

The bass singer of the choir, as a last resort, approached within hailing distance and inquired if there was to be no music at the service, being solemnly answered, "The daughters of music shall be laid low." Search showed that Emmons had converted the pulpit into a veritable fortress. He had poured a pound of powder into the marble urn to make, as he afterward said, the smoke of incense. He had enough canned meat, crackers and water to supply him for several days; in fact, he has since admitted that he thought it might be a week before he got an audience, adding that he would have remained there till he arrived.

Emmons also had an auger and other tools with which to fix the rockets so that he might discharge them into the rear gallery. Plenty of ammunition was found on his person. When seen by a correspondent Emmons said that he had been called to preach the truth, and his conscience was at rest.

NOW WE HAVE BERI BERI.

It Comes from Japan and Is Worse Than Yellow Fever.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—A new disease, contagious and fatal, has reached this port, causing much alarm among the health authorities at quarantine. The disease is imported from Japan, where it is known as beri beri. The bark H. P. Cann arrived off quarantine yesterday from Hollo, and reported that two deaths from the disease had occurred. Seaman Thomas Russell died on Sept. 23 and Carpenter John Nugent on Oct. 8. Both were buried at sea.

When the ship arrived at Norfolk, Va., the first mate and seven men, who were stricken with beri beri, were put ashore and sent to the hospital.

The Cann is laden with sugar and tea, and makes the third vessel which has reached this port in the past four weeks on which death from this disease has been reported.

The disease is said to resemble the yellow fever somewhat, but it is more fatal. The disease is unknown here. The authorities are at a loss how to handle it should other ships follow with the disease on board.

The Cann will be detained at quarantine and thoroughly disinfected, while stringent measures will be adopted to cope with the disease from other vessels arriving from the fever stricken Japanese ports.

THE MOTHER INSTINCT WHICH MAKES US WANT TO HELP OTHERS.

The desire to do something for other people is the loveliest and the most hard to satisfy that inspires any of us. It begins almost with our life; the very babies show it in innumerable little ways as soon as they can toddle, and the last plaint of helpless old age is that there is nothing for them to do for others; all must be done for them. Women, except in very exceptional cases, grain every nerve and wear themselves to the bone doing for others, and feel utterly overcome and positively uncomfortable when a little of the same effort is made for them, and even the most self absorbed person living feels a sense of truly well deserved self congratulation when she has done a favor for some one. It is true that the impulse often springs from a wish to make ourselves important and necessary to certain people, but no matter what the motive when the results are good.

It is a great thing to know when to stop doing and not to be done for. It is such a graceful act to ask a favor now and then, and believe me, nothing makes a woman more unlovely than to arrogate to herself all the power and wish to do for even those she loves most. Way down in everybody's heart there is a bit of the mother or animal instinct to do for others, and it is the most sweetening and mellowing thing in human nature. It can only be developed by exercise, and the opportunity for exercising it can be offered or presented by every one of us. And if we actively decline or passively fail to encourage the offers of sympathy and help—help that comes to us every day of our lives—we are as guilty as if we had done or left undone something relating to the physical well being. Oh, let us accept every bit of help that is offered us, no matter how trifling, and accept it gracefully and give thanks for it, and life will be ever so much sweeter and easier for us and everybody else.—New York Press.

A Physician's Opinion About Corsets.

A physician said: "With some women I am told the main object of wearing a corset is that they shall have fine busts, but as a matter of fact corset wearing is accountable for the lack of development that one sees in many young women of the day. Were they to throw away their corsets they would find that in a short time the donged for development would come, and unless they were uncommonly lean or in poor health they would not have so very long to wait either. In all the photographs of wild women that one sees, whether they are Sioux, Sunastrans or South Sea Islanders, one observes that a lack of bust development is the exception and not the rule. Nature is nature every time, and untrammeled woman is the woman under ordinary circumstances and conditions. I may state that it is not always well to be too precipitate in this matter of throwing aside the corset.

"The best way for a woman to rid herself of corsets is to first loosen them up and wear them that way for a few weeks. This will in itself give her great freedom and will prepare her for the greater comfort which she is sure to enjoy later when she shall have finally cast off her tightly buckled shield and made of herself a wholly free woman. Then let the strings be let out still further and further, until the rim of the corset give actually no support to the back, when they may be discarded. In this particular, you will see, there is no exception to the rule that radical and extreme measures suddenly applied often results disastrously. It is better to take the reform in hand with a determination not to pursue it too audibly.

"Yes, I have no objection to what are known as 'waists.' They are all well enough, if the woman must wear some thing to keep them in shape, as they call it. There is a great deal of difference between the reeds and bamboos in the 'waists' and the steel and whalebone of the corsets. Compared with the corsets they are, indeed, quite harmless."—San Francisco Chronicle.

Dress and Expression.

To say that one's dress should be, in a sense, the expression of its wearer's individuality is to offer a commonplace. The most abject follower of the changing modes, she who dresses nothing under the sun as she dreads the imputation of being out of the fashion, unconsciously and of necessity imparts something of herself—her innate grace or her natural awkwardness—to the garb she assumes. Of every woman is born to wear clothes in queenly style. There are those who hitch and sway and joggle and are loose jointed and clumsy though they walk in silk attire, while there are others who look distinguished in a calico print and lend an air to the simplest raiment.

The most fittingly adorned, the most royally splendid woman in carriage and mien whom the writer ever saw was an octogen nearly six feet in height and of goodly breadth of shoulder and depth of bosom. Day by day her turbaned head towered above the throng so, in a southern town, she took her way to market in the early morning for gossip and for household errands, her step free and swinging, her poise charming, her gait dandled her bearing erect, a woman of presence, though half her life she had been a slave, and though she was a servant still. To her gingham gown and her folded kerchief, dashi imparted an expression of dignity hard to define, but easy to interpret.—Harper's Bazar.

Remember the Family Anniversaries.

As a people we pay far too little attention to birthdays and other family anniversaries. Too much cannot be done to make home attractive, so that our boys and girls will prefer it to all other places.

"This has been the best day I ever knew," said a boy to his mother on evening. "The birds have all been singing, and the sun has shone every minute, and everything has been so lovely, just for your birthday, mamma, and I am so glad!" and he emphasized his gladness with a hearty hug and kiss. For weeks the boy had been looking forward to this day, planning and making a little birthday gift as a surprise, and when the time came his whole mind was given to making his mother happy.

"Boys are a great trouble to celebrate birthdays," complain some mothers, "and in large families they come so often."

Yes, it is some trouble, but how can we keep one of children contented and happy at home without taking trouble? And no mother regrets the trouble when she sees her children regarding their home as the very best place in the whole world. Try to celebrate the birthdays one year, and see if it does not "pay" in the enjoyment of the whole family. Let no one be forgotten. From father to baby, and try to have each one interested in all the others, planning, if possible, some little birthday gift. No matter how simple or trifling it may be, the love and thoughtfulness which go with it will make it precious.—American Agriculturist.

Woman's Most Attractive Age.

The question of woman's most attractive age was recently discussed by an artist, an author and a woman of society. The artist said he did not like to paint the portraits of those between the ages of twenty-five and forty years. Before twenty-five the face has an expectancy which charms. It is looking forward with joyous freshness and hope, and it is full of puzzling promises. At forty years the character is formed, and the lines of the countenance are stronger in the painter's study; but in intervening years the face has lost its expectancy, is apt to be indifferent, and has no particular interest. The author differed. He liked to study women between the ages of thirty and forty. They had then the experience of the world and the joyousness of youth. In those years they were brightest and most interesting. The society woman thought that it was impossible to give general answers to the question, as individual women differ in regard to the most attractive age. Some are most charming at sixty years, while others have passed their prime at twenty. At thirty or upward the best nature of a woman is will open to every advantage, but probably the balance of opinion turns in favor of eighteen to twenty-five. Taking everything into consideration the best single age would be that women are always interesting to the friends who love them.—Young Ladies' Bazar.

The Household Tool Chest.

A great many housekeepers seem to think that there is no need of keeping a chest of tools for a woman, and are quite likely to pick up such implements at bargain counters or in any shop when they happen to need them. Any intelligent person, with but little mechanical genius, if possessed of the proper kind of tools, can save considerable expense in small household repairs and avoid also the trouble of sending for a workman. A screw loose may easily be tightened; a disorderly lock may be removed, oiled and replaced, and other small matters of this kind may be attended to, for here they become complicated troubles and require the service of a skillful mechanic.

As a matter of fact, a skilled mechanic usually resents being sent for to attend to small matters. It is very difficult to get a carpenter to do work by the hour. He measures his time by days and disdains to notice fractions of a day, so that it does not pay to send for him; but there are enough matters to fill up a day's time. This means the neglect of small things, the sufferance of creaking hinges and doors askew, and other minor matters, which must go from bad to worse by waiting, unless some one in the family is mechanic enough to attend to them.—New York Tribune.

How a "Perfect Lady" Acts.

No lady who is rude to her servants, who gets into rages and abuses them, will ever win the mysterious and difficult title of perfect lady. Again, the lady who is well met with her servants, who chaffs them, or who makes friends with them too obviously, can obtain it. The best place in the whole world. Try to be loved indeed, but she will not be called perfect. "A very pleasant spoken lady," "as good tempered a lady as ever lived," "a thorough lady" are good in their way—a sound what Malaproprian expression in occasional use—but not "a perfect lady."

A perfect lady means a lady who keeps to her own place, or what is considered to be her place by those who use the words. She is a lady who lets it clearly be seen that she does not consider herself waiting for herself that a servant can possibly do for her, whether it be putting on coals or tidying a room, who is always somewhat expensively dressed, who keeps perfectly calm and self possessed whatever accidents happen, who is coldly polite to her inferiors, and yet never rude, and who, in fact, never does anything that if they were made of a different clay. This is the perfect lady. Truly a not very interesting or amiable figure.—London Spectator.

Early Training.

When baby begins to talk it is easy to teach him to say "please" and "ta ta" at first, before he can manage the more difficult "thank you." I know a bright baby fifteen months old, who is known to his many friends as "the gentleman baby," because of the polite habits his father and mother have taught him so gradually that they have almost become second nature. When any one asks, "How do you do, dear?" he answers in the most jovial manner, "How do?" When he wants a thing he begs, "Please" (please), and murmurs "Tank 'oo" on receiving it. He is very proud of being able to take off his own cap, and when out of doors pulls at it the moment he recognizes a "good morning" from one of his admirers. These tricks have not been forced upon him, but have been gently and patiently taught him from the first, so gently that the tender mind has not been overstrained.

If, to make a gentleman, one should begin, as some one says, a hundred years before the birth, may not mothers teach their children proper behavior from the first without fear of making them too courteous or too considerate of others?—Babyhood.

Testing Flour.

Although flour is in daily use in nearly every family in the United States, comparatively few cooks or housekeepers know how to test flour. Of the many different brands of flour, or can tell whether they are using flour of a choice or of an inferior grade.

There are various methods of testing flour, but this is one of the simplest: Take some flour in the left hand, add a little water, and with the right forefinger mix a rather stiff dough in the hand.

Let it stand a few minutes, then knead and work in the hand. If the flour is good the dough will become stiffer and drier with working and have an elastic, rubbery feeling.

If it is of inferior quality the dough will become soft and sticky under protracted working.—Chautauquan.

Decline of an Accomplishment.

The affectations of pronunciation that many teachers give their pupils, because they are in vogue, are apt to make elderly people, who still love drawing room music, mortified and unhappy.

It seems a great pity that any accomplishment which had the power of giving so much pleasure has lost that power. A person whose drawing room music is still warmly remembered is the Duchess of Manchester.

She had not the beautiful voice of her mother, but she had to perfection the art of singing entertainingly. And the foundation of this was her thorough naturalness. She had neither freaks of manner nor of pronunciation. She would sing in a half dozen languages, and always with that sense of harmony between herself, her song and her surroundings which is essential to enjoyment, and in the face of which criticism and comparison find no place.—New York Evening Sun.

The Difference.

Humph! there is something strange about this room. Where are those Sunday papers I had strewn about the floor? Why are not the ash pail together in a box as though they had no right to be anywhere in the room where I left them? Have I not given orders a dozen times that nothing was to be disturbed? Humph! I suppose that I will have to hunt around now for half an hour to find that collar button that I lost last night.

No, here it is on the bureau in plain sight. It seems to me that there is a strange odor of sachet in the room. What can it be? I have always thrown away every bag of it that was given me. And here is a woman's slipper, a little slipper, and a mighty pretty one, in my room. What does it all mean? Ah, I remember now, I hear her footstep on the stair. I am married.—Brooklyn Life.

A Delicious Way of Serving Eggs.

An excellent dish for breakfast is shirred eggs with tomato sauce. Butter some small skirring molds and sprinkle inside them bread crumbs. Break into each a fresh egg and put a bit of butter on the top with a pinch of salt. Set the molds in a pan of water reaching nearly to the top of the mold and cook in the oven till the eggs are set. Have ready some round pieces of toast or fried bread and slip each egg on one, using a knife to loosen the edges. Make a thick tomato sauce, seasoning two or three tomatoes, and adding a teaspoonful of flour rubbed smooth in hot, melted butter, salt, cayenne pepper. Pour the sauce around the eggs and serve very hot.—Her Point of View in New York Times.

Beware of the Cheap Thimble.

Girls who sew for a living often suffer from needed rest, and serious inflammation and swelling are often the result. No sewing girl or woman should let herself be imposed upon by the cheap thimbles, which are composed of lead or something equally injurious. Silver or plated thimbles are very much the best and safest, and when these are too expensive a good substitute can be found in a highly burnished steel thimble. For practical everyday use this latter kind is the most convenient, but never or lead should never be used, especially by people whose flesh is alow to heal after a scratch or cut.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Secret of a Palatable Breakfast.

"The meat for our breakfast alone costs so much," sighed a novice in the housekeeping line, "but the experienced housewife knows that certain relishes, like thin slices of bacon with cream sauce, or raw potatoes cut in strips and fried in hot fat, a graham gem or light muffin, are usually more acceptable than a something heartier. This is where the attention is needed, the lack of which makes the morning meal often an unpalatable one and little suited to provide fuel to start the day's work."—Brooklyn Eagle.

How Trained Nurses Stop Crying.

Uncomfortable positions often cause prolonged crying in healthy babies. Their stock of ignorance is exceedingly large. They will lie in a crib in a cramped, even painful position, and cry apparently for ages, and yet not know enough to turn over. It is a standing rule among trained nurses when a child cries in the hospitals to turn him over to his other side, rearrange the bedclothing, pat him a moment, and it is surprising to see how often the baby drops off again into peaceful slumber.—Baby.

A Woman Hermit.

Fourteen miles from Brunswick, in Glynn county, lives a woman, Miss Ann Piper, who has spoken to nobody but two women and a little girl in sixteen years. Miss Piper lives within two miles of a railroad, and can hear the whistle of an engine every time it passes her home, yet she has never seen an engine or ridden on a train in her life. She has been living on the same place sixteen years, and never has been to Brunswick.—Cor. Savannah News.

A Good Washing Fluid.

Dissolve one pound of sal soda and half a pound of lime in five quarts of water, and boil for a few minutes, stirring occasionally. Remove from the fire and allow it to settle; pour off the clear liquid into a stone jar and cork for use. Half a teacup*ful of this fluid added to a half boiler of* boiling water on wash days will save a great deal of labor.—New York Journal.

Woman the Molder of Mankind.

Woman is the mother and the molder of mankind. She is the chief factor of human destiny. Her manifest mission is to bless and brighten our earth and make it a better and more beautiful abode. She has always been the angelic agent of any advancement in this world.—Hall's Journal of Health.

Have Plenty of Hot Water Bags.

We do not sufficiently appreciate hot water bags. The amount of comfort in one of them cannot be known except from actual experience. There should be, if possible, half a dozen bags of various sizes in the sick room, ready for use and ready for use.—Medical Mirror.

Every child should be furnished with a cot or bed to itself, and taught to be compelled to sleep with an attendant or with other children. If constant attention be required, the mother or nurse can have her own bed placed just next to that of the child.

There is no better tonic for a debilitated person, old or young, than plenty of fresh air and sunlight. Weak children should always be kept when possible in sunny rooms and be encouraged to sit or play in the sun.

Anatomical.

A quack doctor stood on his wagon at a street corner selling his cure-all. A group of people gathered about him, and he undertook to explain the anatomy of the throat.

"My dear friends," he began, "perhaps you don't know it, but there are two passages that go from the back of the mouth to the stomach. One is called the oesophagus and the other is the œsophagi. Now, the solid victuals goes down the œsophagus and the liquids down the œsophagi.

"Over the top of the holes is a cover with a hinge in the middle, and when you swallow beefsteak a little door over the œsophagus flies open and the little door over the œsophagi drops down, and vice versa when you take a drink of coffee."

This description proved too much for a fellow who stood on the edge of the crowd. Shaking with laughter, he remarked in a loud tone:

"Gosh, but those doors must go flopper when a fellow eats bread and milk!"—Youth's Companion.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST," TUESDAY, OCTOBER 25, 1892. PRICE TWO CENTS.

BREVITIES

—Knitting parties are now in vogue. Every day takes some one to the woods to return tired, but well paid for their efforts.

—Buying for spot cash, and selling for cash White & Van Arsdale say is their system of doing business, and giving their customers the benefit of it.

—Members of the Catholic Young Men's Lyceum are rehearsing a play, to take place next month, entitled "Eileen Oge; or, Dark is the Hour Before the Dawn."

—During the latter part of November they will shoot at live birds with long range guns in Newark, each man to shoot at 100 live pigeons. Several Plainfielders will participate.

—Walter Sloan of Burlington, N. J., who was supposed to have been lost in the Johnston flood, has just turned up at Mount Holly to receive his share of a fortune left him by an aunt.

—The North Plainfield Electric Light Company yesterday erected several new poles near the Children's Home on Jackson avenue, and will soon place some extra street lights in that neighborhood, which heretofore has been very dark.

—"Your friends are thick as leaves in Vallombrosa while all goes well with you," said Rev. Dr. C. B. Mitchell in his sermon in the Methodist church last Sunday evening, "but more scarce than thunderstorms in January, when all goes ill." How true!

—About one o'clock this morning an engine became disabled between this city and Westfield and blocked one of the main tracks for several hours. The one o'clock from New York was consequently delayed and compelled to take a side track at Westfield.

—General invitations to a free exhibition of chrysanthemums, palms, ferns and orchids, to take place at the United States Nurseries at Short Hills, N. J., from Thursday, October 27th, to Wednesday, November 9th, inclusive, have been issued by Lewis, Pitcher & Manda. A similar exhibition was given last year and many Plainfielders attended and thought it very fine. The nurseries are but eleven miles from this city by macadamized road and many of those who attended last season went in carriages or on bicycles.

—Women drummers have appeared in Europe, and, while not very numerous, those that are known are conspicuous by their ability and success. A young Swedish woman is now for a Scandinavian firm of machinists. She travels all over Europe, and expects to extend her territory. She recently arrived in London direct from Moscow, and was soon expected to start for Melbourne, in the line of her business. Our London manufacturing firm employs several women commercial travellers, and makers of dress goods have at least one each. They find a woman's taste of great value in this special line, and it is said would engage more women to travel if they could find them with the necessary business capacity, good appearance, good manners, and good physique.

Bowling Last Night.

Two teams composed of members of the Catholic Young Men's Lyceum, bowled two games last night on their alleys. The scores were as follows:

J. Gallagher	133	126
C. Speedland	131	126
Jos. Reilly	171	130

Robbed by his Brother.

John Benner, the proprietor of the Elmwood road house on South avenue, was robbed last evening of quite a sum of money by his younger brother, who is a peddler. This morning he went to the constables looking for the thief, and found him in Blatz's saloon on Somerset street. He dragged him out upon the street, and, in the presence of a score of bystanders, searched the young man and recovered considerable of the money. His thereupon struck his conscience and guilty brother seemed inclined to sink him down. He then told him if he didn't get out of town immediately he would have him arrested.

A Narrow Escape.

George Gayle, a boss carpenter, narrowly escaped serious injury while riding his bicycle along Somerset street about half-past nine this morning. He was passing between a moving wagon loaded with straw and a carriage, when the wagon suddenly turned to go on the walk at French's Mills. Mr. Gayle turned his wheel very sharply and applied his brake, the slippery mud caused him to fall in the way of the wheels but by a quick move he extricated himself and the wagon passed over the saddle of his bicycle only. A few moments later he mounted his wheel, rode off and the worse for his mishap.

Shooting Marches at Bound Brook.

At Bound Brook yesterday James H. Fryer won the shooting match for $50 a side by killing 14 out of 20 birds, defeating John D. Voorhees who killed but 11 out of 20. Charles Smith, who has been offering prizes in every shooting match in the country that he has entered, also won the first money yesterday by killing 14 out of 15 birds, in three sweepstake shoots of five birds each.

THE MOUNTAIN FIRES.

SOME INTERESTING FACTS CONCERNING THEM.

Land Once Valuable with Rock Oak, and the Home of Wild Pigeon in its Migration Southward.—But now Deserted.

"When I was a boy," said Marshal Pangborn to a NEWS reporter last evening, while both were viewing the miles of serpentine flames on the mountain, "fires on the mountain were unknown.

"Why, if such a thing as a fire should occur there, you would see all the people of North Plainfield turn out to extinguish it.

"The reason was that the forest of trees which grew there was very valuable to the people. Many of them got their living out of it.

"There was no species of tree, for instance, which would equal the mountain rock oak for tanning purposes, and the mountain also supplied the people with their fire-wood.

"This rock oak grew on the mountain in abundance, and there was a ready sale for it right in Plainfield.

The father of Mr. James Clark, who now resides on Seventh street, as well as a Mr. Townsend of East Front street, bought it up as fast as it was brought to town. They owned large tanneries here and elsewhere.

"Sometimes it was taken to Woodbridge, where there was a good market for it among the tanneries there.

"That was before the war.

"These fires have occurred since then regularly, started always wantonly, sometimes by mischievous boys, but more often by mischievous men, who did not realize the amount of injury the fires did to vegetation.

"Before these fires became common, the wild pigeon would stop in this vicinity to rest and feed.

"I have seen flocks of them so large that they would darken the heavens as a cloud, where they were.

"Thousands of them would be entrapped each season, and quite a thriving business was done in selling those captured in the New York and Philadelphia markets.

"It was customary to keep a few wild pigeons over from year to year as dummies.

"Just about the time for the pigeons to migrate, we would take these stool pigeons, and, after sewing up their eyelids temporarily, so that they could not see, we would put the birds on stools in the fields, and just at daylight would start them flying. They would of course drop to the ground.

"Their fluttering would attract the flocks of wild pigeons flying overhead, and these would alight, under the supposition that they had discovered a good feeding place, as in fact it would be.

"We would have our nets ready on poles, and, at the proper time, would let the poles fall so that the nets would cover the pigeons, and in that way thousands were captured.

"We would see the pigeons alighting on the trees the night before. This would be a warning, and we would be on hand concealed the next morning before daylight, to be ready, as the birds would be astir at the first dawn of day.

"But these mountain fires have destroyed all the vegetation upon which the birds have fed, so that they come here no more. The fires have also destroyed the hardy rock oak, although there is still some of the trees to be found on the second mountain, and the west side of the first mountain.

"It is too bad people will be so destructive and for no good purpose whatever."

HELD FOR MURDER.

THE ALLEGED SLAYERS OF PATRICK KIELLY ARRAIGNED YESTERDAY.

The Grand Jury Find an Indictment Against Six Italians for his Death.—They were Remanded Until Jan. 16th, when They will be Tried.

The Grand Jury were discharged by Judge Van Syckel at Elizabeth yesterday morning. They filed into the court room at about half-past ten o'clock, and the foreman, Mr. P. J. Ryan, handed to County Clerk Crowell a batch of thirty indictments and three presentments. After the presentments were read the Grand Jurors were discharged.

During the October term the jury brought in 26 indictments out of 185 complaints.

Among the indictments was one for the murder of Patrick Kielly on the night of Sept. 25th. Kielly was mortally wounded by a pistol shot, and one of his companions was badly injured. They were both cut when they were attacked by a gang of Italians on Third street, Elizabeth, and the police arrested Nocce Calerino, Charles Primeo, Angelo Vitula, Frank Micko, Antonio Jacquillino and Jacob Jcaquillino, all of whom are charged with the murder by the Grand Jury.

On motion of Prosecutor Marsh the six Italians were immediately arraigned.

Each of the six men answered not guilty. The prosecutor said the State would be ready to try the case in the January term, and the date was fixed as January 16. They were then remanded. There were no other arraignments.

Two judgments were given by Judge Van Syckel against the late firm of Field, Lindley, Weichers & Co., of New York. One was for $48,589.16, and the other for $31,729.78. Mr. Weichers resides on Eighth street, Plainfield. He and his father lost $800,000 by Field's misappropriation of the firm's funds. He is a member of the Union League and Country Club, and is believed to be financially ruined by Field's crookedness.

FOUND THREE SKELETONS.

While Digging a Cesspool Yesterday Afternoon.

Yesterday afternoon, while digging a cesspool at 78 West Second street, Geo. Lewis, a colored man, unearthed three human skeletons. The first one was found early in the afternoon, and was buried in the Potters field by Captain Grant later. The other two were dug up about five o'clock. This morning Lewis, after getting a permit, buried them.

The locality where the skeletons were found was once a burying ground. Several years ago 16 or 18 bodies were removed from there to the Baptist burying ground, and it is supposed that these were missed.

He Kicked the Boy in the Face.

Christopher Weiss of Grandview avenue, while driving a loaded hay wagon along West Front street, near Plainfield avenue, about half-past five o'clock last evening, was annoyed by some small boys pulling wisps of hay from his wagon. He told them to stop, and when they continued their mischief, he leaped from the wagon and caught ten year old Clarence Brokaw, and kicked him in the nose, badly bruising it, and causing severe bleeding. He also kicked the boy in the stomach and back. The boy was assisted to his home, No. 189 West Front street, by his companions, and remedies were applied. His nose is quite swollen to-day but he is about playing as usual. Marshal Pangborn, armed with a State warrant, was looking for the driver yesterday. It is said that Weiss had gone with his hay to Newark.

A Woman Seriously Injured While Drunk.

Bridget Coleman was released from the county jail yesterday morning, having served six days for being drunk and disorderly. Last evening she was again helplessly intoxicated, and fell down the steps at the depot, striking and cutting her head very badly in several places, and injuring one of her eyes so that she may lose it.

Chief of Police Grant took the woman in charge, and sent her to the Muhlenberg Hospital, where she is now being cared for. He says she is a good woman when sober, but that she cannot restrain her appetite for rum.

Raising the Pennsylvania Tracks.

Next Sunday the Pennsylvania Railroad will cut out two of its four tracks at Elizabeth, and will only run its business on two tracks at this point. This is to give a chance for the work of elevating the roadbed through the city to begin. The two eastern tracks will be first elevated, and then the trains will be run over them while the other two are being raised

According to the agreement with the City of Elizabeth the entire work of elevating the tracks through the city must be completed within six months.

A Troublesome Maniac.

Sunday night Constable Stevens, of Roselle, was called upon to deal with an insane man named Barney Heenan. The imbecile was hard to control and fought with the superhuman strength of a madman. It took several men to control him before he was gotten on a train for Elizabeth. Yesterday morning the constable made a charge against Heenan, and on a physician's certificate he was sent to Morris Plains.

POLITICAL PICKLES.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED.

By the Third Assembly District Republican Convention Yesterday.

The following resolutions were adopted at the Third Assembly District Republican Convention held yesterday in the Republican Association Rooms, on East Front street, as reported in THE NEWS:

FIRST—That we heartily endorse the platform as adopted by the National Convention at Minneapolis and believe that the further welfare and prosperity of the American industries, American workingmen and American homes depends entirely upon the success of the Republican party in the coming election. We affirm that under the beneficent operations of the McKinley bill, the wages of the workingmen of this country have been materially increased, our industries fostered and protected, and our revenues enhanced to the benefit of our Government and our Union soldiers.

SECOND—We unreservedly endorse the acts of the present administration and congratulate the country that it again has an opportunity of placing governmental affairs in the hands of a wise statesman, a loyal patriot and an uncompromising foe to the Democratic free trade policy, by reducing his wages to the pauper labor of Europe, that depreciates our currency and that seeks to plunge our banks into "wild cat" currency schemes. We are of the firm conviction that the election of Benjamin Harrison and Whitelaw Reid, will insure prosperity at home and the respect of American flag abroad.

THIRD—In endorse the principles of the platform adopted by the Republican State party at its recent State Convention, and confidently work for the election of John Kean, Jr., as Governor of this State.

FOURTH—We denounce the acts of the Democratic Legislature of 1892, and appeal to all good citizens irrespective of party to cast their ballots in favor of that party which stands unreservedly against Abbettism and the centralization of all power in the hands of one man, whose ambition might seek to make all things subservient to his wishes; we commend the Democratic party of this State for its acts in legislating in the interests of the coal consumer at the cost of the poor people of this city.

FIFTH—We are of the firm belief that the legislative acts of the Hon. George Kyte are above reproach, and we commend his course in the Legislature as a representative of this district.

SIXTH—Comparison between the nominations of Van Syckel and Woodhull, and county officers, need scarcely be made by this convention. The people of this Congressional District and county have an unreserved faith that the Republican candidates nominated, will, if elected, be faithful in the discharge of their respective duties, and true to the trust that may be reposed in them.

SEVENTH—Our deepest sympathies are hereby expressed to the President of the United States in these trying days of his wife's illness, and we trust that "God will in all mercy" may give him that strength and fortitude to sustain that confidence so much needed in this the hours of his deep affliction.

JOHN ULRICH,

Reese at the U. S. Grant Club.

Mr. S. W. Reese of Westfield spoke at a meeting of the U. S. Grant Republican Club, held last evening, in Spencer's Hall. His speech was mainly on the prosperity of the country during the different administrations of Republicans and Democrats. He showed, by the aid of a stereopticon, the condition of the savings banks when the Government was in the control of the Democrats and under the Republican administration. The difference was astonishing.

The meeting was enlivened by interested his hearers with his talk and views for more than two hours.

Ex-Mayor Place also made a few remarks, after which the meeting was brought to a close.

Small Verdict Against the Reading.

In the Mercer court at Trenton yesterday the Phoenix Iron Company won a verdict against the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad for the delay in delivering the Northwest Seal Rock Lighthouse, which was erected near San Francisco. In October, 1890, the Government gave a contract to the Phoenix Iron Company for the erection of the lighthouse. The company contracted with the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad to carry the iron to the Pacific coast. Shipment was made on June 13, and the iron should have reached its destination June 26 1891, but it did not get there until June 7. Before it could be released the Phoenix had to pay $788 for additional freight and $20 a day because of the delay. Suit was brought to recover the excessive freight charges. The suit has been pending for three days. The jury yesterday afternoon rendered a verdit for $995 in favor of the Phoenix Company.

City Court Cases.

Ann Sullivan was arrested yesterday for being drunk and disorderly. This morning she plead guilty before Judge Codington, and was sentenced to forty days in the county jail.

William Betts, for being drunk and disorderly, was arrested yesterday. He plead "not guilty" before Judge Codington this morning. A $4 fine was imposed and paid.

For being drunk Thos. McFadden was arrested yesterday. This morning Judge Codington fined him $1.

A young man was arrested for not having a lantern on his bicycle last night. The City Judge fined him $1 this morning.

Seamless Metallic Lifeboats.

Steamships engaged in the transportation of passengers across the Atlantic are compelled to carry a large number of boats, so that in case they need that they cannot always be relied upon to float when it is necessary to launch them. Heat from the smokestacks and the sun causes their seams to open and planks to warp.

This difficulty with the small boats of steamships has led an English shipbuilding firm to construct seamless metallic lifeboats, which are designed to replace the wooden ones now in use. The boats are constructed of two thin sheets of steel, which are pressed into the desired shape. Buoyancy cases are placed in bow and stern to insure flotation, even though the boat is filled with water.

—Young men who desire to study shorthand at the Y. M. C. A., should apply at rooms this evening.

Plainfield Society Shocked.

It has just leaked out that Plainfield society was greatly shocked by the "Dr. Bill" performance at Music Hall a few nights ago, and has vowed that it will not collectively nor individually again attend the hall. The performance was made a society event, the Union County Country Club of Plainfield and the Park Club of North Plainfield, uniting to attract a large audience, in reciprocate for the kindness of some of those who took part, in helping the clubs out on their amateur performances last Winter.

"Society" did not so much object to the legitimate part of the play of "Dr. Bill" as they did to the parts interjected. The songs and the dancing were declared rather too much inclined to be off color to prove acceptable to such an audience as was present. The dancer who, greatly to the amusement of the audience, played Dr. Bill by her high kicking and her antics, reminding him rather forcibly of the "old times" when they were friends, before he became settled in life, was considered too free in the use of her legs, and while it may not have her tight-covered nether extremities proceed from the regulation gauzy skirt beneath her dress. The songs were sung so poorly that only a portion of the audience could hear them, for the accoustics of the hall are not yet by any means perfect, but the dancing, now so much objected to, seemed to strike many of the audience as just right, for the dancer was recalled two or three times, both when she danced before "Dr. Bill," and when she danced before the wife of the Inspector of Police, she each time kicking her legs higher and freer than before, concluding by the applause that the audience liked it. But there has never been a dancer in this town who kicked up such a tempest in Plainfield society, and may make Music Hall innocently the sufferer for awhile.

Some of the club members are reported to have got severe curtain lectures over the matter as if they knew all about it beforehand.

Plainfield society in this matter tends in the right direction and does itself credit. The spirit is shown that it will not sanction—if it must tolerate—what in its judgment tends either to corrupt or to offend. It may err in judgment, but with rightful purpose it cannot go far wrong. The "Dr. Bill" matter, however, is all in the way you look at it. Most people were so amused over the doctor's embarrassment that they took no notice the extra extravagancing of the bounds of propriety. It was very tame alongside of some of the affairs that have come and gone, but then Plainfield society a week had not given its approval. That was the difference.

The Independent Gun Club Won Eight Out of Nine Contests.

The tenth and final team contest of the New Jersey Trap Shooting League will be held on Thursday on the grounds of the Maplewood Gun Club, near South Orange. The Maplewoods will also run an all-day tournament in conjunction with the league shoot. The club will use two sets of five traps each, so that one set may be used for sweepstake shooting while the other set is occupied by the teams. This league has been very successful since its organization, having won seven of the nine contests decided. The teams comprise five men each, and each man fires at twenty-five artificial targets. The Independent Gun Club of Plainfield has won eight out of nine contests.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Reign of the Bicycle.

Hail to the bicycle, if the boys and girls would only sit up straight upon it and not hump over and flap together their lungs and stomach and make their backs look like a barrel!

The bicycle industry of this country amounts to $52,000,000. Since the day when the native who first saw it described it as "a buggy wheel running away wid a man on it" the number of riders has increased till they now number 300,000 in America, and it is mounting up every day. To our friends, the wheelmen, we owe almost altogether the recent movement in favor of improved country roads in the United States. Before the advent of the bicycle the country roads of this Union would have been a disgrace to the Eskimos of Greenland's icy mountains. Sylvester Baxter, writing in The Arena on the "Social and Economic Influence of the Bicycle," says that he recalls a prominent western city where a few years ago the streets were in a wretched condition, with not a half dozen wheelmen in the place. On a late visit he found beautiful asphalt streets with bicyclers gliding like a gleam light hither and thither, their wheels glancing in the sunshine.

Mr. Baxter mentions also that the bicycle has given to us an idea of a strong, light vehicle, which is being utilized rapidly in the construction of wagons and carriages. He believes that between the bicycle idea and electrical traction horses as draft animals will disappear altogether from city streets. It is impossible as yet to even prophesy the full development of the bicycle idea in its application to human life and industry. Bicycle riding began with gentlemen, and with gentlemen it has mostly remained—that is, with men of moral habits. Mr. Baxter says:

The example set by men in its use has been followed by boys in their emulative aspirations. Like swimming and skating, bicycling has become a universal youthful accomplishment in many communities not to be proficient with the wheel is a rare exception for boys, and it bids fair to be for girls also. It is not uncommon to see school house yards stacked with the machines, on which the boys go to and from school and enjoy daily two or three hours at least of healthy exercise. The educational influence is very great both upon physical and mental development. It quickens the perceptive faculties of young people and makes them more alert. They see more of the world and are broadened by the contact. While otherwise they would seldom go beyond strolling distance from their homes, on the bicycle they are constantly coming throughout many surrounding towns, beholding fresh and varied scenes, becoming familiar with choice routes and in vacation time not infrequently exploring several states. Such experiences produce growth in knowledge, self reliance and confidence in character, and make a more complete individuality. The moral effect is no less marked. The clean, outdoor life, and the tonic influences of fresh air, sunshine and the pleasant sights of nature, remove thousands of young men from the danger of debasing associations. Temperance is also promoted; as wheelmen can safely use intoxicants, for a cool, clear head and steady nerves are absolutely essential.

Labor's Celebration.

Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, writes in the New York Press of the working man's debt to Columbus for discovering this New World. He remarks that until the beginning of the present century the workman or artisan in America did not make his "very humble and insignificant appearance." This is hardly fair either to American or to the workingman. The truth is that until the beginning of the present century there were hardly anybody else than artisans, workmen and farmers in the country. Plain farmers were among the heroes of the Revolution. Benjamin Franklin, the greatest philosophical thinker this country has produced, was a plain printer, with no education beyond or even equal to that of many a printer at his ease to-day.

The rich and moneyed class in Europe did not come here in the early days of the country any more than they do now. They had good enough times where they were. With few exceptions every man who crossed the water was a mechanic or farmer, and blacksmith and carpenter belonged to first society and were leaders of the Four Hundred of those days.

If Mr. Gompers means that there were no organized trades unions to speak of till a century ago, he is right. There was no occasion for them, for the workingmen had matters all their own way. All were workingmen. Mr. Gompers is right, too, in his opinion that the conditions and environments of the laborer were never so good as they are today, and that better things yet are in store for him.

Winnipeg, in Manitoba, is informed that the eyes of the world are on her frost decorated towers and steeples. Her city council, board of trade and numerous prominent citizens in their private capacity have indorsed the single tax system and have empowered the board of aldermen to make radical changes in the method of taxation. All the rest of the world will watch and wait while the Winnipegians "try it on a dog," so to speak.

The more people do for themselves and the less the government does for them the better off they will be. When the time comes that the government does everything for everybody, every body will slump down like a chronic officeholder, nobody will get up and hustle, and talent and genius will be exhaustive.

MRS. HARRISON IS DEAD

She Sinks Peacefully to Rest in the Saddened White House.

PRESIDENT HARRISON PROSTRATED

But After One Sob of Anguish Escapes Him He Nerves Himself to Comfort the Other Members of the Family—History of the Fatal Illness.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—Mrs. Harrison is dead. The wife of the president sank calmly to sleep in eternity at twenty minutes to 5 this morning.

Although she had been unable to speak or even to swallow for some hours, she betrayed almost to the end some signs of understanding the sympathetic attempts made to relieve her last moments by partly opening her parched lips to receive the stimulating fluid applied to them from time to time.

Gradually her heart beats grew feebler until almost imperceptible and then ceased forever.

At midnight Mrs. Harrison was slowly sinking, the change in the previous hour and a half having been greater than at any time. Her respiration had fallen to twelve a minute, and the awakenings from the lethargic sleep were at greater intervals and for briefer periods.

The president had then been with her an unbroken stretch of seven and a half hours. The end was rapidly approaching, and all the family were in the corridor adjoining the patient's chamber.

At 1 o'clock the members of the family were summoned to the bedside. The patient was in a semiunconscious and motionless condition and there were indications that an immediate dissolution was at hand. The doctor then made a hasty examination and found that the respiration was gradually decreasing and there were other signs that the patient was in the throes of death. He made an almost inaudible communication to the bereaved ones, telling the words, "I don't think she will last half an hour."

MRS. BENJAMIN HARRISON.

Dr. Scott, Mrs. Harrison's venerable father, and her brother John were the only members of the family not present when she died.

Dr. Gardner was in an adjoining room and was not present when his patient passed to the dark valley. From 1 o'clock Mrs. Harrison was to all intents a corpse, her breathing being hardly perceptible and her respiration gradually decreased until 1:40, when she ceased to live. Her death was as peaceful as a child in sweet repose.

President Harrison was at the right side of his wife in a reclining position from 1 o'clock, when Dr. Gardner notified the family that the end was close at hand.

In this position he remained until 1:40, when life was thought to be extinct, and Lieutenant Parker, who was at the bed side, called in Dr. Gardner, and the experienced eye of the physician soon detected that Mrs. Harrison was no more.

The President's Anguish.

The president gave way to an almost audible outburst of grief, but soon suppressed his emotion and endeavored to console Mrs. Sickles, his daughter. All the members of the family remained in the room for probably fifteen or twenty minutes after the end, and were overcome by grief they repaired to their respective rooms and were alone in their great sorrow.

Lieutenant Parker was also present when Mrs. Harrison passed away, and he said in speaking to the newspaper men that it occurred without a struggle. Private Secretary Halford immediately notified all the cabinet officers who are now out of town of Mrs. Harrison's death.

Although no arrangements have been made for the funeral services, they will doubtless be held at the White House and the remains taken to Indianapolis for interment.

During the evening there were received at the executive mansion telegrams of condolence from all parts of the country expressing sympathy for the president in his hour of grief.

Carrie L. Harrison was the daughter of the Rev. John W. Scott, who at the time of her birth—in 1858—was professor at Miami university, Oxford, O., and subsequently became president of the female college in the same town. At this college she became a student, and while there made the acquaintance of Benjamin Harrison, who was at that time studying at the Miami university. The young people became warmly attached to each other, and when Benjamin was twenty—in 1853—they were married. Two children—Russell and Mamie S. —were the result of this marriage.

Mrs. Harrison's Illness.

To a reporter of the United Press Dr. Gardner, the faithful attendant upon Mrs. Harrison throughout the long and tedious illness which terminated with her death, gave the following history of the case:

"Mrs. Harrison's illness dates from the attack of the grip which seized her during the winter of 1890-1. This was followed by bronchitis which lasted a number of weeks, but without any apparently serious results. During the summer of 1891 she contracted while at Cape May Point a severe cold, which on her return returned and lasted during the entire summer, yet no danger was apprehended.

"In January, 1892, the cough again made its appearance, lasting five or six weeks, not severe enough to cause her to remain indoors, but enough to compel her to seek medical advice. I was called in and prescribed for her.

"In March Mrs. Harrison had a second attack of the grip, followed by pneumonia. The grip symptoms lasted four days and the pneumonia proper nine days. It was a simple case of catarrhal pneumonia, and in alarm was felt by any of those around Mrs. Harrison, including myself.

"After recovery from the pneumonia Mrs. Harrison's cough seemed to be more persistent than ever, coming on in paroxysms and with more or less bloody expectorations. On May 1 there was quite a severe hemorrhage from the lungs. This was the first danger signal. At once her lungs were sounded by percussion, and a slight dullness was found in the apex of the right lung. Soon afterward Dr. E. E. Doughty, of New York, was called in consultation, and it was then decided that Mrs. Harrison had tuberculosis of the lungs in the incipient stage.

"After the hemmorhage there was a distinct attack of hectic fever, the temperature rising to about 103 degs. each night. This condition lasted until after Mrs. Harrison was taken to Loon Lake on July 6 last. After the first week at Loon Lake she showed improvement in her general condition, the cough grew less, the temperature was somewhat reduced, she became stronger and her appetite improved considerably. But this improvement was of short duration—perhaps three and a half weeks. Soon the cough returned with renewed vigor, the fever increased and the appetite failed.

Both Schools of Medicine.

"On about the 1st of September an examination revealed a rapid progress of the disease, and it was found that two-thirds of the right lung had consolidated. The left was at this time untouched apparently by the disease.

"Five days later subacute pleurisy came on, with serious effusions into the cavity of the right pleura. This fluid increased to such an extent that aspiration was demanded. The operation was performed on Sept. 10, and about one and a half pints of fluid were removed, but in twenty-four hours the cavity filled again, and a second tapping was seen to be a necessity. This was done on the 14th, and about one and a half pints withdrawn. It was then seen that the disease had made rapid progress in the left lung.

"With all this there was an extreme degree of nervous exhaustion, which was a very serious complication. While at Loon Lake Dr. Trudeau, who has a large sanitarium at Saranac Lake for the treatment of pulmonary diseases, and who is recognized as one of the leading specialists in the country, was called in for consultation with Dr. Doughty and, myself, but there was nothing further that could be done, and it was decided that the best thing to do was to bring Mrs. Harrison back to Washington while it could be done."

"What about the nature of the treatment?"

"We did all that could be done, faced with the certain knowledge that there is nothing that will cure consumption. I am not willing to give to the public such information as would cause comment from physicians of opposing schools. Suffice it to say that in our consultation at Loon Lake it was agreed that no other treatment was possible. Dr. Doughty is an allopath and Dr. Trudeau and I are homeopaths. So we organized both sides of the medical controversy, and inasmuch as we agreed it should be enough for the world. There has been no hope for Mrs. Harrison's recovery since her first severe attack of the grip."

White House Deaths.

Mrs. Harrison's death marks the second time a president's wife has died in the White House, and it is a strange coincidence that most of the deaths that have occurred within its walls were of persons connected more or less remotely, personally or politically, with the family of President Harrison.

The first death was that of President William Henry Harrison, which occurred on the morning of April 4, 1841, just one month after his inauguration. The president on that occasion went through the ceremonies heroically, in the midst of a driving storm. On the 1st of April he was compelled to take to his bed and send for a physician, but the disease resisted all treatment, and at half past 12 o'clock of the morning of April 4 the president breathed his last.

Mrs. Letitia Tyler, first wife of President Tyler, who was elected vice president on the ticket with General Harrison and succeeded him as chief executive, died in the White House on Sept. 10 the next year, 1842. During her brief stay in the executive mansion Mrs. Tyler was unable to discharge the duties of hostess, her place being taken first by Mrs. Robert Tyler, her son's wife, and later by Mrs. Semple, her daughter.

The third death was that of President Zachary Taylor, who entered the White House March 4, 1849. He lived only until July 9, 1850. His death was the result of cholera morbus, which he had had on previous, when he took part in the dedication of Washington's monument.

The weather was exceedingly hot, and the president drank freely of ice water and partook of a large quantity of fruit. Immediately upon his return to the White House he was seized with an indisposition from which he never recovered.

Willie Lincoln, second son of President Lincoln, died in the White House in February, 1862, at the time when "Tad," the favorite son of the martyred president, lay seriously ill. Mr. Lincoln said that the blow was the saddest experience of his life and the hardest to be borne. Willie was twelve years old at the time of his death.

Frederick P. Dent, father of Mrs. U. S. Grant, who was a member of the president's family from the time General Grant entered the White House, died there Dec. 15, 1873.

The Most Dramatic of All.

The last previous death within the portals of the executive mansion was the most dramatic of all. It occurred at the New Year's reception held by President Arthur, Jan. 1, 1883, and there was a pall over the festivities for the occasion, which were at once brought to a close by the unbidden and unexpected entrance of the grim messenger. Mr. Elisha H. Allen, minister to the United States from Hawaii and dean of the diplomatic corps, was at the head of his associates, making his way to the president to present the members of the legations with their compliments when he was smitten with heart disease. Falling to the floor, he was hurriedly borne into one of the parlors, but never recovered consciousness and expired before medical aid could reach him.

Beside these deaths the White House has been the theater of other scenes of sorrow and gloom. The assassination of Garfield fell with the assassin's bullet in his back he was conveyed to the room in which Mrs. Harrison died, and remained there until carried forth to die at Elberon.

Colonel E. E. Ellsworth, the hero of the early war days, lay in state in the Blue room on the morning of May 25, 1861, and funeral services were held there in the presence of one of the most distinguished gatherings ever assembled in that apartment.

Another and more notable funeral held in the Blue room was that of the victims of the explosion of the big gun on the Princeton, Commodore Stockton's ship near Alexandria, Feb. 28, 1844.

These included Secretaries Upshur and Gilmer and Hon. Davis Gardiner, of New York. President Tyler, on the occasion of the explosion narrowly escaped the fate of his secretaries.

FIGHTING FOR NEW YORK

Both Parties Concentrate Their Efforts in the Empire State.

SPELLBINDERS TO CHARM VOTER.

An Army of Orators Will Tell Why Their Candidates Should Be Elected—Minister Egan Makes Answer to Wayne MacVeagh's Attack on His Character.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—Hard work is now the order of the day at both the Republican and Democratic national headquarters in this city, and the managers on both sides are exerting themselves to the utmost as the campaign begins to near the end.

The Democratic managers have secured some Republican literature bearing on Mr. Cleveland's alleged hostile attitude toward the veterans, and have issued a statement denying the allegations contained in the document, which charges that Mr. Cleveland said in one of his messages, while president, that "the pooh-pooh was good enough for them" (Union veterans), and similar unsympathetic remarks concerning the old soldiers. "The pretended extracts are a base forgery," say the Democratic managers.

Chairman Harrity and his associates in the management of the Democratic national campaign began today calling out their reserves and concentrating their forces for a hard fight in this state. They admit frankly that there is need for hard fighting in this state from now until the polls close.

Speaker Crisp, of the house of representatives, who is in consultation with the Democratic managers, will make a number of speeches, and commenced with an address to the Dry Goods Democratic and Stevenson club here. He spoke first on the tariff and then gave the Springer wool bill some attention. He met with a hearty reception.

An Army of "Spellbinders."

Between 300 and 400 "spellbinders" who will go out to battle under Tammany's banner assembled in Tammany hall. Mr. Richard Croker told them that they were called together to find out exactly who were willing to make speeches and to make arrangements as to where and when each man should speak. A call was made for volunteers, and the next hour was spent in taking their names and addresses. Then Mr. Croker mounted the platform and said: "It is my earnest desire, gentlemen, that you should give your most careful and vigorous attention to the national ticket. The local ticket will look out for itself."

Mr. Cleveland wrote to the Business Men's Democratic association declining to speak at the meeting announced to be held at Madison Square garden on Oct. 29. Mr. Cleveland's reasons for this action were based on the conclusion that his presence would attract many Democrats on the last day of registration and consequently lose the party many votes. The campaign committee, after discussing the matter, passed resolutions postponing the meeting until some time during the following week. The resolutions recite the same reason as that given by Mr. Cleveland for this action.

Egan Replies to MacVeagh.

The Republicans are also making ready to send some of their best men into the interior of the state, and declare they are now ready to "fight the enemy day and night and election day."

Minister Egan had a long consultation with the Republican campaign committee this afternoon, in which he and Wayne MacVeagh, in which among other things MacVeagh said he learned of Egan's dishonesty through the columns of Whitelaw Reid's paper, the New York Tribune. The result of the conference was an open letter to Mr. MacVeagh from Minister Egan. The letter opens by saying:

At a meeting held in Cooper Union, under the auspices of the Democratic club of New York, you, a renegade from your party—as you are said to be in your speech and your letter of attempt to palliate your apostacy by undertaking to do that which the London Times, with its tardiness of testimony, failed among which was the notorious Pigott, failed to accomplish—to besmirch my good name.

With the advantages of a police court pettifogger you, under the pretext of referring to some newspaper comments on the subject, were first as a "swindler who failed to account for a very large trust fund placed in his charge;" second, you say, of it was well known in Washington when he was appointed what the charges were, and that he had fled this country to avoid arrest and trial on a very serious criminal charge;" third, you describe me as "a dark patriot and a fugitive from criminal justice," to which you are pleased to add that you were "greatly surprised and disgusted to find such a character as mine had been given entry in a high diplomatic post," and that you not only reasserted your statement "that my appointment was a scandal," but also considered it "also an insult to every self respecting Irishman in the United States."

What He Pleads Guilty To.

Mr. Egan then says he would not notice the insult but for the acquiescence in the attack of prominent Irishmen like T. F. Gilroy, William R. Grace, J. J. O'Donoghue, John D. Crimmins, John C. Sheehan and others who were present, and asserted that he would not in his presence allow a similar foul attack on either of them without resenting it.

Mr. Egan then answers Mr. MacVeagh's assertions in rotation, showing that every cent of the Irish funds handled by him had been properly accounted for; that the only criminal charge against him was made by a hostile English press, based on the Pigott forgeries, to which Pigott confessed and for which the London Times apologized, and adds:

With regard to being a "sham patriot" and a "fugitive from criminal justice." I am fully content to leave the first part of this charge to the judgment of my Irish-American fellow citizens, and to the second part I plead guilty.

Yes, I was at one time a fugitive from "criminal justice" in the same way precisely as were Thomas Addis Emmet, Richard McNevin, Richard O'Gorman, Thomas Francis Meagher, John Mitchell and so many others, and I am sincerely proud of having been so Lively in Indianapolis.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 25.—Both the great political parties made a handsome showing of strength in Indianapolis last night. There were two parades of about equal size, but the Republicans gobbled Tomlinson hall and English's Opera house and had about 6,000 persons in attendance, while the Democrats were left only the Grand Opera house, holding 1,700 persons. The Republican orators were Whitelaw Reid and Thomas M. Depew and Democratic Cockran addressed the Democrats. All the meetings were enthusiastic and great enthusiasm prevailed.

"Brick" Pomeroy for Harrison.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—Mark M. ("Brick") Pomeroy, for many years well known as *the editor of the La Crosse (Wis.) Demo*crat, has decided to vote for Harrison this year. Cleveland's enmity to silver, the veteran Democrat declares in a long statement, compels him to take this course.

Seven Persons Killed in a Collision on the Reading Road.

A SCORE OF OTHERS BADLY HURT.

Some One Had Blundered and a Coroner's Jury Will Try to Fix the Responsibility—Seven Workmen Dashed Down Sixty Feet and Meet with Instant Death.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 25.—One of the worst accidents that has happened on the Philadelphia and Reading railroad for years occurred on the main line by a collision between the Shamokin express and a freight train at a point midway between West Manayunk station and Rose Glen, on the Philadelphia and Reading railroad.

The express train which left Shamokin was composed of an engine, a baggage and smoking car, four day coaches and the Pullman parlor car Crestline, the latter being attached at Reading. It was from Harrisburg. A singular fact is that all of the parlor car occupants escaped injury.

Thomas Fitzpatrick, an experienced engineer, was at the lever of the express and Thomas Welch was the fireman. Harry C. Printz was the conductor, Clayton Eppler was baggage master, L. B. Cassel was brakeman and George Hamilton was the Pullman conductor. The train was well filled with passengers and was running on schedule time.

Owing to the accumulation of freight and coal trains on the northbound track Conductor Printz had received orders to take the northbound track from West Conshohocken to West Falls, and, ignorant of any impending danger he did so, and the train rushed along at the rate of about forty-five miles an hour.

The Wreck in Flames.

At Penecyd a train made up of empty coal and freight cars, drawn by engine No. 89 and manned by Engineer Charles Bellis, Fireman Bernard Gallagher, Conductor William Gerlach, Brakesmen Jacob Kilrain and James Burfield and Flagman Frank H. Crieff, remained on a side track until the accommodation had passed, and then in accordance with its usual custom pulled out for Bridgeport at the rate of fifteen miles per hour. As the freight emerged from the West Manayunk tunnel the express was little more than a mile away, and the trains were rushing toward one another on the same track, their combined speed being forty-five miles an hour.

At a point directly opposite Shawmount, which is on the other side of the Schuylkill river, the railroad makes a wide curve around the base of a steep hill which seems to hang suspended over the tracks. Just before the express rounded the curve and came in sight of this spot the engineer sounded his whistle, and a moment later as the train dashed around the turn an answering scream of alarm sounded from the freight, which now burst full upon the sight of the engineer and fireman on the express.

The trains came together at the steepest point of the hill with a fearful crash. The heavy freight engine was thrown but a few feet to one side, but the lighter express locomotive had her front smashed in and was dismantled and forced completely around. The baggage and smoking car was forced back almost its entire length, telescoping the first coach, and this is where the deaths and fatal injuries occurred.

The shock of the collision had hurled some of the victims half way down the embankment, and almost the first to be picked up was Thomas Welsh, the fireman. He was dying and his cries were most pitiful. Then the wreck took fire and the flames sprang up in an instant. A wrecking crew arrived simultaneously with the Manayunk police and fire departments, and the flames were extinguished before the passenger cars were reached, but not until the latter had been drawn some distance away.

The rescuers worked with a will, and amid thrilling scenes succeeded in getting the wounded and dead from the debris. The injured were taken to St. Timothy's hospital, Roxborough, and the dead to the West Manayunk freight house, and subsequently to Undertaker Ryan's establishment, Manayunk.

The Dead and Injured.

The dead are:

Miss Annie Atkinson, of Minersville; James S. Bugg, Pottsville; Fred Bowling; Margaret Devine, of Minersville; David L. Herr, ex-state senator; James Kilrain, of Tamaqua; John Streiff, of Reading, newsboy; Thomas A. Welsh, of Auburn; Clayton Hepple, baggagemaster, is missing and is believed to be under the wreck.

The following injured persons are at the hospital at Phœnixville and other places:

Charles Billig, Tamaqua; W. H. Becker, Pottstown; Charles E. Burfield, Bemovo, Pa.; James H. Chilson, Reading; M. D. Cowen, Harrisburg; Ella Devine, Philadelphia; Wilfred Eastburn, Reading; Thomas Fitch, engineer of express; Bernard Gallagher, fireman; W. H. Gerlacher, Tamaqua, Pa.; Hiram Grotenclaft, Reading; Wilbur Haley, Allentown; Annie Kemp, Hamburg, Pa.; Mrs. M. C. Leppert; Bertie G. Leppert; Mary C. Pretzman, Pottstown; H. C. Printz, Reading; S. D. Rhoads, Phœnixville, Pa.; H. Rosefelt, New York; R. F. Shrack, brakeman; Annie E. Sides, Reading, Pa.; William Smith, Pottsville; Miss Lizzie Smith, Phœnixville; Miss Mary Tees, Valley Forge; Dr. Joseph R. Wright, Phœnixville; John E. Wynecoop, Port Kennedy, Pa.

There is considerable mystery connected with the cause of the disaster. General Superintendent Bonnaso said that the train dispatcher at Penecyd had been notified to give the freight train orders to wait there until the southbound express had passed. The freight did wait at Penecyd until the accommodation had passed, as was the usual custom, but then pulled out. Whether or not the train dispatcher delivered the order for the freight to wait for the express is a mystery, but it is thought he did not. The Sunday rush of coal trains had blocked the southbound track, and all trains were running over the northbound track. The coroner's jury, which will begin the inquest at Norristown as soon as quarters can be arranged, will fix the responsibility, and until then it is believed the person responsible will not be directly known.

Seven Men Dashed to Death.

SPOKANE, Wash., Oct. 25.—While a large force of men were engaged in laying track across false work of the second bridge west of Columbia the entire structure gave way, dashing them on the rocks sixty feet below, crushing a number of workmen out of all human semblance.

As near as can be learned the killed are Conductor John Leonard, John Johnson, James A. Wright, Dan Walcott, Nels Nelson, Joseph Brady and A. Olsen.

The fatally wounded are J. M. Millmore, Gus Nelson, J. J. Campbell and J. Linville. Several others were severely injured, but will recover.

The Weather.

The weather will continue cool and fair.

THE BOSTONS ARE CHAMPIONS.

The Clevelands Didn't Win a Single Game of the Series.

BOSTON, Oct. 25.—The world's championship series is closed. The Bostons did not give the Clevelands the satisfaction of winning a single game, and President Robinson and his aggregation have the Hub for their western home soldier and wiser men. The Boston players will have well stocked wardrobes to parade the streets in this winter, and for with the good money of the aspiring young men from Cleveland, who bet freely on the result of the contest. The westerners have a great team, but the players did not appear to have the nerve of the beanesters. In the last two games the Clevelands started off with what was almost a sure winning lead, but in the face of defeat the home team braced up, and by remarkable stick work won out both games handily.

The last game was almost a repetition of the contest of Saturday. The Clevelands by the prettiest kind of batting, combined with good base running, piled up three runs, and with their crack pitcher, Cy Young, in the box, felt confident of at least one victory. The Bostons, however, sized up "Farmer" Young nearly as successfully as they did Clarkson on Saturday, and out of the eight runs scored they earned six.

Bennett, besides catching a fine game, batted hard and timely, knocking out a clean home run. Duffy also, whose batting heretofore has done so much toward winning the championship, again lined out the ball for two bases, and hit for a double. Childs, Burkett and McKean did the best batting for the Clevelands.

The former has played a remarkable game throughout the series, both at the bat and in the field, and has upheld his reputation as the leading League batsman.

The vociferous rooting given and yodled after the game, the losing players joining in the congratulations. A grand benefit is to be given the world's champions, followed by a banquet, at which suitable medals commemorative of the championship will be presented to each player. The Clevelands left for home last evening. Score:

	R.	H.	E.
Cleveland	0 0 3 0 0 0 0 0	0	3 10 4

WHAT WILL SHE WEAR?

SOME POINTS ON PREVAILING AND COMING STYLES.

Fashion's Decrees for Fall and Winter. An Embroidered Russian Blouse—Revival of the Garibaldi Waist—Plaids Here Drop Their Stripe Idea.

The prevalence of light-colored wool costumes this season will be in marked contrast to the equally fashionable deeptoned gowns and jackets. In addition to flecked cloth and the lighter Venetian cloths, there will be worn plain camel's hair costumes very rough of surface, frequently lined across with bars of raised, shaggy camel's-hair in contrasting colors. Light-colored French felt hats and bonnets will be worn en suite. There also appear again neat and stylish head coverings made of cloth matching the costume, these largely in toque or turban shapes—toques, on the whole, still taking the lead.

Handsome Russian Blouse.

This blouse is made of white linen stamine. The model blouse was lined with firm cotton material and is the length of a yoke, and fastened in front. A narrow bias stripe finishes off the lower edge of the wide sleeve, drawn in below with a piece of elastic 8-8½ inch long, the sleeve being then slipped up above the elbow. A waist band set on to the pleats at the back fits the blouse to the figure. For the embroidery crewel wool is used, this being worked into the foundation with a piece of canvas put over first.

The polished border is fifteen stitches wide. On the back a tree is embroidered and the stem of the tree gives a continued border for the stand up collar, made separately, which is tacked to the front of the calico collar set or onto the blouse itself and hooked over this at the back. Quantity of material required—1½ yards 1¼ yards wide, or 1 yard 36 inches wide.

THE CURIOSITY SHOP

THE JUDAS TREE.

Various Species of This Tree, Which Owes Its Name to a Popular Tradition.

A species of the Judas tree grows in the south of Europe, and popular tradition has called it Judas tree, from a tradition that it was the tree on which Judas hung him self after having betrayed the Saviour. It is said the flowers were white before, but, as if the tree itself was shocked at the enormity of the offense of Judas, its flowers forever afterward became red as blood. The European species is called Cercis siliquastrum. In America there is also a species of Judas tree, which is Cercis canadensis. It makes a considerable sized tree, although usually seen more as a bush or shrub. It very much resembles the Judas tree of Europe, but the flowers are paler, and there are of course some other botanical differences.

From Japan we have now another species, or rather it has been in cultivation for the past twenty years, more or less. It is not yet so well known as it deserves to be, according to Meehan's Monthly, which says that it is more dwarf than the forms of Europe and America, and has much larger, thicker and more shining foliage. The two species described seem to be a mass of flowers in early spring, and on this account one has been called in America "red bud tree," but their beauty does not compare with that of this Japanese species. The illustration here reproduced from the journal quoted shows how densely and thickly the flowers cover the whole leafless portion of the plant. Flowering in early spring, the leaves push out after the flowers have faded.

Handshaking.

An English writer has this to say on the subject of handshaking:

We are credibly informed that hand shaking, which is supposed to be a proof of friendly feeling, first came into fashion in the time of Henry II. To that time our ancestors were more affectionate in their greetings than we, their colder natured descendants, embracing and kissing each other much in the same fashion as one neighbor on the other side of the channel and in Italy are accustomed to do at the present moment. The historian who is pleased to date the commencement of hand shaking in that of Henry II's time is perhaps in error, as it is more probable the close embrace of acquaintances began to be discontinued later on, perhaps when Louis XIV first introduced into this country. This certainly seems a probable surmise, as even in our present year of grace a man who has been made the bearer of a cheap cigar or a snuff box is certainly not the most embraceable object in the world, and only think what the tobacco of Raleigh's time must have been like! However, whether Henry II did or did not begin the fashion of "shaking hands," it is now rapidly becoming over done in England.

First Appearance of Envelopes.

It is within the recollection of older readers when a letter was so folded and sealed as to leave a blank outside, whereon to write the address. This was before envelopes came into general use. It is difficult to understand why envelopes came into common use at so late a day, for they were devised and in some instances made use of at a very early period. The first appearance seems to have been in France, where letters were inclosed in envelopes as long ago as the reign of Louis XIV. In the last half of the Seventeenth century Specimens dating as far back as 1653 have been preserved to this day, and a letter written, sealed and addressed by the most Christian king himself to his natural son, the Count of Soulouse, in April, 1706, was inclosed in a envelope, and is still in existence. Other envelopes possessing historical value are those which contain letters written by Mme. de Pompadour in 1760, by Frederick the Great in 1770 and by Sir James Ogilvie to the British secretary of state in 1666.

Topical Songs.

The invasion of Lydia Thompson and her English blondes in 1868 was followed by a deluge of English music hall songs. About this time the topical song began to appear. Tony Pastor and his imitators preferring that sort of composition. In the early seventies the big successes were "Little Fraud," "I Feel So Awful Jolly When the Band Begins to Play," "Champagne Charlie," "Mulligan Guards," "The Cottage by the Sea," "Killarney," "Goodly Charlie," "Ten Thousand Miles Away" and "Jenalie, the Pride of Kildare." Then came "My Gal," "Strolling on the Sands," "There's a Letter in the Candle," and since then the quantity has increased and the quality decreased in the same ratio.

Death Watches.

The mysterious nocturnal rappings supposed by the superstitious to foretell death are occasioned by insects belonging to the genus anobium, of which several species figure as "death watches." The larvæ live in wood, in which it gnaws without giving sign of its presence, and from which the perfect insect emerges after a few weeks' passing in the meantime through the chrysalis stage—by boring a cylindrical hole to the surface. One species not only attacks wood, but also books, natural history collections, dry bread, etc. Another species feigns death so persistently that it remains immovable when plunged into water, or exposed to fire, and will burn alive rather than betray itself.

Printers' Devil.

The origin of the term printers' devil is ascribed to the fact that in the early days of printing the apprentice's duties included the taking of the forms when huge contain ing ink or besmeared with it. In the performance of this work his face and hands became so daubed with the ink that in appearance he suggested the devil

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

ROBERT AND THE APPLES.

A Lesson in Life Illustrated with a Plate of Fruit.

One day Robert's father saw him playing with some rude, unmannerly boys. He had observed for some time a change for the worse in his son and now he knew the cause. He was very sorry, but he said nothing to Robert at the time. In the course of the evening he brought in six rosy checked apples, put them on a plate and presented them to Robert. He was much pleased at his father's kindness and thanked him.

"You must lay them aside for a few days that they may become mellow," said his father, and Robert cheerfully placed the plate with the apples in his mother's storeroom. Just as he was putting the fruit aside his hand slid on the plate a seventh apple, which was quite rotten.

"But, father," said Robert, "the rotten apple will spoil all the others."

"Do you think so? Why should not the fresh apples rather make the rotten one fresh?" said his father, and with these words shut the door of the room. Eight days afterward he asked his son to open the door and take out the apples. But what a sight presented itself! The six apples which had been so sound and rosy checked were now quite rotten and worthless.

"Father," cried he, "did I not tell you that the bad apple would spoil the good ones? You did not listen to me."

"My boy," said the father, "have I not told you often that the company of bad boys will make you bad? Yet you did not listen to me. See in the state of the bad apple that which will happen to you if you keep company with rough, bad boys."

Robert did not forget the lesson. When any bad boys asked him to play with them he thought of the rotten apples and kept apart from them.

A Guessing Story.

I cannot say that we belong to a very old family, for we have been in existence little more than fifty years; but if it is more important to have had a useful existence than a long one we can claim that merit. We have spread and multiplied wonderfully in our time, so that you may find us in all parts of the globe—even in remote and uncivilized ones.

We vary in complexion even more than human beings, for you will find us of all colors—pink, red, blue, green, emerald yellow—as well as of various tints and shades of these hues. Like yourselves, we belong to different nationalities, ranks and classes, and are "worth more or less from time to commercial point of view. In disposition we are particularly clinging, and so faithful and constant that if you give us a companion to the most distant parts of the world we should stick firmly to our charge, and it is the rarest thing for one of us to leave his post.

As to our personal endowments, we are, to begin with, generally good looking and present a pleasant appearance. We have a great taste for pictorial art, especially for portraits. Some of us are very fond of and belong to the highest circles, being likenesses of the crowned heads and rulers of almost all countries on the globe.

Besides a taste for art, you will find we have some knowledge of history and geography, and I have known children who have learned a good deal of both from us. Our connection with government is a close one, and we are able greatly to increase its revenues. Our life is one of self devotion, for there is not one of us who would not sacrifice our personal appearance and our future usefulness. Yet not the latter entirely, since after we have worked on your behalf many of those who take high rank as distinguished foreigners have special homes prepared for their reception, and are introduced with pride and pleasure by the people who have placed them there to all their friends and relations.

For the benefit of those who have not yet guessed it I sign the family name—POSTAGE STAMP.

Character Crosswords.

Badend and Endend are rival towns,
As wide as the world asunder;
And yet they're as close in a certain way
As Ida is close to Ada—that's plainer;
Close as the feet to the way they tread,
Or the deed to be thought behind it;
Close as bread to bake—"So" we said,
Or the cup to the wine that inebriated.
—Exchange.

Bad and Badly.

Discriminate between bad and badly. Don't make the mistake so frequently made of saying "I feel very badly." Use "bad." Badly is an adverb and should not be employed. One might as well say "I feel happily." Instead of "happy."

How Little Dot Taught Trim Manners.

Mistress Dot, so neat and fair,
Rosy cheeked and laughter eyed,
And dog Trim, with shaggy hair,
On the floor sit side by side.

DOTTIE MURMURS, "LADIES FIRST."

There is milk in Dottie's cup—
Trim is a stranger to her share,
Fearing Dot may drink it up,
Leaving not a drop to spare.

Doggie gives a longing look,
For he likes milk as well as Dot;
But, with air of grave rebuke,
Dottie murmurs, "Ladies first."

AFTER MIKE.

Corny Loses His Tobacco and Wants Redress.

"Lem me t'roo de railin. I wanter talk wid de Judge."

A small sized boy of eleven years, with a scant outfit of clothes and a liberal allowance of freckles, stood impatiently pulling at the gate that separates the public seats from the business part of Jefferson Market court. The most noticeable thing about him was a large bald spot on the top of his head, which appeared particularly white in contrast with the autumnal coloring of the bushy hair surrounding it. Officer Connolly opened the gate, and the boy walked up to Justice White.

"Yer honor," said he, "I wanter git a warrant for One Legged Mike."

"What has One Legged Mike done to you?" asked Justice White, smiling.

"He swiped me chaw."

"Did what?" inquired the justice, wish a surprised look.

"He cooped me chaw. Lifted me feed. Are you on?"

"Oh, you mean that he stole your lunch, I suppose."

"Cut on your life, judge. 'Twuzn't no grub. 'Twuz me chawin mixtcher, see? Me an Mike wuz pals, but we ain't pals no more. Any kid wot snatches me 'baccy headed when I'm sleepin ain't no pal o' mine. Dat's a sure winner too."

"Yer see, judge, yesterday I found a big plug o' good chaw in. It was kinder strong alone, so I buyed two sticks o' gum an' chawed her altogether. Say, judge, did yer ever mix terbacker an gum? Well, she beats some of a kind, an dat's a straight tip. I was sittin down by the dock at Clarkson street, where me an Mike does most of our breakin, chawin away fer beat the band. Mike, he comes up hustlin along on his one crutchy, an sez he:

"'Wotcher chawin?'

"'Dat's my biz,' sez I.

"'Gimme a chanst to find out,' sez he.

"'I ain't got no kick to lent it,' sez I, an I quit on plugged a spider crawdin along a piling.

"'Say, sez Mike, 'I kin beat dat shot.'

"'Not said no annymishun off'n dis chawin can't, sez I.

"I'll bet dat cheaper yet,' sez he, shakin his crutchy, an he went off mad an sat down ter watch some of dese here plumber fellers wot went ter workin somethin down by de Canard line pier.

"I got sleepy, an I crawled under a pile o' boards an closed me peeps. But first I chucked me chawin mixtcher in me back hair fer safe keepin. Nex' t'ing I knowed one o' dem plumber fellers had me by der neck shakin me till I cud feel me finger nails on de floor.

"'I'll learn yer ter swipe my tin shears,' sez he, an he give me a biff in de jaw dat knocked me faces onesided. When I got up I felt kinder cold on me head. I put me hand up dere, an say, judge, I hope ter die in a soor pipe if de top o' my nut wuzn't as bald as de inside o' yer hand. I cone purty near fallin down, I was so surprized. Sez I to meself, 'Dat plumber fellur mustter snuk you,' sez I, 'fer take der hair offen yer head like dat, Corny dic Ginn.'

"Den I looked out on de dock, an I see One Legged Mike sittin dere workin his mug like de walkin beam on a ferryboat, and spittin out red hair at every chaw. Say, judge, d'yer catch on ter what I'm mang dere? He swiped dem plumber fellers' shears, an cut dat chaw off. Dere he sat, chawin up my gum an my terbacker and my back hair. 'N den I got licked fer swipin de shears.

As quick as I got dat idee inter me t'inkin box I was mad fer keeps. I was sure. I made a jump for Mike, but he just dropped offen de dock an swum off. Dey ain't no use, judges, tryin to catch a one legged feller in de water, and dat's a safe bet. Dey is twicet as strong in one leg as anoder feller is in two, an dey can swim like a tomcod. When it comes to swimmin, Mike was a sure winner, an I knowed it. So I staid on de dock an I see, 'Some out here an I'll spoil yer complexshun,' sez I.

"Mike lifted his crutchy outer der water an he sez:

"'Yer badlheaded bedbug.' T'ink of his gives me dat, judge, after him cuttin me hair hisself. Wuzn't dat a frost?

"Say, but dat made me tired. I went up ter de Charles street station ter see de sargeant, an sez, 'Serge, I want yer ter send a copper ter pull in One Legged Mike fer swipin me chaw.'

"Wot d'yer t'ink de sargeant sez, judge? He sez: 'Say, young feller, yer talkin too fast. Now run away an play.' Dat's de steer he giv me, judge. Dat's straight too—sure. I couldn't take no such guff as dat, so I come here to get the warrant."

"Let me see," said Justice White when Corny had finished his statement. "I think I remember seeing you here before. You said your name was McGinn, didn't you?"

"Oh, no, yer honor, dat was my brudder wat wuz here before. I ain't neter"——

"Yet that boy that was up before me for stealing apples from a stand on West street a few weeks ago looked very much like you. Just wait until I have the records looked into."

But Corny, who had been uneasily moving toward the side door, at this point made a dash through it, leaving One Legged Mike's warrant to be procured at some other time.—New York Sun.

The Carelessest of Creatures.

He came home late last night a bit tired from a busy day's work, and his wife waited until he had got off his overcost and sat down.

"Did you get that piece of silk I asked you to bring up tonight?" she inquired, seeing that he had not laid it before her.

"Yes, dear: I left it out there in the hall."

"Did you get the pins?"

"Yes, dear."

"And the ribbon?"

"Yes."

"And Bobbie's shoes?"

"Yes."

"And a whisk broom?"

"Yes."

"And a wick for the kitchen lamp?"

"Yes."

"And some matches?"

"Yes: they are with the other bundles."

"And did you see the man about the coal?"

"Yes: it will be up Monday."

"And the man to fix the grate in the dining room?"

"Yes; he's coming as soon as he can."

"Did you see Mrs. Smith about the sewing society meeting?"

"She said she'd come."

"And—and—oh, yes, did you get a new shovel for the kitchen stove?"

"N—n—no," he hesitated; "I forgot it."

"Good gracious!" she exclaimed, "what did you do that for? You know we needed that shovel, and I told you about it the very first thing when you went down town this morning. To think we just men are the most careless and carelessest creatures that ever lived." And she flopped out to see about supper.—Detroit Free Press.

This Date in History—Oct. 25.

1492—Columbus landed on the second island and much the same scenes occurred as on the first; this day it was discovered that mosquitoes are to canoes very good aids to notify Indians on other islands that the Spaniards were coming; after some hours on the second island they sailed to a third, reaching it after dark.

1825—The ship United States, of 44 guns, Commodore Stephen Decatur, captured the British frigate Macedonian.

1861—The main body of the army of the Potomac being completed, it was reviewed and started toward Richmond.

1864—General Pleasanton with cavalry attacked the rear of General Price's army on the banks of the Osage river, taking 600 prisoners and 8 guns.

Not on a Cash Basis.

Says a correspondent: "Your native will commend me to the coast of Maine. As I was sailing recently along the shore of Long Island from Castine to Belfast we passed a limekiln. 'What is that?' said one of the passengers of the Electa. 'That is a limekiln,' said Scott, the general factotum of the little steamer. 'Do they make money there?' asked the same. 'No,' said Scott, 'they make lime.'"—New York Tribune.

"Yes, dearest," she sighed, "but the locksmiths get there just the same."—Detroit Free Press.

Hold the Fort.

"Are you acquainted with Miss Gasaway?" asked Gus De Smith of Colonel Yerger.

"Yes, indeed I am. What elegant English she uses."

"Yes; her tongue is her forte, so to speak."

—The North Plainfield fire alarm whistle has not been blown at seven o'clock for several evenings. The members of the fire department say it should be blown regularly so they will know that it is in good order.

—Don't forget to go and hear John S. Gibson at the Crescent Rink to-morrow night. Winfield S. Chamberlain, the Republican candidate for Congress from the Eighth District, and Hon. George T. Parrott will also be there.

—It is said that the Common Council are considering the advisability of renumbering the city under the block system, the same as used in Philadelphia. If this should be done it would be a great improvement upon the present system.

—A regular class in reading was started Monday evening at the Boys' Club, through the kindness of Misses Lewis, Hughes, Dowd and Smith, from the Y. W. C. T. U. Mr. Clarence Titsworth has taken the scroll saw class for Monday evening. There are now four evenings devoted to scroll saw; two to reading; two to writing, and one to singing.

—Rotten tree stumps may be easily removed in this way: With a one-and-a-quarter-inch auger bore a hole in the centre of stump about 18 inches deep, and put in 20 ounces of saltpeter, fill the hole with water and plug it tight. In the Spring take out the plug, pour into the hole a half-pint of crude petroleum and set it on fire. The stump will burn and smoulder to the end of the roots, leaving nothing but ashes.

—All young men interested in the study of English branches (for foreign speaking young men) shorthand, bookkeeping, mechanical drawing, singing, light gymnastics, arithmetic or algebra should apply at the Y. M. C. A. rooms without delay. A two dollar membership in the Association entitles to any or all of these classes, with the exception of short hand, for which there is an additional charge of three dollars.

—Look at the working girl as she stops in her work to wipe the perspiration from her brow. She is doing it with a handkerchief made of material which the Free Trade "reformer" claims is "taxed" five cents a yard on account of wool. But even this working girl knows better, for she bought that material herself, and it cost her at retail only four cents a yard. American women, be they in the factory or in the mansion, are far too intelligent to be deluded by any such threadbare falsehood as the tariff-tax story of the Free Trade demagogue. And backed by their arguments American fathers and brothers and husbands will see to it that the party of falsehood and calumny be given another four years vacation on the eighth day of the coming November.

POLITICAL PICKLES.

Free trade is ruining England. Why have it here?

Editor John S. Gibson of Newark is to speak at the Crescent Rink to-morrow night.

The last time that a Presidential election was held on Nov. 8th was when Abraham Lincoln was re-elected in 1864.

This is the prize market of the world, and the Democrats want to throw it open to the competition of underpaid Europe. —Gov. McKinley.

It is said that the United States Supreme Court rendered a decision in 1875, declaring Protection unconstitutional. No such decision of the United States Supreme Court in 1885, or at any time, has declared Protection unconstitutional.

No veto message, no ostentatious orders to the attorney-general, no "hedging" of any kind can do away with the simple fact that the price of coal in New Jersey has advanced one dollar per ton, and every man knows when he pays his coal bill that he owes this extortion to the Democratic party. — Unionist Gazette.

"The British system of Free Trade would reduce the wages of every laboring man in the United States, the wages of every employe who performs service in another within a strict sense, as workmen, and when the wages are reduced it is proposed to further cheat the laborer and employe by paying him off in a depreciated currency; that is where the Democratic leaders would put this country if they were honest when they made their platform."—McKinley at Buffalo.

John Kean, Jr., is making a personal canvass of every county in New Jersey. He tells the people in unequivocal language what he will do if he becomes Governor of the State. His clearly defined attitude is in marked attitude is in marked courrast with the continued silence of Judge Werts. But in leaving the people ignorant of what he will do, Judge Werts is simply following the characteristic tactics of his party. He probably does not know. He will wait until after election day, when, if he finds himself chosen Governor, he will take his orders from the bosses.

GEORGE T. PARROTT.

The Re-Nominated Surrogate for Union County.

The Republicans of Union county expressed their confidence in Surrogate George T. Parrott by re-nominating him, at their Convention, held in Elizabeth, Thursday last, for that office. In announcing the re-nomination, Mr. Parrott said:

"The nomination for surrogate was accepted by me under a promise that if elected I would endeavor to so administer the office that there should be no occasion for regret and that my utmost effort should be to faithfully and impartially perform all its duties, and to be of some service to my fellow citizens. It seemed to me then, and I am now the more impressed with the fact, that the importance of the office of surrogate is often under-estimated. The administration of the office necessarily comes near to the home in time of affliction. The interests of those thrown upon their own resources when least able to act for themselves, and who, with limited in its judicial functions the proper administration of the office requires a considerable knowledge of the law. It is strictly business office and in no sense a political one; it is without patronage, it has no political significance, with it, no matter can it become an important factor in any political party; those whom the inexorable law of death removes there come with little concern as to the question of politics or parties; it demands an administration that will best conserve the interests of widows and orphans; time brought into touch relations with the office, a fact demonstrating that an individual life there should be more of personal interest taken in the administration of the affairs of this office than in that of any other statement of much greater importance.

"In thirty-five years since the creation of the county of Union; the accumulation of papers in the office during that time has necessarily been large. It has been my earnest endeavor to increase the efficiency of the office and to put its records in such shape as to be of convenient reference to the public. The work which I have been ably assisted by the present deputy. Experience with affairs of the office has suggested some further changes and improvements that can be made with advantage to the public service, and which should be made, but for lack of time yet remain uncompleted. It is a source of gratification to say that I have never heard a word of complaint with respect to the administration of the office during my term, and I trust that no occasion for any has ever been given.

"Your expression of confidence in tendering to me a renomination comes as an unsought honor, and for which all this office acceptably have been recognized you, and that, I assure you, is only less gratifying to me than it would be to have the like endorsement of my fellow citizens attested by their ballots at the coming election.

"If re-elected I can only promise as I did before, that I will to the best of my ability faithfully and impartially perform the duties of the office and endeavor, by some service in it to the citizens of this county. I thank you very kindly for this renewed evidence of your confidence and esteem, and accept the renomination so generously and unanimously tendered."

Making Practical Use of the Once Dangerous Treasury Surplus.

[From the Philadelphia (Pa.) North American.]

The loss to the Treasury by the free listing of the McKinley tariff, as well as by reduced duties, exceeds fifty millions. Yet under Mr. Harrison's policy about twice as much of the public debt as been paid as was paid under Mr. Cleveland and the dreadful surplus of $100,000,000 has been disposed of. How? Well, by paying off the debt made necessary by such copperheads as Adlai Stevenson.

CORRESPONDENCE.

A WELL-KNOWN PLAINFIELDER IN NEW MEXICO.

An Interesting Letter Describing his Trip.

NO. I.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—

THE country I am now in, New Mexico, is the land where the ancients expected to find the fountain of perpetual youth, gold growing on bushes, etc.

I had an eventful trip here and I enjoyed it very much.

Through the States of Illinois, Indiana, and Kansas, the fields for miles were flooded, the water in many places being over the fences, and nearly up to the railroad tracks, which are elevated.

The suburbs of Chicago were under water, and we were delayed several hours before we could enter the city.

It is quite a sight to see the men working in Jackson Park at night by electric lights. The Fair buildings are progressing rapidly and will all be finished in time.

I saw the new elevated railroad, and several of the new sixteen story buildings while in the city.

A big washout on the Sante Fe road wrecked a train a few days before, by which seven lives were lost and many people injured. The train I was on had almost to crawl along in many places on account of weak bridges, etc.

The Sante Fe runs 400 miles across the State of Kansas, striking all the principal cities.

I saw the coal fields, the coal, as a rule, being near the surface. It is of a soft variety, but answers the purpose very well. We passed apple orchards with hundreds of trees, all looking thrifty.

I had a long talk with a politician of the People's Party. How he ran down the old political parties! He showed me the farms which he said are now selling for ten dollars an acre, that brought thirty dollars, or more, a few years ago.

The farmers of Kansas have certainly had it hard, but I think they are picking up, and will continue to do so. Much of their trouble has been due to their going into debt at most, ruinous rates of interest, the idea being that it would help them expand their business better. This would be all right if there were no set backs. The set backs cause the trouble.

An accident occurred on the road beyond La Junta, Colorado. A freight train was wrecked and then got afire.

We were delayed at La Junta, on account of the wreck, ten hours. The passengers danced to relieve the monotony of things, a violin and harmonica being all the music we could scrape up.

I spent a short time in Kansas City. The new Armour stock yards are well worth seeing. They are the largest in the world. They kill five million head of stock yearly.

I spent one day in Trinidad, Colorado. The scenery is quite pretty. Several nice stone buildings were going up, and things looked flourishing.

GETTING TOO MUCH OF ONE TUNE.

On arriving at Clayton, New Mexico, I was pretty tired. I went to one of the two small hotels in the place and tried to get some sleep. Two fellows in the saloon adjoining kept playing "Peek-a-boo" steadily on a violin and guitar. They kept up that tune for a long time. I don't admire that tune now as much as I did.

Clayton has a population of about 200. It has six or seven saloons, and is a pretty tough place, take it everyway. It used to be the greatest cattle shipping port in the territory. But the man who owns the creek near the town charges for watering the herds, and, on that account, they dont ship from there as much as they did. What they need is free water.

It is the greatest wool shipping point in the territory. They have very large wool sheds, and quite large stock yards.

The town does an immense business, people coming 200 miles for supplies. Two large mercantile houses have a monopoly of the business. They sell about everything imaginable.

I hunted up the only livery man in the place, and we started for the Foster ranch. We had a fine team and buckboard and went a humming over the prairies.

For miles we didn't see a house or a single person.

After riding several hours we found we were off the main road and thoroughly lost. We rode around the prairie for an hour or so and finally struck a Mexican herder. He showed us the right road, and we went along tired and hungry. Plainfield's genial ex-mayor, L. V. F. Randolph, has two ranches here about twenty miles apart, both on nice running creeks. He has two others interested with him.

Mr. Foster, president of the company, lives on one ranch, while Mr. Carter has charge of the other. These ranches are nicely located and have good buildings on them.

On the ranges the company have several thousand head of cattle. At the ranch on Pierce creek they have nearly 200 head of choice Hereford.

In the last few years they have turned seventy fine bulls loose on the range.

The scenery of Northern New Mexico is beautiful. A level prairie, indented in every direction by deep canyons, many of which have creeks running through them. The spurs of the "Rockies" can be seen in the distance. Timber is scarce but fine cotton woods grow along the creeks. The houses are built of stone, and adobe bricks, and are one story high.

The roofs are flat, and each room opens out doors.

The Mexicans have mud floors in their houses.

Along the creeks there is quite a Mexican population. They have large families, and all the children marry and take up claims near the old folks. They are very kind to their old folks and very clannish. CHARLES SANDFORD.

Contesting her Will.

Mrs. Annie E. Bond of Newark died last May, leaving about $6,000 to the Home for Aged Women. Her brother, J. Lot Marshal, and her nephew, Harry Marshall, both of this city, yesterday contested her will in the Orphans Court of Essex county on the grounds of mental incapacity, and asked for adjournment.

Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh, of this city appeared in the Orphans' Court yesterday for the contestants. His principal witness was not a resident of the State, however, and he desired a postponement and that the case should be certified to the Circuit Court for trial by jury. William E. Guild opposed the proposition and claimed that the estate was neglected. It was agreed that the executor should act temporarily as administrator, and witnesses were produced to prove the execution of the will. They could not throw any light on Mrs. Bond's mental condition at the time it was made, and testified that the will was witnessed by the executor, Daniel Lawrence.

They Meet by Wire.

Brooklyn has an organization, said to be the only one of the kind in the country, in the shape of an amateur telegraph club. It is known as the Phenix-Morse Telegraph Club, and was organized several years ago by a dozen young men employed as telegraph operators in various establishments.

Since then they have more than doubled their number, have admitted several ladies as members, and have opened headquarters in a flat at the corner of Marcy avenue and Fulton street. Here they have what is practically a central office, from which wires run to the houses of the various members. Meetings are held on stated evenings, but the members remain in their respective homes and carry on their conversations by telegraph. The routine business is transacted in this way: Votes are taken on various propositions, the president's rulings are transmitted over the wires, and then the members start in and tell stories for the rest of the evening.

There are practical jokers in the club, who insist upon arousing their fellow members at very early hours in the morning to ask ridiculous questions and make known remarkable dreams. The club is soon to be incorporated.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Are We to Have Great Estates?

A writer in an agricultural paper says that in the early settlement of New England the pioneers made the mistake of thinking they could get a living off a small bit of ground, as many of them had been accustomed to do in Europe. But the land was not rich enough for that, so after the first cream of it was skimmed off it was found that the little mountain farms of Vermont and the adjacent region were not large enough to afford a modern farmer all the comforts he required. Consequently the buildings were abandoned and the farms were thrown together, gradually making one or two out of what had been half a dozen. The empty buildings remain deserted, and the cry goes forth of abandoned farms. This is the writer's explanation.

But this does not cover the ground. The fact stands that while farms close to cities are being cut up into town lots, the reverse process takes place forty miles away from them. As a city man accumulates a fortune in trade or manufacturing, the ambition seizes him to become possessed of a farm. He visits some rural neighborhood where, owing to lack of pluck and hustling with their brains, the natives are just able to keep soul and body together. He buys up several of these dilapidated farms at a price which astonishes the natives, and they drop out of possession.

The rich man pours his dollars out like water upon his new possession, and models it after the plan of one of the great country estates of Great Britain—several square miles of land occupied by tenant farmers, with a magnificent central mansion for the proprietor. In cases not a few the former owners of the land become the tenants of the new rich men and never after possess ground of their own. A little ready money and the not being obliged to use their own head to make plans is the bait that lures them on to change from independent land owners to a mere agricultural tenantry. In one case in Ulster county N. Y., sixteen farms were bought by one man and thrown together to constitute the great model farm which is the show place of Wallkill valley. One can hardly blame the rich city man. If anybody is to blame it is the small farmers themselves. But this process goes on steadily in the older parts of the country.

Humanitarian Church Work.

The church everywhere seems arousing to the necessity of moving on the works of the enemy from the ethical and sociological side. One of the latest organizations for this purpose is the Christian Social union, an Episcopalian society, which held its first annual convention lately in Baltimore. The general purpose of the union is to promulgate the theory and practice the doctrine that the moral and ethical teachings of Christ are to be the absolute authority among mankind. Professor Richard T Ely, the well known sociological writer, is one of the prime workers of the union. He resigned his place as a member of the faculty of Johns Hopkins university at Baltimore to become professor of political economy in the University of Wisconsin.

It is certain that the Christian churches have taken a new and rousing departure within the past half dozen years. They seemed suddenly to realize that if the church was to help redeem the world and bring the kingdom of the New Jerusalem to earth they must take hold of practical humanitarian work, and all the wisdom, all the intelligence of the best sociological scholars of the time must be brought to bear on the problem of making mankind clean, comfortable, healthy and honest. To do this they have concluded that something else is necessary than preaching a theological sermon on Sunday. The Salvation Army perhaps is to be credited with setting the present wave in motion. The Baltimore convention advanced so far in its work of promoting Christian union as to adopt a constitution permitting any person who belonged to the Episcopal church to belong to this Christian Social union.

Professor Elliott Coues naturally fell into the vacant place of John C. Bundy as chairman of the committee to arrange for the World's Psychic Science congress. Dr. Coues' former place of vice chairman has been accepted by Professor Richard Hodgson, the young English man who investigated Mme. Blavatsky's proceedings in India and reported to the Society of Psychic Research his fixed conclusion that madame performed fraudulent miracles. Mr. Hodgson is now in Boston helping the American Society for Psychic Research to hunt spooks of all kinds to their lair.

A story that ought to be true, if it is not, is that the Paris glove manufacturers use up all the skins of dogs that are killed by the police, tanning the hides in four days by electricity and making them into fine gloves. Can they use catskins in this way, and cannot the industry be introduced into America?

Read this from Charles Kingsley, "If you want to be miserable, think about yourself, about what you want, what you like, what respect people ought to pay you and what people think of you."

THE ARENA OF POLITICS

Senator Quay in Conference with Republican Managers.

THE DEMOCRATIC COUNCIL BOARD.

A New Feature of Which Senator Gorman Is the Moving Spirit—Senator Hill Delivers His First Speech in Tammany Hall's Historic Wigwam.

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—Although the number of callers at the national Republican headquarters was unusually large, business was practically suspended owing to the president's bereavement. The building was draped, a flag hung at half mast and all members of the committee at headquarters telegraphed expressions of sympathy to the president and his family. The following circular bearing upon the death of Mrs. Harrison has been issued:

NATIONAL REPUBLICAN HEADQUARTERS, NEW YORK, Oct. 25.

Mrs. Harrison, the devoted wife of the president, died at the executive mansion at forty minutes after 1 o'clock Tuesday morning, and will be buried at Indianapolis on Friday, the 28th inst. As a mark of respect to the memory of the deceased, whose noble and pure life furnishes an inspiration to all wives and mothers, and as an expression of sympathy with the president and the sorrowing family, the Republican national committee desire that you suspend all street parades and campaign demonstrations until after the conclusion of the funeral ceremonies.

THOMAS H. CARTER, Chairman.

Chairman Carter, of the speakers' bureau, announces that he will make no more assignments of speakers until after Mrs. Harrison's funeral.

Among the most prominent of the callers at the Republican headquarters were ex Governor P. C. Cheney, of New Hampshire; Senator Hiscock, of New York; Hon. J. A. Scranton and Senator Quay. Senator Quay had a long conference with Chairman Carter, General Clarkson, Secretary McComas and Mr. Manley. The subject discussed was the situation in New York. Every phase of the campaign in this state was taken up, and Mr. Quay gave his views fully, making numerous suggestions as to what ought to be done to get out the full Republican vote.

Senator Hiscock, speaking of the situation in New York, said:

"I have been in different sections of the state, and the interest seems to be increasing everywhere. In my judgment we are going to poll a full Republican vote. Things look fully as well in the rural districts as they did in 1888, and the large registration is in our favor."

Hon. Charles Emory Smith, editor of the Philadelphia Press, said:

"I am more familiar with the situation in New Jersey and Delaware because I have spoken a number of times in each of these states. There is no apathy among the Republicans of these states, and there may be some surprising results in the election than a Republican would have ventured to prophesy. I have found that the Republicans are thoroughly alert and are making a fight to win."

Ex-Senator William M. Evarts has been asked by numerous citizens of Brooklyn to speak for the candidates of his party at a meeting in Brooklyn and has consented to do so. The meeting will be held at the Clermont Avenue rink on Saturday evening.

At Democratic Headquarters.

At Democratic headquarters, while emblems of mourning for Mrs. Harrison's death were displayed and expressions of regret from all present were full and sincere there was no abatement of political activity. Every day from now till election a council of the managers will be held, at which Senator Gorman will preside, and renewed efforts will be made to secure the vote of this state for Cleveland and Stevenson.

At today's council a telegram was read emanating from the western Democratic headquarters, which says that the head quarters were thronged during the past week with influential Democratic states men from all parts of the country, who brought the most encouraging tidings and added to the enthusiasm prevailing in Chicago. Among the callers named are Governors Flower, Boies, Russell, Peck of Wisconsin and Wyans of Michigan.

The headquarters reports that in the states over which it has control the out look is especially flattering. The third party movement, while complicating the situation, the telegram says, has tended to demoralize the Republicans in half a dozen states which heretofore were looked upon as solidly Republican. It asserts that the decision of the supreme court in Michigan concerning the validity of the Miner law insures the selection of not less than six Democratic electors. In Colorado, Wyoming, North Dakota, Nevada and Idaho, the telegram says, the Republican electors confront almost certain defeat. From other parts of the West equally encouraging reports have been received.

Democratic Vice Presidential Candidate Adlai Stevenson arrived in the city this evening, and will remain here several days and will speak tonight in Brooklyn. He speaks encouragingly of the north and south. Michigan, he says, will give the Democrats an electoral vote, and Alabama is sure to go Democratic.

Owing to the recent action of the policy board in refusing to allow the names of the electoral ticket of the County Democracy on the official ballot, a committee of seventeen was appointed to consider the situation.

John W. Goff, County candidate for additional surrogate, will withdraw from the ticket, and being the strongest man on the ticket, it will be followed by the withdrawal, it is said, of the entire ticket, leaving a clean field between Tammany and the straight Republican candidates.

Tammany Hall's big demonstration took place last night. Nearly 25,000 persons crowded the famous old wigwam and Fourteenth street from Broadway to Third avenue, and twelve different meetings were held simultaneously. In the hall Governor Flower presided and Senator David B. Hill was the orator of the occasion, it being the first time he had ever spoken in a building

Hill at Tammany Hall.

When he made his appearance the vast crowd rose en masse and frantically waved hats, handkerchiefs, umbrellas or anything available. It was an enthusiastic welcome. Cries came from the gallery, "I am a Democrat," with renewed cheering At length something like order having been restored, Senator Hill plunged into his speech, in which, after reviewing national issues and vigorously denouncing the system of Republican protection and the federal elections bill, he said:

What shall I say of the Democratic candidates—Cleveland and Stevenson? They both answer the Jeffersonian standard of fitness, both have been satisfactorily tested in the public service, and both represent the cherished principles of our party in this campaign and are entitled to your suffrages. Ex-President Cleveland needs no eulogy at my hands. His life and public services are familiar to the people. His administration—dignified, honest and able—has passed into history and received credit upon the country. His re-election will not only be a personal triumph, but it will also be the vindication of our principles and the triumph of the Democratic party.

I believe that a large majority of the electors of this country are in favor of the principles of the Democratic party. Our ranks are constantly increasing by accessions, and there are no desertions of any consequence to the other side. The intelligence, the conscience, the power in our current and the sober judgment of the people are with us, and the signs of the times are auspicious for success. If the contest is to be decided by New York, as now seems likely, let it be an overwhelming triumph. The Empire state expects every Democrat to do his duty.

We should not be deceived, however, by overconfidence. It is true we have carried the state for our state tickets every year for the last seven years, and last year we carried it by 49,000 majority; but we must recollect that last year the total vote cast was 157,256 votes less than that polled in 1888. The Republicans seem to possess a reserved strength in presidential elections which they exhibit at no other election, and which requires our greatest efforts to overcome.

The reforms which we demand are necessary for the safety and prosperity of the republic. The principles and the very language of the national Democratic platform of 1876, under which Samuel J. Tilden was elected to the presidency—Reform can only be had by a peaceful civic revolution. We demand a change of system, a change of administration, a change of parties, that we may have a change of measures and of men."

When Senator Hill finished he received another ovation. Lieutenant Governor Sheehan, General Daniel Sickles and Congressman Amos J. Cummings also spoke. The overflow meetings were addressed by Commissioner Gilroy, State Senator Roesch and a host of other orators.

McKinley in St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 26.—Major William McKinley, accompanied by R. C. Kerens, Colonel W. F. Schurtz and Chairman W. H. Bothwell reached here last night from Sedalia. At the depot the Commercial Men's Republican club and the members of the state committee were in waiting and escorted the party to the Lindell hotel. After supper there was a procession through the illuminated streets, and then the great throng filled the Lindell hotel parlor and dressed a large and enthusiastic assembly in Music hall. A number of prominent Republicans from different parts of the state attended the meeting.

Judge Rae for Cleveland.

ST. PAUL, Oct. 26.—Judge J. B. Rae, ex commander in chief of the Grand Army of the Republic and a lifelong Republican, created a sensation in political circles here by announcing his determination to vote for Cleveland. He gives as his reason for his change of faith a desire to express his approval of Cleveland's pension vetoes and his disapproval of the Republican tariff policy

Mr. Toomey is the recognized Hill leader of Chautauqua county.

CONDOLENCE UNIVERSAL

A World Pours Out Its Sympathy to President Harrison.

THE FUNERAL AT THE WHITE HOUSE

Private Services Will Be Held Tomorrow Morning and Then the Remains of Mrs. Harrison Will Be Taken to Indianapolis for Interment in Crown Hill.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—Gloom and sorrow sit enthroned in the White House, where lie the mortal remains of its accomplished, courteous, gentle and patient exile, while mistress. A broad ribbon of crape, with pinked ends, is tied on the bell pull of the front door of the mansion. The graceful folds fall to the stone doorsteps, and this, with the drawn blinds and the absence of the flag overhead, is the only outward sign of the presence of the great mystery within.

It has been decided to have the funeral services here held on Thursday, and then the body will be taken to Indianapolis. The casket selected for Mrs. Harrison's interment is of cedar, covered with black cloth, with oxidized silver bars along the sides and across the ends. On the top will be a silver plate bearing the inscription, "Caroline Scott Harrison, wife of Benjamin Harrison," and the date of Mrs. Harrison's death.

The funeral services will be private, as the following notice sent to the press associations will explain: "The services will be private and very simple. No invitations have been issued to the exercises in the East room, but provision will be made as far as possible to enable the relatives and personal friends of the president and Mrs. Harrison to be present."

"Lead, Kindly Light."

At the request of Dr. Hamlin, Rev. Dr. Bartlett, of the New York Avenue Presbyterian church, will assist in the services at the White House on Wednesday morning.

Dr. Bartlett was pastor of the Second Presbyterian church, Indianapolis, previous to coming to Washington, and a neighbor of the president's family. At the funeral of the wife and daughter of Secretary Tracy in the White House Mrs. Harrison was much impressed by the singing of Cardinal Newman's hymn, "Lead, Kindly Light," by the choir of St. John's church and often spoke of it. The choir will be present at the service and repeat the hymn.

Though, as already stated, it is the president's wish that there shall be no public or official display in connection with the death of Mrs. Harrison, and the funeral services both here and in Indianapolis will be as simple as the rites of the Presbyterian church will permit, there are certain ceremonial observances inseparable from the event.

All the ministers of foreign powers in this city will call personally on the secretary of state to express condolence, and will subsequently file in writing with him in permanent form the testimony of their regret. The foreign secretaries of friendly powers will in like manner convey their sympathies to our ministers and represent mirs abroad.

The vice president and Mrs Morton and the members of the cabinet and their wives being the official representatives of the president, it is understood, go in mourning, and will therefore withdraw from all participation in social events for one month.

Following the precedent established in the case of the death of Mrs. Tyler the executive departments in Washington will probably be closed on the day of the funeral ceremonies.

The Sympathy of a World.

Chief Justice Fuller and such members of the cabinet as are in Washington and those who will be able to reach here before Thursday will act as honorary pallbearers at the funeral. The active pallbearers in this city will be the attendants at the White House, and the sincere regret at the death of Mrs. Harrison is sincere and deep. They have lost a friend who took an active personal interest in the welfare of each.

The pallbearers who will officiate at Indianapolis are Dr. H. R. Allen, John B. Elam, Hugh Hannah, E. B. Martindale, General Lew Wallace, of Crawfordsville; Hon. William E. Niblack, of Vincennes; John R. Elder and Theodore P. Haughey

Messages of condolence have been received by President Harrison from all over the world. With the great flood of not and cards came a comforting note from Secretary Blaine and Mrs. Blaine.

Queen Victoria sent from her Highland castle this message:

BALMORAL, Oct. 25.

General Harrison, President of the United States, Washington:

I have heard with the deepest regret of your sad loss and sincerely sympathize with you in your grief. VICTORIA, R. I.

This was succeeded by a message from the pope, who, through Cardinal Rampolla, chief of his household, requested Cardinal Gibbons to say to President Harrison that he "sent his heartfelt condolence."

Messages from ex-President and Mrs. Cleveland were followed by telegrams of condolence from Vice President Morton, Whitelaw Reid, Thomas M. Carter, Governor Chase, of Indiana, and the state officers and other public men and officials from all over the country. The list of names of those who sent words of sympathy would fill two columns of a newspaper.

The president was aware to the publication of the many messages of condolence received, but was persuaded to allow the more important to be given out. His emotion would frequently overpower him at the brief intervals when it was necessary for him to be consulted, but he courageously tried to subdue his feelings.

Route of the Funeral Train.

Arrangements for the funeral train are being perfected by Mr. George W. Boyd, assistant general passenger agent of the Pennsylvania road, acting under the direction of Vice President Pugh and General President. The train will consist of six vestibuled Pullman cars—a composite baggage and saloon car, a dining car, a sleeping car, a compartment car, a private car and an observation car—in the latter of which the casket will be placed.

The train will leave Washington at 11.30 a. m. Thursday, and run on the following schedule: Leave Harrisburg 3.35 p. m., leave Altoona 7 p. m., leave Pittsburg (central time) 9.30 p. m., arrive Columbus 3.45 a. m.; arrive at Indianapolis 9.30 a. m.

The programme at Indianapolis includes services at the First Presbyterian church at 10.30 a. m., followed by interment in Crown Hill. After remaining a few hours at the residence of Mr. B. S. McKee the party will leave on the return trip at 5:40 o'clock Friday afternoon, reaching Washington Saturday afternoon about 6 o'clock. The party will comprise the president's personal and official family.

GENERAL CASEY'S PLANS

The Chief of Engineers Discusses Our Coast Defenses.

HIS OPERATIONS TO BE EXTENDED.

He Will Ask the Next Session of Congress for an Appropriation of $2,250,000 to Complete the Fortifications He Has in View—The Need for Guns.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—There are two distinct parts in the preparation of the seacoast fortifications, and they are intrusted to separate bureaus of the war department. The engineer corps has charge of the works, the emplacements for the guns, while the ordnance department supplies the armament for these works. Hence the estimates for the annual fortification appropriation bill come from two different officers.

The chief of engineers, General Thomas L. Casey, has already prepared his portion of the estimates for the next session of congress, and they amount to $2,250,000. Of this sum $500,000 is for going on with the purchase of sites at various points, and $1,750,000 for the construction of gun and mortar batteries upon sites that have been or may be acquired. It is not expected of course to get the whole of the amount desired or deemed important, but there are some good reasons why a liberal appropriation should be made, the general says.

As to the sites needed, it is clearly expedient that they should be acquired as soon as possible, whether by private agreement with owners or by the award of a land jury or commissioners where the value is disputed. As soon as it is known that land is wanted for the purpose the price may be expected to increase of the apparent value, and in addition there is a natural growth in the real value in the neighborhood of great seaports.

Hence it is desirable that appropriations should be available for the prompt acquisition of such sites as may be settled upon. The first annual appropriation made for this purpose was $500,000, and it is believed that this is a moderate sum to set aside each year until all the land has been acquired or its probable cost provided for.

New Gun and Mortar Batteries.

Quite as strong is the argument for a liberal appropriation toward erecting new gun and mortar batteries. The guns and mortars which are to be mounted in these batteries are fast coming along. General Flagler, in his testimony last spring before the house committee on this subject, stated that at the end of the fiscal year then under consideration, or in other words by the 30th of June next, there would be ready for mounting eighteen 8-inch guns, fourteen 10-inch and six 12-inch. Accordingly it is necessary to make ample provision for the emplacements.

And it is to be remembered that guns will continue to be turned out after June 30, 1893, and at a still more rapid rate. The capacity of the Watervliet gun factory alone will be twelve 8-inch guns, fifteen 10-inch and about seven 12-inch.

Thus at the end of the fiscal year for which provision is now to be made there would be really in all, mounted or to be mounted, thirty 8-inch, twenty-nine 10-inch and thirteen 12-inch guns, assuming the factory to be kept at work, or there would be the equivalent of these calibers. It is true that some gun batteries are now in course of erection, but they are not nearly enough to accommodate the guns thus spoken of, while in addition there are the mortars, which can be turned out with a good degree of rapidity. And then there will be coming along after a time by installments the hundred heavy guns which are to be fabricated at South Bethlehem. It is seen therefore that the proper construction of the batteries to receive this armament ought to receive liberal support, of course some sort of emplacement could be hurriedly supplied in case of need with the guns once ready, but the construction should go on methodically and properly.

To Extend Operations.

It further appears from General Casey's estimates that he now proposes to extend his operations to additional ports. The plan for distributing the appropriation which he asked for at the last session included emplacements for two 10-inch guns at Portland, Me.; two 10-inch and one 12-inch at Boston, three 8-inch, one 10-inch and two 12-inch guns and sixteen 12-inch mortars at New York; one 8-inch gun at Washington, two 10-inch and one 12-inch guns at Hampton Roads, and one 8-inch and two 12-inch guns and sixteen 12-inch mortars at San Francisco.

The work at New York, Boston and San Francisco, under this plan, is going on well, although last session's appropriations were very far short of what had been asked.

But these are the remaining points mentioned are still to be pushed, and now in addition General Casey proposes, it is said, if he receives the appropriations asked for, to begin work at Narragansett bay, Savannah and New Orleans.

It is of course highly desirable to distribute work in this way, not only in order that it may go on simultaneously at various seasons and under various conditions, but especially in order that none of our ports must in need of protection may be left entirely defenseless. Even one or two modern high power guns, supplemented by a system of torpedo defenses, might check an enemy, and as others come forward they can be mounted in turn, one or two at a time.

SOME ODD STORIES.

INTERESTING INCIDENTS RELATED BY MAJOR A. R. CALHOUN.

An Old Time Duel in the Island of Grenada—How a Novice Killed His Opponent at the First Shot—An Amiable Contest.

Sir George Young was governor of the Island of Grenada at a stirring time. He had served with distinction on the continent under Frederick the Great. He was a typical soldier, and in his manners and attire appeared to be on dress parade from the time of his rising till the moment of his going to bed.

The Englishmen on the island who composed Governor Young's council very naturally thought life too short for the observance of so much formality among gentlemen. Among the council was Dr. Parker, a gentleman with opinions of his own, and sure sooner or later to run foul of the plans of the governor. One morning during a debate, in which General Young was very dogmatic, Dr. Parker said:

"I have no reply to make. Your excellency represents the king."

"If do, sir, while in this chair, but the moment I leave it I am George Young, and very much at your service."

Explanation of words, in a "Pickwickian sense," but not at that time obtained, and men were more given to settling their personal differences by a deadly meeting than in a court of law.

At that time Colonel Williams, a Welshman, who had a good deal of contempt for the methods of Frederick the Great, as exemplified daily by Governor Young, commanded a regiment on the island. The afternoon of the misunderstanding in the council chamber he was called upon by Dr. Parker, who said:

"Colonel, the governor has challenged me, and I want you to be my second."

"Gladly," responded the fiery Welshman; "but let me ask you, Parker, are you a good shot?"

"Never fired a pistol in my life," was the reply.

"Never!"

"No."

"Then I wouldn't give a farthing for Young's life. A man's first shot is the best in the first hundred."

"You surprise me."

"I know it from a long experience. Here is a pair of pistols that never missed fire since they were first manufactured. Take them home with you. Stand before the largest mirror in the house. Look well at your shadow. Raise your pistol from your knee in this way, with a stiff elbow, ranging along the reflection in the glass. When you get the muzzle up to the height of the hip pull the trigger.

"You will fight in Glen's saw pit at sundown. Be there in good season. Place yourself at one end of it, and when General Young comes opposite you think of the man in the glass, raise your muzzle with a stiff elbow, and pull as soon as it ranges with his hip. You can't miss him. Ten to one he will talk about marching and facing to the right about and give you a lecture about the 'Prussian mode' of doing things. Tell him you are fixed to your spot, but that he can march and countermarch, and be changed to him! Recollect, you have but two things to think of after you get upon the ground—your pistol arm and the man in the glass."

WITH A BULLET IN HIS HEART.

"I should like to be your second, but you will be better without one, for it is not unusual. Take my advice. Young will agree, for despite the nonsensical martinet in him he is a gentleman."

Dr. Parker thanked Colonel Williams for his advice and left, taking the pistols with him, though he was far from confident that he could benefit by this short lesson in the art of dueling.

He sent General Young word that he would await him in the saw pit at sundown that evening, and then began practicing before the mirror as he had been instructed.

The general was a little late, but he offered a thousand apologies to his placid opponent for the delay, declaring that he had been detained by official business.

The doctor received his explanation gracefully, and then said, "I see your excellency has brought no second!"

"No, for I understood you had none. You have confided in me, my dear sir, and I shall confide in you. Such cases were not unusual in the army of the Great Frederick. I presume, Dr. Parker, this business is no novelty to you."

"On the contrary," replied the doctor, "it is, thank God, the first affair of the sort I was ever engaged in."

"Different people have different ways of settling it," replied the governor. "But in the Prussian service the practice is to stand in the center of the field, back to back, then to the right about, then level and fire. It has been in reference to that practice that I have had the ground of this pit put in its present condition for marching."

"As I have never had the honor to be in the Prussian service," said Dr. Parker, "your excellency will, I hope, excuse me from any such evolution. I am placed either here or, if you please, at the other end of the pit; but," he added, seeing a shadow gathering on the general's face, "my course need not, I think, prevent your excellency from adopting the practice to which you are accustomed."

The general's face brightened at this suggestion.

"Dr. Parker," said he, "you are in all respects a gentleman—permit me to say it. Well, then, as I have your leave, I shall march up to you, go to the right about, march off eight paces and then again face you, at which time we fire. And as in this method I must naturally turn my back to you, I desire explicitly to say that I do it strictly as a military maneuver and without the remotest idea of conveying to you any indignity."

"Pardon my inexperience, but when shall I fire?" asked the doctor.

"Then is well thought of. I shall march with my pistol in my right hand and a handkerchief in my left—thus. When I drop it we fire."

At the word the general marched with a gracious air toward the doctor, then turned and stepped off eight military paces, faced again to the right about, and as he did so raised his pistol arm and dropped the handkerchief. Instantly the two discharges made one report.

The ball from the general's pistol lodged in a beam just above the doctor's head.

At the same instant the bullet of the novice flew with a steadier aim. General Young spread convulsively upward with a bullet in his heart.

A New Story of Washington.

There has recently come to light in England a diary of an English officer, Major Ferguson, kept during our Revolutionary war. This officer commanded a rifle corps in the advance of the hussars under Knyphausen during some skirmishing which occurred a day or two previous to the battle of Brandywine. This gentleman was a party in a very singular adventure, which he thus records in his diary. It illustrates in a most forcible manner the operations of a man's mind during the excitement of battle. He says:

"We had not lain long when a rebel officer, remarkable by a dragoon uniform, appeared upon our army and near to my right flank, not perceiving us. He was a tall, handsome man, and rode with the ease that comes from long practice in the saddle. He was followed by another rider in a dark green and blue uniform and mounted on a bay horse. He also wore a remarkably large cocked hat.

"I ordered three of my best riflemen to steal near them and fire at them, but the idea disgusted me, and I recalled the order.

"They came back by the same path a few minutes later, and both rode within a hundred yards of us, upon which I advanced from the wood toward them. I pointed to the man in advance to halt, but after looking at me a few seconds he rode calmly on again.

"I again pointed to him, and made signs for him to stop, leveling my piece at him. To my great surprise he gave me a military salute, wheeled his horse and cantered away.

"He was then so close to me that by rapid firing I could have lodged a few dozen bullets in and about him before he rode out of my reach, had I so wished, but it was not pleasant to fire at the back of an offending man who was acquitting himself so calmly of his duty, so I let him alone.

"The evening following the battle of Brandywine I was telling this story to some wounded officers, when one of the surgeons who had been dressing the wounds of some of the rebels came in and told us that they had been informing him that General Washington was all that morning as mentioned with the light troops far in advance of his own lines.

"From the enemies wounded I got a description of General Washington and the uniform worn by him that day, and also of his companion, and great was my surprise on discovering that the tall rider who left in such a manner was in chief of the rebel forces, and that the sleek dey young man in green and blue was the famous Marquis de Lafayette, of France."

Sharp Practice.

If sharpers exercised the same energy and intelligence in harmony with the law that they do in violating it, their reward would be very much greater.

Innocent men are usually the victims of the lawless, so that when we hear of a dishonest man being tricked by a knave it somehow gives us comfort.

A case in point happened in Milwaukee a short time ago.

A sailor went into a shop near the docks where goods suitable to men of his class were on sale. He made a purchase to the amount of fifty cents, and, it should be said, he appeared to be a little intoxicated.

As soon as the parcel which he bought was passed over to him, he drew a bill from his pocket, and throwing it down on the counter said to the proprietor:

"There is a two dollar bill; give me the change."

A glance showed the storekeeper it was a five and not a two dollar bill, but he de*termined to benefit by the mistake* of his customer. Hastily sweeping the bill into a drawer, he handed the sailor $1.50, and then observed with much self-possession to the storekeeper:

"Much obliged, sir," and left the store with a slightly tipsy step and the parcel in his bag.

When the sailor was gone the storekeeper went to the drawer, took out the bill and examined it. It was five dollars, but a little the worst counterfeit he had ever seen.

The storekeeper, with a sudden indigestion in his heart, the storekeeper started in search of the sailor, whom he found talking on the next corner, with a man who looked for him at the police office.

The storekeeper accused him of passing the counterfeit five dollar bill; but by the man who had been watching the transaction through the open door Jack proved that he had received but $1.50 in change, so that he could not have given the man a five dollar bill.

After some further talk the matter was allowed to drop, and the storekeeper went back to his shop—a wiser if not a happier man.

An Earnest Man.

The late Dr. Talmage, of Brooklyn, loved to tell a joke illustrating the earnestness of one of his parishioners.

He was much beloved by his congregation, but their delight at his preaching was great and righteous when they learned that the doctor had been offered a much larger salary by a wealthy church over in New York.

The people in Brooklyn were greatly excited while the doctor's answer was in abeyance, and when they learned that he had refused the temptation and was determined to remain with them their joy was unbounded.

Immediately after this Dr. Bethune was coming down the front door step, entering the cabin he found every seat occupied and the floor space crowded.

Suddenly he heard his name called, and turning round he saw a big, bewhiskered man standing beside him.

"Doctor, take my seat," said the man.

"Thanks, but I will not disturb you," said the doctor.

"But, sir," protested the man, as he pointed to the still vacant seat, "it is an honor for me to do it."

"You are very kind," said the doctor, about to sit down.

"Yes, sir," pursued the man. "I'm glad to give it. Ever since I heard of that big church trying to get you away from Brooklyn on a call of $8,000 and your telling them that you'd see them d—d first I have had great respect for you. And if, sir, you'd ever like to take a little turn on Wall street come and see me. Here's my card."

ALFRED R. CALHOUN.

MORE GLORY THAN GOLD.

Imaginative Literature Offers Free Pickings to Its Successful Devotees.

[Special Correspondence.]

NEW YORK, October 26th.—It is announced that J. S. of Dale has completed another book, which is in the course of publication, but the friends whom he made a dozen years ago with his novel "Gourndale" will be disappointed if they expect to find any romance or charming love tale in this latest work. It will have calfskin covers and will sell for a dollar and a half. Yet it is safe to say that no person will ever read it through from beginning to end. Mr. Stimson's latest book is a work for lawyers. Upon it he has spent more time than he ever did on any of his novels, and it will probably bring him a much larger income than his stories ever did, and will give him a fame among professional men, who never heard of him as J. S. of Dale, the novelist.

When Mr. Stimson was graduated from Harvard those who knew his power as a literary man were inclined to think that he was the coming novelist. He had enthusiasm for romantic composition, a charming style and knew how to tell a good story, and yet do it in an unconventional way, or at least an original one. His novel "Gourndale" was published when he had been but a few years out of college. It caught the favor of the critics, and if it did not make a great hit was one of the books of the year which were talked about. It seemed to Stimson and his friends as though he might have a brilliant literary career ahead.

The young author discovered, however, what most others have found to be the truth, that the favor of the critics and even some measures of popularity do not in this country assure to the writer of fiction a sufficient income to justify making it a vocation unless the author has some other means of support. Boyle O'Reilly was urged often to give himself up entirely to literature, but he used to smile when such propositions were made and say that journalism was a kinder and more prodigal mistress. His income from his newspaper was equal to that of some of the most influential bank presidents, but his income from pure literature he believed could not be the tenth part of what he gained in his profession.

O'Reilly and Stimson were friends, and the brilliant poet and journalist did not hesitate to advise the young author to place no reliance upon literary work for a support. Stimson turned to the law, although his friends always claimed that he meant to make that his life business, and while the law is a jealous mistress, not persuitting much to be done in the way of literary work, Mr. Stimson has found time and a delight in legal literature at least, and while no sentimental maidens or romantic youths will ever read his book it will probably increase his bank account, and that is more than his novels ever did.

Stimson's experience is not unlike that of some others who have ventured when young and ambitious into literature. Until pretty nearly starve if he depended upon his literary work for support. William D. Howells, who is called our most successful novelist, finds it necessary to do journalistic work in order to gain a sufficient income from which he can save enough to provide for him in his old age. Mr. Howe, who wrote "The Story of a Country Town," one of the literary successes of a few years ago, said to a friend while on a visit to New York that while the sale of the book was large he was surprised that the pecuniary results were so small, and although he has written several novels since, yet he depends for his income upon the earnings of a newspaper which he in part owns.

John Habberton, whose "Helen's Babies" has the largest sale of any story ever published in America, excepting "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "Ben-Hur" and one or two other novels, remains a journalist, writing stories as an avocation rather than a vocation. Mrs. Stowe, Miss Alcott and Mark Twain are the only authors of recent years who have made not only a handsome income, but a considerable fortune, by the writing of romances and tales. Washington Irving received more for his "Life of Washington" than for any of his imaginative literature, and Longfellow, the wealthy man, was not dependent at all upon the income from the sale of his novels.

The common belief is that Mrs. Burnett received large sums for her stories, yet the truth is that while she was paid well for some of them she owes her prosperity entirely to a single play dramatized *from her story of "Little Lord Fauntle*roy." When that drama was having its run in New York city, Mrs. Burnett was receiving royalties of from $600 to $1,200 a week. She said to a friend with whom she was staying in New York that for the first time in her life she had experienced the delicious sensation of feeling that her balance at the bank was constantly increasing, and that she was weekly in receipt of larger sums of money than she needed to spend. It was this experience which caused her to say that when the contract she had made to write two or three new novels had been fulfilled she would devote herself entirely to the drama.

Mark Twain's fortune was very greatly increased by dramas which he controlled. None of his books, excepting "The Innocents Abroad," brought him a great fortune, but his play of "Mulberry Sellers" yielded him in four or five years nearly $70,000 in royalties, and the "Prince and Pauper" has been a most profitable venture.

Edward Eggleston, who has been one of the most fortunate of American novelists, does not make over $6,000 or $7,000 on any one of his stories, including payment for serial publication, and it is said in publishing circles that the largest sums earned by any writer of fiction are those paid to a person writing under a nom de plume certain detective stories for sensational weekly papers.

Charles Dudley Warner was a hard working journalist for a number of years before he gained fame. The editorial conduct of the Hartford Courant was in his charge, as the duties of General Hawley, the editor in chief, as governor and senator made it possible for him to do but little work. Mr. Warner's fame came almost by accident. He wrote a series of papers for The Courant some twenty years ago descriptive of the life of an amateur farmer. He wrote them without any idea that they would bring him fame, but they were so full of healthy humor, having the true literary flavor and the gentle humor *of Charles Lamb without being at all imi*tative, that they attracted wide attention, were published in book form, and, as the author of "My Summer in a Garden," Mr. Warner found himself among the American literary immortals. Since then literature rather than journalism has been his vocation. He has traveled much, and he has had for a number of years supervision of the humorous department of Harper's which he called "The Drawer."

Mr. Stimson's new book will illustrate forcibly the truth that romantic literature is the most precarious means of getting an income.

"Choose ye," said the chefs, "some color, Some befitting hint or pigment, Some appropriate cosmetic For the face of our physique At the World's fair dedication!"

Then the artists cease toucher, Wrestled with the mighty problem, Talked of every kind of color, On the easels mixed their pigments, Deftly wrought with facile brushes, Wildly smeared the patient canvas, Made no heard of confabulous With their red, and white, and azure, Yellow, purple, amber, orange, Tawny, crimson, cadmium, neroed, With their saffron, pea green, lilac, Prince Rupert's blue, scarlet, Pearly, piebald, iridescent, On a gray and smoky background.

Then on these contending artists Fell at last an inspiration, And with one accord their voices Rose in favor of the choosing Of a shade of no distinction As the color for Chicago! At the World's fair dedication! Of a shade of no distinction Ground. On "Old Glory," on your silk banners, On your banners and your emblems Filling all Chicago's streets, Terra cotta! Terra cotta! Paint the town with terra cotta!

POLITICAL PICKLES,

MEETING AT BERNARDSVILLE.

The Republicans of Somerset County Have a Rousing Time.

The Republicans of Bernardsville, Somerset county, N. J., had a rousing time at Child's Hall Wednesday evening. Arrested for Throwing Coal.

For some time past people having occasion to drive through Richmond street have been annoyed by having pieces of coal thrown at them by young boys, from the track above the railroad bridge.

Yesterday a complaint was made to Captain Grant, by a man who had been hit by one of the missles, and the Captain, accompanied by Officer Kiely, started after the youngsters. They succeeded in catching three of them, and placing them under arrest. This morning in the city court, one was discharged and the other held for trial.

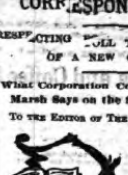
CORRESPONDENCE.

RESPECTING THE POLL TAX LIABILITY OF A NEW COMER.

What Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh Says on the Subject.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—



OES a new resident have to pay poll tax?

Myself and a friend recently moved into this city and were polled-taxed. Residing here so short a time, besides having no vote, we doubted whether our liability, under the circumstances, was binding.

Upon inquiry I learned that just who legally were required to pay this tax, he was unable to say. Being strangers here we naturally send a query to the paper we have taken to—THE NEWS.

As strangers in town, we feel that answered as such, as a courtesy, receive the desired information.

Respectfully,
THOS. H. CUMINO.

Our correspondent's question was referred to Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh, who, after careful investigation, says:

"On April 11th, 1866, a law was passed providing that a poll tax of one dollar should be assessed upon every male inhabitant of this State of the age of twenty-one years and upwards, except the polls of all volunteers and sailors, who have served in the army or navy of the United States and have honorably discharged therefrom, and of all paupers, idiots and insane persons." A later act, passed April 8th, 1875, exempts from poll tax all soldiers of the war of 1812. Still another act exempts from poll tax "every officer, non-commissioned officer, musician and private who has or may become attached to the national guard."

"Unless your correspondent is an honorably discharged soldier or sailor or a member of the national guard, we assume that he does not come within any of the exceptions named. That he is not a pauper, idiot or insane person abundantly appears from his letter, addressed to THE NEWS. It follows that the test question is to determine whether he is "a male inhabitant of this State of the age of twenty-one years or upwards." To settle this question, more detailed information concerning the correspondent than has been afforded THE NEWS is required. We have, however, that it has been judicially determined that a temporary resident within the State for the purpose of business or pleasure, even though it be continued for a long period of time, does not become a resident-inhabitant within the meaning of the laws governing the imposition of poll tax. If the presence of our correspondent in this State is of the temporary character suggested, without any intention on his part to make New Jersey his permanent residence; if he has no intention of becoming a citizen of this State, and has a domicile elsewhere to which he expects to return, then he is not an "inhabitant" within the meaning of the poll tax enactments. The question whether his intention is to remain here temporarily, or to make New Jersey his home, is not, however, to be determined solely by what he may now declare on that subject. His intention is to be arrived at from the circumstances surrounding his residence here. In other words, his acts, rather than his declarations, would furnish the evidence from which a court would infer the fact. It is not necessary that he contemplate becoming one of our citizens. Many foreigners who take up a new home acquire that and have no purpose of becoming citizens of the United States, but who intend to reside here are required annually to pay poll tax. There is no just foundation for the supposition that our government gives greater privileges in the matter of taxation to a foreigner who does not contemplate becoming a citizen than to one who does.

"Assuming that our correspondent is entitled to exemption from poll tax either by reason of the exceptions to which allusion has been made, or by reason of the temporary character of his sojourn in New Jersey, another question remains to be considered, with reference to the legality of his claim for exemption for the year 1892, namely, whether he has taken the necessary steps to have his name erroneously assessed for poll tax cancelled. Every person has the opportunity to appear before the commissioners of Appeal in Cases of Certiorari for the purpose of correcting errors in the assessment of taxes. Upon the notice given by the personal tax collector, public notice of such opportunity is given by advertisement. If one should be assessed for a poll tax and assessed for taxes neglects to avail himself of the opportunity thus afforded, he cannot successfully resist the collection of the assessment. Unless, therefore, your correspondent can show first that he was not liable to such poll tax, either by reason of being specially exempted therefrom, or by reason of his not being an "inhabitant" of the State within the meaning of the law; and, secondly, can give a satisfactory reason for not having appealed to the Commissioners of Appeal, or in case he has appealed, can show that the commissioners improperly decided against him; the assessment of the poll tax will constitute an obligation enforceable by seizure of his personal property, and in case no personal property can be found, enforceable by arrest and imprisonment. The Collector of Taxes, and even the Common Council of the city, have no power to alter the provisions of the law. If your correspondent is not liable to assessment for poll tax he may be relieved from that assessed for the present year by proving the facts before the Board of Commissioners of Appeal at their meeting to be held at the Council chamber, Nov. 29, 1892, at two o'clock p. m."

"Democracy's Day."

Yesterday was observed as Democratic Day in New Jersey. About two hundred Democrats of this city and the borough assembled last night at 39 Broadway in honor of the day.

The principal speaker of the evening was Mr. Preston Stevenson of Bergen county. Mr. Rowland Cox of West Seventh street also made a speech.

THE SIXTH ANNUAL CONVENTION.

The Young People's Societies Meet at Bridgeton.

The sixth annual State convention of the Young People's Societies of Christian Endeavor convened the Central Methodist Episcopal church at Bridgeton, at two p. m. yesterday. There were 300 delegates at the opening session. The president, the Rev. G. S. Sykes of Long Branch, presided. Mrs. Caroline B. Brookfield of Bellevue, the State secretary, read her report. The Rev. J. J. Pierson of Woodbury, and the Rev. A. B. Buchanan of Camden, made addresses. In the evening President Sykes delivered his annual address, and the Rev. Dr. Ezra Tinker of New York City, preached the convention sermon. An overflow meeting was held in the First Baptist church, which was addressed by the Rev. Dr. Pierson, of Newark, and others. Greetings were received from the Baptist Young People's Union of New Jersey and from the State Unions of New York and California.

The delegates from this city are: Miss Spangenberg, of the Park avenue Baptist church; Miss Ella C. Benedict, of the Trinity Reformed church; Mr. Walter Dobbins, of the Warren Mission; Mr. John Whiting, of the Congregational church, and Miss M. Smith, of the Seventh-day church.

The Convention will be continued to-day.

The Plainfield City Union of King's Daughters.

The Plainfield Union of King's Daughters was organized in the month of April, 1892. Its object being to band together the different circles of King's Daughters *existing here and enable them to co-*operate in their work.

Its officers are, Chairman, Mrs. S. G. Meade, East Front street; vice chairman, Mrs. S. St. J. McCutchen, Rockview terrace; secretary and treasurer, Miss L. K. Green, Park avenue.

It has an executive committee composed of the president and secretary from each circle belonging to the union. This committee will hold three meetings a year.

It also has an advisory board composed of five members from the executive committee.

The union earnestly desires that every circle, or a King's Daughter, not belonging to a circle, should join this union before November, knowing that they will be greatly aided in their Winter's work.

The union in no way interferes with the individual work of each circle, but simply aids them, by keeping in the front of the work, however, that if the work that is being carried on by each circle, and this is done by each secretary sending a report, three times a year, to the general secretary.

Twenty circles have already joined the union, and in November it proposes holding a reception, to which all the members belonging to the union, will be invited, in order that all may become acquainted.

The union as a body, has decided to endow a bed in the hospital for the coming Winter.

The Supreme Court Upholds the Verdict.

The Supreme Court has settled the suit of Miss Abbie Van Doren, formerly of Round Brook, against the Philadelphia and Reading railroad Co. Miss Van Doren, it will be remembered, was crippled for life, while on her way to Sunday school, by injuries received from a horse frightened by a Reading locomotive left with steam blowing, near a crossing. The jury awarded her $6,000. The company argued for a new trial. Counselor Charles A. Reed of this city successfully opposed them, and a new trial was denied.

A Scarcity of Water in the Passaic.

The Passaic River is lower than at any time since 1880, and manufacturers of Paterson, who depend on the river for motive power are experiencing much difficulty. The water company of Paterson has issued orders for the citizens to be careful in the use of water, and not waste any.

Look Out for this Counterfeit.

The Secret Service division has discovered a counterfeit of the new issue of the $2 silver certificate, series 1886, check letter, B-2235, W. S. Rosecrans, James W. Hyatt, treasurer.

The most marked difference between this note and the genuine, and a difference which will result in the detection of the counterfeit at a glance is that the upper loop of the J in James in the signature, James W. Hyatt, points directly between the D. C., after Washington in the genuine, while in the counterfeit it is about one-eighth of an inch to the left, or immediately under the letter D.

Election Blanks Sent Out.

The Secretary of State has sent his official certificates to the twenty-one County Clerks in the State. These certificates contain the names of all the candidates for electors, Governor and Congress, and also the names of the candidates for President and Vice-President of the United States which were included in the certificates and petitions filed with the Secretary of State. He also sent blanks for the use of election officers and the Boards of County Canvassers. There were twenty-one large packages containing in all 14,200 large sheets.

On November 5th, the Atalanta Wheelmen of Newark will have a run from Newark to Morristown. The first rider to arrive at the latter place will receive a prize.

Cyclists at Sag Harbor, L. I., are in a state of war against the village trustees, owing to an ordinance forbidding sidewalk riding.

There is talk of a team match next season between the Kings County Wheelmen and the cyclers of Union county.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Christmas and New Year's day will not come on the same day of the week in 1892.

Among the inventions to separate iron from a low grade of ore is one that it is claimed will work up 200 tons of the ore a day. The crude ore is first crushed fine. Then it is run into a hopper, whence it drops between two sheet iron magnetic rollers. The dross drops through, while the iron particles stick fast to the magnetized rollers and are removed by a new turn of the machine.

When the Lick telescope was completed it was announced to be certainly the largest that would be constructed in America for many years to come. But a man who has made money in street railways, Mr. Charles T. Yerkes, of Chicago, has already given the order for a telescope for the Chicago university that will be the greatest one ever made anywhere. The telescope record did not remain stationary much longer than the trotting record. The object glass of the Yerkes telescope will be forty-five inches across—eleven inches larger than the Lick telescope. But the tremendous glass can never be used to full advantage till Chicago gets rid of her frightful coal smoke.

W. T. Stead, editor of The Review of Reviews, has taken up with his accustomed vigor the cause of Mrs. Maybrick, the hapless American woman now lying in Woking prison because she either did or did not poison her husband, and the English lawyers have never been able to find out whether she did or not. So, reversing all law and precedent which hold an accused person innocent till he has been proved guilty, these brilliant British judges send Mrs. Maybrick to jail. They confessed to having a prejudice against her because she had been gossiped about. That of itself unfitted them to judge her case, but on the strength of it they condemned her to imprisonment for life. Mr. Stead makes a powerful appeal for the woman in his magazine. "Ought Mrs. Maybrick to Be Tortured to Death?" is the title. He says in his paper absolutely that both she and Sir Charles Russell have received the deathbed confession of a man in South Africa—Henry Wilson—who says he and a woman whose name is not given put arsenic in Mr. Maybrick's medicine during his last illness. If this is true, then the cruelty and meanness of so called English justice appears more vividly than ever. Mr. Stead is right in saying that the matter may become a cause of diplomatic complications with the United States. Mrs. Maybrick will not see one of its citizens "tortured to death." Stead says Mrs. Maybrick will die unless soon released.

Four American Girls in Paris.

There is a charmingly picturesque sketch in the Boston Globe of four girls who went to Paris to study. They wished to learn art, music and French and had only moderate means. They laid their cute and pretty Yankee heads together and decided that co-operation would solve their difficulty, as it has solved many a greater one and will do again.

They resolved on co-operative housekeeping. Taking plenty of time to look about, they rented at length a neat, unfurnished flat. French flats have the kitchen usually almost entirely furnished, while the main room has a hardwood floor and a mirror always over the mantelpiece. The girls paid for the flat fifteen dollars a month. They found they could spare collectively eighty dollars for furnishing, but four determined and handy girls made that go a long way.

They took their meals French fashion, ... and roll first thing in the morning. This was easy enough. Then if some of them went out duly she got her ... meal out; if she remained at home she prepared a slight one for herself, whatever she wished. Thus two meals were off their hands and minds. The dinner in the evening was more difficult to manage. They took turns in preparing that, however. In Paris almost everything can be had already cooked even to vegetables, and fruit is cheap and abundant. They had a woman come in for an hour every evening to wait on table and wash the dishes. Thus they lived style about their dinner service with the best and they only paid the woman six cents an hour.

They mostly kept their rooms clean themselves, and took delight in having them clean and shining. The best part of their social life was their reception evening. They had a French evening too. Some young French girls desired to learn English. They wished to learn French. The French girls came to see them on their evenings at home, and each practiced the language that was unfamiliar to her. Thus conversing progress was rapid, and the Americans soon were able to talk French to one another. They found by and by that they lived comfortably and happily, securing all reasonable enjoyments at an expense of twenty-five dollars a month each.

They studied what they came to learn, but the best lesson of all is contained in the following sentence: "When people who want to co-operate have learned when to let one another alone, the difficulties of the operation are greatly diminished."

THE POLITICAL OUTLOOK

General Quincy Tells How the Democracy May Win.

MACVEAGH'S INTEGRITY ATTACKED

The Republican National Committee Issues in a Circular a Decision of Judge Gresham's Reflecting on the Ex-Attorney General's Honesty.

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—Chairman Dickinson, of the national Democratic campaign committee, left the city for Detroit and Chicago to look over the situation in the northwest. He will visit the western headquarters at Chicago, and make a short tour through Michigan and Illinois to see that the work in those states is in good shape. He will be absent from headquarters only a few days.

At the Democratic headquarters it was said that the Republican managers have practically abandoned all hope of carrying the state, and are now making their hardest fight in Ulster and Hudson, New Jersey.

Lieutenant Governor Sheehan and his associates at Democratic state headquarters were in a happy frame of mind. They received news that the local fight in Albany over assemblymen had been settled to the satisfaction of all parties, and that there would be only one Democratic candidate in each district. This, they say, insures the election of four Democrats from Albany county, and makes it pretty certain that the Democrats will control the next assembly by a good majority.

Secretary of State Frank Rice and State Treasurer Danforth were among Lieutenant Governor Sheehan's callers. They brought him cheering news from up the state. The Democratic managers say that the indications are that the Republican majority along the Harlem river will be reduced fully 20,000 this year.

The County Democracy is dead. In an exciting meeting, which lasted over seven hours, it was decided by a close vote to withdraw the whole County ticket. The feeling created by this action is very bitter, and many prominent County Democrats insist that there are thousands of voters in their districts who will now stay away from the polls altogether or vote the Republican ticket rather than vote for Tammany.

General Quincy's Forecast.

General Josiah Quincy, the Massachusetts member of the Democratic national committee, has given to the press his views in detail upon the national political outlook. New York, New Jersey, Connecticut and Indiana he considers reasonably sure for Cleveland.

So far as The number of votes required to elect in the electoral college this year is 223. If we get the votes of all the southern states and of the four northern states above named, Cleveland will have 229 votes and will be elected, even though the line of former Republican states remain unbroken at every point. But we are sure of five or six votes for Cleveland in Michigan, so that we could lose Connecticut or West Virginia, and still elect him by a clear majority.

"But suppose we should lose both these states—and West Virginia is normally such a close state that perhaps we cannot count with certainty upon her electoral votes—this would leave us with 219 votes, allowing only five from Michigan, and while the number pulls four votes short of a clear majority it would elect Cleveland in the house, for the People's party is perfectly sure to get as many as three electoral votes, which would prevent the Republicans from having a majority.

"I have not counted the four votes of New Hampshire or the three of Rhode Island. There is at least an even chance that the former will go for Cleveland, and the latter is at the least uncertain for Democratic success. So that, therefore, while there are uncertainties on both sides, the sum of the uncertainties is decidedly against the Republicans. They may possibly carry New York, but they have no such grounds for confidence in that state as the Democrats have, or they may possibly reelect Harrison without the votes of New York, though the odds are certainly heavily against such a result."

At Republican Headquarters.

Many prominent visitors called at national Republican headquarters today, including Senators Aldrich and Quay, Congressman Quackenbush, of New York, ex-Congressman Burleigh, of New York, and R. P. Jones, of Pennsylvania. Senator Quay remained nearly five hours in consultation with the committee upon various questions touching the work of the campaign. He is expected at headquarters again tomorrow.

The appointments for Governor McKinley in New York and Pennsylvania are arranged as follows: New York—Buffalo, Monday evening; Utica, Tuesday afternoon; Syracuse, Tuesday evening; Pennsylvania—Meadville, Wednesday afternoon, Nov. 2; Scranton, Wednesday evening.

The national Republican committee has issued a circular setting forth that Wayne MacVeagh in his speeches declared that Judge Gresham a dishonest man; that he has absolute confidence in the integrity of Judge Gresham, both as man and judge, and that he has left the Republican party because it was not good enough for him. Then the circular cites a decision rendered by Judge Gresham on July 21, 1885, in a bond case in which Judge Gresham, whom Mr. MacVeagh admits to be all that a judge should be, declared effectually that Mr. MacVeagh had been a party to a fearful conspiracy to obtain $20,000 from the city of Ottawa to which he was not entitled, and in view of Mr. MacVeagh's declaration that he so greatly abhors a dishonest man that he has absolute confidence in the integrity of Judge Gresham, both as man and judge, and that he has left the Republican party because it was not good enough for him. Then the circular cites a decision rendered by Judge Gresham on July 21, 1885, in a bond case in which Judge Gresham, whom Mr. MacVeagh admits to be all that a judge should be, declared effectually that Mr. MacVeagh had been a party to a fearful conspiracy to obtain $20,000 from the city of Ottawa to which he was not entitled, and in view of Mr. MacVeagh's declaration that he so greatly abhors a dishonest man it is declared important to inquire, in the light of this conclusion, what he thinks of himself.

Chairman Brackett, of the Republican state committee, informed a reporter at the United Press today that from now on until election day the Republicans would carry their campaign to Kings. He declared that it is his positive belief that Harrison will be re-elected. He is also of the opinion that a much larger vote will be polled by the state than in 1888.

A Reception to Cleveland.

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—A reception was given to Grover Cleveland last night at the Hotel Imperial by the Buffalonians' Cleveland club, which is made up of New Yorkers who formerly lived in Mr. Cleveland's town. Besides the club members they were present from Buffalo Mayor Charles F. Bishop, Congressman Thomas LaBoutillier, Comptroller Joseph K. Gavin, Augustus F. Schen, Frank T. Reynolds, Dr. A. Y. Grant and Norman E. Mack, publisher of the Buffalo Times. Lieutenant Governor Sheehan was also present, and was followed by Mr. Sheehan and Mr. Bishop, who promised a majority for Cleveland in Erie county.

To Murder Jerry Simpson.

WICHITA, Kan., Oct. 27.—The latest political sensation here is a story of an alleged plot to assassinate Jerry Simpson. Chairman Breidenthal, of the People's party, has secured letters addressed to Robert Swivell, postmarked at Troy, Emporia and other towns in Kansas. They were signed F. A. P., and contained a proposition to murder Jerry Simpson, and offered to pay the sum of $5,000 to Swivell if he would accomplish the deed. It is known that mail addressed to Robert Swivell has been received and delivered to a party of that name at the postoffice at Harper. The members of the People's party express alarm, and until the close of the campaign Simpson will be furnished with a bodyguard.

Whitney Confident of Success.

BOSTON, Oct. 27.—Hon. William C. Whitney, ex-secretary of the navy, was in town. Regarding the political outlook in New York state he said to a reporter: "There's one thing you can say with assurance. The Democratic outlook in New York is as good as in 1884 and much better than in 1888, and we are confident of winning with a good, comfortable majority." Mr. Whitney with earnestness repeated his remark, leaving no doubt in the listener's mind that he meant what he said concerning Democratic success.

Stevenson in Brooklyn.

BROOKLYN, Oct. 27.—The Academy of Music was packed to the dome last evening when Adlai E. Stevenson was led upon the stage by Mayor Boody and the great meeting in the campaign in Brooklyn was called to order. Mr. Stevenson received a great ovation, and spoke on finance, the tariff and the federal elections bill. Congressman Raynor, of Maryland, and local orators followed Mr. Stevenson.

Wisconsin's Apportionment.

MADISON, Oct. 27.—The apportionment bill, as prepared by the Democratic majority of the special committee on apportionment, passed both houses of the legislature and now goes to the governor for his signature. It gives the Democrats a majority of at least twelve on joint ballot at the next session of the legislature, and insures a Democratic United States senator for Wisconsin in 1893.

Depew in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 27.—A larger crowd never gathered in the spacious Academy of Music than that which assembled last night to hear Chauncey M. Depew, of New York, speak upon Republican issues, under the auspices of the Union League of Philadelphia. Mr. Depew was given a rousing reception, and his prediction of Harrison's re-election was greeted with wild cheering.

Lincoln in Quincy.

QUINCY, Ills., Oct. 27.—Robert T. Lincoln, minister to England, addressed 3,000 Republicans in this city. He was given an ovation on his reception. Democratic visitors were confined to the tariff, being frequently interrupted by cheers. After the close of Mr. Lincoln's speech Messrs. Cassidy and Wilkens addressed the enthusiastic crowd.

Hill in Virginia.

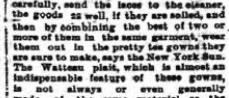
LYNCHBURG, Oct. 27.—Senator D. B. Hill arrived from Washington. Nearly 5000 people were at the station to welcome him, and four or five times as many more were along the line of march to Custer and Appomattox.

Chicago's Big Registration.

CHICAGO, Oct. 27.—The registration for the city of Chicago largely exceeds the expectations of the politicians, the total amounting to 75,000. This is an increase over the registration of 1888 of 18,000.

Powder Mills in Danger.

FAIRMOUNTAIN, N. J., Oct. 27.—The forest along the tracks of the New Jersey Southern railroad between this place and Columbia siding is on fire and is rapidly being consumed. Fears are entertained that the flames may reach the works of the Columbia Powder mills, where several tons of powder are stored.



SOILED SUMMER DRESSES.

May be Ripped, Cleaned and Recombined in Pretty Tea Gowns.

The best and wisest thing to do with the delicate silk and wool summer gowns that have already faithfully done duty for afternoon and evening wear is to rip them carefully, send the lace to the cleaner, the goods to wall, if they are soiled, and then by combining the best of two or more of them the same garment, wear them out in the pretty tea gowns they are sure to make, says the New York Sun. The Watteau plait, which is almost an indispensable feature of these gowns, is not always or even generally made of the same material as the gown, but may be of a lace shawl, of breadths of embroidered silk or crepe despoiled from an old ball gown past its usefulness. Even lace flounces can be arranged without cutting them to give the effect of Watteau trains. One of the prettiest of these luxurious little gowns was made of the remnants of an old China silk, with pale green ground sprayed with pink blossoms. The white lace which had done duty on two previous gowns, having been cleaned and mended, was arranged with careful economy to do duty on the gown, which, narrowing at the waist line, fell in a coquille all the way down the front. Another flounce of lace formed a double cascade down the back, from beneath which escaped a trailing fulness of pink crepe, the crepe forming also the front of the gown, which was belted with broad black velvet.

Her Powder Puff.

To-day to make up a face properly is to master an art, having accessory rules as exact as those of a science. Perhaps a woman's glass tells her nature was not as lavish as it might have been, or the information may come from equally frank friends. At any rate she is either engaged in a fair encounter with nature or in a war of fortification against times' siege. The old white powder has been superseded by brunette powder, blonde powder and natural complexion powder, all of which are used by direction of the druggist, who tells the expectant fair one exactly what powder will give a fair imitation of what has been or should be. The eyebrow pencil overcomes deficiencies in the eyebrow, and only a trained eye can detect the assumption of reality.

SIMPLE UNTO SEVERITY.

Brief Funeral Services Conducted in the White House.

A WEALTH OF FLORAL OFFERINGS.

They Believe the Somber Aspect of the Darkened East Room—Mrs. Harrison's Body with Its Escort of Mourners on Its Way to Indianapolis for Interment.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—The White House is deserted, and the funeral train bearing the body of Mrs. Harrison and its sad escort of mourners is speeding on its way to Indianapolis, where final interment will take place. The spacious East room, the scene of so many brilliant receptions in which the president's wife participated, was put in readiness last night for the sad rites of today, and the casket was brought in by gentle hands at 9 o'clock this morning.

A larger attendance was present at the funeral services than was anticipated, in view of the fact that Private Secretary Halford gave notice that the family would not issue invitations to the funeral services, but expected only the kinsmen and relatives and a few of the closest personal friends of the dead woman and of the president to attend. He added that the family did not wish to make a discrimination by the issuance of invitations, and that each person must determine for himself or herself whether or not the relations to the family brought him or her within the designation of a personal friend.

The darkened East room presented a beautiful appearance as the mourners entered, the floral remembrances banking the vast apartment on all sides and reaching well out on the floor.

The Floral Remembrances.

Among them were those from Mr. Whitelaw Reid, a magnificent wreath; Mrs. Washington McLean, three crossed palms, tied with a bunch of violets; Mrs. Hazen, fan of ivy, sprayed with lilies of the valley; Mrs. Senator Dolph, cushion of chrysanthemums; Mr. Hubbard and Gardiel, a crown of roses and orchids; Mrs. Richardson Clover, a star of roses and valley lilies; Mr. Theodore Roosevelt, a wreath; Mrs. Batt, a wreath; Republican state central committee of California, a 4-foot cross of white chrysanthemums with a garland of yellow popples, the California state flower; Mrs. Boyd, a bunch of chrysanthemums; Mrs. Wilmerding, a large cross of ivy with a wreath of violets.

A large, handsome pillow formed of roses, violets and ivy leaves came as the gift of ladies employed in the treasury department. Mrs. Admiral Porter sent a wreath of roses and lilies. From Mrs. Daniel Lathrop, of Boston, came a large cross of fronds of the Sago palm, faced with gigantic white chrysanthemums and bearing a card reading: "For her whom the nation mourns and whom I loved." Mrs. Noble, wife of the secretary of the interior, sent a wreath composed of chrysanthemums, lilies of the valley, ivy leaves and black ostrich tips, giving a striking effect.

One of the most striking floral pieces was designed by J. H. Small and presented by the ladies of the Mary Washington chapter of the Daughters of the Revolution, of which Mrs. Harrison was a member. It is an immense shield of white chrysanthemums seven feet high, upon which is worked the insignia of the chapter—a blue wheel with thirteen spokes and stars to represent the original states.

Vice President and Mrs. Morton sent a cross of chrysanthemums, lilies of the valley and orchids. The members of the diplomatic corps sent a wreath four feet in diameter of large chrysanthemums; members of the cabinet, a cross of palms, chrysanthemums and lilies of the valley.

Nearly every piece contained chrysanthemums, the fondness of Mrs. Harrison for that bloom being generally known. Indeed, the great interest in the annual national chrysanthemum exhibitions held at Indianapolis, and offered one of the prizes competed for at the spring meeting.

The Funeral Services.

Promptly at 10 o'clock President Harrison, who his head bowed and trembling slightly with agitation, entered the room with Mrs. McKee, his daughter, on his arm. Then followed Mr. Harrison and the other members of the family came, followed by those who felt themselves privileged to witness the funeral services. When all had assembled the severely brief and simple services, which barely occupied half an hour, were commenced.

Rev. Dr. Hamlin opened with the recitation of a few selections from the scriptures adapted to the occasion, closing with a short invocation. Rev. Dr. Bartlett then read the 90th psalm, following which the boys' choir of St. John's Episcopal church, recessed in the adjoining parlor, sang to Hesed the Voice of Jesus Say Come Unto Me and Rest."

Dr. Hamlin then offered a closing prayer, and as those present were leaving the room the choir rendered Clarchild Newman's hymn, "Lead, Kindly Light."

When all had retired the body bearers—Messrs. Loeffler, Turner, Dubois, Kenny, Bricker, Harris, Lewis and Hollenberger—who had been chosen from the watchmen and messengers at the White House, entered the room and tenderly bore the casket to the hearse, and without ceremony or delay the sad cortege moved to the Pennsylvania railroad depot. Vice President Morton acting as honorary pallbearer in place of secretary of state Foster, who was unable to reach the city.

Arrived at the depot, the casket was placed in the funeral car, and with drawn curtains the train at 11:30 o'clock pulled out in the presence of a great crowd that stood with uncovered heads.

The Funeral Escort.

The party which went to Indianapolis on the funeral train was composed of the following persons: President Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. Russell B. Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. McKee, Dr. Scott, Mrs. Dimmick, Lieutenant and Mrs. Parker, Mr. Findley, of Baltimore, cousin of the president; Vice President Morton, Secretary of State and Mrs. Foster, Mrs. J. R. Elkins, Attorney General and Mrs. Miller, Postmaster General Wanamaker, Mrs. Wilmerding, Secretary Noble, Secretary and Mrs. Rusk, Private Secretary Halford, Colonel Earnest, Mrs. H. C. Parker, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Boyd, of Philadelphia, and Miss Sanger.

Returning, the train will Indianapolis Friday afternoon at 5 o'clock and reach Washington at 6 p. m. Saturday.

The services at Indianapolis, where an address is to be made by Rev. M. L. Haynes, are not expected to last over an hour.

The Pope's Sympathy.

ROME, Oct. 27.—The pope has expressed much sympathy with President Harrison in his bereavement. When the pope learned that Mrs. Harrison was likely to die he sent to the lady his apostolic benediction.

ANOTHER READING DEAL

An Alliance Effected with the Boston and Maine Road

AND McLEOD ELECTED PRESIDENT.

For Reaching Combination That Will Control 9,000 Miles of Railroad and Will Affect the New York and New England—President McLeod's Explanation.

BOSTON, Oct. 27.—A great railroad combination, rumors of which have been in the air for several weeks, has been consummated. Parties largely interested in the Boston and Maine and Philadelphia and Reading railroads have made a friendly alliance. The deal just announced between the Reading and Boston and Maine railroad systems is a very important one. It is not a consolidation nor a lease, nor has any formal traffic arrangement been made, but nevertheless it results in putting 9,000 miles of railroad under one management. Mr. McLeod and his friends have been buying Boston and Maine stock for some time past and now have a large interest.

In resigning the presidency at today's meeting of the Boston and Maine directors in favor of Mr. McLeod's holdings were so large that he ought to be in control of the road. Then by a unanimous vote Mr. McLeod was chosen president of the system.

The position of chairman of the board of directors was then created and Mr. Jones was elected to that office, where he will continue as the executive head of the corporation. He was also chosen vice president. After the meeting President McLeod was questioned about the significance of the alliance. He said:

President McLeod's Statement.

"While the Boston and Maine system has in recent years made great progress in tonnage and revenue and has the greatest railroad system in New England, yet it has remained isolated, comparatively speaking, from many sections of the country.

"It is well known that the manufacturing industries on its lines are as extensive and exceed in output and value those of any system in the country, and if they are to continue to expand they must extend and enlarge their markets. On the other hand the network of railroads controlled by the Reading covers one of the most populous regions of the country, and would assume, if the New England industries had access to them, probably a greater portion than any other section in the United States, to say nothing of the vast territory beyond more easily reached by the Reading than any other.

"These regions are naturally tributary to each other, and the proposed alliance, by bringing these great industrial regions into more intimate relations, cannot fail to be of great advantage to both, and the consequent advantage of the railroads that at once connect and serve them. The interchanging of traffic will be very large and will greatly increase the revenue of both systems, each of the roads contributing to the other what it does not now possess.

To Open Up New Markets.

"The relations will be very much of the nature of now existing between the Boston and Maine and the Canadian Pacific, which has proved so advantageous to both companies. Much of the traffic referred to must be moved by rail.

"The product of those manufacturing industries is substantially all rail traffic. Hence the great advantage of more intimate relations between these two regions and their railroads. It is very clear to me that in addition to furnishing the transportation facilities required to reach these new markets, this alliance will necessarily tend to stimulate all those industries on the line by opening up new markets, and thereby increasing greatly the volume of the traffic. It was with this prospect in view that I and my associates have taken a large interest in the stock of the Boston and Maine, with perfect confidence that the alliance will greatly increase its value.

"There can be no doubt that the Reading system, comprising as it does 6,000 miles of road, with ore area reaching to Buffalo and the great lakes and the most extensive fleet of vessels plying those waters, with intimate traffic relations with the various lines of railroads reaching all parts west and northwest, and the others reaching the south and southwest through Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington, will be a still greater advantage to the Boston and Maine than even the Canadian Pacific. It will in no way interfere with any of the existing alliances, but all will be worked together to promote the best results for the property.

To Benefit the Public.

"This alliance will also greatly add to the passenger traffic of the Boston and Maine, not only from the travel incident to the commercial and business interchange between the regions traversed by these lines and the improved facilities afforded by its accommodation, but through an efficient and united through service, similar to that now in operation over the Reading between Washington and New York. The alliance having the control of the only through all rail route, will command a vastly increased proportion of the travel between the southern portions of the country and the coast and lakes and woods of Maine.

"Please do not omit to note that the Reading controls, through the Lehigh Valley line, the best Reading facilities between Buffalo and the lakes and the seaboard. This alliance will form one through line over its own rails, extending from the great lakes to the St. Croix river, and will give to Boston and vicinity a new and independent trunk line of railroad to Buffalo and the west.

"All this of course is to the advantage of stockholders as well as to the public. I may add, I think, with propriety that the peace and strength of the present Boston and Maine system is largely if not wholly due to its policy of alliance and consolidation, bringing added traffic to the lines. This alliance is but another step in the same direction, but of larger scope and comprehends a larger field.

"Of course the main feature is the alliance between the Boston and Maine and the Reading, but as the New York and New England will necessarily be used as a connection between them with great advantage for a considerable portion of the traffic, the friends and others of the Reading have deemed it best to acquire a large interest in the stock of that company."

WORLD'S FAIR MATTERS.

The National Commission and Lady Managers Finish Up Their Work.

CHICAGO, Oct. 27.—The national commissioners and the board of lady managers have finished up their work and adjourned sine die. The greater portion of the session of the national board was devoted to the liquor question. Messrs. Ryan of North Dakota, King of Iowa and Halliday of Kansas made arguments for the prohibition of the sale of liquor on the grounds. After a long discussion the question was left open, no action being taken by the commission.

A resolution was passed providing that a committee, consisting of Judge Lindsey, of Kentucky; Judge Harris, of Virginia; John Boyd Thatcher, John Bressliu and G. W. Allen, of New York, be authorized to confer with the president of the United States and so arrange the rendezvous of the navies of the world at Hampton Roads and New York that the day will not conflict with the opening of the fair.

A resolution offered by G. W. Allen, of New York, which was adopted, provides that the commission co-operate with the treasurer and finance committee of the local board of the country for the widest possible distribution of the souvenir half dollars. President Palmer and Secretary Dickinson were added to the committee on ceremonies.

WOMAN AND HOME.

WOMAN WHO ACHIEVED FAME WITH HER SCISSORS.

Women and Homes in Chicago—Mothers Who Are Breadwinners—Choice Cuts of Beef—Modern Wives—Calling Upon Newcomers—The "Flour Ball."

More than 200 years ago a little girl was born at Amsterdam in Holland, who was named Joanne Koerten. She was a precocious child in that she cared nothing whatever for play and sport, but found her greatest delight in making copies of things about her, imitating in wax every kind of fruit, and making on silk with colored floss exact copies of paintings, which were thought wonderful.

But after she had become very accomplished in music, spinning and embroidery she abandoned all these for a still more extraordinary art—that of cutting. One is seized with astonishment in looking at her work, for all that the engraver accomplishes with the graver she effected with the scissors.

She executed landscapes, marine views and towns, animals and portraits of people of such striking resemblance that she was for a time quite the wonder of Europe.

She used white papers for her cuttings, placing them over a black surface, so that the minute openings made by her scissors formed the "light and shade."

The czar Peter the Great and others of high rank honored her home. One man high in office vainly offered her 1,000 florins for three small cuttings. The empress of Germany paid her 4,000 florins for a trophy she had cut, bearing the arms of Emperor Leopold crowned with eagles and surrounded by a garland of flowers. She also cut the emperor's portrait, which can now be seen in the royal art gallery in Vienna. A great many people went to see her and she kept a book in which princes and princesses wrote their names. After she died, which was when she had lived sixty five years, her husband, Adrian Block erected a monument to her memory and had designed upon it the portraits of all these titled visitors. Her cuttings were so correct and so tasteful as to be both dignity and value to her work, constitute her an artist whose exact skill with scissors has never been and since been equaled. So [illegible] and her monument were [illegible] have kept her "memory [illegible] now nearly 250 years.—Mary [illegible]er in Wide Awake.

Women and Homes in Chicago.

I suppose nowhere else in the world are so many women made so much of as in Chicago. The privilege that goes without saying, and that is thought the least of, is that which makes them the absolute mistresses of their homes. "Well me," as English gentlemen asked me one day, "is it really true that in your country the women have charge of the household affairs entirely by themselves, and do men consult them about the important affairs of their lives? Well, I cannot understand it at all." In Chicago they have their home rights, and the best of it is that the homes are separated dwellings.

In one western city—St. Paul—the men proudly led me to look at the number of flats or "tenements" in the city. There were not many, but one is too many in no common. And the worst of it was that these men were proud of their barracks. They thought that the more people could close the more the city would seem like one of our older towns in the eastern states. There is no such feeling in Chicago. The place spreads over the prairie with room enough for half a dozen New Yorks, and there is neither excuse for nor any inclination toward those makeshift fractions of homes which quench family pride and turn their tenants into "flaneurs." The homes of Chicago are true homes, and they are turned over to the women, among whom there is a quick spirit of social ambition and a keen rivalry for prestige as managers, as entertainers and as guardians of the good order of the city.—Julian Ralph in Harper's Bazar.

Mothers Who Are Breadwinners.

Not to be too severe upon hundreds of married women whose days are spent in pursuits outside of the regular home duties, it is fair to say that very often it is a love of home and ambition for the children's future which prompts them to seek employment for which they deem themselves adapted and which bids fair to be so far remunerative as to increase the home comforts or even provide much desired luxuries. This may be shortsighted policy, but it is better than love of money or desire for notoriety. The American mother is too apt to think she can accomplish both results—share the breadwinning with her husband and insure also a happy home, to either with well behaved children. In this twofold work and responsibility in many cases which makes her wrinkled and careworn before she is middle aged, while the few additional luxuries only seem to call for others instead of affording the satisfaction and happiness expected.

Granted it is not wise for her to engage in outside pursuits, neither is it fair to make a distinction in these same and to express sympathy with those who leave their homes in charge of a large machinery or dressmaking establishment and to censure those who are engaged as a doctor or lawyer.

There can be no excuse for a mother's neglecting her children to earn money, but if there were one it would be earning it for the support when necessary. Gentler nor the excellent woman is she who, if husband dies, can be a father as her children."—Brooklyn Eagle.

Choice Cuts of Beef.

Physicians and chemists are continually telling us that the cheaper cuts of beef possess more real nutritive value than those which are called of the first quality, and yet few housekeepers have sufficient courage to lessen their butchers' bills by buying the less expensive portions. There are several reasons for this—a lack of coarse, an insufficient knowledge of culinary art, and more than anything else, a disinclination to change what is known for the unknown. But when it is considered that a "prime bullock" weighs about 1,000 pounds, and that what is called "first quality" meat weighs only 180, it will be readily seen that there is a large quantity of the animal that is never known to the average housewife.

Wing, for example, is familiar with such portions as "the chuck," "the rump," "the shank," "the flank," "the plate" and "the clod!" And yet these portions are as nutritious when properly cooked as the sirable as those which command much higher prices. A flank steak, for instance, is extremely good. "Chuck" ribs, which come under the shoulder bone, are as good for boiling or braising as what is usually called a "rib roast." The rump makes capital a la mode beef, and the other portions may be utilized and converted into cheap and nutritious food.—New York Tribune.

Modern Wives.

I am inclined to think that women as a rule are what men make them, and a husband of twenty-four or twenty-five years experience in wife training. If only marriage were like scroll service examination! So many questions to answer, so many qualifications to fulfill—how easy it would be to prepare for two modern languages or one, music or drawing, algebra or cooking, as the case might be! A man in the colonies knows what he wants a wife for—to cook, to sew, to scrub, to wash; in short, a respectable unpaid general servant, ordinary female labor being unattainable.

But what does a man in London know of his requirements! The wife he marries when he was a struggling journalist or lawyer, or a trades-man's assistant, is out of touch and out of harmony with his surroundings now that he is some one, or the head of a firm and a rising M. P., or the head of a household. The small clerk needs a cook; the artist or literary man an intelligent companion; the brilliant statesman a woman who will exert a south influence over him, see that he has sound, and wise when he returns from his work, and keep away from him all disagreeable and useless social calls.—Lady Violet Greville in London Graphic.

Calling Upon Newcomers.

The custom of residents calling upon newcomers is principally confined to out of town society, and is not done indiscriminately, but is governed by individual status in society and class. In Aladdin city the residents are the first to call on the newcomers. This they do after having ascertained the position which the newcomers will occupy in society. If the resident does not care to continue the acquaintance after the first meeting, it will be discontinued by not leaving cards or by not calling again, and if the newcomers feel disinclined to continue the acquaintance they will return the call by leaving cards only.

Cards to inquire after friends during their visits to the city are left in person, and not sent by post. On a lady's visiting card may be written above the printed name, "To inquire."

If the person is not sufficiently recovered to meet the caller in person the usual visiting card is used, and "Thanks for kind inquiries" may be written thereon.

Aladdin society has regular reception days, which, being engraved on their cards, announces that save to intimate friends they are "not at home" except on the day announced.—New York Recorder.

The "Flour Ball."

In the "flour ball" familiar to the cooks for the nursery the starch has been boiled entirely out of the flour and the nourishing gluten alone is left. Gluten in a pulverized condition, the flour ball being always packed before being made into paste, is one only extremely nourishing, but serves to cure serious diarrhea. A serous diarrhea is one that shows the presence of too much of the serum or water component of the blood. Just tie up a bowlful of flour (without the bowl) in a stout napkin or pudding bag. Tie it tightly, for there is nothing in it that will swell with the heat. Throw it into boiling water and keep it boiling for six hours. Removing it from the fire, untie the bundle and let the yellow looking dumpling stand cool a little while. Then grate off the outside and use the inside. Dry it in the oven and grate it fine. Use it as you would any farinaceous food, as a pudding, in gruels, etc. Two tablespoonfuls of this gluten flour stirred into a cup of boiling milk or water. This is said to be "about all there is" in the expensive "granose," so well known as a good food for children. In any starch remains in the flour but it is so thoroughly cooked and jellied by the steaming it gets as to be highly digestible.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Earning Money for a Church Organ.

A clever woman in a small community realized a good start toward a new church organ, which will be the property of the congregation which she belonged, in an unusual way. To quote herself:

"People were always scolding to me for money for various specialties in the cooking line which I have, and about as often as I gave them would come the report of what success was in carrying them out. One day it occurred to me to give a practical demonstration of several of the best of my recipes for the benefit of the organ fund. The lading of the articles filled the bill. Then a fine cooking lesson was announced one afternoon. I was very nervous until I began, but soon forgot all embarrassment in my interest. The church parlor was crowded with the village women irrespective of denomination, drawn partly by doubt from the novelty of my task, but a number satisfied to go as an authority, and by the gauge my success when I tell you that I was obliged to give a course of five before I was let off.

This is a good suggestion to some notable housewife in other communities.—New York Times.

A "Man's House."

I was struck the other day by the unique criticism of one of the handsomest houses in Washington, which was under discussion by several of the most intimate friends of the house. The verdict that it was distinctively a "man's house" astonished me not a little, as I knew the feminine owner had left the impress of her exquisite taste upon every part of the beautiful home. The explanation, however, was simple enough. "Distinctively a man's house" had reference to the entire absence of spindling line and gold and similar useless bits of furniture, which were replaced by big, luxurious chairs and divans that could be really used upon without fear of breaking down, cushions intended for use rather than ornaments—though they happily combined the two requisites—and cushioned corners ad libitum throughout the house. An interior more in keeping with perfect taste it is not possible to find throughout the city. But the secret wherein lies the charm is that from cellar to attic there is nothing too good for daily use.—Kate Field's Washington.

Trying to Do Too Much.

There was once a woman who was the despair of all the other women of her acquaintance. Her house was as pretty as possible and always in perfect order. She kept it on a very small income and kept it beautifully; she made all her own clothes and those of her child; she trimmed hats for herself and all her sisters; she did fancy work; she painted chairs, thereby saving sometimes as much as seventy-five cents; she taught a class in a mission sewing school; she took lessons in cooking; she belonged to several charitable organizations—and the end of that woman was nervous prostration and a sanitarium.

Amid her many occupations she had somehow lost sight of the fact that a certain amount of amusement is necessary for the human mind as well as food. She had no fun at all, as fun is usually understood, in her composition, and so paid the bill for medical services, possibly reflected how much better and not only better, but cheaper, would have been a few hours than cure.—Leonard Miller Illustrated.

Children Need Sleep.

Children, until they are twelve or thirteen years old, should have at least ten hours sleep; eleven is better; until eighteen or nineteen, nine hours is none too much. In this country our children are high nervous temperaments. No hygienic measure soothes, quiets and strengthens the nerves like plenty of sleep. Children should never be allowed to sleep in the morning. Yet the demands of household conveniences and the claims of school make it necessary that they should be out of bed at a certain hour, usually not later than seven. To make this possible, and give them their fair share of sleep, so that they will be ready to waken of their own accord, they must be in bed between eight and ten, according to their ages. If bedtime is made pleasant to them, as mother love can make it, with a story, a little talk over the events of the day, with loving words and ministrations, the hardship of banishment to bed will be robbed of most of its bitterness.—Mrs. Scovil in Ladies' Home Journal.

Begin Early in Life.

Life's training should begin in earliest childhood, and indeed it is very easy at this time to inculcate habits of regularity cleanliness and obedience which cannot be acquired in later years without the greatest exertion. So very important is this that many a child's life has been rendered miserable for the lack of parental care and discipline to enforce obedience instead of allowing it to be self willed and obstinate, and this is also in a measure true of many parents who are but children of a larger growth, and who never had themselves proper parental supervision and instruction. They are therefore in their habits uncleanly, unsystematic and thoroughly inefficient. Children who have been brought up properly are better equipped physically as well as mentally to fight life's battles.—Baby.

For Girls with Brown Hands.

All girls are not the happy possessors of soft, white hands, but, on the contrary, some have brown hands—shapely perhaps—but not of that exceeding fairness so much coveted. Neither do lemon juice, gloves, nor oatmeal seem to help the matter much. Let the brown hands get cool wear, as no one else can wear, the quaint stones quaintly set, and the dark cameos deeply intaglioed. It is true that the ordinary rings in the ordinary settings—emeralds, turquoises, pearls and so on—do show to better advantage on white fingers, but the curious silver brass and steel to which I refer look well on brown fingers.—National Tribune.

Southern Women.

Mr. Thomas Nelson Page, in his book, "The Old South," has much to say in praise of the wives and mothers of the old regime. The master of the plantation, he says, "kept his shirt much of the year upon a competent overseer, but the mistress had no such means of relief. "Sheswas mistress, manager, doctor, counselor, nurse, sister, teacher, housekeeper, slave all at once." Such a woman was told by her husband that one of the gates was broken. "Well, my dear," she answered, "I'll send over some of my needle and thread, I would send it for you."

Mary E. Wilkins.

Mary E. Wilkins, the fair New Englander who has won lasting fame by her characteristic pen pictures of village life, is a frail bit of a girl scarce five feet in height. She is modest and unassuming to a degree, and her manner, while it shows the uncertain hand of a schoolgirl, are a surprise to the editor, who, handling them for the first time, expected to find in her chirography something of the confident touch of one conscious of her power.—Detroit Free Press.

Teething Not Dangerous.

Young mothers are often made extremely anxious by the harrowing tales told by old nurses of the calamities that befall babies during the "teething" period, and it is true that babies often suffer much pain for several days while each tooth is coming through the gum. But it is a natural process, and one which in most cases never makes the child sick. Many of the serious troubles of early childhood come from disorder of stomachs than from cutting teeth.—Dr. Baby.

A Sweet Oil Bath.

Pure sweet oil rubbed thoroughly all over the body, rubbing in all that the skin will absorb, will be found of very great benefit to infants, delicate children, the aged and any one who is thin or not strong. It is nutritious and strengthening, and given in this way the system is furnished with the fats it needs and could appropriate in no other way, as in case of weakened digestion. etc.—Good Housekeeping.

An Odd Woman's Club.

An odd woman's club exists in Paris. Its object is social intercourse, afternoon tea and gossip, and in further adherence to the general lines of men's clubs only wives of club men are eligible. The club is called the "Cercle des Femmes du Monde," and its club precincts are jealously guarded from masculine invasion.—New York Times.

Four thousand dollars a year apiece are the salaries of the Countess de Nurmel, Miss Etta Hughes and Fraulein Paula, who are respectively the Spanish, English and Austrian governesses of the infantas of Spain. Each receives, besides her salary, a home in the royal household.

Queen Victoria adds to her accomplishments that of clever stenling, her instructors in the art having been Sir Edwin Landseer and Thomas Landseer, who taught the use of the acid, and Mr. Holgate, who directed her in the art of printing.

In Germany babies are carried about on a pillow for the first three months, with the idea of keeping the back straight, and this is not at all a bad plan.

A FAREWELL RECEPTION

TO REV. DR CHARLES BAYARD MITCHELL LAST EVENING.

A Large Assemblage, Including Pastors of the Local Churches—Drs. Hurlbut, Yerkes and Mitchell Speak—A Happy Time Generally.

About four years ago Rev. Dr. C. B. Mitchell came from the West to the pastorate of the Methodist church, in response to a call.

He was a stranger here, but he did not long remain so, springing into popularity as an exceptionally good minister and good citizen generally.

During these four years he has continued to grow in favor, and, now, in the last year of his five-year term, in the height of his usefulness and influence, he is called to another though much larger field—the pastorate of a prosperous church in Kansas City.

He at first declined the call, but was finally persuaded to accept, if his people could be induced to release him. This they did when they learned all the circumstances, though reluctantly, and last evening a farewell reception was given him and his estimable wife, in the beautiful Vincent chapel.

There was a large attendance, among those present being many from other churches, including the pastors.

The occasion was enlivened by instrumental music.

After several selections had been rendered, Rev. Dr. Hurlbut got up in front of the assemblage, and made very appropriate remarks in behalf of the people, testifying to their appreciation of Dr. Mitchell's many estimable qualities generally, and to their regret that he is to depart from the church in Plainfield. Among other testimony to Dr. Mitchell's excellence here, Dr. Hurlbut said that he found one church of about 60 membership, and he leaves us with three churches, and an increased membership of between 200 and 300.

Dr. Hurlbut dwelt on the fraternal spirit existing between all the churches in Plainfield.

The pastors hold monthly meetings, and counseled with each other for the spiritual welfare of all the people, and a bond of good fellowship had been established which all appreciated.

Three pastors had come to Dr. Mitchell's farewell reception, and, on their behalf, Dr. Yerkes, the patriarch, was invited to speak. Dr. Hurlbut, said that Dr. Yerkes, though the patriarch of Plainfield pastors, was still young, and he had almost said "fresh." Dr. Yerkes made remarks showing the high regard felt for Dr. Mitchell by the local pastors. He had been present at the coming and going of many of the pastors of the Plainfield Methodist church, and he remembered them all, naming them consecutively, as a noble body of men.

When he had finished, Dr. Mitchell stepped forward from the audience, and acknowledged his appreciation of the kindly sentiments expressed.

If he had been successful in this field, he felt that by far the larger share of his success had been due to his better half.

To both of them Plainfield had been an Eldorado home, and they never expected to find another whose people were so excellent in every way.

He and his wife had traveled extensively in both in this country and Europe, but had seen no place which in their judgment equaled Plainfield as a place of residence, and, if they could make it so, it would become their permanent home.

He had been, he said, greatly helped in his work, not only by the people among whom he had ministered here, but also by the pastors of other churches, to whose unselfish spirit he could bear testimony. He thanked them all for the good they had done him, and assured them that no ordinary considerations could have induced him to sever the relations which had so long and pleasantly existed between them.

He had said, at Asbury Park last Summer, when approached on the subject, that he did not know of any considerations that would induce him to make a change, and, when the call he was now accepting was brought to him again recently, he twice refused it. When he finally consented, it was because he felt it was his duty to go to this larger field, much as he would have liked to remain where he was.

When he had concluded, refreshments were served by the ladies of the church from most beautifully and bountifully ladened tables, in the various adjoining and, on parting, all present shook hands with Dr. and Mrs. Mitchell, and expressed their well wishes for them in their new field.

A Runaway Last Evening.

A horse belonging to Mr. John Tier of Bank place, which had been left standing on Front street, near Peace, while the driver was delivering an order, about six o'clock last evening, started down Front street at break-neck speed, and ran as far as Somerset avenue, where it was stopped by the jam of vehicles that usually block that thoroughfare at that hour. No damage was done.

He has handled the township and borough moneys with unquestioned integrity. You cannot make a mistake in voting for him for Surrogate.—Unionist Gazette.

—Christopher Weiss, who while on his way to Newark with a load of hay, was accused of striking and injuring a boy on Front street a few days ago, has returned to town and was surprised at the charge, pronouncing it untrue. He says a man with a load of hay has a ticklish task to drive his horses safely on Front street when the trolley has gone there. On the day in question he says he was greatly annoyed by boys catching on behind, greatly endangering their lives. When they would not heed him on the day in question he stopped his team and dismounted to drive them away, and one of the boys in running slipped and fell. Mr. Weiss not even touching him, the fellow scampering off immediately afterward. He thinks the police ought to keep these boys from annoying drivers.

German Republicans To Meet.

The German Republicans of Plainfield and North Plainfield will hold a meeting in the Republican association rooms on East Front street, to-night. Hon. C. P. Hickinger of Ohio will be present and make an address.

A BARN SET ON FIRE

BY BOYS AT WESTFIELD YESTERDAY AFTERNOON.

Mr. Oliver Pierson Loses His Barn, Machinery, Wagons and Hay Barrack—The Boys are Known and are to be Arrested.

Yesterday afternoon, about half-past four o'clock, three small boys were seen to hurry out of Mr. Oliver Pierson's barn on Westfield avenue, Westfield, and run off down the road. A few minutes later the barn was enveloped in flames.

The fire engines turned out and put several streams of water on the blazing building, but without avail, and soon the fire had communicated to a hay barrack, nearby, and all were soon reduced to ashes.

Mr. Pierson had all his machinery and farming implements stored away for the Winter, and those were also consumed. His loss, owing to the burning of his wagons and machinery is quite heavy.

The boys who were seen going from the barn are well-known around Westfield as pretty rough characters, and warrants have been issued for their arrest.

One of the trio has but recently been released from the Reform School, where he was sent for incendiarism.

RIGHT IN THE WAY OF TWO TRAINS.

Three Persons Lives Endangered by a Horse Balking on the Railroad Track.

A horse, driven by a local groceryman, balked while crossing the railroad track at Bound Brook the other evening. The man had two children with him in the wagon. The position of the trio was extremely dangerous as two trains were approaching, one from the East and the other from the West and the driver and a flagman at the depot tried in vain to make the horse move.

Finding it impossible the flagman urged the driver to leave the horse.

This the driver refused to do until the last moment.

Fortunately, just when the last moment seemed to have come, the horse responded to the vigorous lashing it was receiving and sprang off the tracks just as the trains went by. It was a very narrow escape.

The Rev. Dr. Chas. B. Mitchell, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, will preach the closing sermon of his pastorate next Sunday evening. At the morning service he will administer the sacrament and receive new members.

Farmer Ephriam Acker of Washingtonville, has a horse which is thirty-three years old, and is doing its share of farm work with the younger horses. Mr. Acker is very proud of the old nag, and it looks surprisingly well for that age.

Mr. George Mahon, one of Plainfield's speedy wheelmen, expects to make Philadelphia his home after November 5, when he will sever his business connection with Mr. F. L. C. Martin and enter business with his uncle, Mr. Guilbert, of the firm of Guilbert & Co., printers, Philadelphia. Mr. Mahon will take with him the best wishes of his many friends in Plainfield.

Lecture by Bishop O'Farrell.

The Rt. Rev. M. I O'Farrell, Bishop of Trenton, will deliver a lecture next Sunday evening, at eight o'clock, in St. Joseph's church, Manning avenue, on the subject of "Christian Education." After the lecture he will administer confirmation to a small class of children. He will also celebrate mass in St. Joseph's church Sunday morning, at half-past eight o'clock.

A Republican "Smoker" at the Rink.

Let the "boys," gray and tow-headed, all turn out and give them a rousing welcome.

Found His Horse at Last.

William Nelson of this city had a horse stolen on Wednesday last. He left it standing on West Front street while he was engaged fixing a pump in a house. When he came out his horse was gone. After searching all over town Wednesday night and yesterday, the horse was found tied to a post on Second street.

TO MANUFACTURE TIN.

A NEW INDUSTRY STARTED AT ELIZABETH.

The First Sheet of Tin to be Turned Out To-Day—A Practical Demonstration of the Value of Protection.

Elizabeth is to taste the great benefits of the McKinley protective tariff bill.

The Morewood Tin Plate Manufacturing Company are erecting a plant in this city which will create an industry and give employment to a great number of American workmen.

The plant is situated at the foot of Bayway, between South Front street and the Staten Island sound, and when completed will cover about three acres of ground.

The erection has been going on for several months, and the first sheet was turned out to-day, when the works began permanent operation.

The buildings in which the work of manufacture will be carried on are constructed of steel and wrought iron frame and sheathed with corrugated galvanized sheet iron.

At present nothing but the process of tin plating will be done, but the remainder of the process will be in operation within a few months.

The plant will turn out 5,000 boxes of standard tin plate per week of a quality not excelled by any of that manufactured in Wales.

This will be made possible by the completed plant, which it will cost $250,000 to erect. The plant, as it began to manufacture, has been erected at the cost of about $75,000.

Mayor John C. Rankin, Jr., of Elizabeth had the proud honor of making the first tin plate produced in that city.

President Rogers said that the company would employ at least 200 hands when the plant began operation, and when in full operation there would be about 700 employes.

When questioned about the wages his employes would earn, Mr Rogers said that they would average $2.50 per day or $15 per week, while the more skilled will make as high as $25 per week. This, he said, was about three times the wages paid for the same work at the company's factory in Wales.

The work will be done as "piece work," but the employes will also be paid by the day.

Mr. Rogers said that a number of the Democratic free trade organs had printed articles, and some of the free trade organizations had caused to be circulated stories saying that the Morewood Company intended to have their Welsh workmen move to this country to do the work in the firm's factory. This assertion Mr. Rogers said was untrue, for his company intended to employ entirely American labor.

The firm will manufacture tin plate and what is known as turn plate. The former is sheet steel coated with pure tin. The latter is sheet steel coated with a mixture of tin and lead and used principally for roofing purposes. As the American tin mines are developing rapidly, the firm will use American steel, American tin and American lead, and will, by the employment of American labor, produce American tin plate.

Within a few months the entire area of ground now owned by the company will be covered with buildings. Eight rolling mills will be erected. Yet Democrats say Protection don't protect.

Fear a Water Famine.

Should there not be rain within a short time a water famine is feared in Rahway. Many cisterns and wells are dry. The city does not have any reservoir for storage purposes, but pumps direct into the pipes as fast as it is used. They are capable of putting 2,000,000 gallons into the pipes, but the river is unusually low. In East Rahway, where the water mains do not pass through some of the streets and citizens have used wells and cisterns, they are dry.

Not Enough Water to Run the Mills.

Various manufacturing interes in the vicinity of Dover, N. J., are suffering because of the protracted drouth. The big Dover Rolling Mill has been forced to shut down on account of low water, and Ross's and Baker's Silk mills at Luxemburg are likewise crippled. Not a drop of rain has fallen in weeks.

—He had been a attending a political meeting, and it was very late. He hoped that she had retired; but she hadn't. He had to invent some excuse, so he said: "Sorry, my dear, I couldn't get a car before, they were so crowded."

"So the cars were full, too," was the quiet reply.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

DOUBLE WRECK ON THE READING

Collision Follows Collision at a Siding Near Birdsboro.

READING, Pa., Oct. 28. (Special.)—Near Birdsboro, Pa., this morning, while a Philadelphia and Reading engine was shifting some coal cars, a long freight train came along and dashed into them.

Fireman Henry Kinzel and Engineer Eli Miller, of the freight, were severely injured.

Shortly after another freight train came along and dashed into the wreck. The locomotive was badly damaged and the train it was drawing was piled up in several places and the tracks were torn up.

This was the most disastrous freight wreck on the Reading road for years and it will take all day to clear up the debris.

NEW BRUNSWICK, Oct. 28. (Special.)—Nelson B. Smock, aged 63 years, a resident of Highland Park, and well-known throughout this part of New Jersey, died this morning. He had been ill several months.

Making Votes for Kean.

The fact that the people of this State are paying 26 per ton for coal is making more votes for John Kean, Jr., than all other influences combined. The Democratic claim that there is no law on the statute books of the State legalizing Coal Combine is not helping that party. The people know that the bill in question was prepared by Democrats and passed by Democrats and that Governor Abbett vetoed it at the demand of public sentiment after he had done all in his power to rush it through both houses of the Legislature.

The people are not fools, and the schemes of Abbett and his lieutenants have proved altogether too transparent to serve the purpose for which they were intended. The Coal Combine bill was an outrageous piece of legislation, and only the uprising of the people all over the State prevented it from becoming a law.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The New York Sun still believes in Professor Nipher's mathematical calculations for the speed of the trotter, which was to be 2:07 in 1892. The fact that Nancy Hanks has brought the time down to 2:04, which was not due till 1900, The Sun attributes to improvement in the sulky, not in horseflesh.

The City of Paris is as good as Nancy Hanks in breaking her own record. The record for the westward voyage is now 5 days, 14 hours and 24 minutes, shorter by an hour and thirty-four minutes than any hitherto made. If the fast ships continue thus to beat their own best time the voyage will become presently so short that the passenger will have no time to get seasick. Young people will not have time even to flirt, and the little social games in the gentlemen's room up stairs will be cut too short to make them an object. The City of Paris traveled 530 miles in one day during her recent voyage, and for the whole trip she made as fast average time as some American railway trains do. Under the circumstances, considering the date, the last voyage of the City of Paris might be called a Columbus feat.

Coughs and Colds.

The way to stop a cough is to stop it. In many instances the rasping coughs which people fall into the habit of giving forth at this season of the year are simply nervous. Perhaps there is an irritation in the throat. Do not encourage it. Sit on it. Just let it tickle awhile, and in many cases it will get tired and stop. But give up to it and begin to cough. The cough irritates the throat, and a mucous secretion appears. Rasp and hawk and expectorate till the secretion is poured out. The surface is still more enraged by that time, the nerves will work all the harder to secrete more mucus, and the human animal tears and splits his throat still more. A four legged animal would know better.

Occasionally the constant coughing and expectoration really result in consumption. A cough that starts from mere nervous habit has often been known to become a fixed habit and result fatally. If you don't want to bring on consumption, stop that coughing and spitting. There is one feature of it that the nervous cougher probably never thinks of. That is the nuisance he is making of himself to everybody within hearing. It is enough to drive a sensitive person mad—the disgusting hawking, scraping and barking of his next room neighbor who is determined to make the most of his little throat irritation. It is one of the things that make life not worth living. The less one gives way to the impulse to cough, the weaker will grow the impulse.

Cholera Inoculation.

Dr. Haffkine is the Russian bacteriologist who believes he has discovered a sure preventive of cholera by the method of inoculating with weakened cholera virus in a manner similar to that in which smallpox is stopped by vaccination. Dr. Haffkine has the courage of his convictions, for he announces that next summer when cholera makes its appearance again—if it does so—he will have himself inoculated in the bowels themselves with the prepared cholera virus. This test is so dangerous that he has permitted no one to pass it as yet, though numbers of Frenchmen have been inoculated in other parts of the body. Should Dr. Haffkine live to tell the tale of his experience he will feel himself entitled to announce that he has found means to meet and conquer the grisly specter of cholera, just as smallpox has been conquered by science.

Dr. Haffkine's announced intention recalls the fact that there was not much humbug in the test to which Aubrey Stanhope, the New York Herald's correspondent, subjected himself in the pest hospital of Hamburg when the cholera there was at its height. Mr. Stanhope was inoculated twice with the Haffkine virus, with an interval of three days between. First, Dr. Haffkine used a cholera virus that had been weakened by oxygen and heat. This produced a slight irritation in the stalwart young Englishman's system. The second time the virus was stronger. That time Mr. Stanhope felt as though "a thousand needles were running through him," and he lay by a day for rest. The virus was injected into the skin of the abdomen.

At Hamburg the correspondent acted as nurse to cholera patients in the death ward. He drank repeatedly of the deadly waters of the Elbe, ate his food with unwashed hands after handling and visiting the dying men, and finally slept upon the unchanged bedding of a man who had died of cholera, with a patient in the last stage in a cot each side of him. For days he lived in the cholera atmosphere, which he pronounces an "earthy, chloroformy stench." He took every possible precaution to get cholera that a man could, yet he did not take it. He passed through the ordeal with no unpleasant symptoms except a headache, which would naturally follow being shut in such a place. As soon as he got out he went to the medical congress at Brussels and gave his experiences. This test of course is not conclusive, but it looks much as though there was something in cholera inoculation.

CONFIDENT DEMOCRATS

New York and Thus the Election They Claim Is Theirs.

EQUALLY CONFIDENT REPUBLICANS.

Their Quiet Claims of Coming Victory Are Puzzling the Democrats and Each Party Is Watching the Other, Fearing That Some Coup d'Etat May Be Sprung.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—The events of the past few days have wrought a remarkable change in the political conditions of this state, and have upset many calculations which a week ago were considered reliable. The withdrawal of the County Democracy ticket in the city has complicated matters considerably. Assembly districts which, by reason of a third ticket, were likely to elect Republican assemblymen, are now thought to be surely Democratic, while on the other hand it is freely predicted that the withdrawal of the independent vote will lessen Mr. Cleveland's majority in this city. The talk now at the hotels and around the different political headquarters indicates that the feeling is that a Democratic United States senator will succeed Senator Hiscock and that the electoral vote of the state will probably be cast for Harrison.

In spite of the repeated assurances at Democratic headquarters that Cleveland is a sure winner, the Republican managers are puzzling some of the most astute Democrats by the quiet air of confidence displayed by them, and watchfulness is the order of the day.

The lines of battle are now so near each other that the councils of war are conducted in whispers, and the rank and file can almost distinguish the whites of the eyes of their opponents. Each army is watching for a coup on the part of the other, and the slightest movement is carefully guarded.

Senator Quay again visited Republican national headquarters, and passed an hour in consultation with Chairman Carter, General Clarkson and Mr. Manley. He spent the rest of the day at the Fifth Avenue hotel, receiving many callers, most of them from Pennsylvania. Mr. Quay still declined to express any opinion as to the result beyond his brief utterance, already published, that President Harrison would be re-elected.

The other leaders were not so reticent, but boldly proclaimed that there was no possible doubt of Harrison and Reid's election.

The Battle for Connecticut.

A Democratic newspaper printed a Hartford dispatch saying the Nutmeg state was in a dangerous condition from a Democratic standpoint, and advising the campaign managers to do something at once or Connecticut would be lost. Ex-Congressman Miles Freeman, the Democratic national committeeman from that state, was in town, and when he read the dispatch he perspired freely.

"I cannot understand," he said, "why a New York Democratic paper will print such absurd news, unless somebody at home is trying to make the national committee contribute a lot of money to carry on our campaign. The alarming report has no foundation. I regard Connecticut as safe for Cleveland."

That state is regarded as doubtful by both Democrats and Republicans, but its electoral vote is considered of vital importance this year.

Ex-Congressman Miles, of Connecticut, who has been nominated for congress, was at the Fifth Avenue hotel. He is a well known Republican leader and said: "The situation at home indicates a Republican victory on the protection issue. In the manufacturing and tobacco raising districts this sentiment is very strong, and I am almost certain the state will be carried by Harrison. Since the McKinley bill went into effect the tobacco raisers have made $16 more per acre than before, and they are naturally solid for protection."

Cleveland Addresses the Germans.

Cooper Union has held many great crowds during the present campaign, but last night's demonstration in behalf of Cleveland and Stevenson, under the auspices of the German-American Cleveland union, was attended by more people than any preceding it. At least 7,000 persons crowded into the hall proper, while so many more choked the corridors, overflowed into the street and covered all the surrounding sidewalks. When Mr. Cleveland came on the platform the spectators literally went wild. They mounted chairs and seats, and waved handkerchiefs, umbrellas and hats while cheer after cheer went ringing through the hall and out into the street, where they were taken up and repeated by the immense throng there.

Oswald Ottendorfer introduced William Steinway as chairman of the meeting. Mr. Steinway then introduced Grover Cleveland to those assembled. As the ex-president stepped forward the crowd rose again en masse and its members cheered themselves hoarse. When the cheering had somewhat subsided another element made itself apparent. A gust of hissing passed through the hall. This was quickly drowned by the deafening cheers that again broke out, but each of these led stopped the hissing was renewed.

Calmly waiting for the noise to cease, Mr. Cleveland stood impassive. Presently he began to speak, and he scarcely had uttered the formal sentence, "Mr. Chairman and fellow citizens," when a hush fell over the entire assemblage. Mr. Cleveland spoke in a clear, penetrating voice, and was easily heard in every corner of the hall.

Equality of Citizenship.

Mr. Cleveland took for his text his opening words, "Fellow citizens," and argued that equality in citizenship had been destroyed by the Republican party, concluding his speech in these words:

I interpret the organization and activity of the German-American union as a protest against the violation of the rights of its members in the fatherland, and I conceive this determination to be based upon the well founded claim of calling those our fellow citizens who are deprived of an equal participation in the advantages promised under free American institutions.

Let us always remember that unjust conditions are not due to any infirmity in the principles upon which our government is founded. They are sufficient for us in all our needs. Injustice is born of their perversion.

We are led, therefore, directly to the conclusion that the remedy for the present inequalities in the distribution of the benefits of our American citizenship is in the hands of the voters of the land, and that if there has been a departure from the lights which should guide the operations of our government it is for the people to demand a return to safe channels.

Let me warn you in closing that the struggle to secure the ratification of false methods and the development of selfish advantages is not an easy one. Attempts to enjoin our voters, successful in the past, are still continued, and bribery and corruption are still in vogue. It is only by intelligent argument, constant organization and unremitting vigilance that we shall secure the just and equal rights of benefits which belong to us as American fellow citizens.

Democratic Subscriptions.

As soon as Mr. Cleveland had finished the chairman introduced Hon. Carl Schurz. Mr. Schurz spoke in German. He said he was not an alarmist, but asserted that he saw a grave danger facing the republic in the strong and greedy money power which is striving to retain its puppets in office, and so purchase legislation for their own advantage and to enrich themselves still more at the expense of the majority of the people. Mr. Schurz's remarks were vigorously applauded. Overflow meetings were held outside the hall and were addressed by a large corps of speakers.

MacVeagh Makes Answer.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 28.—Hon. Wayne MacVeagh publishes an open letter to the editor of the New York Tribune in reference to the charge of dishonesty against him as embodied in Judge Gresham's decision cited yesterday. Mr. MacVeagh denies that he did any wrongful act and says: "The truth is that my part in the litigation to which you allude happens to be one of those acts about which a lawyer is entitled to cherish an honest pride, because it was a wholly unselfish effort, without hope of reward, to secure justice for a deserving person."

Democratic Subscriptions.

BUFFALO, Oct. 28.—About two dozen prominent local Democrats in full dress sat down to a subscriptions dinner in a private dining room of the Iroquois hotel last evening. Each of the gentlemen present subscribed $500, and some subscriptions from others who were unavoidably absent were added, making in all thirty subscriptions of $500 each or $150,000 in all, to be used in this city and county in furthering the election of Cleveland.

Democrats Arrested.

WILMINGTON, Del., Oct. 28.—Charles Mullen and Hill Reynolds, Democratic registration officers, were arrested in this city today and held in $3,000 bail each. This makes twenty-five Democratic registration officers arrested here. Willard Saulbury, chairman of the New Castle county Democratic executive committee, today issued an address, declaring that the arrests have been made for obstruction and intimidation.

Hill in Virginia.

LYNCHBURG, Oct. 28.—Senator David B. Hill received here the greatest ovation ever given to a prominent member of either political party in the state. Five thousand people met him at the depot and escorted him through the streets, and over 25,000 persons crowded to the fair grounds to hear him speak. He afterward addressed over 6,000 citizens in the big warehouse auditorium. The senator's speeches were loudly applauded.

Newport's Election.

NEWPORT, R. I., Oct. 28.—The elections resulted in the choice of Horton (Republican) for mayor over Honey (Democrat), the present incumbent, by a majority of 80 in a vote of 3,530. The Republicans also elected three out of five aldermen and ten out of fifteen councilmen.

Stevenson in Connecticut.

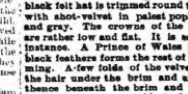
STAMFORD, Oct. 28.—Adlai E. Stevenson addressed a meeting of Democrats in the town hall, which was crowded to suffocation. Mr. Stevenson says he is confident of a Democratic victory.

King George's Golden Wedding.

ATHENS, Oct. 28.—The celebration of the royal golden wedding opened with service at the cathedral. King George and the queen consort drove to the cathedral through streets prodigally decorated with flags and arches. The route was thronged with cheering crowds. At the conclusion of the services the congregation rose and cheered the royal pair repeatedly.

A Would Be Murderer Dead.

BOSTON, Oct. 28.—Charles Heylan, who shot Mrs. William Gay and then himself, is dead. Mrs. Gay is recovering.



Autumn Headgear.

Narrow, black ostrich "tips" are very much in vogue. Velvet silk flowers are also in great favor and shot velvet is quite the autumnal trimming for hats and bonnets. A large and beautiful black felt hat is trimmed round the crown with shot-velvet in palest poplar green and gray. The crowns of the new hats are rather low and flat. It is so in this instance. A full wreath of White plumes in black feathers forms the rest of the trimming. A few folds of the velvet rest on the hair under the brim and are carried thence beneath the brim and over it at the back. A very wide-leafed hat in black rice-straw has a softening frill of black lace about the crown, and a group of lovely yellow roses forms the trimming. One of the prettiest hats seen is in black straw with not so wide a brim as the previous one, and covered with a thickly plaited frill of black lace. A band of green velvet surrounds the crown, and forms a few upright loops at the back with the lace, a few tea-roses being introduced among the latter. From a knot of velvet at the back issue the narrow black velvet strings that are so becoming to the face.

New Things in Veils.

The Columbian veiling is a novelty and is very pretty. The veils are of fine tulle, sprinkled with chenille or jet spots, and have an inch-wide border pattern in the same style on three sides. In heavier veiling, which is rather more becoming to the face than the fine black veils, the correct thing is a fine, loose woven and large meshed black veil, thick dotted with chenille.

These veils are usually large, and are gathered up under the chin and fastened to the back brim of the hat. In wedding veils the swallest thing is point appliqué, and the shape, instead of being square, is left oval four yards and a half long.

One end is left almost free from pattern, the fine net having only a few small sprigs and a border, which falls over the face. The rest of the veil is covered with most lovely designs, and falls over the entire train.

Ruche and Bodice.

The broad vandyke ruche of folded silk or satin, on which there has been such a run this season, is giving place to a deep corselet belt formed of inch-wide velvet ribbons. It is made in colors as well as in black and forms a pretty adjunct to an evening dress. The fashionable lace frill worn r and the top of low-necked bodices is now to be had ready-made. The new evening bodices are very light and lacy in appearance and are usually ornamented with either bibs or frills.

MRS. HARRISON BURIED

Her Body Laid to Rest in a Tomb Lined with Flowers.

ALL INDIANAPOLIS IN MOURNING.

The City Draped and Business Suspended in Honor of the Woman It Loved So Well—The Scene in the Church and at the Grave.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 28.—The funeral train bearing the body of Mrs. Harrison and its escort arrived here on time at 9:30 o'clock this morning, and was received at the depot in deep and reverential silence by thousands of bareheaded and crape rosetted citizens. All the way from Washington, particularly in Pennsylvania, every station was crowded with people anxious to catch a glimpse even of the car wherein the body lay, and at every point the same dead silence prevailed.

The presidential party found the capital of the state in mourning garb for its favorite daughter. The business streets, bright but a few days since with decorations in honor of the discovery of the continent, told mutely of the deep feeling that exists here for the dead wife and mother.

Somber drapery was to be seen on every hand. Flags were displayed at half mast from roof and window, and for block after block there was hardly a building that was not draped to a more or less elaborate extent.

The Grave Prepared.

At Crown Hill cemetery an ever changing crowd surrounded the grave diggers as they prepared the earth for the reception of the remains of the first lady of the land. When the grave had been dug to the requisite depth, Masonic fashion, brick stone were lowered and the seams cemented, and then loving hands lined the side of the vault and its appointments in beautiful flowers ready for the form of her so widely revered here.

Immediately on the arrival of the train the casket was borne by the pallbearers—Judge W. A. Woods, Thomas H. Sharpe, W. P. Fishback, Nowes G. McLain, Dr. H. R. Allen, John B. Elam, Hugh Hanna, E. B. Martindale, General Lew Wallace, of Crawfordsville; Hon. W. E. Niblack, of Vincennes; John B. Elder and Theodore P. Hanghey—to the hearse in waiting.

From the depot to the First Presbyterian church, where the funeral services were held, the route of the procession was lined by 5,000 members of the Grand Army of the Republic, who stood with uncovered heads as the cortege passed along. After the hearse had received its precious burden the funeral party was conducted to carriages, and the line moved by the way of Illinois to Ohio street, and thence by Pennsylvania street to the church.

The funeral procession was headed by a detachment of police. Then came in order carriages containing the officiating divines and the pallbearers. The hearse followed, and directly behind it the president and the immediate relatives, followed by the members of the cabinet and their ladies.

After these followed Governor Chase and the state officials, the ladies board of the Indianapolis home, the members of the state supreme court, intimate lady friends and carriages in general. The total number of carriages in line exceeded 100.

At the Church.

Around about the church there was a vast multitude assembled. Owing to the limited capacity of the edifice—about 800—but few of those who assembled obtained admittance, and many uniformed bodies were refused seats. An exception was made, however, in behalf of sixty members of General Harrison's regiment—the Seventieth—who were given seats in the south aisle. About one-third of the seating capacity of the edifice was reserved for the immediate family, relatives and friends, and after they were seated those of the general public who were first on the ground were admitted, until every seat was occupied. The doors were then closed.

The interior of the church presented a somber and yet beautiful appearance as the cortege passed through its doors. The front of the big organ behind the pulpit platform was entirely hidden with folds of drapery festooned in black and white, while above were three shields, similarly festooned and so arranged as to typify a burst of sunlight, the entire effect being extremely striking. The front railings of black ran the entire length of the edifice over the stained glass windows, relieved at each panel with monster rosettes of white.

Two large flags were draped over the front of the galley and beneath which the procession passed on entering the church. Nature was no other display of the national colors.

The ten side lights were festooned in black and white and smilax, while from each depended a cluster of carnations, roses and palm leaves. Beautiful snow white chrysanthemums, towering to a height of eight feet, supported either side of the pulpit, while before it were palms, exotics and long, graceful ferns.

Back of the pulpit and surrounding the organ a profusion of plants, palms and flowers in bloom filled the air with fragrance. The casket was placed immediately in front of the pastor's table, and at its head was placed a vase filled with jessica chrysanthemums, eight feet in height. There were heavy drapings over the exterior of the two entrance doors of the church.

The Simple Service.

In accordance with the president's desire the services were very simple. As soon as the doors of the church were closed Cardinal Newman's hymn, "Lead, Kindly Light," was rendered by the choir, and Rev. Dr. Haines, Mrs. Harrison's pastor during the latter years of her residence in this city, delivered a short invocation. A selection of scripture was then read, and the pastor made a brief address. The mourners were led in prayer by Rev. Dr. Hyde, of the Congregational church, and after the rendition of the hymn commencing, "One Sweetly Solemn Thought," Dr. Haines pronounced the benediction.

The doors were then reopened, and the pallbearers again lovingly carried the casket to the hearse. The carriages again took up their burden of mourners, and the procession, passing through crowds of citizens that lined both sides of the way, wended its way to the cemetery.

At the grave a short passage of scripture was read, and a prayer was offered as the casket was lowered into the vault. This service occupied but a few minutes, and the president, with bowed head and streaming eyes, was followed to the carriages and out of death's city by his sorrowing relatives and friends.

There was an almost complete cessation of business during the day, as most of the business houses had already decided to close before Mayor Sullivan issued his proclamation. Many industrial establishments also suspended operations for the day.

LAWLESSNESS AT HOMESTEAD.

Assaults Multiply and Matters Are Growing More Serious.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., Oct. 28.—Matters are growing more serious here every day. Assaults upon assaults are being committed, but thus far no person upon whom to rest the blame has been apprehended. The authorities and express themselves as anxious to have the matter cleared up, and when it is they say a startling truth will be brought to light.

Last night John Horner and George W. Fyock, nonunion workmen who were carrying a keg of beer, were set upon by twenty men and boys. Horner received a pistol ball in his left shoulder.

He and Fyock then returned the fire of their assailants and about twenty shots were exchanged. A boy named Clark was shot in the leg. A force of deputy sheriffs appeared and dispersed the crowd, making three arrests.

Seventeen additional deputies have arrived from Pittsburg and were immediately assigned to duty. Sheriff McCleary is hourly expected later, and will bring with him thirty-four deputies. A sheriff's proclamation has been posted throughout the town warning all disorderly persons that they will be arrested on view and without warrant, and that any who resist arrest will do so at their peril.

CREAM WAS A FIEND.

A Confession That Made His Counsel's Hair Stand on End.

LONDON, Oct. 28.—Thomas Neill Cream, the condemned murderer, has confessed that from 1874 to 1891, when he was arrested in Chicago, he made a practice of poisoning dissolute girls in Canada. His numerous victims, he says, were buried without suspicion on the part of anybody that they had died unnatural deaths.

All information as to Thomas Neill Cream's confession comes from Mr. Waters, his solicitor. Mr. Waters says that he probably will not make the details public until after the execution.

Cream has refused to him everything criminal in his Canadian career, minutely described the girls murdered, his methods in killing them and his devices to escape detention.

"He fairly made every hair on my head stand on end," said Mr. Waters. "His story was startling beyond anything I have ever before heard." After his confession Cream became angry at Mr. Waters and threatened to "do" him after the trial. Mr. Waters refused absolutely to make any further statement.

A MASSACRE OF AZTECS

Mexican Soldiers Annihilate an Entire Village of Indians.

NOT ONE PRESENT ESCAPED DEATH.

The Bloody Work Was Done by the Express Command of President Diaz, but His Troops Paid Dearly for Their Victory in the Fight Which Occurred.

EL PASO, Tex., Oct. 28.—News of the annihilation of the Tomocniens, a people who inhabit a village of Tomocnio and who are nearly pure Aztecs, was received here last evening and further confirmed by reports today. Tomocnio is situated on the direct road to Guerrero and Jesus Maria, in the mountains of southeastern Chihuahua, Mex., and has been in open rebellion against the state and federal governments for more than a year on account of excessive taxation, extortion by government officials and government interference in their religious beliefs.

The government two months ago sent the One Hundred and Tenth battalion, in command of General Ranjel, to make the people pay the tax required of them and accept government officials appointed to take charge, or to kill every one of them.

This alternative was openly boasted of by officers in Chihuahua before the troops started for the town, and when the Tomocniens heard of it they decided to fight it out, as they knew that even should they receive the soldiers peaceably they would be shot on the slightest provocation.

Diaz Ordered Annihilation.

When the soldiers made their descent on the village they were met and driven off, with twenty-two officers and fourteen men killed and two officers and forty-five men taken prisoners. The prisoners were confined on top of the adobe church. General Ranjel was the only officer who escaped. When the news of this affair reached the ears of President Diaz he decided to annihilate the village, and when the people were notified they answered, "God is with us and we will not be taken."

Soldiers left Chihuahua two weeks ago, and formed a junction with others from Pinos Altos and Guerrero to the number of 1,200, and last Monday an attack was made on all sides. The Tomocniens all gathered together and with their families took refuge in the church and awaited the attack, which took place at about 10 o'clock.

At dusk the soldiers gained an entrance to the church and a terrible hand to hand fight occurred. The soldiers completed the massacre with 326 of their number killed and many wounded.

The village the next day presented a terrible view. The streets of the little village leading to the church were filled with bodies, and blood seemed to have flowed in torrents. Not a man of the Tomocniens was left except those who happened to be out in the mountains, but the government has paid dearly for its victory.

The Tomocniens were some time ago a very wealthy people in cattle and farms, but the lack of rain and the failure of their crops had brought them to poverty, and they were unable to exist under the extortion of the government and its petty officials, and were brought near to starvation. They were very hospitable, and some weeks ago when several parties of Americans passed through from Guerrero to Chihuahua they were treated kindly and well cared for, though the government officials objected to their going and told them the Tomocniens were bandits.

The feeling against the government is very strong, and the incident has been called the second Alamo, which will bring fight and liberty to the Mexican people as it did to those of TEXAS.

THE HEALTH WOMAN.

THE BLOND ASKED ABOUT HER AND THE BRUNETTE TOLD HER.

Then They Talked About Other Things. The Blond Explained All About Good Society and Won the Undying Gratitude of the Brunette.

It was in a very positive tone that the brunette said to the blond, "I saw a health woman yesterday."

And the blond asked in a surprised way "What is a health woman?"

With an air of knowing a great deal the brunette informed her. "A health woman is a woman who goes without stays because they are unhealthy, who wears divided things and not silk petticoats, who disapproves of bangs, who eats all sorts of nasty messes made of gritty things, and who declares by her every act that thoughts can be lofty unless her heels are low."

"Oh, bother," said the blond, "that is what the London street boy calls 'Tommy rot.' That isn't a nice thing phrase, but it applies to just such idiots. They like to talk about our grandmothers being healthy, and yet, according to all accounts, our grandmothers went with their necks bare and in satin slippers when our streets were not half as cold as they are now. And that is not saying much. The general woman, my dear, is very sensibly dressed; she doesn't approve of the hour-glass waist, for she knows that stamps her either as an idiot or a lady whose reputation is undoubted. She wears a properly made corset, which shapes itself to her figure and is a thousand times more sensible and more comfortable than the hideous combination of muslin and bones that the health people try to foist on her.

"She knows if she does that her nose will get red, and she is not going to be such a goose as to bring this calamity on herself." As for the combination undergarments they are so diabolically awful to get into that they would ruin the temper of an angel. They are positively unbeautiful, very apt to rest you on the shoulders and certainly to be unhealthful. Skirts are a sensible length today, and no woman who is a smart dresser wears anything but a medium heel on the street, and she doesn't permit herself to make ungraceful movements by wearing tight fitting sleeves.

"Of course her petticoat hangs from her hips—that's what the Lord made them broad for. He never intended her to wear suspenders; if he had he would have made her the shape of a man. A woman I know, who never has a cold, who escaped the grip, and who is certainly healthy and wise, told me exactly how she dressed in winter. She keeps her rooms at summer heat, her underwear consists of a silk vest, a pair of lawn drawers, long silk stockings, a very light weight flannel skirt, a silk skirt and then her dress. Over her dress she wears a very heavy gown, but when she goes out into the cold air she puts on a fur coat that is like that famous one of Balzac's Seraphita—'warm to touch.' Now, you see, really, we women don't want our dresses reformed; they are quite sensible enough. What we want to do is to make our belongings suit our surroundings, and not sit in a hot room with a thick frock on and then put on a thin coat to go out into the cold air. You see, we want to exercise the small amount of common sense that we have, and convince the world at large that we are not lacking in grey matter."

"It is so nice," said the brunette, "to know you, because you always explain things. But I will tell you something funny I saw the other day. The very first thing that the new rich wants is a crest, and I have been watching those on the freshest carriages. On a brougham that is a little too smart, which goes up the avenue every afternoon, is a shield in full relief above it is a cock crowing and the motto underneath in French is, 'All or nothing.'"

"Tust is funny," said the blond. "It probably means that the person who pays for it is cock of the walk, and that the young woman who rides signifies by the ship her desire to go in the swim."

"Then," said the brunette, "there is still another one; it shows three steps with a cross laid upon them, and I can in French is, 'Audacity, audacity and again audacity.' I can't understand, though, what the cross has to do with it."

"Oh, that is easy enough to understand," said the blond. "It means that the audacity, in the shape of the bank book, will try to ascend the steps that lead to the Patriarch's ball, but that there is a cross in the way in the form of one or two gentlewomen, who believe that good society is not that which is governed by money."

"Well," asked the brunette, "what is good society?"

"Good society," answered the blond, "is where you and I are, but to go a little further, it is that society where one earns one's title of gentlewoman not only by birth, but by good manners."

"Yes," said the brunette, "and it is that society where to understand Greek is of small importance, and to thoroughly comprehend courtesy in all its laws is a necessity."

"It is that society," added the blond, "where men are respectful, where off color stories are not told, and where women, once discovered to be untruthful, deceitful and ill-bred, are ostracised."

"True," answered the brunette, "it is that society which, while it recognizes the value of the conventionalities, is yet sufficiently strong to be occasionally guided by the dictates of the heart, and it does not of necessity follow a hunter, as sheep do."

"Then," thought out the blond, "good society is that which can give a dinner or have its daughter introduced without telling notices to the newspaper, which believes that the family in its happiness is of more importance than the world at large should know the price in your pocket of the money in your bank. To sum it all up, good society has for its cornerstone consideration, and good society cannot exist without this, for it means the care as to other people's feelings and a general kindliness all around."

"You do love such a lot," admiringly said the brunette.

"Yes," said the blond, "I do."

And after this frank confession of her intelligence she went and drank four cups of strong tea and ate two pieces of plum cake, claiming that both the tea and the cake fed her brain.—New York Sun.

Housekeeping Schools.

Housekeeping schools seem to flourish more generally on the other side of the sea than with us. Switzerland has schools that be called the pioneers, one of these supports ing a restaurant for about 100 people. In France this branch of study is to a degree controlled by the state, and the aim is to teach girls a self supporting occupation. London has ninety four model kitchens. Attended by nearly 20,000 pupils, who prepare food for sale. Germany has the greatest number of these schools, with practical courses including washing, ironing, cooking, the cleaning of rooms, etc.

Taken at Her Word.

"You cannot always take your own medicine or even be measured by your own standards," said a woman recently who prided herself upon living according to hygienic laws, "and who could enjoy a joke even at her own expense. "I was at a reception not so many years ago," she said rather dismally, "and was playing upon the piano to entertain a small group of friends, when a man who had shown me considerable attention suddenly interrupted me by asking, 'If you were very much interested in a young woman what considerations would prevent you from asking her to marry you?'

"Well, I of course was somewhat taken aback, not being in the mood for a scene right then and there, and I turned around and answered: 'Well, I never should propose to a woman I have met only at receptions and in company. I should make it a point to call upon her at all sorts of unexpected times, to see how she looked at home in the morning, whether she went about in an old wrapper with disheveled hair and slipshod, whether she helped her mother or lolled about reading novels until noon. A man makes a great mistake when he takes it for granted that the woman he admires possesses all the domestic virtues in a calm manner and is always attractive and amiable.' In fact," she added, "I gave him a long lecture on the subject, for which he thanked me.

"I may add that I never met the man again. Next morning, contrary to my usual custom, I slept until nearly noon. Arriving down at 10 o'clock breakfast, Mr. H—— had already called three times."—New York Herald.

A Girl's Education.

Education in a New York private school of high class is expensive and elastic, says a writer who has been investigating the subject. It costs about $1,000 from October to early June, and for this sum a young woman is housed in an elegant home in a fashionable locality, is fed on choice fare, served by well trained maids and looked after morally, socially and physically by refined and well bred women. This in addition to a more or less elaborate course of study, of which the nine gun note is the modern languages. In addition there are plenty of extras, such as singing, painting, dancing, etc., making it easy to spend $1,000 more in your choice of the money in your bank. To sum it all up, good society has for its cornerstone consideration, and good society cannot exist without this, for it means the care as to other people's feelings and a general kindliness all around.

"You do love such a lot," admiringly said the brunette.

"Yes," said the blond, "I do."

And after this frank confession of her intelligence she went and drank four cups of strong tea and ate two pieces of plum cake, claiming that both the tea and the cake fed her brain.—New York Sun.

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

Arthur Hartmann.

There is an American boy only ten years old who by his musical talent has created quite a stir in this country and in England. His name is Arthur Hartmann. He was born in Philadelphia, and ever since he was six he has played the violin at concerts to big audiences. Arthur studied at the New York College of Music, and New Yorkers have heard him play the compositions of Paganini and Casner and Raff and Tscheculin and other great musicians.

Arthur is abroad now, and they make a great fuss over him in London drawing rooms.

A Poser.

Tom Duffee is a devotee of amateur photography, and one of those enthusiasts who can never see one of his family in a comfortable position without insisting upon taking a plate on the spot. He always prepares for the process by twisting the sitter into some outlandish attitude on the plea of making things more artistic.

Not long ago there was an informal exhibition of the work of a photographic club to which Tom belongs, at which were displayed the results of the efforts of members to immortalize their friends.

In one corner hung a group of figures twisted into the most extraordinary positions, the general effect being that of pictures taken from sitters partially paralyzed.

"Who in the world are these persons?" one of the visitors asked, gazing before them and examining them with interest.

"I know nothing about it," responded a bystander, "but they look to me like some of Tom Duffee's strained relations."—Youth's Companion.

No More Deadhead Fame.

We are again compelled to announce that obituary notices will be charged for at the rate of five cents per line. Announcement of death, not exceeding five lines, free. We have given up much space in these columns to such matters, and in almost every instance neither the parties themselves nor their immediate relatives have ever contributed a nickel to sustain this paper, directly or indirectly. Those who want newspaper fame after death must make arrangements for its publication or they'll be left.—Townsend (Mon.) Messenger.

Sharp Ranking.

Most readers must have seen the little tin savings banks for ten cents, now seldom came into vogue two or three years ago. The cylinder holds fifty dimes and cannot be opened until it is full.

Such a bank was given to a little girl and her brother. It contained one dime—a neat one. The day was warm, and pretty soon the desire of the joint owners of the bank to convert the deposit into two glasses of soda water became all but uncontrollable.

The question was how to get the money out. Finally the boy—destined probably to become a Napoleon of finance—hit upon a plan and, borrowing his sister's knife, set deep down into the bottom of the bank a cent drug store. There he explained the situation to the man behind the counter and broached his plan of operations.

In short order the man had lend him forty-nine ten cent pieces for a minute or two. The man was ready for a customer, produced the needed coins, and the little boy and girl went home penniless and happy.—New York Recorder.

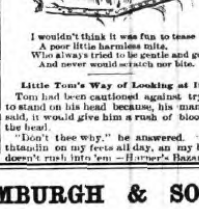
English Boys' Bands.

The biggest boys' band in the world is at Knellor hall, situated midway between Hounslow and Twickenham, about ten miles from London. The boy students vary in number, ranging from 150 to upward of 200. There is no other boys' band as large as this one, which has played 150 and 200 strong. The school turns out about eighty bandsmen every year, thoroughly equipped for taking a place in the ranks of the army bands.

The Duke of York's school, Chelsea, generally has about 120 boys in the band, exclusive of learners, able to perform ordinary music in a creditable manner. They are all the orphan sons of soldiers, and eventually join the army. This boys' band is organized in the same way as a regimental one, having its master, sergeants, corporals, drum major, etc. Their instruments are made in a reduced size, and the boys wear distinctive clothing.—London Tit-Bits.

Pussy's Protest.

If I were a little girl like you,
And you were a little cat,
I wouldn't stand with a cup of milk
In front of you, like that.



I wouldn't think it was fun to tease
A poor little harmless mite,
Who always tried to be gentle and good,
And never would scratch nor bite.

Little Tom's Way of Looking at It.

Tom had been cautioned against trying to stand on his head because, his mamma said, it would give him a rush of blood to the head.

"Don't thee why," he answered. "I'm thtanding on my feets all day, an my blood doesn't rush into 'em.—Harper's Bazar.

What He Is.

The tramp had expended for a dime and had it safe in his pocket.

"Why don't you go to work?" asked the donor of the dime.

"I don't have to," he replied.

"Why not? Have you enough money to live on?"

"No, sir, but I have a position, sir."

"But I thought you said you didn't work?"

"I don't."

"And you have no private fortune?"

The tramp smiled negatively.

"Then what kind of a position do you hold?"

"I'm the connecting link between labor and capital. See?"—Detroit Free Press.

LATEST IMPROVEMENT ON MOUNTAIN AVENUE.

To be Put Along the Front of Mr. Charles Hyde's and Mr. John Taylor Johnson's Property—Another Rumor of an Extensive Street Railway Scheme.

Workmen have been engaged for some time past clearing, fencing and improving the extensive properties on Mountain avenue, owned by Messrs. Hyde and Johnston.

The latest improvement, now well under way, is the planting of two hundred and fifty trees, which when grown to arch the roadway will make Mountain avenue the prettiest thoroughfare for miles around.

The next improvement, it if said, will be the building of a number of handsome and costly residences for New York people.

A rumor is gaining ground of the proposed joining by street railway, of the cities and villages between Plainfield and Elizabeth or Newark, to all of which mountain avenue is the most direct route. The proposed Peace street extension would give a direct opening to the depot.

—White & VanArsdale are offering inducements of the best kind to keep the trade of Plainfield at home. They have a large, roomy store, well stocked with new desirable goods, crockery and refreshments, all so well assorted that shopping they say is a pleasure. They also announce that they deliver goods everywhere hereabouts free of charge.

—One hundred and fifty men of Plainfield were told that if they would be at the depot on a certain night this week the Democratic leaders would pay their fares to Elizabeth and back. They met that night get their naturalization papers. They were on hand, but then being told that they must pay their fares themselves they declined and returned swearing vengeance on the Democrats for trying to dupe them. Last night they went to Elizabeth fin a body, and were naturalized, and from their delarations it seems that they will vote the Republican ticket. If they do, it will mean an increased Republican majority in Plainfield. Perhaps the reason that the Democrats backed down was that they feared the men had better sense than to vote against their own interests, by voting the Democratic free trade, wild cat money, the coal combine, the party of ballot box frauds, and unnecessary high taxes due to wasteful public expenditures.

POLITICAL PICKLES.

Mr. C. H. Pennypacker is to address the Republicans at the Rink Tuesday night.

Mr. Kean is a hustler, says the Newark Daily Advertiser. He is indeed. He has visited every section of the State, has made friends wherever he went, and is making one of the most vigorous canvasses ever made in the State of New Jersey.

Republican Rally at Millstone.

There was a rousing Republican mass meeting held at Millstone last night. The meeting was addressed by Hon. Wm. T. Hoffman, Republican candidate for Congress, Edward W. Hicks, of New Brunswick, and others. The address of Mr. Hicks was a brilliant effort and replete with solid facts on the important issues before the country in the present campaign. He was repeatedly cheered.

The Farmer is Protected.

Cuba and Porto Rico used to buy all their potatoes of Canada. Things have changed since the McKinley tariff passed. Not only have foreign potatoes been shut out of our market almost entirely by the McKinley duty and the home market thus religiously secured to our own farmers, but the reciprocity clause of that tariff law has opened up a market for about 1,000,000 bushels of potatoes annually in Cuba and Porto Rico. Reciprocity has won free admission for our potatoes to these markets, while Canadian potatoes would have to pay over a dollar a barrel. Result, no Canadian potatoes sold to Cuba and Porto Rico now. They buy of us exclusively.

"The Democrats of Warren Township," said a resident to-day "have clean bolted their party, and are going in a body over to the Republican. They are against the men put up for office, and will vote for the Republican's man, whom they consider the best. It is a question of men, not politics, and, as usual, the Republicans have the best."

PERSONAL.

Mr. Elon S. Rogers, formerly of this city but now of Newark, visited friends here to-day.

"Freddie" Jones has been re-engaged by the Crescent League management, as manager of their club house, for another year.

Mr. J. Ran Dunn of West Fourth street will start Monday morning for Ashville, N. C. He will spend the Winter in that celebrated resort for the benefit of his health.

The funeral of the late Mr. Edward H. Hanigan of Craig place, North Plainfield, took place at 3.30 o'clock this afternoon. Interment was made at the Hillside Cemetery.

At the recent convention of the Protestant Episcopal church, just held in Baltimore, Md., the Rev. T. Logan Murphy of North Plainfield was elected one of the Trustees of the American Building Fund Commission.

The death occurred this morning of the four-year-old son, Henry, of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Rummell of this city. The funeral services will take place Tuesday afternoon, at 2:30 o'clock, at the home of his parents.

William Holmes, Jr., was the part of "Buethorne" in Patience, in a Plainfield gentleman with a promising voice. Both the second John Coach (Major) were worthy of the kind words which were so freely bestowed upon them by the audience.—Westfield Leader, referring to a recent entertainment there.

The Young Ladies' Missionary Society of the First Baptist church, is making extensive preparations for a fair to be held December 15th, and 16th, at the "Homestead" on Washington avenue. Mrs. Jane Roome to whom the property belongs has kindly placed it at the disposal of the young ladies, who intend using all the rooms for their entertainment, which, from the plans made, promises to be very unique. It will be duly advertised.

DISHED THE WHEEL.

A Young Man's Careless Driving Causes an Accident.

As Miss Margaret E. McLoughlin, of North Plainfield, was driving along Somerset street yesterday, Mr. Bloom of Washington Valley, by his careless driving, caused a collision.

His heavier wagon dished one of the wheels of Miss McLoughlin's buggy.

They Stole His Wheelbarrow.

Special Officer Hope of Richmond street is annoyed by boys living in that vicinity, who steal his wheelbarrow. It was stolen on Tuesday night, and Wednesday he found it on the railroad near Richmond street. Yesterday morning when Hope went out to the yard, his wheelbarrow was gone again, also some of his coal, which was in the shed back of the house.

Another Dog Poisoned.

A little pet dog of Mr. Bovey's of Somerset street, was poisoned last week and died yesterday morning in spite of all efforts to save its life. The dog was never known to leave its owner's grounds, so the owner feels that the poisoning was done through pure maliciousness.

After the Chief's Degree had been conferred on nine applicants, Past Sachem Magee, Adams and Seaman of this city made interesting speeches. The entertainment wound up with recitations by "Brothers" Carney and Newcorn. After the entertainment refreshments were served by the Good of the Order Committee.

—Rain before seven, clear before eleven" says the adage, and one who has watched the weather for some time says he has never known it to fail. It was true for Sept. 29, for it rained before seven and was clear before eleven.

SEVEN PINE TREES.

THEIR DESTRUCTION CAUSES A CHURCH ROW.

Three Mt. Horeb Church Trustees Vote to Have Some Trees Cut Down, Without Consulting Other Interested Parties and a Scarl is the Result.

There were seven large pine trees in front of the graveyard along side the Mt. Horeb Methodist church until a short time ago. Then four trustees met and three of them voted to have the seven trees cut down, claiming that they spoiled the looks of the graveyard and damaged the tombstones. The fourth trustee voted against the others, but the majority ruled and the trees were cut down.

There are seven trustees in the church, and it is claimed that not only should a full attendance have been held before the subject of destroying the trees was considered, but that the matter should have been laid before the members of the church also, who have, as a body, been angered at the destruction

Anyhow, the trees were cut down and the three trustees have stirred up a "Mt. Horeb Tempest" on account of their action.

PLANT SHOW AT SHORT HILL.

Chrysanthemums and Orchids in Great Variety.

The United States Nurseries, at Short Hills, are crowded every afternoon with visitors to the annual exhibition of plants, chief of which are the chrysanthemums. The display includes orchids and palms, and is even finer and larger than the past exhibitions of these nurseries.

Chrysanthemums are shown in all their sizes, shapes, and colors. There are 48,000 plants in all exhibited, and of these 35,000 are seedlings. All the hothouses devoted to "the flower of Japan" are ablaze with rich red and golden flowers, in contrast with the paler and pure white blooms.

The "specimen house" is perhaps the handsomest of all, and is arranged to resemble a Japanese garden. It contains 251 of the choicest plants, of different varieties, and trained into many shapes, the blossoms of one of them each forming a disk six feet in circumference. These are going to the Madison Square Garden Flower Show.

Next to the chrysanthemums the orchids make the handsomest display. They include among other the speckled Cypripedium fairieanum, which is extremely rare. Many of the visitors spend hours in studying these oddly shaped and colored plants, and they are well worth a careful examination.

When he is satiated with beautiful flowers the visitor has only to step into the "fern houses" and he will find himself in a wilderness of palms and ferns, the heads of some of which stand twenty-two feet from the floor, while their trunks measure six feet around.

The United States Nurseries will continue their "private view" from ten o'clock each morning until five o'clock in the afternoon up to and including Nov. 9.

Not as Fine as Union's.

The Middlesex Democrat referring to the construction of the stone road system commenced in that county says: "Judging from the appearance of the work thus far accomplished of macadamizing, the quality of the work will be nowhere near as fine as that done on the Union county roads. If a thing is worth doing at all, it is worth doing well, especially a permanent improvement."

EDITORIAL NOTES

A Model Club.

Mrs. C. C. Chickering furnishes to The Christian Union a paper containing some admirable suggestions for winter evening gatherings of both men and women. In 1890 Mrs. Chickering originated the Current News club, an association of ladies. It came about in this way: She tells us she all at once found herself left behind in the march of current events. If she went anywhere of an evening with her husband he and his gentlemen friends would talk about the increased speed of Atlantic steamers, or some other interesting news of the day.

The women knew nothing of these things, but talked together of children and servants. She found that she herself, along with the other women, knew nothing about what a majority of the intelligent people of the world were interested in. So, just two years ago this October, she proposed to some of her women friends to meet her for an hour or more one afternoon of the week, each lady bringing with her some news item that was occupying public interest.

The ladies adopted the suggestion. Ever since on each Monday afternoon the women meet from 3 to half past 5. They are among the wisest women of their day, for they let past history alone and learn all they can about the history of today. "Our aim is to keep in touch with the history that is making," says Mrs. Chickering.

Among other matters they have kept up with the history that is making in regard to the Chili trouble, the McKinley bill and the Nicaragua canal. Only two papers have been read since the beginning, one a resume of the Farmers' Alliance platform, the other Mr. Blaine's letter on the New Orleans riot. The rule is that all must be spoken of hand. This is about the best feature of the club. The women speaking extempore get a command of language and memory that gives them ease of manner and confi*dence in themselves. The lady congrat*ulates herself and her fellow members that now and hereafter when their chil*dren ask them some question of current* history these club mothers will not be obliged to say, "Ask papa."

Such a club not only learns facts, but, what is far better, learns to think about them.

The French Conquest of Dahomey.

The succession of victories and the rapid approach of the French in Dahomey to Behanzin's capital are owing to the military skill of Colonel Dodds, the mulatto commander of the army of France in this part of Africa. Colonel Dodds' mother was a full blooded Senegalese negro. His ancestry on the fa*ther's side is evidently partly English.* He is familiar with the language of the Senegalese and the mode of warfare of the wild black tribes in west Africa.

This has given him a great advantage in his campaigns. He is a man of undaunted courage and perseverence, and will win lasting distinction in this war against Behanzin. He is besides a great favorite with his brother officers. Evidently there is no color prejudice in the French army. Moreover, here is one man of negro blood who possesses considerable military qualities.

What the French will probably do in Dahomey after they have closed in on Behanzin is thus outlined by the Paris correspondent of the London Times:

The French strategy will probably be quite different from what Behanzin expects. Instead of waiting for the capital and advancing beyond, which might be dangerous, Colonel Dodds will most likely content himself with occupying Uidah, the suburb below Abomey, and the royal burial place. If this plan is carried out Behanzin will lose his religious prestige, his soldiers will desert and suicide will be his only resource.

The French would then cut up Dahomey into three or four principalities or provinces, each under a man chosen or approved by France, and under the supervision of a French resident. This mild kind of protectorate would be preferred, as France has no desire to annex Dahomey or to incur fresh embarrassments. She feels that the conquest of Dahomey is scarcely worthy of the efforts of a civilized nation, for European visitors with that region began with a traffic in slaves, and that traffic cannot even now be said to have entirely disappeared.

The first thought of an American visiting Westminster abbey is that it would be the better for a good housecleaning and airing. Even some of the British worshipers of Westminster begin to wonder whether a house in which over 3,000 corpses are buried does not at length begin to smell bad, especially as the British have been going on for nearly 1,300 years. It is a splendid old pile, but to the mind of a non-Briton it is nearly time to draw the line on burials there. Only greatness of the extremest, biggest sort can be a consideration sufficient to atone for adding to the bad air in those places. When a grave was made for the poet Browning it was in a spot in which three other persons had been interred previously. Room enough was found for Tennyson beside Browning. In the good old times which some people regret, any one who had money enough could be buried in Westminster, but the English have become more particular of late years.

Probably the church that has changed pastors most seldom since the country was first settled is the First Parish Unitarian church in Gloucester, Mass. It was founded in 1642, and in the two and a half centuries since then it has only had sixteen pastors. This is an average service for each minister of nearly sixteen years.

MILWAUKEE IN FLAMES.

The City Burned Through from the River to Lake Michigan.

THE LOSS MAY REACH $25 000 000.

Hundreds of People Homeless and a Number of Lives Reported Lost—A Hurricane Fanned the Flames, Which Are Still Raging—Engines Sent from Other Cities.

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 29.—Scores of blocks of Milwaukee's largest business firms, together with hundreds of frame houses, were destroyed by fire last night.

The terrible conflagration is still raging. The fire demon seems to have the greater part of the city within his grasp. Thousands have been left homeless, and at the morgue three bodies, two heavy Bremen and an elderly lady, are stretched cold and charred in death. At the Emergency hospital four other victims of the fire are prostrated, two of whom are not expected to survive. These four are men. Another very serious, if not fatal, person has been removed to St. Mary's. In the intensely exciting state of affairs it is impossible to say how many lives have been lost.

Commencing at 5:30 o'clock in an old establishment on East Water street near the river, the flames, driven by the fearful hurricane which was blowing, spread with frightful rapidity to the lake—over half a mile to the east. It is utterly impossible to estimate the loss with any degree of accuracy. Even a complete list of the big business houses cannot be obtained, while to these must be added the small individual losses of hundreds of small property owners, whose humble but household goods have been destroyed. As it is, the loss will probably amount to $20,000,000 or $25,000,000.

The burned district is over half a mile wide east and west and a mile north and south, commencing in the establishment of the Union Oil company, 275 East Water street.

The Mains and Winds.

The fire was burning fiercely when the city fire department reached the scene. Owing to the hurricane that was blowing the men were utterly unable to do anything, and for any practical results might as well have done nothing. In spite of this the men worked bravely and dilevertly, doing their power, risking their lives in the burning buildings, and endeavoring by tearing down blocks in advance of the path of the fire to check it. This was in vain, and all night long the flames continued along their way from the establishment on East Water street, where the flames started. The path of the fire was in the shape of an immense fan, the starting point being in the oil establishment, while one line extended directly east to the lake, the other running to the lake in a southerly direction through immense factories from *four to seven stories high, which were sup*posed to be fireproof, but through which the flames spread with as much ease as though they were the frame cottages which they attacked farther east.

After wiping out the factories and wholesale establishments the fire found easy prey in the scores of blocks filled with frame houses which extend east of Milwaukee street. From these the flames leaped to the freight house of the Milwaukee, Lake Shore and Western. These caught on the extreme southern end and in a moment were ablaze along that line until Burnham, over two blocks. Adjoining the depots were the freight yards of the same railroad, as well as of the Chicago and Northwestern. These yards were filled with hundreds of loaded cars, all of which were quickly consumed.

As soon as it was seen that the yards were in the path of the conflagration a score of switch engines were set at work to remove or to get the loaded cars out of the yard.

The men worked bravely and succeeded in removing some of the trains, but they could only take them farther south, the yards to the north being blocked. This did no good, as the wind suddenly shifted from the northwest to almost direct north, and in a moment the cars which had just escaped the flames from one place were burned in another.

Explosions Shake the City.

It was in these yards that some of the most pitiful sights were seen. In one place half a dozen poultry cars full of ducks and chickens were roosted alive. As soon as the conflagration of which they were the assured the wind, as though prompted by malice, veered from west to north. Had it remained in the west the fire would have exhausted itself in the lake.

Chief Foley kept the fire confined to one block on East Water street until 7 o'clock, when it got away from him and leaped across the street and began a rapid march toward Lake Michigan, six blocks away, cutting down in short order the stores in its way.

The entire lower portion of the Third ward, inhabited largely by poor Irish families, is devastated. About 400 cottages have been destroyed, and the poor people are wandering about the streets loudly lamenting their losses. Some plan of relief for them will be made, but at this time people seem to be stunned and are doing nothing.

Alarms came in every few minutes from parts of the city widely separated, and it is thought that firebugs helped in the work of destruction. The elegant residence of L. F. Hodges, a member of the board of trade, at Ninth and Cedar streets, two miles from the place where the fire started, was destroyed. Up to 9 o'clock only two fatalities had been reported—one fireman killed and a woman suffocated. The gas works were then burning, and frequent explosions occurred that shook the whole city.

Many of the scenes of the great fire of 1871 in Chicago were enacted, the dynamite explosions, the leaping flames and crumbling walls adding to the terror of the situation. It is reported that four of the crew of the life saving station were killed by a falling wall at Wetsel & Vilte's machine shop.

A Fearful Visitation.

The fight horse squadron and the Fourth battalion have been called out to guard property.

All the southern section of Milwaukee is in ruins, and the dreadful conflagration is still in progress. Never in the history of the city has such a calamity befallen it. Acres of land, embracing the great manufacturing districts of the city, have been devastated and now lie a mass of smoldering ruins. Almost the entire division from East Water street to the lake has been consumed.

Flying cinders dashed and sped on through the night air like a mammoth pyrotechnic display, and scattering in their flight they landed on the roofs of the large manufacturing establishments—the pride of the city—and in a few minutes building after building was gutted and huge walls cracked and tottered to the ground. The firemen redoubled their efforts and worked manfully, but it was impossible to get the mastery of the fire fiend, which rode on with the violent winds almost directly east, leaping up block after block in such an alarming manner that all efforts of the fire department were almost futile.

Telegrams were quickly dispatched to Chicago, Racine and nearer cities for aid, all of which responded promptly, bringing fire engines and men to assist in the dire calamity. This morning the fire gathered fresh energy and swept on with more intense fury than ever. The immense Patton Oil works are in a progressed state of demolition.

Aid for the Homeless.

During the course of the fire a number of barns and large livery stables were burned. These were filled with horses which were liberated by the police. The horses ran wildly about the streets, and before they could be caught a number of persons were run down and badly injured. The wires of the electric street railway are down and the telephone company's system is prostrated. The electric light service is paralyzed and the gas works have been destroyed.

While the fire was at its fiercest and its northern limits the first aid was received from outside sources. This was in the shape of five fire engines, one each from Waukesha and Racine and three from Chicago. Then for a time the firemen seemed to gain an advantage, and the flames disappeared and were succeeded by dense clouds of black smoke. This was but momentary, and the fire, which seemed to have gained fresh headway during its temporary lull, broke out with increased fierceness. Flames shot out in all directions, and clouds of sparks, carried by the hurricane, landed on the roofs of buildings blocks away.

Dynamite Failed to Check It.

Then the firemen saw that their only hope lay in cutting off the blaze in advance. Procuring dynamite they blew up a number of buildings in the path of the flames. But this had no effect. The fire leaped the small barriers as though none existed, and the men found themselves working in the midst of a furnace. Immense stone and iron buildings crumbled in the intense heat as though they were of paper. Walls were falling on all sides, and in spite of their efforts the firemen saw that they could do nothing.

So, giving up the fight on the burning buildings, they went to the surrounding districts, where the river afforded a natural barrier to the sweep of the flames, and fought it from all sides. Even then their efforts were not entirely successful, and the fire continued to drive steadily to the south.

It is the most disastrous fire the city has ever experienced, but while it is a fact that there is a feeling of thankfulness that the fire did not originate in some other portion of the city. All the residence portion of the Third ward and as far west as Fremantiel within a year or two, as the property was in active demand by the railroad and manufacturing companies, and the are simply hastens the removal of sears who expected to move within a year or two.

The Burned District.

The burned district includes the south part of the Third ward, and in general way is bounded on the north by Buffalo street, on the east by the lake and on the south and west by the river.

On East Water street, where the fire started, the blaze extended a little north of Buffalo street nearly to Detroit. In this block, however, there were several buildings that escaped.

The streets burned entirely and on which no houses or buildings are left standing are Buffalo, Chicago, Menominee, Cerro-gordo, Erie, Folk, Oregon and Pierce. Besides these East Water street is ruined from Detroit south to the river, and Broadway. Milwaukee, Jefferson, Jackson, Van Buren and Carr from Buffalo street south.

At the time of sending this dispatch it is hoped the flames will soon be under complete control. It is impossible though to give any exact figures as to the loss of life or property.

She Magnetized Them.

BUFFALO, Oct. 29.—Mrs. Dr. Johnson, a clairvoyant who gained quite a reputation here by her revelations, has left town. She took with her a large amount of money and jewelry belonging to some of her aristocratic victims living on the west side. The jewels now belong to Mrs. Johnson without security in order to "magnetize" them.

Lady Churchill Improving.

LONDON, Oct. 29.—Lady Randolph Churchill is improving. Lord Randolph Churchill has gone fishing.

The stylish capote for evening wear shown in the accompanying cut has a soft brim of plaited black net, edged with a wreath of berries and foliage in jet, matching the band of the hairpin pierced among the curls of the coiffure.

AN EVENING CAPOTE.

The puckered tulle crown is covered with yellow cornflowers and spatanding ribbon loops matching the strings. These blossoms of the same flowers nestle on the curls of the brow, while a bird's head rests in their center, accompanied with jet wings. From Paris comes the prediction that the most fashionable of French hats will have high crowns.

WENT ASHORE IN A FOG.

The Steamship Roumania Lost on the Coast of Portugal.

ONLY NINE SOULS ON BOARD SAVED.

The Others, 127 in Number, Including the Captain of the Vessel, Swallowed Up by the Merciless Waves—The Only Passengers Who Escaped Were Two Women.

LISBON, Oct. 29.—The Anchor line steamship Roumania, Captain Young, went ashore early yesterday morning at the mouth of the Arroya, near Peniche, and 118 of the 127 persons on board were lost.

The Roumania left Liverpool last Saturday for Bombay. She carried fifty-five passengers, a crew of sixty-seven men and a full cargo of valuable merchandise. She experienced heavy weather from early on Monday morning. On Tuesday she ran into a furious storm. All her passengers were ordered below and were not allowed on deck again until Wednesday noon.

After a few hours of the first clear sailing she had had the Roumania ran into a thick fog in about 42 degs. north latitude. She proceeded at half speed and, it was supposed, well out from the coast. A violent storm came on after several hours in the fog.

When the storm struck her the Roumania was but a few miles from shore. The ship made little progress and the captain was unable to keep her bow to the wind. She went on the rocks almost without warning, for up to the last few minutes the ship's officers did not realize their peril.

Swept to Death.

Heavy seas broke over the ship's decks, and many of the passengers, who ran on deck in a panic, were swept overboard and drowned. A lifeboat was cut away and an attempt was made to lower it, but the boat was swamped by the waves.

For two hours further attempts were abandoned. The storm moved and the other boat was lowered. This boat was loaded with passengers. A hundred yards from the ship it capsized and all were drowned. Two hundred men were started out from the shore, but put back, as the men were convinced that they could not live in such a heavy sea.

Another boat was lowered from the Roumania, but when half loaded was dashed against the ship's side and capsized. Eighteen persons who had descended to her were drowned. Meantime wave after wave had broken over the Roumania, smashing her deckhouses and ventilators, carrying away her smokestack and masts and sweeping many of the passengers and seamen overboard.

Only Nine Lives Saved.

These still left decided to wait until the storm should further abate before attempting to get ashore. After an hour of suspense the seven men and two women who had remained on board lowered the last boat. The storm had subsided, and although obliged to ride through a heavy surf they reached shore in safety.

The two women were the only passengers saved. Captain Young is reported to be among the lost.

The Roumania was an iron screw steamship of 4,387 tons, belonging to the Anchor line and plying between Liverpool and Bombay. Her length was 364 feet, breadth 38 feet and depth 28½ feet, and she was built in Glasgow in 1881.

Peniche, near where the Roumania is reported to have been wrecked, is a fortified town of Portugal on the Atlantic ocean, about fifty miles north of the mouth of the Tagus.

The Grain Blockade.

BUFFALO, Oct. 29.—The freight blockade here is not quite as bad as painted. The fact is, nearly all the elevators have room for sale; one has nearly 500,000 bushels of space, but they do not like to fill up on storage grain, as it shuts them out from all business. The blockade will soon be broken, as the New York Central, which for some time had orders from New York not to load any cars here for that point, has received advice to let the grain come forward.

Won't Combat the Reading.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 29.—Pennsylvania railroad officials deny that the Pennsylvania, New York, New Haven and Hartford, and Old Colony and Concord and Montreal roads would effect a combine in opposition to the Reading's New England deal, which Senator Chauncey, of New Hampshire, yesterday declared was inevitable.

Bring Out Your Trotters.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—Mr. J. Malcolm Forbes, owner of Nancy Hanks and Arion, believing that the two minute trotter will soon appear, has made an offer of 50,000 for the first horse which will trot on a regulation track in 2:00 during the next five years.

Parsons Appoints Bowen.

BOSTON, Oct. 29.—President Parsons, of the New York and New England railroad, has appointed C. R. Bowen general manager of the road. Mr. Bowen was formerly connected with the Rome, Watertown and Ogdensburg road.

The Eighth Victim.

CHICAGO, Oct. 29.—Still another lane been added to the long and growing list of deaths in Hyde park, resulting from gas asphyxiation, the eighth victim being Herbert Parker, who was found dead in his room.

Killed by Nitro-Glycerine.

LIMA, O., Oct. 29.—The nitro-glycerine factory, two miles from here, blew up, killing Andy Schutz, Benjamin Dow Bing and Henry Schaffiell and injuring three others. A farmhouse a mile away was wrecked.

A Desperado Done For.

SAVANNAH, Oct. 29.—Fred Waldburg (colored), escaped convict and desperado, was shot and killed by Joe Hazzard, whom he had threatened. Hazzard was arrested, but immediately discharged.

Ex-Governor Hoyt Better.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Oct. 29.—Ex-Governor Henry M. Hoyt, who was stricken with paralysis, is much better. The doctors have hopes for his recovery.

Morris Declines the Wreath.

LONDON, Oct. 29.—The Chronicle announces that the poet laureateship has been offered to William Morris and that he declined the honor.

Busy Firebugs.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Oct. 29.—The twelfth incendiary fire here within a month partly consumed the Albert Flouring mill.

THE VANE OF POLITICS.

Tammany Hall Says It Points to Democratic Success.

DEPEW SAYS HARRISON WILL WIN.

He Is Sure the Political Weathercock Indicates a Republican Victory—A Red Hot Canvass to Be Made in New York State from Now Till Election Day.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—The victory for the national Democratic ticket has been practically won is the announcement made at Tammany hall. Today is the last day of registration and both parties are hustling to bring out the backward registers. The national Democratic headquarters received another dispatch from the western headquarters giving a roseate hue of the situation in the west, so far as the Democrats are concerned. Among other things the dispatch says, in several of the western states there have been numerous defections from the Republican ranks on the part of prominent men, who have declared their intentions of voting for the national candidates of the Democratic party, that the Republicans have practically abandoned all hope of carrying Illinois for their state ticket, and that the sporting fraternity are betting even that Cleveland will carry the state.

Among the callers at Democratic national headquarters were Vice Presidential Candidate Stevenson and General James S. Ewing, his law partner. General Stevenson was in the best of spirits. In conversation with a reporter of the United Press he said:

Stevenson's Observations.

"Wherever I have been in this campaign the trend seems to be in favor of the Democracy. I am an old campaigner and have spoken in over twenty campaigns. I never saw a movement more unanimous than the Democratic movement, and Democratic victory is 'in the air,' as the saying goes. I have taken pains during my tours to ask privately if there was ever any Democratic defection. That is one of the ways I have always employed in ascertaining the drift of sentiment. I have been unable to find anywhere a single notable Democratic defection. All the men who voted for Mr. Cleveland in 1884 and in 1888 seem to be going to vote for him again, and the accessions are certainly very numerous.

"The pleasantest time I have had on my trip—I must say this without derogation to other sections of the country where I have been most cordially received—was in North Carolina, my birthplace. It was pleasant to go back there. It was pleasant to meet the people whom I knew for years, and it is pleasanter still to be assured, as I have been, that I drew hundreds of people away from the People's party back to the Democracy. Nothing more gratifying has occurred in my career than this.

"Thursday night I spoke at Stamford. It was a large and enthusiastic meeting. I was told by conservative gentlemen there that Connecticut would surely go Democratic. Of course I can only judge from what I hear in such a case as that, but I will say this, that if the rest of the state is like Stamford and the meetings elsewhere like the meeting I addressed, I certainly have no fears." Stevenson, accompanied by General Ewing, goes from here to West Virginia, where he will remain until Thursday next, and then they go to Chicago, where they will stay until election day, when they go home to vote.

John T. Dunn, the Democratic candidate for congress in the Tenth New Jersey district, was also a caller at the headquarters. He assured the United Press reporter that New Jersey was safely Democratic.

John W. Hughes, an San Francisco merchant, another caller, said that he would not be surprised if the electoral vote of the state was cast for Cleveland and Stevenson by at least 25,000 plurality. He said that there had been many defections from the Republican party in the state of prominent members of that party.

Colonel Thomas Lannon, formerly private secretary to ex-President Cleveland, who arrived from Europe yesterday, registered his name as a voter early today.

Republican Predictions.

At the Republican headquarters, both state and national, hustling has been renewed. The sign, "Closed on account of the funeral of Mrs. Harrison," which was posted on the doors of both places yesterday, was taken down and crowds of visitors filled the rooms.

The managers seem every day more sensible of the importance of the campaign in this state, and Whitelaw Reid and Chauncey Depew are to take the stump, speaking at Ithaca on Monday, Oct. 31; Hornellsville on Tuesday, and at Belmont, Salamanca and Jamestown on Wednesday. The state committee says it will make it red hot all next week.

Among the prominent Republican politicians in town were Secretary of the Navy Tracy, Secretary of War Elkins and Senator George F. Edmunds, of Vermont. Secretary Tracy was seen at the Gilsey House by a reporter of the United Press. With regard to the result of the campaign the secretary said:

"I am fully confident that President Harrison will be re-elected. The setback all over the country is most encouraging." He felt confident that the Republicans would carry this state. With regard to the complexion of the cabinet in the event of President Harrison's re-election the secretary said that there would be changes, but, he added, it was too early to speak on that subject.

Mr. Depew also arrived in town, and in an interview with a reporter of the United Press he said: "The Republican prospects throughout the country were never more brilliant than now. Wherever I went, through doubtful states and all, I saw nothing but glorious promise and confidence—not that born of enthusiasm, but of an understanding of the true situation.

"In every city you find converts from the Democracy, among the leading men. The business men and workingmen are flocking this year. Our country's prosperity has never been and not compare with that of today, and if we elected a president there we are most certain of doing it now. The outlook is altogether brilliant."

John H. Paxton, the well known Nebraska politician, is at the Fifth Avenue hotel. He resides in Omaha and is the general solicitor of the Union Pacific railroad. He was one of the Blaine boomers at the Minneapolis convention and has been making political speeches throughout the west. In speaking of the political situation in the west to a reporter of the United Press he said: "I think the situation extremely bright and encouraging to the Republican ticket. I think Nebraska will roll up its old time majority for Harrison and Reid. We will get all the electors! Votes in the west that we reasonably can expect. From what I have heard since my arrival east I think New York will surely go Republican, and I believe that Harrison and Reid will be elected."

Stevenson's Letter.

With regard to the delay on the part of General Stevenson in issuing his letter of acceptance, it was rumored in Republican circles that Mr. Cleveland and Mr. Stevenson could not agree as to the terms of the letter, and that the vice presidential candidate would issue no letter at all. It is known that the letter of acceptance has been a subject of conferences yesterday and the day before between Mr. Cleveland and Mr. Stevenson. This morning Mr. Stevenson said it would be several days before the document would be ready. At the Democratic headquarters the rumor circulated by the Republicans with regard to the letter was scoffed at. It was asserted that the best of reintions existed between Mr. Cleveland and Mr. Stevenson.

Judge Ren Explains.

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 29.—Judge John P. Ren gave his promised statement as to his recent political conversion to the press today. He opens by explaining that the announcement that he would vote for Cleveland was made without his authority or knowledge. He then discusses the McKinley bill, pointing out wherein he thinks it departs from the true protection policy and wherein it inures to the benefit of the monopolies. He next replies to the allegations that his conversion is due to political disappointment by declaring that his motives have been entirely honest. After some reference to the unpolitical character of the G. A. R., and to the contrast between the Republican party in its early days and now, he closes with these words:

"When the leaders of that great party seek to made our government of the people, by corporations and for monopolies, it is time for patriotic, liberty loving men to stop and consider, if not to act. I have conscientiously done the former, and on Nov. 8 shall do the latter."

Heavy Registration.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—Yesterday was the third day of registration in this city and 59,775 voters were enrolled. The total for the three days' registration was 272,168. In 1890 the registration for the same period was 214,911. In 1891 it was 195,651 and in 1888 253,529 names were recorded. The total for the three days' registration this year comes within 3,613 of the total for the four days in 1888. It was also the third day appointed for the registration of voters in Brooklyn, and 35,350 additional names were enrolled. This, added to the total of the two previous days—120,084—gives a grand total for the three days of 155,434. The total for three days in 1891 was 139,273; in 1890, 115,866, and in 1888, 156,104.

Hayard in Newark.

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 29.—Ex-Secretary of State Hayard spoke at the Grand Opera house here last night before 8,000 people, who manifested the greatest enthusiasm. He dwelt on the issues of the campaign and spoke on the tariff question. His high praise for Cleveland and his policy evoked loud applause. The speaker arraigned the Republicans for their rule or ruin policy. Other speakers were Congressman Reid Ilsh, W. B. Guild and J. Howard Carrow.

Breckinridge at Princeton.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 29.—Congressman William C. P. Breckinridge, of Kentucky, last evening addressed a large meeting of college men and their friends in the gymnasium under the auspices of the Cleveland club, which attended the meeting in full regalia uniform.

Depew at Yale.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 29.—Chauncey M. Depew addressed the Yale students and their friends here last night. He made one of his characteristic campaign addresses.

William O'Brien a Bankrupt.

DUBLIN, Oct. 29.—William O'Brien has decided to go through the bankruptcy court and lose his seat in parliament in preference to satisfying the judgment for $15,000, a writ of execution for which has been issued by the court of queen's bench, in the Bolton libel suit.

SCIENTIFIC RECREATION.

Various Phenomena of the Soap Bubble Beautifully Illustrated.

A common soap bubble illustrates in a most beautiful manner many important scientific principles, and even now all the phenomena presented by these films of soap and water are not clearly understood, perhaps least of all why a solution of soap should possess this property of forming bubbles to such a high degree. Popular Science News describes as follows some easily experiments (originally illustrated in Nature) which may be performed in the way of bubble blowing.

FIG. 1—EXPERIMENT IN BUBBLE BLOWING.

The ordinary solutions of soap and water are very little use for these purposes, as the bubbles last only a few minutes and break at the slightest touch. The best liquid is a solution in water of pure oleate of soda, to which has been added one-third its bulk of glycerin. Oleate of soda can easily be obtained through a druggist, but if not the following recipe will give a fairly good substitute: Cut some white curd soap into fine shavings and dissolve in hot water with constant shaking. Allow the mixture to stand over night, and in the morning pour off the clear portion at the top and add to it one-third its bulk of glycerin. With this solution fine, large bubbles may be blown, which will remain a long time without breaking and can be handled quite freely.

In Fig. 1 an ornamental glass dish is represented, in which a small porcelain cigarette is placed. If the figure and the size of the dish are previously moistened with the soap solution a bubble can be blown down directly over the head of the figure until it is inclosed by it, as shown in the illustration. If some tobacco smoke is taken into the mouth while blowing the bubble a very curious and beautiful effect is obtained. The body of the figure disappears in a cloud of smoke, as if it were undergoing a fumigation.

A more elaborate piece of work in the shape of a pyramid, formed by bubbles as shown in Fig. 2, in which the framework is made of wire and straw, and the bubbles are suspended by strips of cardboard. If properly constructed, it can be made to revolve by gently blowing upon it. Many other similar experiments can be performed, which will readily occur to those interested in the subject, and some very beautiful effects can be obtained.

Good Health

THE PHYSIOLOGY OF TEARS.

For the Tearful Change of Scene and Mental Diversion Are the Best Remedies.

Fear, grief and joy, to say nothing of pathos and anger, bring tears to the eyes. They are said to come from the heart, and this is true, for no one ever reasoned himself out of weeping, without a first appeal through the imagination to some emotion. Tears are the natural outlet of emotional tension. They are the result of a storm in the central nervous system, giving rise to changes in the vascular terminals of the tear secreting glands. These changes induce profuse excretion of water, and weeping results.

Tears afford a good illustration of the way in which nervous fibers are capable of conveying to a secreting organ exciting impulses from both sides of a gland lying in their course. Mobe, "all tears," and the unfortunate pedestrian with a minute particle of steel from the rail of an elevated road in his eye, are two telling exponents of similar process. They weep the same kind of briny fluid in exactly the same way, though from widely different causes.

Imagination in at times sufficient to excite the nervous system into the production of tears without external aid or reflex. Writers and readers of good fiction weep over it alike.

Emotion, then affection, grief, anxiety, incite to tears, not pain or discomfort, in the earlier days of surgery patients might scream until utter exhaustion, but pain sickens the bystanders—might even faint with pain—yet these were seldom any tears. Perhaps one who weeps from pain does so from unconscious though selfish pity—in other words, from emotion.

For the tearful, change of scene, mental diversion and outdoor life are the best remedies. Sleep cures tears. And so does time, the restorer. Persons subjected to many and repeated griefs forget how to weep, and the old as compared to the young are almost tearless. Tears have their value in the life of humanity not as tears, but as signs. They show, says The Medical Journal, quoted above, that grief centers are being relieved of their sensibility, and that the nervous organization is letting low to bear up against sorrow.

Notes for Nurses.

Pencil and paper should always be kept at hand to make notes for the doctor of any peculiarities noticed in the case. There are also many little things that the doctor may approve, if suggested to him, which he does not care to ask him to order. For instance, as a variety in the way of flavoring orange flower water is a pleasant change and a valuable tonic. Abroad it is much used in fever cases to flavor the drinking water. Again, very hot milk can be taken where there is a distaste for it cold, and when flavored is very pleasant. A most nourishing drink can also be made with blanched and pounded sweet almonds, over which boiling water has been poured and strained after it has stood awhile.

Best Germ Destroyers.

Corrosive sublimate, in the strength of sixty four grains to a [illegible] is said by the health authorities of New York to be the most effective of the germ destroying agents. Carbolic acid comes next, employing twenty-four grains to the gallon; then formic, one ounce to about eleven gallons; chloride of lime, four ounces to the gallon; sulphate of iron, 1½ pounds to the gallon, and last, in point of effectiveness, sulphate of zinc, two ounces to the gallon.

Etiquette

GOOD FORM.

Brief and Practical Notes on a Variety of Social Matters.

In the following paragraphs gleaned from answers to correspondents by Harper's Bazar will be found much useful information:

Have separate cards—one for Mrs. John Smith and one for Mr. John Smith. A bride's card is the same as any other married woman's card.

Sachets to worn by those dressing in mourning, but asträkhan and Persian lambskin are preferred, as they are jet black.

A man wearing mourning for his sister has a deep mourning band added to his hat and wears suits of black cheviot, black necktie and black gloves. Mourning worn for a sister-in-law is like that worn for one's own sister.

No; it is never good form for a woman to receive in a tea gown. The temptation may be strong if the gown be very pretty, but reserve the exhibition for your family and intimate women friends.

A young girl may have her address upon her calling card. Where you are obliged to introduce yourself, do so verbally, not by presenting a card; the latter is too much like business.

A caller need not leave immediately upon a later arrival, but should not stop too long. It is more gracious to introduce the callers.

It will be better to send a card without mourning border if you want to give a tea to introduce a young girl. Have the affair as informal as possible, plenty of flowers and some "quiet music."

It is not at all necessary to inclose your guest's card, except to her acquaintances whom you may not know. Have nothing but the address and the hours upon your card. Send your invitations by mail.

A tea or reception card is the payment of a call.

The hours for a very informal tea may be written upon a calling card. An affair sufficiently formal to be called an "at home" should have the entire invitation engraved.

Give a tea or a dinner to announce your engagement. Write notes announcing it to your intimate friends. Answer by all means all congratulations.

Your best plan, even though the dining room is small, is to have the refreshments—fancy cakes, ices, strawberries, creamettes, etc.—served there from a table in the center to guests standing near. The bride stands on the left of the groom during the ceremony. She marshalls her bridesmaid when being congratulated by those whom he does not know, and he introduces his friends to her.

Dancing in this country do not, as a rule, ask permission to call.

The Curiosity Shop

THE STRAWBERRY.

Some Interesting Facts About Its Early History.

The wild strawberry is very widely diffused over the surface of the earth, being found in the chill regions of the north, as well as in the sunny climes of the south. It is not a tropical plant, however, and except a specimen or two here and there in spots of latitude 38 degs. north. On the European continent it grows from Lapland and the Shetland Isles to Italy and Greece. It is also found throughout western Asia, but is unknown in China and Japan. It has grown abundantly on the bleak hills of Iceland for centuries. It is found in America from Labrador and British Columbia to the pine woods of the southern states and on the highlands of Mexico and the Andes. The hardy plant, with its tiny scarlet berry, may be said to girdle the earth on the line of the polar circle, and several hundred miles southward, except that it is not found in the basin of the river Amoor, in Siberia.

Though history and story are alike silent as to the cultivation of the strawberry in early times, we know that the fruit was well known in England in the Fifteenth century. Shakespeare has three allusions to strawberries. In "Henry VI" the Bishop of Ely, in illustration of the good qualities which the young king possessed, in spite of his wild habits and objectionable companions, says:

> The strawberry grows underneath the nettle,
> And wholesome berries thrive and ripen best
> Neighbored by fruit of baser quality.

The reference here is obviously to the wild berry. But in the play of "Richard III" strawberries are spoken of as growing in the Bishop of Ely's garden at Holborn, and this seems to show that the berry was cultivated with considerable care as early as the latter part of the Fifteenth century, though Hayden's "Dictionary of Dates" asserts that the common straw berry was brought to England from Flanders in 1530. It is curious to note that 100 years after cultivation had made the fruit one of the bishop's strawberries we find a description of a garden at Holborn, the property of the rich barber surgeon, Gerard, wherein four kinds of strawberries—a great variety for the time—were successfully cultivated. The third Shakespearean allusion to this fruit is in reference to the ill fated huckleberries of Desdemona, which was "spotted with strawberries."

The Second Largest Diamond in the World.

The second largest diamond in the world is now, according to a German journal, undergoing the cutting process at Antwerp. Its weight is at present 471 carats, but it will lose no less than 274 carats before it is ready for the market. Even then, however, it will be the second largest diamond in the world, standing between the 280 carats of the Persian diamond "Great Mogul" and the 197 7-10 carats of the Russian "Orloff" brilliant. Roughly speaking, the Antwerp stone will be about the size of a pigeon's egg. In its present state it measures 2.741 inches by 1.767 inches. Its polished surface will measure 286 inches each way. Some idea of the enormous expense of the transmutation of these costly trifles from the natural to the commercial state may be gathered from the fact that the great English crown diamond—the Koh-i-noor—which has only the comparatively modest weight of 102½ carats, cost no less than £8,000 to cut and polish. The polishing of a very large diamond is a very slow process, and it will be a long time before the actual value of the Antwerp stone can be determined, as its luster and water cannot be decided until it has left the polisher's hands.

Story of a Famous Ballad.

The famous ballad of "Auld Robin Gray" was written by Lady Anne Lindsay, daughter of the Earl of Balcarres, when she was twenty one years old, but it was not till fifty years later that she told how she came to write it. Robin Gray was a shepherd on the Scottish farm and for something he had done she wished to immortalize him. So she began this ballad, but before she finished it she asked her little sister for her advice about it. She said she was making a ballad about distress in humble life; she was bringing sorrows upon her heroine's head; she had left her Jamie to sea, broken her father's arm, caused her mother to fall ill and given her auld Robin Gray for a lover. "But I want to have a fifth sorrow. Now what shall I do?" "Steal the cow, Annie," was the little girl's reply. And accordingly Lady Anne completed the round of Jessie's troubles by having "the cow stolen away."

The King of Servia.

Alexander I, king of Servia, was born Aug. 17, 1876, son of King Milan I, who abdicated in 1889, and Natalie, daughter of Colonel Keschko, of the Russian Imperial guard. Alexander was proclaimed king in 1889, on the abdication of his father. He is the only child of his parents. The ex-king obtained a divorce from Queen Natalie in 1888. The present reigning house was founded by Milos Todorovic Obrenovic, leader of the insurrection against the yoke of Turkey in 1815-29. The Turkish government recognized the quasi independence of Servia in 1829, and confirmed the title of Obrenovic as reigning prince. The present king is the fifth of his dynasty, being descended from a brother of the founder.

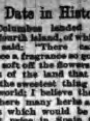
October the Wine Month.

October was the eighth month of the ol called "year of Romulus," but became the tenth when (according to tradition) Numa changed the commencement of the year to the 1st of January. October preserved its ancient name, notwithstanding the attempts made by the Roman senate and the emperors Commodus and Domitian, who substituted for it the terms Faustinus, Invictus, Domitianus. Many Roman and Greek festivals fell to be celebrated in this month, the most remarkable of which was the sacrifice of a horse (which was called October) to the god Mars. The name is from the Latin octo, eight. Among the Saxons it was styled Wyn-monath, or the wine month.

A Bird of Evil Omen.

The pigeon is considered to be essentially a bird of death, says The Fancier's Journal. Thus if a white pigeon settles on a chimney some one of the occupants of the house will pass away ere long, but should the bird enter and perch upon the table it is considered a less portentous omen and to signify sickness. There is a widespread belief through England that no one can die happily on a bed in which there is even a single pigeon's feather. There is a similar superstition about partridge feathers, and there is an old saying that he who is sprinkled with pigeon's blood will never die a natural death.

This Date in History—Oct. 29.



HILEY.

1492—Columbus landed on the South Island, of which he said, "There seems thence a fragrance so good and soft off the flowers or trees of the land that it was the sweetest thing in the world. I realize that are here many herbs and trees which would be of great price in Spain for dyestuffs, medicines and spices, but I know nothing of them, which gives me great concern; there are flocks of parrots which obscure the sun, and other birds of so many kinds that it is wonderful. The 23d inst. here were many herbs and trees which would be of great price in Spain for dyestuffs, medicines and spices, but I know nothing of them, which gives me great concern; there are flocks of parrots which obscure the sun, and other birds of so many kinds that it is wonderful. FELL FROM THE POLE.

LINEMAN SHIELDS SLIPS AND STUMBLES ABOUT FORTY FEET.

The Electric Light Wires Broke His Fall and Doubtless Saved His Life—He is not Seriously Injured.

As Arthur Shields, a wireman from Kalamazoo, Mich., working for the Telephone Company, was stretching wires this afternoon on the new poles erected on Somerset street, he slipped from a towering pole, near Summit avenue, on which he was working, and fell headlong to what seemed certain death. He says he was at least forty feet up on the pole when he fell.

Fortunately for him, however, the telephone wires are much higher than the Electric Light Company's wires, and he fell on them.

One wire caught under his chin. He says he can remember that wire now. His hands were torn also.

He crashed on through these wires and landed in a heap on the ground. The shock of his fall was so great that his comrades running up expected to find that he had broken half the bones in his body, but he arose without assistance.

He was helped to Dr. Carman's house, where an examination was made and his wounds dressed.

His arms, shoulders and sides were severely bruised, but otherwise he was uninjured.

Earlier in the day he had another mishap, slipping when about twenty feet up and sliding down the pole to the ground.

Mr. E. J. Waring's house is being moved from Myrtle avenue to Willow avenue. Messrs. Henry & Johns are doing the work.

The Rev. Mr. Herring of Brooklyn, preached yesterday in the First Presbyterian church in this city. His sermons were very interesting.

Miss Fannie Peltrea of Brooklyn, after a few days' visit with her sister, Mrs. Charles R. Theirs, of Somerset street, returned home yesterday.

Mrs. Phoebe Foster of Somerset street has been spending a week with her son, Mr. Edward Foster, of Brooklyn. She returned home this morning.

Mr. M. C. Williams of East Fifth street has leased the house recently built by Mr. J. C. Bovey on Stone street, North Plainfield, where he will move about May 1st.

Mrs. Emma T. Van Winkle, wife of Mr. John H. Van Winkle, died yesterday at their home on Duer street. The funeral services will be held next Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Mr. Charles W. Tallman of this city was appointed District Deputy Grand Master of the District meeting of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, held last Monday at White House, N. J.

Mr. John McCarthy and Miss Ellen Judge, of this city, were married last Wednesday at St. Mary's parsonage by the Rev. Father Smythe. Mr. and Mrs. McCarthy will reside on Race street, North Plainfield.

The death occurred yesterday of Mrs. Mary E. Chandler, widow of the late Mr. George Chandler, and mother of Mrs. Daniel L. Hulick of Jackson avenue. Deceased was in 79th year of her age and had been ailing for some time. The funeral will take place Wednesday, Nov. 2d, at one p. m., from the residence of son-in-law, Mr. Daniel L. Hulick, 35 Jackson avenue.

The New York Tribune of to-day had half a column of effusive laudation of Mr. John Hurley of this city, and the State Republican League, in which he holds the position of State organizer. The writer of the article says he obtained his information here from Mr. Dilch himself, and that Mr. Ulrich is confident that the State will go Republican. That seems to be the general opinion. The people have stood ballot-box frauds, public extravagance and general corruption in high places comparatively, for a long time, but when the Democrats went so far as to actually cooperate to help the coal combine raise the price of coal, they seem to have got the last straw that broke the back of public patience. So be it.

A Barn Burned.

Mr. Charles Wyckoff's barn, on Howard street, North Plainfield, was destroyed by fire last night. About half-past one o'clock an alarm was given and Warren Engine Company, No. 1, responded. They arrived too late to do any good, however, as the barn was a mass of flames when they got there. A stream of water was put on and kept the fire from consuming to the house nearby. Mr. Wyckoff succeeded in getting his horses and wagons, which were in the barn, when the fire broke out. His house was destroyed by a fire one night a few years ago.

Ground was broken this morning at the corner of Front street and Lafayette place for a handsome residence to be erected immediately.

DR. MITCHELL'S ADIEU.

HE PREACHED HIS FINAL SERMON HERE LAST NIGHT.

A Large Congregation Present to Hear Him.—He Repeats His Opinion That Plainfield is an Ideal Place for a Home.

A large and overflowing Congregation assembled at the Methodist church last evening to listen to the farewell sermon of the Rev. Dr. Charles R. Mitchell. After the usual opening services Dr. Mitchell took for his text Galatians 6-9. "And let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not."

He localized the text and applied it to himself and the church. After describing the solicitude and influence of the church he earnestly urged them not to rest on their laurels now, or, in the words of the text, "Be ye not weary in well doing."

During the sermon he gave a brief review of the church statistics, which showed that when he came here nearly four years ago there was not quite four hundred members, and that altogether one hundred and thirteen had moved away, taking letters, twelve had gone without letters, seven were dismissed, and there were thirty-three deaths. There is now enrolled seven hundred and three full members, showing an increase of nearly a hundred a year.

The running expenses of the church amount to eight thousand dollars annually. Besides this there are eleven thousand sent out for foreign missionaries, extension of the church on the frontier, for educational purposes and various other necessary charities. The Park place and Monroe avenue chapels are, at their lowest valuation, worth at least twenty-thousand dollars, these having been built in the past few years.

In referring to the location of the two new chapels, Mr. Mitchell said it showed the wonderful foresight on the part of the trustees in selecting those sites, for now the promoters of the electric railway have decided, from a purely business point, that the localities most likely to grow are in the direction of the two chapels, and their plans are drawn for the continuation of the electric road out Somerset street, where it will pass the Park Place Chapel, and out Grant avenue, where it will pass the corner where Monroe Avenue Chapel is built, thus forming a regular belt line connecting the three Methodist churches.

After speaking of Plainfield in terms of praise, he said that if he had the power of selecting a place to establish his home until he was called to his home above, that of all the places he has been both abroad and in America, he would choose Plainfield from them all, with its lovely range of mountains, its ecclusiveness to the sea, and its easy access to other desirable places. He considered that there is no place on God's footstool like Plainfield for a home, although he has never known what it was to live in a house of his own, as for several generations back his people have been Methodist ministers and have always been on the move. Ever since he was born in his father's parsonage on August 27, 1857, he has been on the move, and expects to continue his life as his forefathers did, until he is called to his home above. There, he says, he hopes and expects to meet all his friends, besides his sainted father and mother. He also hopes to hear the Master say to him, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

Dr. Mitchell is much loved by not only the people of his own church, but by Plainfield generally. Although we know that his going will be a gain to his new pastorate in Kansas City, still we unanimously but unselfishly feel his loss keenly. He has the good wishes of the community and a hearty "God bless you" from all.

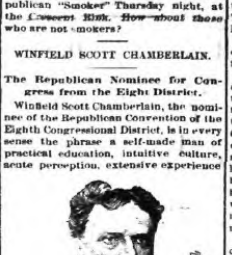
WINFIELD SCOTT CHAMBERLAIN.

The Republican Nominee for Congress from the Eighth District.



Winfield Scott Chamberlain, the nominee of the Republican Convention of the Eighth Congressional District, is in every sense the phrase a self-made man of practical education, intuitive culture, acute perception, extensive experience and genial nature. He is in fact a representative American business man, the modest competency he has accumulated being due to years of earnest labor, persistent effort and inherited thrift. Nature has, moreover, graciously endowed him with a vigorous intellect, splendid physique and comely countenance. All things considered, he is an ideal exemplification of astute, sturdy and resolute American manhood.

Mr. Chamberlain is a native of the Wolverin State, having been born at Whitmore Lake, Washtenaw county, Michigan, on December 1, 1846. His parents were descendants of patriotic Jerseymen, who battled for American independence during the revolutionary war. Like so many other Western boys, he achieved his early education mainly through his individual exertion, laboring from dawn to dark and studying by fire and candlelight. He began his business career at the age of fifteen, he would choose Plainfield from them all, with its lovely range of mountains, its ecclusiveness to the sea, and its easy access to other desirable places. He considered that there is no place on God's footstool like Plainfield for a home, although he has never known what it was to live in a house of his own, as for several generations back his people have been Methodist ministers and have always been on the move. Opening the Hunting Season.

Messrs. Chas. Smith, Chief Apgar and Isaac Squires started this afternoon for Chester, and will Morristown, for a three days' hunting trip.

To-morrow the rabbits around Peapack will have to suffer. Messrs. Fred. Sandford and John Haberle, with their breech-loaders, will be after the "cotton tails."

A party of men, who term themselves the "Stove Pipe Party," will start to-night for North Branch, to be on hand bright and early to-morrow for a hunt.

Smashed His Finger.

Mr. A. L. Craig of Grandview avenue, a carpenter, while at work building a house on Race street, North Plainfield, smashed the middle finger of his left hand. He was driving a spike with a heavy sledge hammer when he missed the spike and hit the digit. Although the finger is badly smashed, it is not thought that amputation will be necessary.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

BISHOP O'FARRELL'S VIEWS ON THE SUBJECT.

As Given in a Lecture to North Plainfield Catholics Last Night—He Don't Believe it Right to Tax Catholics for the Support of Public Schools while they Support Parochial Schools.

St. Joseph's Catholic church, Manning avenue, was crowded last night, to hear the Rt. Rev. M. J. O'Farrell, Bishop of Trenton, deliver a lecture on "Christian Education."

The Bishop, from his standpoint, spoke eloquently and forcibly on the subject for about an hour.

He pointed out what appeared to Catholics to be the great necessity there is that children should have religious training together with secular instructions. Intellectual culture without Christian principles he considered as only making the citizen clever for evil and dangerous to society, and that to leave the whole work of educating the heart and conscience to be done in a half hour once a week at Sunday-school, was to his mind to expect an impossibility. Such cramming, he contended, cannot produce a Christian man.

He maintained that the American idea of public school teaching always was that it should be Christian. It, he said, was so in New England as established by the Puritans; so it is still understood by many Christian denominations which maintain their own parochial schools, notably the Quakers, Episcopalians and Presbyterians. America is a strictly Christian nation, hence, to maintain it so, religion must be taught together with secular knowledge.

Who are they, then, at present, he he asked, who wish to exclude Christ from the schools? Certainly they are not, he answered, true exponents of American principles, but agnostics, who wish to go back two thousand years, and bring back the paganism of ancient times.

By igno ring God, said the Bishop, they hope to banish Him out of His own world by training the young in ignorance of Him.

The Bishop expressed himself confident in the good sense, justice, and fairness of the American people, who he felt will see before long what he considered to be the reasonable demands of the Catholic church, and, said he, as they are an order loving people, and naturally religious minded, experience will show them that their children's welfare here and hereafter demands religious training every day, and not once a week.

He said he believed also that the day is near when Americans themselves will refuse to tax Catholic fellow citizens for schools which their conscience will not allow them to use.

After the lecture the Bishop ad- ministered confirmation to about twenty boys and girls.

The ceremony was very impressive and beautiful to the many devout Catholics present, and the whole scene—the beauty of the church decorations, the electric lights, and with the venerable Bishop, will not soon be forgotten. The Rev. Father McKernan, the much esteemed pastor, Cushing (of St. Mary's) and O'Connell (of Bound Brook) assisted the Bishop.

He preached a sermon in the church in the morning, at the High Mass celebrated, and addressed the Sunday-school children in the afternoon, in addition to his evening lecture.

The Bishop dined at the Misses Verdon's on Somerset street, among the guests being several old-time friends.

THE HORSE WAS DEAD.

And it was Agreed to Hold a "Wake" Over it.

As John Barry of North Plainfield was driving along Somerset street, Saturday night, his horse suddenly fell down. Barry and a friend, who were in the wagon, jumped out, and unfastened the harness. Barry caught hold of the bridle and tried to pull the horse up on his front legs, preparatory to standing on all fours. He gave a hard pull, but the bridle broke and Barry landed on his back in the gutter. When he got up and walked around the animal a few times, and after a few suggestions from the bystanders, who had collected meanwhile, he concluded the old nag was dead. "Well boys," said Barry, "we will go home and get another horse and move the old mare home, and then we'll hold a 'wake' over her. She's been a good old friend and deserves it." The "boys" were agreeable, and it is supposed the "wake" was held.

Twenty-Five Acre Forest Fire at Westfield.

Woodruff's and Pierson's woods, which cover about twenty-five acres of the tract known as the Big Woods at Westfield, were set afire about three o'clock yesterday and are still burning freely today. The strong wind spread the flames at a rapid rate and carried the sparks considerable distance, setting fire to some shocked corn in a field near by. Many of the corn shocks were saved, however, by the prompt efforts of Mr. Sheelan, the owner, and some neighbors.

—Two fires were burning yesterday on the summit of the Watchung mountain at this place. They were started about five o'clock in the afternoon, and were kept burning all night by the strong wind. After dark the flames were visible from afar off and seemed like a beautiful golden crown set in mid-air.

A CHANCE TO EXPERIMENT.

Examining the Effect of Rifle Bullets on Human Bodies.

LONDON, Oct. 31. (Special.)—The experiments of English medical officers in Dahomey on the effect of various kinds of rifle bullets on the human body have proved that the Mannlicher, a German rifle, is more merciful than the French Lebel rifle, in that it makes a clean wound. The new British magazine rifle bullet smashes bones and tears flesh at a distance of a 1,000 yards.

The Oldest Trotting Horse in this Country Dead.

SEDALIA, Mo., Oct. 31. (Special.)—Prince, said to be the oldest trotting horse in the United States, having been foaled in the Spring of 1867 in Kentucky, died last night on the farm of M. H. Seibert near here. He was also a celebrated roadster, with a record of 2.30.

Fire in New Brunswick.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Oct. 31, (Special.) A frame house belonging to Philip Page was burned last night. Loss $1200. The high wind caused the firemen much uneasiness, and adjoining building were only saved by thorough drenchings.

Caught a Large Snake Yesterday.

Louis Perrine killed a snake yesterday afternoon, in a deep running spring near his home by the mountain back of Westfield. It measured five feet and nine inches in length. The reptile was of the species known as water pilots. There were two snakes in the pool, but one managed to get under some stones. It is unusually late in the season for snakes to be about and as lively as they were, as they generally become comatose as soon as cold weather sets in.

Fell from a Load of Cornstalks.

Mr. Richard Elliott of Evona fell from a load of cornstalks this morning while turning the corner from Eighth street into Clinton avenue. He was driving along when his horse stopped suddenly, throwing him to the ground. Mr. Elliott is quite old, and it would seem a miracle that he was not killed, but fortunately he was not even injured.

That High Kicking Girl and the Free Advertising She is Getting.

The account in THE NEWS of how a Plainfield society man and his wife have been shocked by the "Dr. Bill" performance a few nights ago—although a great many seemed to enjoy it immensely—has been followed by several accounts in the New York papers which have served to get the company generally, and Miss Trudelle, the high kicking dancer, particularly, the biggest kind of advertising. Yesterday the following appeared in the Herald:

"DR. BILL" AT PLAINFIELD.

Plainfield is still discussing the recent presentation of "Dr. Bill" there. Friends of Miss Alice Trudelle, and she has many, say that the harsh criticisms passed upon her share of the performance were entirely undeserved. One of them, in interviewed the entire play, writes to the Herald:

It is not true that her execution of the kangaroo dance was made "suggestive" or was in any particular immodest. Neither did she at any time appear in abbreviated skirts. She is to be commended for her delicate handling of a part which otherwise might have been made coarse and vulgar. Everything that could have been so characterized was carefully eliminated. "Friends of Miss Trudelle" also take exception that the criticisms passed upon her were unjust and ill founded. It is denied that she sang a song in which reference was made to "being up, all night at a wine supper," or did a "drunken act." During the visit of the company Miss Ellis was the guest of a lady conspicuous in Plainfield society. Miss Trudelle was entertained at supper by the Union County Country Club.

—All men interested in the classes in mechanical drawing and bookkeeping should apply at the Y. M. C. A. to-night.

—The regular meeting of the McAll Auxiliary, will be held in the Public Library, Tuesday evening, Nov. 1st, at 11 o'clock. A full attendance is desired.

—Dr. Hedges says that the Miles chil- dren have not got the scarlet fever, as reported. He further says that they are not sick with any contagious disease at all, though slightly ill.

—Audrun's comic opera, the "Mascot," given at Stillman Music Hall Saturday evening by Young's Opera Company, attracted a large audience and was generously applauded. Dixey, who was the most familiar with Plainfield audiences, was as clever as usual. Miss Juliette Cordon, who took the leading character —"Bettina"—appeared for the first time here, and made a deep impression by her fine singing, and winsome manner, securing a large share of applause. It transpired that there were several personal friends in the audience who had seen Miss Cordon in grand opera. To one of these she said she did not like comic opera so well, although it paid better, $200 a week being her salary with Dixey's Company. Sig. Tagliapietro, who appeared as "Pipo, a Shepherd," is very popular to lovers of grand opera in New York. The destruction of the Metropolitan Opera House by fire has driven many of the grand opera singers into other fields, which will explain the appearance of such superior artists in their line in the field in which another style of artists are wont to shine. Altogether the opera was quite enjoyable.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Scientific Wordiness.

A scientific writer is one who never uses an English word where he can make a Greek one do, and never employs one word if he can put in three. This description will fit nine-tenths of all the alleged writers on science at the present day. It is a time when the general public is keenly alive to new discoveries and inventions. Never before was mankind so alert to seize on facts which it can turn to its own advantage. Men want to alleviate the awful sum of human suffering; they snatch at any hope of making life easier, labor lighter the race healthier and handsomer. All the world wrestles with material resources, to turn them to account. Never before did common people follow with bright, eager minds the path of discovery in astronomy, in chemistry electricity, biology and all kinds of invention. They ask scientific professors for bread, and the scientific professors give them a stone—a whole pile of stones.

Let them stop the Greek and Latin writing and give us English. There never was a thing so large or so small that a name could not be found for it in English. The English language is rich and growing. In excuse for the serpentine names which are the despair of intelligent nonprofessional readers the scientific writers say that if they used English names and terms scientific men of other nations would not understand them. Well, it is a question whether the professors are writing for learned foreigners or for the people of their own nation, who buy their literature and give them their living. If for the foreign professor, then let them go to the foreign countries.

One can count upon the fingers of one hand, and then have a finger or two left, the names of the scientific men whose writing is intelligible, pleasant reading to the ordinary person. We cannot carry a big dictionary around with us. Another fault no less grievous in the scientific writer is that his style is inexpressibly dull, dreary and wordy. His meaning is obscure; his sentences are four times as long as they ought to be. He occupies a page in saying what a clear, concise writer would often put into six lines and make the meaning plainer. We call on the men of science to give us relief from this swosh of wordiness and reform their style.

The Public Schools.

"What would any of us 'a' been if our fathers hadn't 'a' shaved our facinties out of us?" says the old philosopher in "Barnaby Rudge." One is inclined to make the same observation after reading in The Forum Dr. Rice's paper on the evils that have grown around the public schools in Baltimore. The mistakes in Baltimore are the same as those everywhere else. One of the evils noted is that the system of perpetual cramming of the memory leaves the reasoning powers all untouched. The teachers are so busy drawing the faculties out of the children that they have no time to teach the young ones to think, if indeed the teachers themselves know how to think. Dr. Rice is doubtful on that point somewhat, judging from his paper.

Next to the evil of the perpetual cramming system is want of supervision of the teachers by the higher powers. On this lack Prof. Rice lays great stress. To an unprejudiced outsider, however it appears that there is too much supervising of the teachers already, so that the public school teacher finds fair time to be as much bebossed as the girl clerks in a dry goods store. This eternal supervision and subsupervision does not bring good results. It tends to make mere spy servers, and should not be applied to the instructors of young Americans. A better way will be to pay such wages to the ordinary teacher as will attract superior women into the field—then employ only superior women. A teacher worthy the name will care for something more than drawing her monthly wage.

Chicago has given a new idea to America in connection with the decorations for opening the exposition. This is the adoption of municipal colors of its own. The colors are terra cotta and white, and they are mingled in among the red, white and blue and the green and yellow decorations with a pleasing artistic effect. Henceforth the terra cotta and white flag over city buildings in Chicago will be a prominent municipal feature.

The manufacturers of American flag have done well this fall between the Columbus celebrations and the presidential election. General Benjamin Butler peddled well when he started that banner factory—the first in the United States. At the school children's Columbus celebration in Cincinnati there were 20,000 boys in line, and each carried an American flag.

The Philadelphia Telegraph reminds Chicago that in 1876 the main building at Philadelphia was ready to receive world's fair exhibits six months before the opening, and then the opening day came sixty days too soon. The Telegraph hopes Chicago will buckle down to hard work, now that its dedicatory exercises are over.

TIGHTENING THE LINES.

Both Sides Confident and the Election but a Week Away.

STEVENSON ISSUES HIS LETTER

He Says Cleveland's Views Cover the Ground and Leave Him Little to Say. A Muddle in Florida That May Throw Out the State's Electoral Vote.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—Joseph H. Manley, of Maine, member of the executive committee of the Republican national committee, said today:

"I believe President Harrison is going to be elected, and I have reasons for this faith. First, never in the history of this country has an administration been changed in the midst of a general business prosperity, and I do not believe this election is to prove an exception to this universal rule. That the country is in a prosperous condition is conceded on every hand. Secondly, the administration of President Harrison has been so wise, patriotic and without the breath of scandal that it receives, as it merits, the approval of the American people. It is true that there has been some criticism of President Harrison, but when it is analyzed it is found to be simply a criticism of those who are disappointed at not receiving party favors.

"We can count 216 electoral votes that may be regarded as sure for the Republican ticket. The Democratic managers, on the other hand, cannot safely count on more than 143. While we do not indulge in any gaining claims, and while we do not include in our 216 sure electoral votes a single vote from the south, there are outside of West Virginia twenty two electoral votes in the south declared to be given to Mr. Cleveland except by the grossest and most glaring and outrageous frauds.

"I believe we will carry Connecticut, New Jersey, New York, Indiana and West Virginia and that Harrison's election is assured."

Carter Denies a Report.

Mr. Thomas H. Carter, chairman of the Republican national committee, denies emphatically that either he or any member of the national Republican committee has been in communication with H. C. Frick, of the Carnegie Homestead works. "The report," said Mr. Carter, "was evidently sent in circulation for the purpose of exciting prejudice against the committee and the cause it represents, and of diverting attention from the real issues of the campaign. Neither Mr. Frick nor Mr. Carnegie has thought proper to contribute one cent to the fund of this committee. The story is false from end to end."

Senator M. S. Quay, of Pennsylvania, is still in New York. It is said that he will remain here possibly throughout this week. His attention was called to a dispatch sent from this city by Colonel A. K. McClure, of the Philadelphia Times, saying that he (Quay) had abandoned all hope of Republican victory in New York state.

"I have once denied that I made any such admission," he replied. "That was only a few days ago, when a similar report was current."

Mr. Quay declined to express his views on the outlook in this state or the general situation, but intimated that he would make a statement before next Sunday. Mr. Quay retains his quarters at the Fifth Avenue hotel, where he has frequent private conferences with the Republican campaign managers.

Breckinridge on the Outlook.

Congressman W. C. P. Breckinridge, of Kentucky, is stopping at the Hoffman House. He has a few engagements to speak in this state.

"What do you think of the outlook?" he was asked.

"I regard it as an indication of Cleveland's election. I do not think there is any doubt about it. I have carefully looked over the situation, and this is my conclusion. The chances in this state, which is no doubt the pivotal state, are decidedly in favor of Cleveland. I do not expect that we shall lose a single southern state on account of the Populists or any coalition. West Virginia is the only state in that section that is at all in the doubtful list, but the outlook there is hopeful. It has been a quiet campaign—a campaign of education—and if Cleveland is elected it will be on the issue of tariff reform, upon which the voters have been thoroughly enlightened. I do not know what the situation in the west is, as I have not visited that part of the country."

Senator John G. Carlisle, of Kentucky, arrived in New York, and on being asked about the report that he did not register he said: "A good deal of importance seems to be attached to my failure to register. The simple fact was that I was in Texas, for attending the court of appeals. I understood, and it was generally believed before I left home that the city council in Covington would pass an ordinance allowing two additional days for registration. But the ordinance was not passed, and when I arrived in Covington I found the registry lists closed. That is all there is to it."

The senator said the outlook for Cleveland was exceedingly encouraging and that there is no doubt of his election.

COMPLICATIONS IN FLORIDA.

Governor Fleming's Action May Lose Its Electoral Vote to Cleveland

TALLAHASSEE, Oct. 31.—A sensation has been produced throughout the state by the action of Governor Fleming in suspending from office the county tax collector in Duval county—James K. Johnson, of Jacksonville. It will be remembered that the governor has the suspending of fully thirty five of the forty five county tax collectors and to the filing of a protest with congress against the counting of the electoral vote of Florida, and it may end in the loss of Florida's four votes for Cleveland.

Under the poll tax prerequisite law the taxes for the two years preceding the one of the election must be paid at least thirty days prior to the day of election, or the vote is thereby disqualified.

The law permits the collectors of taxes to make their own business hours, provided only these are reasonable and convenient. Collector Johnson, of Duval county, on which Jacksonville is the county seat, advertised that his office would close for the receipt of poll taxes on Sept. 3 at 12 o'clock noon.

A few minutes past noon leaders in the anti-Call faction of the Democratic party then rushed up to the office and tendered about $4,000 in payment of the taxes of 2,000 voters. Johnson refused to accept it. The anti-Call men claim that this disfranchised 2,000 of their voters and lost them the election in October.

Chairman Harvey's Policy.

They have worked on the governor, who is in sympathy with them, till they have persuaded him to remove Johnson from office. Johnson will fight this matter in the courts, and when it gets up to the supreme court that tribunal will probably sustain Governor Fleming's action.

"This," says Chairman S. S. Harvey, of the People's party state committee, "is just what we want. If the governor suspends Johnson for refusing to take poll tax money after hours, he must, to be consistent, remove at least thirty eight out of forty five collectors in Florida, for nearly every one of them did just what Johnson did. I have affidavits to that effect and much other testimony, and I'm going to ask the governor to remove every one of them who refused the money.

"But that isn't the curl of it. Qualification for the October election is also qualification for the national election on Nov 8, and I believe that at least 20,000 voters will be disfranchised by the action of the tax collectors last September, so I'm going before congress when it meets to count the electoral vote.

"I shall prove that the Florida election was not an expression of the popular will, and that voters were disfranchised in still greater numbers to invalidate the wholesale fraud. Mitchell's majority for governor was 21,000 on the Democratic count. Cleveland will not call out the full vote, but will probably get an alleged majority of 15,000 or 16,000 votes. I can easily show that enough voters were disfranchised to wipe out that majority completely.

No Motor Line Cited.

"I shall be backed, you see, by the action of the Democratic governor and a decision of the Florida supreme court, and can make out a strong case, especially before a Republican senate.

"The vote in the Electoral college is going to be close and Florida's four votes may turn it one way or the other. The Democratic leaders are already getting frightened at what Fleming has done, for the consequences are likely to lose the state to Cleveland. In obeying the wishes of his faction leaders Fleming has practically arrayed himself against his whole party."

Fleming, it will be recalled, is the same governor who refused to sign Governor Call's certificate of election after the legislature had elected him, and the supreme court at that time (1891) sustained him, but the United States senate declared that Call was duly elected, and that the action of the governor and the court was entirely irrelevant.

FASHIONS

The "Fichu" Blouse.

The blouse bodice is very useful to supplement a cloth skirt with comfortable elegance or to bring a last year's light silk evening gown thoroughly up to date. Here is what is called the "Echu" blouse, made in the new plaid silk.

The collar band of this is gathered and a graduated frill falls round the shoulders and disappears into the waist. The sleeves are delightfully. This is a bodice which could be worn with any sort of skirt, and it would be eminently useful as a substitute for the camehr shirt which prudences suggests we should doff during these early Autumn days, and worn with a serge coat and skirt it would form a most effective costume.

About Shirts.

The ball skirt, so long a favorite, is now superseded by many others, all of which bear a family likeness to it. The Feliz skirt is very graceful, and is plain in front, with a sloping back, but instead of the bias back seam it has bias side seams and large gussets let in at sides also.

The Dunmere is similar in style, but has a seam in the back, and is often covered with passementerie or trimming.

The Empire skirt is rounder and has more fulness than either of the preceding skirts. The Watteau skirt is plain in front, and has a box pleat in the back.

The draped bell skirt is the well known shape with a graceful drapery in front, very becoming to stout ladies.

How to Fasten Shoe-Buttons.

Do your shoe-buttons drop off, or break? And are you bothered with trying to keep them on? Try this way, and see if it is not satisfactory. As soon as one button comes off, immediately rip off every button on the shoe. Now, take a stout shoestring, or a corset lace, and, having pressed the eye of each button through the shoe, run the string through all the eyes, and then fasten on all the buttons—once and forever. If you do this you will not be bothered by threads that break and fasteners that hurt.

MILWAUKEE'S BIG FIRE.

It Is Bad Enough, but Not So Bad as at First Reported.

THE LOSS IS ABOUT SIX MILLIONS.

Four Lives Were Lost and 1,800 Persons Rendered Homeless—A Blaze at Point Breeze Destroys Shipping and Other Property Valued at About $200,000.

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 31.—The scene of Milwaukee's great fire was visited Sunday by fully 150,000 people. Not only was more than half the population of the city there during the day, but thousands came from neighboring towns.

It is one of the cleanest swept fire districts ever seen. It is now practically cold, only the ruins of some of the great wholesale houses needing the services of the fire department. All of the important firms burned out will resume business at once, and many are already preparing to rebuild.

The Hansen Malt company, whose loss was $200,000, have architects at work on plans for two eight story buildings. The Northwestern Railway company has rebuilt a portion of its freight house and switches, and already has a new roof on one of the great freight houses.

One end of the building was under roof while the ruins of the freight which had been stored in the other end were still blazing. The company is ready for freight business.

The task of determining with accuracy the loss by the great fire is a difficult one. Estimates made by insurance men are as follows: Thirty five wholesale houses, manufactories and warehouses, $4,800,000; fifty smaller business houses, $500,000; 500 dwelling houses, cottages, barns, etc., $500,000. Total, $5,800,000.

Subscriptions to the relief fund have have reached $80,000. Among the large additional subscriptions to it today was $1,000 from Clara Barton, of the Red Cross society.

The citizens' relief committee is thoroughly organized, and the homeless are all being provided with the necessaries of life. The distribution of clothing to the needy will begin at once. Over 3,000 meal tickets were issued to-day, and the eating houses report that all day long many of the homeless are being cared for by friends, and about 600 are located in the Third ward school houses, where beds and cots are provided. Several large passenger steamers are being used as temporary quarters.

At the meeting of the common council to-morrow it is probable that arrangements will be made for building extensive barracks for the accommodation of the homeless. President Hase and many members of the council favor that course.

Four persons were killed and 1,800 persons rendered homeless by the conflagration.

FLAMES AT POINT BREEZE.

Wharves, Shipping and Other Property Worth Nearly $200,000 Destroyed.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 31.—Point Breeze was visited again by fire, and before the flames could be controlled the wharves and shipping were damaged to the extent of nearly $200,000. The iron bark Feliz, Captain Reading, which was lying at the wharf awaiting a load of refined oil, was sunk, and the bark Elena G., loaded with cased oil, was badly damaged, a lighter loaded with cases of oil was burned to the water's edge, Charles Houseman's lime barge was destroyed, 500 feet of wharf property was burned, a house and barn belonging to the city were wiped out and other property was destroyed or damaged. The fire burned stubbornly all Sunday, and it was not until late last evening that it was extinguished.

Shortly after 4 o'clock in the morning the firemen at the pumping station were startled by the sound of an explosion. A moment later the flames shot up from the river, and a pall of dense black smoke began to gather over the harbor.

The explosion heard was caused by the bursting of a pipe connecting the Philadelphia and Atlantic oil refineries, located on each side of the gas works. The oil pipes are buried under the roadway above the wharves.

The escaping oil worked down through the coil, and collected beneath the furnaces at the pumping station in such quantities that when it became ignited it exploded with sufficient force to break down the retaining wall, and the whole volume of oil spread in a burning mass over the surface of the water. Fortunately the flames were headed off before they reached the works of the Atlantic Refining company, and the firemen were able to save the gas plant and the Philadelphia Refining works.

Two Lives and $150,000 Lost.

ST. JOHNSBURY, Vt., Oct. 31.—The worst fire this city has ever known raged fiercely for two hours, when it was brought under control. In that time several business blocks were destroyed. Most of the buildings burned were substantial structures, but in the rear were a lot of old houses which had been looked upon for some time as veritable tinder boxes. Ward's block, which was crowded with tenements, was considered a fire trap, and it is certain that a man and woman were burned to death. The other tenants had to flee for their lives. The total loss will reach and may exceed $150,000.

Baled Cotton Burned.

GALVESTON, Oct. 31.—Nearly 3,000 bales of cotton were burned here in two steamships. The loss is $300,000.

Still Another Victim.

CHICAGO, Oct. 31.—Yet another name has been added to the already long list of deaths in Hyde Park from gas asphyxiation. The ninth victim is John G. Reynolds, who was found dead in his room at the Hotel Bernard.

The Result of a Feud.

MOUNT STERLING, Ky., Oct. 31.—Henry Boulden shot and instantly killed W. C. Brown. The killing was the result of a feud that started at a picnic last summer.

The Ocean Rolled Back.

PANAMA, Oct. 31.—The heavy swell which rolled into the harbor all Thursday, Friday and Saturday has abated and the shipping has returned to the docks.

A Postmaster Robbed.

GORHAM, N. Y., Oct. 31.—The store of Postmaster Johnson was entered by burglars, who secured in cash and stamps between $1,400 and $1,500.

A Fireling Lynched.

MOORESVILLE, Ala., Oct. 31.—Allen Parker (colored), a confessed firebug, was taken from jail by a masked mob and lynched.

AFFAIRS OF THE NATION.

The Annual Reports of the Cabinet Officers Nearly Ready.

CANADA AND OUR SHIPPING TRADE.

Commissioner O'Brien in His Report Sounds a Note of Warning, and Recommends Measures Against Dominion Competition on the Pacific Ocean.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—Annual reports by the cabinet officers for the year ended June 30, 1892, will be ready for the press sent shortly after the election next week, and all except that of the secretary of the treasury, that of the attorney general, who makes his direct to congress and not to the president, and that of the secretary of state, which forms the basis of that part of the president's message devoted to foreign affairs, will be given to the press in advance of the meeting of congress. These reports have been in course of preparation for weeks past.

The most voluminous of these department reports is that of the secretary of the interior. It includes the reports from the land office, the patent office, the bureau of pensions, the Indian bureau, the education bureau, the railroad bureau, the geological survey and the census office.

Secretary Noble's report is well under way, and it will probably be one of the first reports given to the public.

Wanamaker's Report.

Postmaster General Wanamaker has also been hard at work on his annual report for more than a month, and it promises to be one of the most elaborate and picturesque reviews of the work of his department which has ever been made. Mr. Wanamaker is still busily engaged in publishing his plan for a postal telegraphy, and a great part of the report will be devoted to this subject. As an argument for one cent letter postage, in which he is much interested, he will present the fact that the post office department will probably be self sustaining in another year. Then he will devote a great deal of space to a review of what has been done under the mail subsidy act, with congratulations to the Republican party.

The treasury department report this year will not be so important as some of those which have preceded it. The financial policy of the administration is well fixed and understood. There is no serious question connected with the finances on which Secretary Foster can be expected to make radical recommendation.

The recommendation of the greatest popular interest in the forthcoming report of the secretary will be that for the establishment of a national quarantine. Interest in the cholera question has not died out by any means. It has only given place for the time to interest in the coming election.

Every one knows that the danger of a visitation from the plague has not disappeared. It has only been suspended for a time. Next spring the cholera question is going to be as actively in the public mind as it was two months ago.

Secretary Foster will review the work of the department during the recent cholera excitement at some length, and the precedent in his message will join the secretary of the treasury in his recommendation for the establishment of a national quarantine. The president has not yet begun work on his annual report, and will probably not do so until after the election.

Our Shipping Interests.

J. C. O'Brien, commissioner of navigation, has just submitted advance copies of his annual report to the secretary of the treasury.

After tracing the history of the protective policy adopted during the administration of President Washington, the commissioner says that all that is required to insure shipbuilding and in the carrying trade is due to the fact that we have rigidly adhered to the protective act of Feb. 18, 1793, under the provisions of which statute the domestic trade of the United States is confined to American vessels.

The commissioner calls attention to a threatening danger on the Pacific, to which the fact that the Dominion government has, at an outlay of about $20,000,000, established the Canadian Pacific Railway company to construct its line across the continent, and to place on the Pacific ocean, between British Columbia and China, a line of steamers which receive from the Canadian and British governments a subsidy of $300,000 a year, which is about five times the amount paid annually to American steamers carrying to and from Asia mails which several times exceed in magnitude the mails carried by the Canadian line.

The Dominion government has passed a statute in terms allowing the Canadian Pacific to discriminate unjustly against American transportation lines, and in order to make sure of securing the Asiatic trade that government has imposed a discriminating duty on tea and coffee when imported into Canada from the United States. Commissioner O'Brien regards all this as an assault upon the dignity as well as upon the commercial and shipping interests of the United States, and as a protective measure recommends the imposition of discriminating duties upon Asiatic and Australian goods when imported into the United States from Canada.

BLOUNT AND DAWES.

THEY FURNISH THE THEME FOR AN INTERESTING DISCOURSE.

Their Approaching Retirement from Politics Reminds Robert Graves That We Have Recently Lost Many Veterans from Congress.

[Special Correspondence.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 30.—By one the veterans disappear. A few days ago announcement was made that Representative Blount, of Georgia, would not seek re-election, as he meant to retire from public life, and now comes news that Senator Dawes, the Massachusetts patriarch, will seek rest in retirement at the expiration of his present term.

JAMES H. BLOUNT.

We appear to have fallen upon evil times, so far as our legislative veterans are concerned. The last two or three years have taken from us, either by the inexorable compulsion of death or by voluntary retirement, a large number of our most famous statesmen. Out of the house of representatives we have lost Sam Cox, Judge Kelley, Samuel J. Randall, W. P. Banks and Joe Cannon. Now Blount is going, after twenty years of service. From the senate have disappeared Edmunds, Ingalls, Hampton, Brown, Evarts, Reagan, Beck and a number of others; now Dawes, after sitting more than a third of a century in house and senate.

Blount first came to Congress in 1873, and he has served continuously ever since. No man has worked harder than he. Years ago he became a master of all the arts of legislation and one of the leaders on the floor, too alert to be fooled or surprised by anything, always a ready and an incisive debater. He is that rare mortal in Congress—a man who can speak frequently without making his fellow members weary. It is a wonder Blount was not fired out years ago—he is so industrious, so earnest. For nearly twenty years he has lived at one hotel, about three quarters of a mile from the Capitol, and during the greater part of the time has occupied one suite of rooms.

The best of it is, from his point of view, that he has been wise enough to lay by something for the day which is now at hand. Though he never made a dollar in his life that he did not earn by hard work and constant devotion to duty, the Georgia statesman will be able to retire next March with a comfortable fortune. His friends estimate that he has saved just about one-half of his salary year after year, and if he has done this $60,000 is the sum which represents his total savings. Having this money well invested, he is able to leave congress not only with a splendid record behind him, but with enough of the fruits of his toil to make him independent during the remainder of his days.

Senator Dawes has had a career of which any man might be proud. It was in 1857 that he first appeared in congress as a representative. He served there with distinction through all the war period and down to 1875, when he was transferred to the senate. When his present term expires and he voluntarily steps aside to make room for some younger man he will have served thirty-six years in the American congress—eighteen in each branch. Senator Dawes is a lovable old man. For many years his pet hobby has been the Indians. As chairman of the committee on Indian affairs he has, as it were, taken the poor red man under his wing. Nothing that he could induce the senate to vote in the way of appropriations was too good for the dark skinned wards of the nation.

At times the good old senator was inclined to be just a little sentimental and visionary, and occasionally the young, rough and ready senators from the new west, who know the Indian as he really is, and without any romantic dreaming about him, have poked good natured fun at the champion of the aborigines. But Senator Dawes was always—or nearly always—shrewd enough to receive these sallies in good part, and the matter usually ended in his getting about what he wanted for his dear pets.

Mr. Dawes was so eager to do his full duty by the Indians and at the same time to avoid permitting himself and the government to be imposed on, that he has made many trips to the far west, visiting various tribes, studying their wants and fairly living among them. It has been his boast that he never yet saw an Indian of whom he was afraid, and on all his journeys he has gone fearlessly among the most treacherous tribes. In his study of the Indians, in his anxious work as their legislative champion, he has for some years been assisted by his daughter. Miss Dawes is one of the loveliest women Washington has seen in many a day. She is beautiful of face and form, and what is still better, has a mind stored with much culture and a character that to know is to love. She is as fond of the Indians as her father. Her boudoir is furnished with Indian blankets, robes, furs, moccasins and bric-a-brac. Portraits of Indians adorn the walls. Probably the prettiest dress ever worn in the full costume of the American aborigines—though only favored friends have been permitted to see her thus attired—is the daughter of the veteran senator from Massachusetts.

Though we have lost a number of our most illustrious veterans of congress, a number remain. Next March the Fifty-second congress will come to a constitutional end. The life of a congress is two years. It is a somewhat remarkable fact that we still have in service survivors of every congress since and including the Thirty-first, which was elected in the great Zach Taylor campaign of 1848, and the members of which took their seats on the 3d of December, 1849, and remained in session 392 days—a term unparalleled in any congress till the Fifty-sixth. The sole survivor of this congress of nearly forty-three years ago—how near to a half century!—is Senator Isham G. Harris, of Tennessee. This grizzled veteran stands at the head in the table of antiquity. He first came to congress when Edward Wolcott and others of his present colleagues were babes in arms. He has not served as many years as a dozen or more men still living, for since his advent he has been governor of his state, had a career of $12,000 set on his head during the rebellion, carried a musket and enjoyed a great variety of experiences, yet here he is, seemingly no older than he was twenty or thirty years ago, as lively as a cricket and noted among his colleagues as the senator who has discovered the secret of perpetual youth.

After Harris the man who dates farthest back is Senator Colquitt, of Georgia. He came in 1853. Third on the list is the venerable senator from Vermont—Mr. Morrill —though he and John Sherman took their seats in the house on the same day, March 4, 1855. Dawes came in 1857, as did Senator Vance, of North Carolina. Pugh, of Alabama, and Holman, of Indiana, made their appearance in 1859; Voorhees and Wilson, of Iowa, in 1861; Turpie, of Indiana; Allison, of Iowa, and "Charley" O'Neill, of Pennsylvania, in 1863.

So you see, we still have in congress ten men who first came here in that era which now is spoken of almost as ancient history —before the war. John Sherman is the only man now in the senate who sat in that body at the outbreak of the rebellion, he having taken his seat as a senator March 4, 1861. If he had served continuously he would now be completing his thirty-second year, but his record was broken by four years passed as secretary of the treasury in the Hayes administration. He, notwithstanding his long break, the red father of the senate, though Justin S. Morrill, of Vermont, holds the record among present senators for longest continuous service in the upper branch of congress. March 4 next will complete twenty-six years of his unbroken service in the American senate—a record which has been broken but twice, I believe, in the history of the government. Edmunds had served more than twenty-five years when he retired, Jackson, of North Carolina, is finishing up his twenty-first year. Next March will make twenty years for Allison and Jones of Nevada, eighteen years for Dawes and Cockrell of Missouri, and sixteen years for Harris and Voorhees.

In these days of party changes and keen competition for public honors I consider it remarkable that we have in congress seven men who have served more than a quarter of a century each in one or the other branch or both together. The two veteran senators were New Englund, Morrill and Dawes, head the list, followed closely by John Sherman. What might be called a table of experience, giving the total service of members in both houses, and carried down to March 4, 1893, is as follows:

	House.	Senate.	In Congress.
Morrill, Vermont	12	26	38
Dawes, Massachusetts	18	18	36
Sherman, Ohio	6	24	30
Allison, Iowa	10	20	30
Holman, Indiana	28	..	28
O'Neill, Pennsylvania	28	..	28
Voorhees, Indiana	10	16	26

Other statesmen with long careers behind them, but who do not reach the quarter century mark, are:

	House.	Senate.	In Congress.
Ketcham, New York	..	24	24
Hoar, Massachusetts	8	16	24
Hale, Maine	12	12	24
Frye, Maine	10	12	22
Sawyer, Wisconsin	10	12	22
Ransom, North Carolina	..	21	21
Barnard, Georgia	20	..	20
Harris, Tennessee	4	15	19
Bland, Missouri	18	..	18
Mills, Texas	17	1	18

HENRY L. DAWES.

Without any question Senator Sherman, of Ohio, is now entitled to be considered the Nestor of American public life. This is true as to length of service, but his unwilting influence and able leadership are for his long service. Adding to his thirty-four years in congress the four which he spent in the cabinets, and his total rises very nearly to forty years. If he lives to serve out the term to which the legislature of his state has elected him, and which he gins March 4 next, he will have passed forty-four years of his life in congress and cabinet, thus beating all records. May he live to do it! ROBERT GRAVES.

Efflorescence on Brick Walls.

H. C. Standage suggests in The Builder a simple remedy for efflorescence on brick walls. Mr. Standage says that the white discoloration that appears on the surface of brick walls is derived from soluble salts of sodium in the mortar. Acting on the hint conveyed by the fact that the excess of soda present in soapmaking is expelled from the soap by salting it—i. e., strewing the surface of the soap as it floats on the lye with common salt (sodium chloride)—he applied a solution of common salt to the white efflorescence on the bricks that were badly stained therewith. In every instance where such fluid was applied the white efflorescence was instantly removed, and, what is more, has never reappeared. In obstinate cases, three applications or one application well saturating the bricks with the common salt solution, has sufficed to effect the desired result.

Military Telegraphy.

The first military line on the American continent was built in April, 1861, and ran from the war department in Washington to the navy yard. As troops came in and camps were established they were connected by other lines with the war department, and when the army crossed the Potomac the telegraph was carried with them.

During the war 15,389 miles of telegraph were constructed, and 6,500,000 messages, many of them long telegrams in cipher, were sent. There were about 1,000 miles of field lines often worked in battle under fire. About 1,200 operators and as many builders and repairers were engaged in the service. So far as known 200 of these, or one in every twelve, were killed, wounded, captured or died in service, but as no record was ever made of this it is believed to far exceed by more than half the victims.

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

A Boy Soprano.

A youthful boy soprano, who is said to possess a sweet voice, has been introduced to New Yorkers. His name is Cyril Tyler, and he is ten years old. Mr. Edgar Stoesch, who is the manager of the boy, says he has a most extraordinary voice, and he looks upon him as a phenomenon.

Young Tyler is a healthy looking lad, and was born in Naples. His parents are both opera singers and have appeared with many well known companies. The lad is quite handsome, and his voice has a range of from B to F altissimo, and his florid execution is said to be excellent. His repertory consists of operatic and sacred selections, and he sings everything from memory. While in the west the boy gave several concerts and received much praise. Mr. Stoesch says he thinks that he will create as much of a sensation as either Hofmann or Hegner did.

A Real Knight.

A pleasing sight it was, I do assure you, Not the first part of the scene, for the little maid was crying bitterly. Something very serious must have happened. Wondering, I paused; when around a corner came my knight. On a prancing steed? Wearing a glittering helmet and greaves of brass? Not quite. He was a Nineteenth century knight, and they are as likely to be on foot as on horseback. Helmets are apt to be straw hats or derbys; and as for greaves—well, knickerbockers are more common today.

This particular knight was about ten years old—slender, straight, open eyed. Quickly he spied the damsel in distress. Swiftly he came to her aid.

"What's the matter?" I heard him say.

Alas! The "matter" was that the bundle she held had burst, and its contents were open to view. Probably the small maid expected a hearty scolding for carelessness. And, indeed, whoever put that soiled shirt and the collars in her care might reasonably have been vexed.

A new piece of wrapping paper also proved too full. Must the child get her scolding? Poor little soul! No wonder she had sobbed so mournfully.

But the boy was not daunted. He tucked the burst bundle under his own arm.

"I'll carry it to the laundry for you," he said in the kindest voice, and off the two trudged together.

Soon after I met the small girl again. She was comforted and serene.

"Was that boy your brother?" I asked. She shook her head.

"Did you know him?" Another shake.

"A real gentleman!" said I. "A genuine Nineteenth century knight. Bless him!"—Harper's Young People.

Children's Parties and Fetes.

The acceptance of an invitation to a child ren's party or fete is a pledge to the hostess that by kindness and courtesy the invited child will do all in his or her power to assist in making the party a happy and successful one. Any lapse from this would mark a child as unamiable and ill bred. Invitations to a child's fete, certainly if it is to be en costume, ought to be sent out at least two weeks in advance, and so worded that those invited may know the kind of fete intended. The hostess may also suggest the kind of costume desired. Small stationery, with suitable design in the corner, is preferred. If the party is not to be too large, and the child is able to write neatly and legibly, invitations written by the young host or hostess are best. The following invitation directs the costume of the guest:

Miss Belle Carter will receive her friends from Fairy Land on Wednesday evening, Aug 10, from 4 to 8 at "The Lilacs," Lakeview avenue. Will you kindly costume as "Stella the Star Fairy."

The guest shall decide what fashion of costume will suit the request of the hostess, or it is quite proper to consult her with reference to the matter. The mother's card should be sent in the same envelope with the invitation.—Mrs. A. G. Lewis in Ladies' Home Journal.

Who Likes the Rain?

"I," said the duck, "I call it fun.
For I have my little red rubbers on;
They make a cunning three toed track
To the soft, cool mud. Quack! quack!"

"I," cried the dandelion, "I!
My roots are thirsty, my buds are dry;
And she lifted her little yellow head
Out of her green prison bed.

"I hope 'twill pour! I hope 'twill pour!"
Croaked the tree toad at his gray bark door.
"For with a broad leaf for a roof,
I am perfectly waterproof."

Sang the brook, "I laugh at every drop,
And wish they never need to stop
Till a big river I grew to be.
And could find my way to the sea."

1492—Columbus first heard of a large island called Cuba, by the natives, and subsequently to declare that the signs had abounded in gold, pearls and spices, and carried on a large commerce in them, and that merchant ships came there from the East Indies; this confirmed him in the error that he was near the eastern coast of Asia, and he decided that the island was Cipango.

1861—Great Britain, France and Spain agreed to unite and punish Mexico for alleged outrages on foreigners and failure to pay bonds; great excitement and indignation in the United States, threatening war, but the last withdrew, leaving France to fight Mexico single handed, the result being the ill fated empire and death of Maximilian.
